LIBRARY
THE MUSEUM
OF MODERN ART
Received:

Scanned from the collection of Eileen Bowser

Coordinated by the Media History Digital Library
www.mediahistoryproject.org

Funded by a donation from Richard Scheckman

~~FL~~ ~~PER~~ discard duplic.

1/51

~~FL~~
~~2746~~

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2011 with funding from Media History Digital Library

http://www.archive.org/details/movingpicturewor17newy

Vol. 17, No. 1 July 5, 1913 Price, 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "A Woman's Folly" (Rex).

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

NEW YORK

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

MAUDE FEALY IN THANHOUSER FILMS

KING RENE'S DAUGHTER

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK enables you, in one of its regular releases, to give your house the prestige of a big "legitimate" theatre. We present the Broadway star and national "Stock" favorite

MISS MAUDE FEALY IN

KING RENE'S DAUGHTER

A Poetic Drama from the Danish of Henrik Heri. Issued as a three reel regular release Tuesday, July 1

It is a sumptuous production that can be advertised to, and made to draw from, the "best people." Miss Fealy, who during her stage career has supported Sir Henry Irving, C. S. Willard, William Gillette, Richard Mansfield, William Collier, Nat. C. Goodwin and Robert Hilliard, is in this film, supported by Harry Benham, Mignon Anderson, David Thompson, William Russell, Leland Benham and Mrs. Lawrence Marston.

Remember, in advertising, THIS FILM MARKS MISS FEALY'S PHOTOPLAY DEBUT.

Releases for "King Rene's Daughter" Week:

Sunday, June 29

A MODERN LOCHINVAR

He came out of the West to win his "only-only" while the suffragettes paraded.

Tuesday, July 1

KING RENE'S DAUGHTER

With one, three and six sheets, Hennegan heralds, Kraus lobby photos, Standard cuts, and Scott and VanAltena slides.

Friday, July 4

HER TWO JEWELS

A heartless woman of wealth shows little mercy to an employee — to whom she is later forced to appeal.

Thanhouser Film Corporation
New Rochelle, N. Y.

NOTICE! No Sunday release on July 6, because of three reel release of preceding week.

COMING! All the time—to your lobby: THE THANHOUSER PLAYERPOSTER. It solves the posterless-reel problem. Ask your exchange man the cost.

COMING! THANHOUSER, after the opera, with Marguerite Snow and James Cruze, 3 reels. LITTLE DORRIT, after Dickens, with Maude Fealy, 2 reels.

MAUDE FEALY

FIVE-A-WEEK

Essanay

Send Us Your Order Today for the Famous "Alkali" Ike Doll

$13.50 a Dozen They're Great Novelties $1.50 Apiece

Released Tuesday, July 1st.

"Re-Tagged"

"The Drummer's Umbrella"

Two splendid, uproariously funny, side-splitting comedies of merit.

Released Wednesday, July 2nd.

"The Strongest Link"

An excellent drama of the underworld, that grips the heart and holds the interest. Your audiences will be pleased with this photoplay.

Released Thursday, July 3rd.

"The Life We Live"

A true to life drama of the West, in which a poor ranchman sacrifices a package of gold for honor's sake.

Released Friday, July 4th.

"What's the Matter with Father?"

This is one of those novel comedies that keep your audiences in a continual uproar. It's fifteen minutes of fun.

Released Saturday, July 5th.

"At the Lariat's End"

This is a thrilling and gripping melodrama of the West. Your patrons will be sure to like this one. Do not forget the release date.

TWO SPLENDID HEADLINE ATTRACTIONS

Released Monday, July 7th Released Monday, July 7th

"THE FORBIDDEN WAY."

In TWO PARTS.

A THRILLING DRAMA OF THE UNDERWORLD. ITS POWERFUL PORTRAYAL OF CHARACTER AND ITS MASTERLY PRESENTATION OF SCENES FROM THE CRIMINAL HAUNTS OF A GREAT CITY PLAY UPON THE HEART STRINGS OF HUMAN EMOTIONS WITH AN ELOQUENCE OF APPEAL THAT RENDS THE VERY SOUL. IT'S MARVELOUS. BE SURE AND BOOK THIS.

Released Monday, July 21st Released Monday, July 21st

"TAPPED WIRES"

In TWO PARTS

AN UP-TO-DATE, DRAMATIC SENSATION. TWO NEWS SYNDICATES ON THE SAME WIRE. SEE HOW AN OFFICE BOY OUTWITS A LARGE CORPORATION. SPECIAL HERALDS NOW READY FOR BOTH FEATURES. ORDER YOUR ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS NOW. FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR DIRECT FROM US.

THE PUBLIC ARE WISE—DEMAND NEW, CLEAN POSTERS. Three sheet posters of all our Saturday releases will boom your business. Posters are lithographed in full four colors, 35c. each. You can order these from your exchange or direct from Essanay Film Mfg. Co., 521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of Essanay players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the Players' Photo Co., 177 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill.
Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

As Solid

Three More Exchanges Sign Up With Universal

EXHIBITORS who care enough about the future of their theatres to secure THE program that surpasses any and all other programs in the world, and which has by far the greatest future of all, will be delighted to know that contracts for TWO YEARS for exclusive rights to the Universal Program in their respective territories, have been closed by

Film Supply Co. of Oregon

With Offices in PORTLAND, OREGON and SEATTLE, WASH.

Independent Film Exchange, Inc.

OF PITTSBURGH. Offices in PITTSBURGH

Universal Film Exchange

With Offices in DETROIT and TOLEDO

Exclusive Rights to These Offices Means Absolute Protection to You and a Program That Will Guarantee Crowded Houses ALL THE TIME

Universal Film Manufacturing Company

Demand That

As A Rock

UNIVERSAL FILMS TRADE MARK

Two More Big Features on the Universal Program

EXHIBITORS who are "live wires" are thanking their lucky stars that they are hooked up with an exchange that can furnish the UNIVERSAL PROGRAM. They are reaping a harvest on every feature shown

HERE'S TWO BIG ONES

"When Sherman Marched to the Sea"

Three Reel—101 Bison Released Saturday, July 19th

A wonderfully spectacular military masterpiece. An animated pictorial review of the most thrilling events in the Civil War

"Beauty and the Beast"

Three Reel—Rex DeLuxe Released Thursday, July 10th

The most gorgeously costumed picture play ever produced

The production closely follows the tale as known to thousands of readers of Grimm Fairy Tales

A House Packer if there ever was one

Mecca Bldg., 1600 Broadway, New York City

Universal Program

THOSE WHO LIVE IN "GLASS HOUSES"

A Modern Drama on an Ancient Theme

A Pictorial Sermon Woven into a Beautiful Romance

3 REELS

3 REELS

MISS MARION LEONARD as a "MAGDALENE" runs the entire gamut of human emotions.

Based on the quotation from St. John, Ch. 8, ver. 7: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her."

Not a mechanical "thriller" but a heart-gripping story of humanity's strength and weaknesses that leaves a lasting impression.

If you want to hear about the greatest American Feature

THE SEED OF THE FATHERS

write us at once.

5-Color Art Posters in Keeping with This Beautiful Subject in 1, 3 and 6 Sheet Sizes.

MONOPOL FILM CO.
145 W. 45th ST. N.Y.

Illustrated and Descriptive Heralds, Enlarged Photos, Hand Colored Slides.

From Foreign Spy

THE STANDARD OF MERIT—"FLYING A" QUALITY

San Francisco, The Dauntless City

An Educational subject of great merit. Monday July 7, 1913

Foreign Spy

A Tale of great daring and replete with tense and thrilling situations.
One and Three Sheet Posters. Thursday, July 10, 1913

The Song of the Soup

A Cowboy in society togs—A hearty laugh is assured. Do not miss it.

On the Same Reel with

A Garden Party in California

By Stewart Edward White

One and Three Sheet Posters. Saturday, July 12, 1913

American Film Manufacturing Company
6227-6235 Evanston Avenue
Chicago, Ill.

THE STORY OF THE PERSECUTION OF THE CHRISTIAN MARTYRS

"QUO

"WHITHER GOEST THOU?"

A PERFECT PRESENTATION OF THE ESSENTIAL DRAMATIC, BIBLICAL, HISTORICAL AND SPECTACULAR VALUES OF THIS MASTERPIECE

Copyright 1913
Quo Vadis Film Co. Inc.

COPYRIGHTED AND

HAS SMASHED ALL BOX OFFICE REC

EXHIBITORS! FOR BOOKINGS ADDRESS THE FOL

PENNSYLVANIA--NEW YORK, Except Greater New York, Buffalo Feature Film Exchange, 611 Mutual Life Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

INDIANA--C. S. Dunn, Peru, Ind.

OHIO--Electric Theatre Adv. Co., 303 U. B. Building, Dayton, Ohio.

ILLINOIS--Paul De Outo, Great Northern Hotel, Chicago, Ills.

Wire Now! SOME CHOICE TER

QUO VADIS FILM COMPANY, Inc., SOLE DISTRIBUTORS.

FROM THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST TO THE DEATH OF NERO.

VADIS"?

3 REEL PRODUCTION

AN AMAZING SPECTACLE OF TERRIFYING VIVIDNESS FAITHFULLY PORTRAYED WITH ALL HISTORICAL ACCURACY

FULLY PROTECTED

ORDS IN MOVING PICTURE HOUSES!

LOWING STATE RIGHT OWNERS EXHIBITORS!

NEW JERSEY--DELAWARE--MARYLAND--D. of C.--New Jersey Feature Film Co., 800 Broad St., Newark, N. J.

TENNESSEE--ALABAMA--W. R. Hart, Florence, Ala.

MICHIGAN--A. W. Blankmeyer, 87 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.

WESTERN CANADA--Rex Feature Film Co., Calgary, Canada

RITORY LEFT Wire Now!

145 WEST 45th STREET :: :: NEW YORK CITY. U. S. A.

THREE REEL RELIANCE FEATURE
ROSEMARY THEBY
IN
The Tangled Web
THREE REEL RELIANCE FEATURE
A POWERFUL DRAMA OF LOVE HATRED AND REVENGE
BY GARFIELD THOMPSON
STAGED BY OSCAR C. APFEL
WITH IRVING CUMMINGS
AND
THE RELIANCE FEATURE PLAYERS
RELEASED SATURDAY JUNE 28TH
SPECIAL ONE THREE & EIGHT SHEET POSTERS
RELIANCE
RELIANCE
MUTUAL SERVICE

MONDAY, JUNE 30th

"Her Final Choice"

A Thrilling Drama of the Coal Mines

A STRONG LOVE INTEREST—A SPECTACULAR EXPLOSION—A FIRE IN THE MINES—AND A SURPRISE CLIMAX.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 2nd

"Dick's Turning"

A Beautiful Love Drama Illustrating The Famous Quotation: "There Is A Destiny That Shapes Our Ends, Rough-Hew Them As We May."

SATURDAY, JULY 5th

"Death's Short Cut"

Rodman Law, The Notorious Dare-Devil, In His Sensational Plunge Over Stillwater Falls in an Open Boat.

MANAGERS NOTE:—High Class Broadway Production—One and Three sheet posters with every release. Photos by the Kraus Mfg. Co., 14 East 17th St., N. Y. Slides by Scott & Van Altena, 59 Pearl St., N. Y. C. Beautiful Player Posters of Edgena De Lespine and Irving Cummings at your Exchange.

Read Between the "Lions!"

THIS is a story that it took years to write—years of labor, hardship and surrounding danger. When the intrepid Cherry Kearton penetrated into the heart of the jungle, placing his life in constant jeopardy in order to bring before the eyes of the civilized world motion pictures of the life and habits of wild animals in their native haunts, even he, with his stupendous enthusiasm and inspired purpose, did not include in his most optimistic hopes such a thrilling conclusion of his efforts as the marvelous scenes which comprise

Adolph Zukor's

Astounding Animal Feature

"Capt. Cherry Kearton's Wild Life and Big Game in the Jungles of India and Africa"

Featuring

Native Lion Hunt in the Heart of the African Jungle"

Read between the lions, and you will find a record of courage and daring hitherto unparalleled, and a resultant series of animated photographs more thrilling and fascinating than the jungle's lure itself. The silence of the jungle speaks through the film, and its absorbing mysteries are translated on the screen.

The daily press have been forced to invent new laudatory adjectives to describe the wonders of this feature; alert state-right buyers have paid it a sincere tribute by their prompt inquiries and offers; your opportunities are dwindling every blessed day, but there may still be a chance—who knows? You ought to!—

WIRE!

(Before the "Lion" Grows!)

Complete variety of fascinating lithographs, impressive heralds and convincing lobby photos, besides detailed authoritative lecture which makes it

An Educational Feature With Extraordinary Entertaining Qualities.

Arab Amusement Company
Times Bldg. New York City

Broncho Headliners

The Transgressor

2 Reels, June 25

A splendidly costumed and acted drama of Puritan village life. A girl protects the man who wronged her by refusing to divulge his name. Abandoning her, he is attacked by hostile Indians and meets a tragic death. A faithful fisherman lover rekindles the girl's love for himself by his devotion, and the girl at length finds happiness.

ALL RIVERS MEET AT SEA

1 Reel, July 2

A one-reel feature showing a moving picture studio romance. A jealous rival separates a girl from her husband, but the strange workings of Fate reunite the lovers and cause the downfall of the guilty man.

GRAND-DAD

2 Reels, July 9

A touching story, presenting the highest dramatic quality, with scenes of spectacularism and war.

Broncho Motion Picture Co.
Long Acre Bldg., 42d St. and Bdwy.
NEW YORK CITY
MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

Keystone Comedies

FOR LOVE OF MABEL

1 Reel, June 30

Mabel loves her fat sweetheart, Bob. Harry, a desperate lover, captures Bob and ties him to a fence and presents him with a dynamite bomb with a burning fuse. Mabel so indignantly spurns the villain that he ties her to the other side of the fence. The couple are rescued after a series of thrilling burlesque melodramatic incidents.

RASTUS AND THE GAME-COCK

1 Reel, July 3

Rastus wants to go to the cock-fight, so he steals a chicken and sells it to his wife. It is then discovered that Rastus has unintentionally stolen the wrong chicken — the champion game one, and Rastus tries to get the fowl in order to win the reward offered. He barely saves it from the descending axe, but in the end there are so many claimants for the reward that the owner of the chicken refuses to pay anyone.

SAFE IN JAIL

1 Reel, July 7

THE TELLTALE LIGHT

1 Reel, July 10

KEYSTONE FILM CO.
Long Acre Bldg., 42d St. and Bdwy.
NEW YORK CITY
MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

Kay-Bee Features

THE BANSHEE

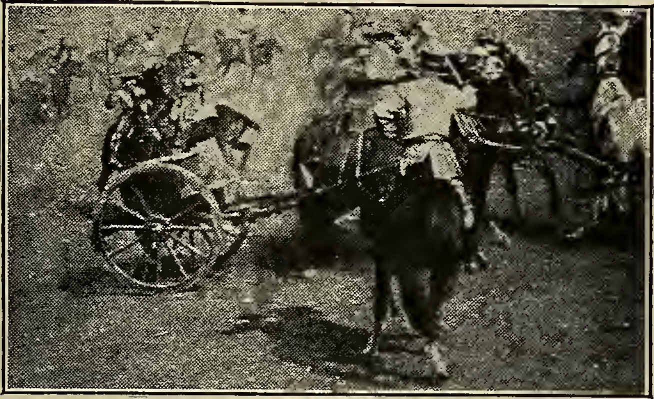
2 Reels, July 11

This wonderfully costumed and staged Irish play will stamp the Kay-Bee Company as the best and most versatile in the world. It presents a weird plot, dealing with the simple-hearted Irish peasantry, with its superstition of "The Banshee"—a visionary, witchlike creature, whose very name brought terror to the good people. This picture demonstrates that, regardless of the theme or the country where the plot is laid, that it will stand out as a Kay-Bee feature, with Kay-Bee quality, Kay-Bee dramatic rendition, and the Kay-Bee "punch" in the scenes which have made Kay-Bee world-famous as the peerless feature film.

N. Y. Motion Picture Corp.
Long Acre Bldg., 42d St. and Bdwy.
NEW YORK CITY
MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

"THE BATTLE of GETTYSBURG"

Special Release In Five Reels



Produced by Thos. H. Ince Managing Director of Kay-Bee and Broncho Films

The Greatest Motion Picture In The World

Booked Indefinitely at

Grand Opera House - New York City
Riverview Park - - Chicago, Ill.
High Street Theatre - Columbus, O.
Park Theatre - - Indianapolis, Ind.

Successfully playing the largest theatres in the country.

Special Terms and Bookings Can Be Had Exclusively Through the Offices of

THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION

New York Motion Picture Corporation

Long Acre Bldg. 42nd St. and Broadway New York City

Leaders of the World

AN UNUSUAL FEATURE PHOTO DRAMA
CONTAINING SCENES OF BEAUTIFUL
SETTINGS AND STIRRING ACTION.

THE GRAIN SPECULATOR

COPYRIGHTED 1913 INFRINGERS BEWARE

BOOK IT NOW

BOOK IT NOW

POWERFUL SENSATIONAL DRAMATIC

THRILLING PLUNGE FROM GRAIN MAGAZINE INTO THE GIANT BINS

FATAL DROP OF THE HOTEL ELEVATOR

Territorial Rights Now Being Disposed Of

Attractive One, Three and Six Sheet Posters, Enlarged Photos and Descriptive Heralds

OUR FEATURES INSURE CAPACITY HOUSES
Write for List of our Authorized Exchanges

Great Northern Special Feature Film Co.

42 East 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

THE HOUSE OF SELIG

SELIG LEADS OTHERS FOLLOW

SELIG CREATES OTHERS IMITATE

"Each New Selig Feature Outclasses Its Predecessors"

That's what the critics say—And it's the truth

"A WILD RIDE"

Released as a Two Reel Special on July 12th

IS ANOTHER STARTLING NOVELTY

A thrilling drama of frontier life on an ostrich farm in South Africa. See Bessie Eyton accomplish the all-but-impossible feat of riding for miles on the back of a swiftly running ostrich. Excitement every second

Watch the trade paper reviews

Book it today Remember It's a Selig

Book These Hot Weather Business Getters

July 7th—"THE TRAIL OF CARDS." An exciting story of the U. S. Revenue Service.

July 8th—"OLD DOC YAK." Seligettes Series No. 1. One of the season's novelties. Animated cartoons of Sydney Smith's Chicago Tribune Comic Supplement character, on reel with "A JOLT FOR THE JANITOR." Comedy.

July 9th—"THE REFORMATION OF DAD." Laughable comedy showing how "dad" was made to sign the pledge by the aid of wild animals.

July 10th—"MADE A COWARD." Exceptionally strong story of the west and its desert land.

July 11th—"BUDD DOBLE COMES BACK." A race track drama in which the greatest figure in the history of American race tracks appears personally. Feature.

On the Way: Mrs. Otis Skinner's "The Ne'er to Return Road"

SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

BRANCH OFFICES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
EXECUTIVE OFFICES: 20 E. RANDOLPH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL., U.S.A.

THE WORLDS FOREMOST PRODUCER

Released Wednesday, July 11

"The Statue of Fright"

A man who has trifled with the love of a girl buys a statue which her father has wrought and for which she posed. The sculptor learns the purchaser's identity and sees his chance for revenge. Instead of the statue, he brings the body of his dead daughter to the reception at which the statue was to be unveiled. Intense, gripping, powerful is this Eclipse-Kleine feature in two reels.

Four vivid, multiple

A crook play, a labor movement justice, and a picture of love and week's production of

In preparation now

"A WILD RIDE" — Selig — 2 reels —Released July 12

"THE DIAMOND MYSTERY"—Vitagraph—2 reels—Released July 14

General Film Company,

Released on Monday July 7

"The Forbidden Way"

Can a crook reform—a gentleman crook? Here's the case of one whom circumstance turns square. The love of his employer's daughter keeps him on the straight and narrow path. But his old pals ferret him out, the girl who loved him as a crook turns upon him and his past catches up with him. E. H. Calvert is the master thief and the Essanay players appear in this stirring story of the underworld and the upper crust. It's in two reels.

Released on Saturday, July 5

"The Miner's Destiny"

Put yourself in the place of a man wrongfully convicted of a crime. Imagine his sufferings through long, endless years, his waiting and hoping, and finally the wonderful burst of thankfulness that seizes him when Fate, with one sweep, sets him square with the world. That's the story of this Patheplay in two reels.

engrossing features story, a film dealing with misdirected human interest. The best of the brains and cleverness.

are these features:

"THE FIGHT AT GRIZZLY GULCH"—Kalem—2 reels—Released July 16
"THE SECRET FORMULA"—Patheplay—2 reels —Released July 18

200 Fifth Ave., New York

Released Monday July 9

"A Hero Among Men"

A strike in a dynamite plant—picture the possibilities. The mob advances on the executive building—where the officers and the president's daughter are gathered. Suddenly the workmen halt. The building, filled with explosives, is afire. It's a situation that tries the metal of men, and one man proves his worth. That's the Lubin film in two reels produced by Barry O'Neil.

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY
TWICE A WEEK

MEANS

TWICE AS MUCH NEWS SHOWN
TWICE AS SOON. THIS MEANS
TWICE AS MANY PATRONS
TWICE AS WELL SATISFIED
TWICE AS MUCH MONEY FOR YOU

BOOK
PATHÉ'S WEEKLY
TWICE A WEEK

CURRENT FILMS EDISON KINETOSCOPES 1913 MODEL

 A Gentleman's Gentleman

Drama (1025). Released Friday, July 4th.

A society man having thrown away his entire estate in gambling and fast living, is overcome by the temptation to steal the necklace of his young hostess. His servant assumes the responsibility to save him but the real culprit, his better self aroused, confesses his guilt.

 The Signal

Drama (1000). Released Saturday, July 5th.

Citizen Bompard, having laid a trap for the death of one of the fleeing nobility, is ensnared by the charms of the latter's betrothed, who leads him into the very death which he had so carefully planned for her lover. With Bompard gone their escape is easy.

Over the Great Divide in Colorado

Scenic (300). Released Monday, July 7th.

A journey on the highest standard gauge railway in the world, above the timber and snow lines where the huge white blanket lies three and four feet deep in May. The scenes are impressive in their wild grandeur, a mass of giant mountains and huge valleys passing in stately review.

* Winsome Winnie's Way

Comedy (700). Released Monday, July 7th.

Having spoiled a picnic because the boys forsook their partners to cluster about her, Winnie smiles her way into the house of a confirmed woman hater who has refused the other girls protection from a thunder storm. Then she saves the other girls and all is well.

* Scenes of Other Days

Scenic (1000). Released Tuesday, July 8th.

An old Confederate sharpshooter who was rescued and carried to the Northern lines in the battle of Piedmont Heights, shows his gratitude when his former benefactor is stranded penniless in Atlanta and escorts him to all the principal point of interest in the beautiful city.

* His Mother-in-Law's Visit

Comedy (1000). Released Wednesday, July 9th.

Brandon's exacting young wife, with her strict house rules and unattractive dress, drives him to the club. He has never seen her mamma and nearly dies when he hears that she is coming for a visit. But her good sense proves the making of his happiness.

* In the Old Dutch Times

Drama (1000). Released Friday, July 11th.

Left in the care of an old shrew at the death of her parents, little Hulda leads a miserable life until Hans, the goose tender, wins her childish affections. The confession of the man who impersonated her wealthy father finally brings her wealth and happiness.

* ONE SHEET POSTERS.  ONE AND THREE SHEETS.

THE success of the Underwriters' Type "B" was based upon simplicity of construction and the wonderful lasting qualities obtained by the use of hardened steel. In building the 1913 Model we have added many important features, among them:

All metal baseboard.

Swivel Tension Roller Bracket on the take-up sprocket preventing the film from jumping off the sprocket.

Extra Large Lamp House and Heavy Arc Lamp permitting the use of a 12" upper and a 6" lower carbon, ¾ of an inch in diameter.

60 Ampere Switch. New large Switch Box.

Price with 25-40 Ampere grid type Rheostat, $250.00.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc.,

239 Lakeside Avenue
ORANGE, N. J.

LUBIN·FILMS

FIVE RELEASES EVERY WEEK

"HER HUSBAND'S PICTURE" 1000 feet Tuesday, July 1st
A tale of the Studio; very pretty.

"THE ANGEL OF THE SLUMS" 1000 feet Thursday, July 3rd
A lovely girl finds her right affinity.

"THE WAITER'S STRATEGY" 400 feet Friday July 4th
The Waiter does a clever piece of work.

"THE WRONG HANDBAG" 600 feet Friday, July 4th
Two handbags cause an unfortunate complication.

"HIS NIECE FROM IRELAND"

1000 Feet

RELEASED SATURDAY, JULY 5th

Tempted by a misdirected letter which was a case of mistaken identity, Ellen Kerry came from Ireland to America and posed as Patrick Grady's niece, whose mother had died and left her penniless. She, however, insisted on getting employment and paying back the passage money sent by Grady. The girl was beautiful and a suitor soon appeared and much to Grady's surprise he found himself intensely jealous. He had fallen in love with his supposed niece. The girl, worried by her false position, left the house and Grady thought she had eloped. Later he found her and she confessed that she was no relation, and Grady was free to love her as she loved him.

"THE MYSTERIOUS HAND" 1000 feet Monday July 7th
Intense Indian and Cowboy melodrama.

LUBIN TWO-REEL PICTURES ARE FEATURES

"A HERO AMONG MEN" SPECIAL TWO-REEL Wednesday, July 9th

This is undoubtedly the most powerful Photo Melodrama we have ever released; over three hundred men were employed in the Strike scenes, which depicted the savage passions of men who felt that they were not treated fairly. Fire and Explosions, however, turned the tide of battle, lives had to be saved and heroism took the place of madness and viciousness. Men who would kill were turned into men who would save and demonstrated that "one touch of nature makes all men kin."

LUBIN 5 COLOR POSTERS—One, Three and Six Sheets
From your Exchange or A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, O.

LUBIN

LUBIN MANUFACTURING CO. PHILADELPHIA U.S.A

LUBIN

VITAGRAPH

"ROUGHING THE CUB" Comedy Monday, June 30th

He is new at the newspaper game. The rest of the boys play a joke on him. He "beats them to it," lands a good story and makes good. He turns the laugh.

"BINGLES AND THE CABARET"
"SIGHT-SEEING IN JAPAN" Comedy and Topical Tuesday, July 1st

1. He can't get away from vaudeville with his meals. It gets on his nerves and music drives him mad. 2. Some things we don't see anywhere else.

"THE SONG BIRD OF THE NORTH" Story of the War Wednesday, July 2nd

Her voice and her presence inspire others with patriotism. She is led to the altar by a young army chaplain. President Lincoln gives her away.

"SWEET-DECEPTION" Comedy-Drama Thursday, July 3rd

To make another happy, a married couple pretend they are living together happily. Their deception leads to their reunion and happiness.

"AN UNWRITTEN CHAPTER" Drama Friday, July 4th

To procure a prize story, a young girl pretends to love a young fellow. She afterwards loves him, but he denounces her.

"LOVE'S QUARANTINE" Comedy Saturday, July 5th

A fake patient and a fake doctor lift a quarantine against a love affair. It ends disastrously for Cutey.

SIX-A-WEEK

"THE GLOVE"—Dramatic Monday, July 7th

"COUNT BARBER"—A Laugh-Provoker Tuesday, July 8th

"SOLITAIRES"
"A MILLINERY BOMB"
Explosions of Fun. Wednesday, July 9th

"THE CARPENTER"—Drama Thursday, July 10th

"THE SPIRIT OF THE ORIENT"—Drama of India Friday, July 11th

"THE MOULDING"—Life Portrayal Saturday, July 12th

SPECIAL FEATURE, "THE TIGER LILY," IN THREE PARTS; RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JULY 2nd.

SPECIAL FEATURE, "THE DIAMOND MYSTERY"—THE CONTEST STORY OF THE MOTION PICTURE STORY MAGAZINE—IN TWO PARTS; RELEASED MONDAY, JULY 14th.

SPECIAL FEATURE, "A PRINCE OF EVIL," IN TWO PARTS; RELEASED SATURDAY, JULY 26th.

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS OF ALL VITAGRAPH SPECIAL FEATURE RELEASES. SPECIAL MUSIC FOR SPECIAL FEATURES.

NEW YORK,
LONDON AND PARIS.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA, East 15th Street and Locust Avenue, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The Lost Diamond

A thief's effort to recover a lost gem leads to his arrest

(On the same reel)

The Mermaid

An old fisherman is made the brunt of a joke, but enjoys the last laugh.

Released Monday, July 14th Special 1 and 3-sheet posters

A Thief in the Night

Miss Alice Joyce in a gripping drama. A burglar is discovered at work and when sent on an important errand he proves a friend in need.

Special 1 and 3-sheet Posters
Released Wednesday, July 16th

What the Doctor Ordered

Determined to reduce his weight, a fat man has trouble in following instructions.

(On the same reel)

The Concrete Industry

Modern scientific methods afford many interesting scenes. Released Friday, July 18th

The Smuggler

While at sea a detective finds a peculiar clue which enables him to convict a smuggler.

Released Saturday, July 19th

Shenandoah

Bronson Howard's Famous Civil War Drama Complete in 3 parts

Special Release Friday, July 4th Special 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters

The Fight at Grizzly Gulch

A Thrilling Drama of Frontier Life in Two Parts

Special Release Wednesday, July 16th Special 1, 3 and 6 Sheet Posters

TRADE KALEM MARK

Kalem Company

235-239 W. 23rd Street New York

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.................................President
E. J. Chalmers.......................Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie............Vice-President and General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—169 West Washington Street (Post Building), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands..$3.00 per year
Canada.. 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (postpaid).................... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING — no display — three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

NOTE. — Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

The index for this issue will be found on page 94.

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, July 5, 1913

Facts and Comments

COMBINATIONS and alliances of kinematographic with theatrical interests are easily understood by anyone who has made a study of the theatrical situation in this or in any other country. The "dark houses" explain it all. There is probably no town in the country where the theater has not been compelled to make concessions to the moving picture. From the minstrel show which from time immemorial has disturbed the rustic peace and quiet of New Jersey to the greatest temples of art in the centres of our population the speaking stage has suffered through the growing power and popularity of the motion picture. To turn the barren and dark nights into light and profitable ones has been no small problem. At first the theatrical managers and magnates contented themselves with predicting the coming downfall of the motion picture as a means of popular amusement. It was poor consolation because the motion picture steadfastly declined to live up to these gloomy prophecies. Dark nights became more numerous, and at last it dawned upon the theatrical interests that waiting for the wane of the moving picture was a cheerless and unproductive occupation.

*

In due time the theatrical magnate abandoned his role of a prophet of evil (to others), and much against his will knocked at the door of kinematography as a humble suitor. The great big hammers were left outside, and the new converts appear willing to pay for their entry into the moving picture ranks. Frankly speaking, we do not share the apprehension of some friends of the motion picture who fear lest the film men who have made or are about to make these alliances with theatrical interests will get the worst of it. It seems pretty reasonable in the light of history to hope that the film men thoroughly understand their own interests. They have not courted these alliances. Offers came from the theatrical side, and if any offers were accepted it is quite logical to assume that the film men are going to profit thereby at least as much as the theatrical interests. We do not share the fear, expressed in some quarters, that the small exhibitor may be injured through the conversion of entire theatrical circuits into rounds of motion picture houses. Such houses are more likely to be patronized by former patrons of the legitimate speaking stage than by the great masses of our population who make up the bulk of our moving picture audiences today.

* * *

FROM time to time there are outbreaks of Puritan fanaticism in various parts of the country, and quite often they are directed against the exhibition of even the most proper motion pictures on Sunday. We believe that these outbreaks are of less frequent occurrence than, say, twenty or thirty years ago, and the way the press now rallies to the principle of reasonable enjoyment on Sundays is a most encouraging sign. Just at present, exhibitors in Fort Wayne, one of the progressive typical American communities of which Indiana has so generous a share, are being attacked for exhibiting motion pictures on Sundays. The leading paper of the city has taken up the cause of the exhibitors not because it wants to render any personal favor to them but solely for the benefit of the physical and moral health of the community. It warns the church people against hasty and ill-considered action, and then goes on to ask them "if they have honestly considered what the harvest will be if they succeed in closing the theaters on the Sabbath day." It pays a tribute to the picture by characterizing the entertainments in Fort Wayne as being "clean, instructive and in some instances inspiring." The paper concludes that the closing of the theaters on Sunday will mean "that women and girls are to be subjected to street and other temptations of the worst sort." We mention this able champion of the freedom of the picture because it reflects public opinion in a decent, clean-living American city. Many a time we have pointed out in these columns that the exhibitors owed it to themselves and to the industry to carry on an intelligent agitation for proper Sunday entertainments, and we suggested a discussion of the subject in the public press as one of the best means. Newspapers all over the country are beginning to advocate the toleration of good, clean shows on Sundays. Let us keep the issue alive, and especially in case of any attack by people who may be quite sincere but are surely ill-advised, let us define our position and fight for our rights and incidentally for the good of all the people by offering good, instructive and entertaining programs on Sundays. The progress will be slow but sure. It requires persistence and courage to go ahead. In the meantime not only the newspapers but no mean proportion of the clergy are announcing themselves in favor of a proper Sunday entertainment.

Eternal Recurrence

By Louis Reeves Harrison

IN the beginning of the human drama there were, according to the generally accepted account, two men and one woman: Satan, Adam and Eve. She, nature's most profound mystery, wavered between them and became a sweet bone of contention. A fierce rivalry for her possession was thus begun that reached supreme development in the Trojan war over lovely Helen. The daughters of Eve have never been able to rid themselves of her vacillating tendency—Adam still goeth forth to gather subsistence while Satan mocketh—hence the imperishable triangle.

Note the charm of variety that this has given to existence. Man is furnished with an incentive to struggle. Woman, who might not have adorned her natural graces with fêstoons of leaves and flowers if there had been only one man in the beginning, has artistic sensibilities that make department stores possible. Man's sagacity was increased by rivalry. He was the first male of the animal kingdom to observe and record for future reference the fact that the female inclined strongly toward him who accumulated the largest store of cocoanuts. Hence the pathetic story of the girl with a true lover who marries the rich one to help father or mother out of difficulties.

Perceiving the value of storing supplies for future consumption, the sons of Adam were given an object to pursue—they fought their natural inclinations to a standstill and went to work, but it was one thing to put by for future enjoyment and quite another to keep what might come in handy on a rainy day, for some there were so close to nature that they would take what they could lay hands on. Certain parasites throve by subsisting on what others produced. The drama of contention between labor and capital was thus delicately suggested.

Man found it necessary to battle for the power of accumulations including the territory offering finest opportunity for the development of that power. He organized great bodies for aggression and defense and armed them with death-dealing weapons for the purpose of getting and holding what others had. Hence the lovely uniforms that delight the eye of spectators in moving picture shows and magnificent stimulus to destructive tendencies exhibited in grand spectacles of war.

But he put a tremendous force into the hands of those Lilies of the Field who toil not, neither do they spin. These modest flowers, living for no other purpose than to bask in the sunlight, discovered that the gun was a convincing argument in a holdup for the wherewithal to meet with daily necessities. They pushed their argument in obedience to adage that has come down to us through the ages from an eminent and much-respected Anthropoidal Ape of the year One Million B. C. "What thou canst not seize upon shall not be given thee." Hence the pistol drama.

The covert sympathy of woman—let us who trace our ancestry through one common progenitor, William the Conqueror, to another called Adam and surnamed Don't Care, blame it all on the woman—for Satan and other rejected members of society who pursue indoor kleptomania or outdoor cattle rustling for a vocation has brought into vogue another drama of contrast. She has been stolen property herself for so many generations that she has moods of admiring him who takes feloniously and carries off clandestinely by no right of his own or other man's leave. Hence the Burglar and the Lady photoplay comes around with gas-bill regularity.

Then her sympathy for the weak! How could good men get along without it? When she is watching "something grow" in the garden, she exhibits indifference if it gets along all right, but let it fade and grow sick, she will water it with her tears. So we have the reiterated hero who has been shot, or partially so, lying pale and helpless on a cot, while she flits gracefully around the chamber to show that she has not lost her waistline, bends over and mothers him, gives him indiscriminate doses of medicine in a spoon for a chance to encircle his neck with her arm or kneels by his bedside to pray that he may live to embrace her at the end of her drama and the beginning of his.

If she had not been sent from some sphere celestial to this one terrestrial, what might we not have been? Perhaps leading an existence of mollusk-like serenity and at peace with the janitor. Instead of that we keep struggling for the blue ribbon that we may present it to her, while she looks on with the mild speculative interest she occasionally displays in an accumulation of cigar coupons. She expects to be adored by the winner, unless, in sportive mood, from pure love of variety, she decides to have a mixture of good and bad in the next generation. Then we have the same old tragedy of disappointed love, in which the hero shoots himself or starves to death writing scenarios to slow music.

Though suspenders are stronger than they were in Adam's time, when one suit on hand was worth two on the bush, there is a dream-like recurrence in farce comedy of the screen of the situation where some part of a gentleman's attire is missing at the acute moment he is entering the best society. How deeply ashamed he is! We enjoy his distress because Satan saw the joke in propriety, nothing more than a conformity to a custom purely artificial, but the question is who started it. A young gentleman is completly overcome at having to appear at his own wedding in a bathrobe. Yet, in some parts of the world he would be overdressed. We laugh from a sense of security, as we do when some other fellow's hat blows away; we enjoy our superior position as we do when giving advice to poor relatives. The day, however, is not so far away when all that we are taking seriously now will furnish the richest kind of comedy material for another generation.

For instance, consider the lawyer. Why is he? Because we have created such a complicated code that men make a living trying to interpret it. Do not the laws that a few framed centuries ago to govern those they wished to rob in a respectable, high-finance, unpunished sort of way constitute the grandest farce on earth? How we will be laughed at for maintaining a police organization that produced millionaires from the profits of crime! What a good joke is the exercise of equal suffrage where a corrupt party leader both selects and elects the candidate he expects to use.

What an eternal recurrence of a good joke it is to see men who have more millions than they can possibly make misuse of swearing off ninety-nine per cent. of their taxes, while the poor devil working hard to support a family pays tax on the full value of his home. Still bigger joke, which will probably have eternal recurrence, is that of making moving pictures for millions of poor people who patronize picture shows, yet without a helpful spirit that would bring those patrons into a stronger and more sympathetic relation with the New Art.

Italy's Film Center

By W. Stephen Bush

Turin, June 8, 1913.

A CLEAN, healthy, pleasant little city is Turin, which by reason of its film activities looms large on the map of kinematography. It does seem incredible, but there are really no beggars in Turin—there may be a happy connection between Turin's prominence as a film center and this strange absence of mendicants in an Italian town—at any rate it is a pleasant fact to put on record.

When I pushed the bell at the great Ambrosio plant I had for the 'steenth time expected to find at least one great exception to a great rule—an open door in Italy between the hours of twelve and two. Once again Hope retired discomfited before Experience. The door of the vast establishment was locked. In Italy, and indeed everywhere on the Continent, business for two precious hours, taken out of the very heart of the sun, falls asleep, drops into oblivion and has to be excavated every afternoon at two, or rather at fourteen o'clock.

I returned a little after two and found the men at the Ambrosio helm most courteous and most intelligent. The chief executive, Mr. A. Gandolfi, who had but recently been in New York, is an ardent admirer of America, and regretted not being younger or he would surely come to New York to live. He is absorbed in his work, and just now particularly interested in the filming of "I Promessi Sposi," Manzoni's great novel. Five years ago the possibilities of this masterpiece were pointed out at length in The Moving Picture World, a fact which Signor Gandolfi heard with surprise and delight. Signor Ambrosio is equally enthusiastic about the filming of "The Betrothed." Turin is not far away from Lake Como, where so many of the most charming scenes of the great story have been laid. The Ambrosio players, with Mr. Ambrosio in personal charge, and with Manzoni's lines before them, are camping near the lake, which is one of the most beautiful in the world. There will probably be six reels of this feature, and it may reach the States next month. The Ambrosio Company have laid out a most ambitious program for the rest of this year.

Signor Visone took me over the entire plant of the Ambrosio, which has in the last two years grown to imposing proportions. The plant is very complete and efficient in every detail. There is one large studio, 150 by 250, and there are two smaller ones. Very much of the Ambrosio work just now is being done in the open air; hardly a day passes but brings its rehearsals in the great stadium of Turin, which has been hired for taking some of the more important scenes in "The Last Days of Pompeii."

Another interesting plant is that of the Itala Company, nicely situated in the hilly section of the city. The Itala is making preparations for the filming of a great dramatic play of modern origin, and for another classic which, as their ambitious young director said, would far surpass "The Fall of Troy." I was much impressed with the work of the scene painters in the Itala studio; they are artists of evident merit. Whatever the coming Itala subjects may be, there will be revelations in scene painting and in the construction of splendid interiors.

The Savoy Company, situated on top of a pretty hill, is now selling through the Eclair Company. What little I saw of its work gives promise of improvement, though the goal of perfection is still a good way off.

There are quite a number of other producers in Turin, of whom Mr. Ottolenghi, who has some experience in the field, might be mentioned. He has just begun work. Of the others little need be said. Manufacturers in a small way are now springing up all over Europe, and the market is flooded with all sorts of negatives. Whenever an artist has been successful with a part in a great drama he begins to get restless, and quite often severs his connection with the company, hires an operator, writes a scenario, does his own directing and then offers the negative to some manufacturer of standing. A great minority of such negatives have merit, and are bought up by the big producers, but as a rule the negative gives a few gasps and is quickly swallowed up by the dark tides of Oblivion.

The Famous Players idea, so successfully launched in our own country, has taken hold in every country of Continental Europe, and bids fair to enrich the market with some choice productions. Quite a few legitimate players in every capital of Europe gather occasionally, put themselves under the direction of an experienced director of the kinematographic drama and turn out an acceptable negative. There are always buyers for this sort of feature, and more will be heard of them in the near future. I have little doubt that in spite of a determined opposition on the part of the big theaters more artists of high repute will join famous players companies. Stronger artistic organization is sure to follow, and there will be no lack of money to finance such enterprises.

In passing from Rome to Turin I made a detour to the east to visit Milano, the home of the Milano Films Company, well known to readers of The Moving Picture World as the producers of several classic masterpieces. Rarely have I seen a more complete and efficient plant than that of the Milano Films, picturesquely located in one of the suburbs of the city. Whatever is used by this company in the production of its films is made on the premises. There is a large, well-equipped studio, and the mechanical departments, such as developing, printing, coloring, etc., are models of order and thoroughness. The most careful attention is given even to the slightest detail. One of the managers of the company is now in New York to study the conditions of the American market. I was told by the director in charge that the Milano Company intends to put out a great feature at an early date, probably the last part of this present summer. This feature will, for a change, be a modern drama.

I cannot leave Italy without recording the fact that no other country in Europe offers such splendid facilities for the production of great feature films of a classic and artistic character. The light in Rome and all through Southern Italy and Sicily leaves nothing to be desired from the viewpoint of the photographer, and is available for the motion picture camera ten months out of twelve. There can be no doubt of the artistic temperament and ability of the Italians. For centuries Italy has now been the storehouse of the greatest works of artistic genius from the classic period to this hour. To be born and trained in such atmosphere of the best traditions in architecture, sculpture and painting is no mean advantage. Kinematography, no less than her sister arts, depends upon a happy and natural expression of what is true and beautiful. The opportunity to view close at hand the greatest masterpieces of artistic genius cannot help being a constant source of inspiration. It is most gratifying to an American to hear from the lips of the producers of the great kinematographic masterpieces that nowhere in the world have such films proved more popular than in America.

"What Happened to Mary"

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE publishing of a continued story on the screen marks an era and is by far the most important departure taken from the conventional release since the feature play opened up a broader field of action. It is all the more remarkable in successful results because the first steps were taken without that careful preparation which is necessary to make a big story intelligible, to say nothing of entertaining. There is an evident lack of some prescribed course to be pursued in the chapters of events. They were plainly gathered together from many sources and of diverse value; the authors had nothing particularly original to offer; there was apparently no conception in advance as to what the work was to be, and there are abundant evidences from beginning to end that, like Topsy, it "just growed." But it went over and drew crowds to the little theaters from ocean to ocean.

Miss Mary Fuller.

I gather from various unbiased sources that the interest shown by the people in front, that which led them to go again and again to see what happened to Mary, was largely due to Mary's own ability to penetrate, comprehend and reproduce a character that reached out and gripped common sympathy, or that her own temperamental growth was the high factor. Miss Fuller has given modest evidences of the artistic temperament. I sat one night with three thousand others and watched an Edison photoplay make a decided hit. It was a simple story, but it contained tiny thrills of originality and genius that people in front enjoy as a relief from eternal recurrence. Mary was in it, but I have only recently learned that she wrote it. Inasmuch as she is young and without equipment of training or experience as an author it appears that she has abundant mental resource and was unveiling in the continued story her own manner of feeling and thinking, that the fascination of the portrayal was probably that of her own individuality. What happened to Mary on the screen is that she discovers in the beginning that she is a waif, left at the store of Billy Peart on Moses Island, and she induces a fisherman to row her to the mainland. She encountered a number of adventures that compel her to cross the ocean. On her way back, while sharing a cabin with Nell Benson, the latter makes some startling deductions. An heiress is missing, and Miss Benson decides that Mary must be the one entitled to receive possession of the property. A wicked uncle has it and tries to put the rightful owner out of the way. She escapes; the villain pursues her, and she nearly misses it after all. She must put in an appearance at twelve on a certain day. She comes to her own by the fraction of a second, and the suspense is over. I know nothing about what is to happen to Mary in the next series, but, from the bottom of my heart, I wish her better luck.

I know almost as little about what has happened to Mary in real life, but, in the course of writing several magazine stories in which she has figured and several more criticisms of plays in which she has appeared, I have had opportunity to note the progress she has been making since she was a mere slip of a girl with a pair of expressive eyes. She is said to be industrious and dependable—by such measures are we judged—but consecration of energy to one particular occupation is a rather primary element of success and affects the humblest of those who toil. It is really too bad that some inventive person has not devised a profession where gentlemen and ladies could accomplish marvelous results by taking things easy—it would be so eminently suited to those in need of recuperation from doing nothing whatever, but that is always the way. Things are never as they should be. If a person wants to be anybody in particular nowadays, he, she or it has got to start in by being born of excellent parents in a civilized land where there is plenty of nurture as well as the right kind of human nature, enter upon a congenial occupation when young and hopeful, then work like blazes.

Miss Fuller was assigned to important parts very early in her career because of a visible intellectual capacity. She became devoted to her work, and it was well suited to her native powers. She may have been unaware of her own strength, but it is far more likely that she has entertained unexpressed ambitions all along. That seems proven by her pertinacity. She has been working towards unrevealed ends. Other elements of efficiency necessary to success have been brought out by learning in action. There was very little opportunity for emotional display in the continued story on the screen, but she went ahead and made the most of her part, biding her time until better opportunity came her way and thus contributed materially, by an infusion of her own character, to curiosity excited all over the country as to what would next befall the story's heroine.

I found Miss Fuller delightfully appreciative of what has been done for her in the matter of environment during her connection with the Edison Company. The idea of a continued screen presentation was a bold one to put into effect, though it was bound by laws of cause and effect to make a hit, and she highly praised the courage of those who attempted what appeared to be the impossible. All concerned in this innovation are to be congratulated, including the somewhat conservative managerial head who permitted it to go through. They deserve credit for what they tried to do as much as for what they accomplished.

I have told what happened to Mary on the screen and something of what happened to her in real life, but what is going to occur in the new series is kept secret. The future of the continued story, now that the heroine has a fortune to use, opens a splendid field for some capable author. I hope to see a contribution to what is interesting the whole enlightened world, the betterment of present social conditions. As a woman of wealth, Mary has it in her power to do something worth while in the matter of raising social efficiency to greater heights than ever.

WILLIAMS TO HANDLE RAMO FILMS IN LONDON.

C. Lang Cobb, Jr., manager sales and publicity of Ramo Films, announces that he has just completed arrangements and signed contracts with the General Film Agency, Ltd., of London, England, for the distribution of Ramo Films in Europe and the continent. Mr. E. Seville Williams, managing director of the General Film Agency, has been in New York for the past ten days consummating this deal. Mr. Cobb has done well in contracting with this agency, inasmuch as they will handle no other American product through their various offices in Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Moscow, Turin, Barcelona, and Sydney, Australia.

Universal Goes to Court.

Hearing on Friday at Which Various Points of the Tangle Are Taken Up—That Option's Vital Point.

DURING the week both sides in the Universal controversy were awaiting the hearing in court on Friday, June 27—that is, they were waiting and watching. Last Saturday Justice Gerard signed an order, under Section 52 of the General Corporation laws, vacating the election of R. H. Cochrane as secretary and G. E. Kann as assistant secretary of the Universal. He also signed an order to show cause why Cochrane and Kann should not be enjoined from filling the offices of secretary and assistant secretary and why they should not be restrained from interfering with W. H. Swanson as vice-president and secretary and Burton Garrett as second assistant treasurer and assistant secretary. Both writs are returnable June 27, for argument on their permanency. On the same day will be heard the arguments on the writs obtained by Mr. Swanson and by the Universal directed against the police department for the surrender of the books that were taken into custody on the day of the stockholders' meeting, June 16. Also on Friday will come the hearing, adjourned from the previous Friday, as to the making permanent of the temporary injunction issued on June 17 directed against Messrs. Powers, Swanson and Garrett restraining them from interfering with the proper conduct of the business of the company.

It is probable that the issue in court will center about the option given by David Horsley on May 5 last to P. A. Powers. Much has been said about one clause of this instrument; also considerable has been said about another clause any resemblance to which a close examination of the entire option fails to reveal a trace. The last allusion is to the alleged provision that Mr. Powers shall not exercise his option unless and until Carl Laemmle shall refuse to sell his stock. The suggested situation has been that as Mr. Laemmle has at no time refused to sell his stock Mr. Powers could not exercise his option.

However, here is the real nub of the fight, quoted verbatim from the original copy of the option:

"Now, therefore, the party of the first part [David Horsley] hereby gives to the party of the second part [P. A. Powers] an irrevokable option, which option shall continue for thirty days from this date and for three successive periods of thirty days each, unless at least ten days before the expiration of the first of any succeeding period of thirty days the party of the first part shall notify the party of the second part in writing of his intention to terminate the said option at the expiration of the then current period of thirty days."

Mr. Horsley, on June 7, notified the Bank of the Metropolis, which held the stock in escrow, of his intention to terminate the option. The agreement provides that the party of the second part shall be notified in writing. Mr. Powers denies that he received any such notification. In case he had, he pointed out, the option would have expired July 5. It was on June 11 that Mr Laemmle paid over to Mr. Horsley's bank in Bayonne, N. J., $97,000 in cash and $75,000 in notes. On June 13 Mr. Powers deposited with the Bank of the Metropolis the amount of money and notes required by his option and demanded the stock. Mr. Powers on Wednesday last stated that the attorney of the bank sought the president of the Universal at the company's offices on June 13, but was unable to find him; that the attorney inquired who served in the president's place in his absence and was told the vice-president; that thereupon the vice-president, Mr. Swanson, issued the new certificates and they were turned over to Mr. Powers and recorded on the books of the corporation.

"Laemmle had offered me $10 a share for my option on the Horsley stocks," said Mr. Powers, Wednesday, "and a big bonus besides. Then one of his men made a proposition to Horsley that he might as well get some of this profit. I stood ready to turn the stock over to Laemmle at the price stated, but intended first to take up the option myself and sell him the stock. How much stock was there? Well, there were 1,250 shares of preferred and 1,540 of common. Now, I have been buying as much law as the other fellow and I can't find any reason why I should not vote my stock. My position is simply that of a stockholder. As a stockholder I certainly will not acquiesce in the company paying the small army of strong-arm men on duty at the Universal offices. The directors have not authorized the employment of these men. They cannot, because they cannot muster a quorum. According to the by-laws the board is composed of seven, and naturally four will constitute a quorum. With Mr. and Mrs. Swanson not attending, as they have not since June 7, only three are left—Laemmle, Morse and Cochrane."

The Universal Company has notified Frank Bailey, of Portland and Seattle of the discontinuance of his service. Mr. Bailey had no contract. The Film Supply Company has signed up for Oregon, Washington and Idaho for two years. A contract for the same period has been signed with the Detroit Universal Film Exchange, which did not have one before, and also for two years with the Universal Film Exchange of Toledo, which had a prior agreement. The Independent Film Exchange of Pittsburgh, Inc., which has been receiving service, has also signed for two years.

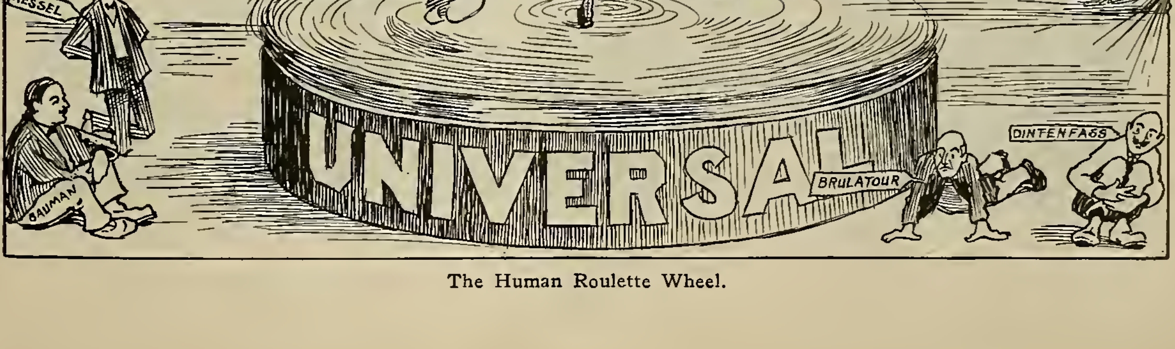
There have been rumors of cancellations of service or of notifications of such, but it is hardly likely any will be made effective even if they be in mind until after the status of the officers has been judicially determined.

A meeting of the board of directors of the company had been called for Wednesday, June 25, but Mr. and Mrs. Swanson did not put in an appearance, and the meeting was not held.

David Horsley, accompanied by Mrs. Horsley and their son, sailed on June 26 on the Celtic for a two months' vacation in Europe.

K. & E. AND BIOGRAPH COMBINE.

Announcement has been made of an agreement between the American Biograph Company and the theatrical firm of Klaw & Erlanger, whereby the Biograph will interpret into photoplays certain copyrighted plays that are controlled by K. & E. It is not probable that this arrangement will interfere with the regular Biograph output through the regular channels, but will be confined to ambitious multiple-reel features for exhibition in large theaters controlled by K. & E. The actual work of producing will not begin until the Biograph stock company returns from California to occupy the new Bronx studio.



The Human Roulette Wheel.

"A Wild Ride" (Selig)

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

SELIG'S two-reel specials are in great demand these days, a fact that is convincingly proved by the records of the General Film Company's branch offices throughout the country. It may be safely said beforehand, without much fear of contradiction, that "A Wild Ride," which is scheduled for release July 12, will surpass most of its forerunners in thrilling story and exciting incidents.

These films have been produced on the Selig wild animal farm in Los Angeles, but it must not be supposed, because of that fact, that "A Wild Ride" is of the wild animal type of picture. It is not. It is a drama of South African life, in which English settlers and British soldiers play important parts, with Zulu warriors on the warpath furnishing the element of ever-impending danger.

The attack on the ranch house of the ostrich farmer is very realistically shown. The savage Zulus encircle the frame structure and throw their long spears with unerring aim at every vulnerable point of the beleagured homestead. The inmates meanwhile pour a rain of lead on the dusky warriors, and many of them bite the dust. Then the ranch house is set on fire and the daughter of the ranch farmer makes a desperate ride on her pet ostrich to the nearest British fort, and the soldiers arrive just in time to prevent a wholesale massacre.

This remarkable ride, which is made by Miss Bessie Eyton, of Selig's Western company, is well shown in the pictures and is, I believe, the first of the kind that has ever been made use of in a photodrama. Miss Eyton's impersonation of the heroine in other respects betrays dashing action and winsome attractiveness.

Thomas Santschi commands praise in the makeup of Lieut. Borden, of the C. F. N. Rifles, and Frank Clarke is a sturdy double of Donald McGraw, the fearless South African ostrich farmer. Ferdinand Galvez gives a forceful portrayal of Jahalli, the fierce and venomous half-breed leader of the Zulus, and Miss Lillian Hayward's characterization of Mrs. McGraw shows the shrinking nature and devotedness of that gentlewoman. "Sandy," the pet ostrich, who has had most to do in furnishing a title for the films, plays his part as zestfully as any of the other members of the company.

The selection of exteriors from scenery in the Selig animal farm has been skillfully made by Director Colin Campbell, whose fine conduct of the production cannot fail to impress the careful observer. The big elephant, with a gatling gun and the men who operate it on his broad back, adds a fine touch of atmosphere to the attack on the Zulus at the ranch house. If the elephant seems a little too slow in his movements to be able to arrive in time at the scene of battle, he will be pardoned because of the ponderous load that he carries; for one catches sight of Big Otto turning the crank of the deadly machine gun!

Florence McGraw, the only daughter of Donald McGraw, a well-to-do gentleman ostrich farmer in South Africa, has just completed her education at a fashionable school for young ladies in Johannesburg. She had lived with her mother in the McGraw city home during the course. Before going out to their home on the ranch, Mrs. McGraw gives a ball in her daughter's honor, and all the elite of Johannesburg are present. Among the guests is Lieut. Borden, a young officer just arrived from England to join His Majesty's forces in South Africa. During the evening the young people meet and are mutually attracted.

Next day the McGraws leave for the ranch and Borden departs for his post at Fort Congo. While passing through a lonely stretch of woodland, the McGraws are waylaid by a band of Zulus, led by a half-breed called Jahalli. They are maltreated and made prisoners. Lieut. Borden and his troopers arrive on the scene in the nick of time, and disperse the savages. They then convoy the ladies to the ranch, where Borden is thanked heartily by the ranch owner for his timely protection. The lieutenant then proceeds to his post, several miles away.

Jahalli, smarting at defeat and thirsting for revenge, again gathers his force and hides in the thickets surrounding the McGraw ranch. One night he succeeds in driving all the horses from the corral, and plans to attack the ranch house the following day. In the midst of the attack, when everything points to annihilation of the defenders, Florence thinks of her pet ostrich and of Lieut. Borden at Fort Congo. She steals from the house and rushes for the ostrich inclosure. Jahalli spies her and attempts to cut her off, but is attacked by the McGraw foreman, who had followed his young mistress. During the struggle, in which the foreman is killed, Florence succeeds in making her flight. Lieut. Borden and his force arrive in time to prevent the entire household from being burned alive in their home, and Jahalli and most of his men are slain. The young officer soon becomes a member of the McGraw family, and the ranch house is safe and peaceful amid the solitude.

Scene from a Thrilling Drama of South African Life, Entitled "A Wild Ride," by Selig.

Miss Bessie Eyton Riding an Ostrich in Selig's Production, "A Wild Ride."

NEW QUARTERS FOR ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY.

The Eclectric Film Company, which has sprung into the limelight with its productions, "Les Miserables," "The Mysteries of Paris" and others, has rented large and commodious quarters in the World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street, New York, in which it will occupy the western half of the tenth floor. The increasing business of the Eclectic Film Company has made the removal to larger quarters a necessity. Contrary to a notice published in a trade paper, there will be no laboratory on the new premises, which will be entirely given over to the executive offices. Special attention is being given by the Eclectic Film Company to the installation of an up-to-date, comfortable and cool exhibition room which will be fitted with an approved system of ventilation. Local and out of town customers and friends are cordially invited to call at the new Eclectic offices, where they will be made to feel at home and will be given an opportunity to view the latest productions imported from Europe.

AN EXAMPLE TO MOTION PICTURE MEN.

As an example to motion picture men, particularly exchange men, of how to gain the good will of the community, the prompt action of the manager of the Laemmle Film Service, Minneapolis, Minn., is worthy of imitation. A fierce fire recently destroyed the North High School in that city, and two popular firemen lost their lives. These men left widows and children with little or no means of support, and the entire city felt with much pity toward them.

Manager James V. Bryson, of the Laemmle Exchange, immediately notified every exhibitor in town, whether his customers or not, that he would furnish free one complete change of program to any one of them who applied for same; the only proviso being that the pictures be exhibited for the benefit of the stricken families. In this way Mr. Bryson started many benefits going and netted a handsome sum for the beneficiaries. This work was commented upon highly by the local press and did a great deal toward putting the local exhibitors higher in public esteem.

ISADORE BERNSTEIN TO MANAGE WESTERN UNIVERSAL.

Isadore Bernstein is going to the Coast Saturday, June 28th, as manager of the Pacific Coast studios of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. He takes the place of A. M. Kennedy who recently resigned. Mr. Bernstein has for the past year been general manager of the Monopol Film Company, prior to that having been publicity manager for both the Republic and the Yankee Film Companies. Before entering the moving picture business he was for fourteen years in the employ of the Christian Herald, starting in as printer's devil and working up to associate editor. Later he became the superintendent of the Boys' Institute, a charitable and educational institution.

Isadore Bernstein.

No New York film man who ever hit the Sunset Trail has left the big town with more good wishes than will follow "Izzy" when the midnight "choo-choo" leaves for Californy. A bright mind, a hard worker, and a man of vast experience in motion picture business, there are few better equipped than he to fill the position he now goes to. We are going to miss Isadore here in New York, because his energetic personality has always been refreshing, and because he is such good company. He leaves no enemies behind him; nothing but friends, and we congratulate the Western Universal forces upon receiving into their midst a fine little gentleman with a heart as big as all outdoors.

REWARD FOR STOLEN FILMS.

We are advised by the manager of the Progress Theater, 1894 Third Avenue, New York City, that the following reels were stolen from his messenger at the corner of Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue on June 23, near the Twenty-third Street branch of the General Film Company, to whom the reels belong.

Make	Reel Number	Title
	12,507
Cines	12,508	Rival Engineers
Biograph	12,242	House of Darkness
Selig	11,837	Love Before Ten
Edison	11,843	The Portrait
Vitagraph	11,855	House in Suberbia

A reward of $50 will be given for return of the reels or any information in regard to present whereabouts of same.

CHICAGO LETTER

By JAS. S. McQUADE

DURING his trip in Europe, John Pribyl, personal representative of Wm. N. Selig, visited London, Paris, Hamburg, Berlin, Vienna, Leipsic, Munich and other points. He informs me that experiments have lately been made in London, in the exhibiting line, which have proved successful, although the most experienced moving picture owners looked for disaster.

In the slum districts of London, it had always been deemed unwise to spend any considerable amount of money in erecting a modern moving picture theater. When an association of London architects set to work to build the Angel, in Islington, London, N., about ten months ago, many of the most intelligent London exhibitors wagged their heads gravely and prophesied failure. The Angel, however, was completed on time, with a seating capacity that will accommodate 3,000 people. Notwithstanding that the theater is in the center of one of the most noted slum districts of London, the proprietors furnished the house gorgeously. Large roomy seats were installed, and luxurious lounges here and there. Costly carpets were placed on the floors, just as if the patrons were West-enders.

When Mr. Pribyl visited the theater one afternoon, it was crowded from pit to dome. The prices were three pence and one shilling (6 cents and 25 cents). Those who came first filled up the cheaper seats and when they were all filled, the one shilling seats were gradually taken, until none was left. Manager Robinson assured Mr. Pribyl that these men and women, from one of the poorest districts in London, were very clean in their habits while in the theater, and that the carpets were always found in a sanitary condition when the house was cleared.

The Angel has always been crowded during its career of several months, and the architect owners are so pleased with their venture that they have already arranged to build a still larger modern theater in another of London's poorer districts. The patrons of the Angel have almost a feeling of reverence for the theater, and look upon it as one of the brightest spots in their lives. Mr. Pribyl noticed when he was present that the product of American manufacturers and Gaumont were highest in favor with the large audience.

"Quo Vadis?" is drawing enormous crowds to the Royal Albert Hall, where the nobility and the best class of citizens are daily in attendance, in large numbers.

E. H. Montagu, general European representative of the Selig Polyscope Co., stated that business with him was never better, nor ever as good, as at the present time. He informed Mr. Pribyl that building had begun on a large structure, to be called the Selig Polyscope Company's Building. This new building is situated on Wardour St., near the new Pathe Building. It will be used chiefly for the Selig offices and product. Two large projecting rooms will be fitted up on one of the floors.

While in Paris, Mr. Pribyl visited the Gaumont Palace, the largest moving picture theater in the world, seating 6,000 people. The prices at this house are 20 cents to $1 for Gaumont pictures and high class vaudeville. Only the Gaumont brand is allowed on the screen at the Gaumont Palace. The exhibiting business was not at its best when Mr. Pribyl toured the continent, owing to the extremely warm weather. During the summer many theaters close up, and manufacturers on both sides of the water hold back their big feature films until cooler weather sets in.

Hamburg was next visited, and Mr. Pribyl spent most of his time at Hagenbeck's zoological garden, where the greatest collection of wild animals in the world is held. Mr. Pribyl purchased several animals for the Selig wild animal farm in Los Angeles while there, including two magnificent specimens of the giraffe family.

Berlin was visited during the festivities attending the wedding of Princess Victoria Louise, the only daughter of the Kaiser. Moving pictures were made of all the imposing parades and of the marriage ceremony, and these were shown shortly afterward in various moving picture theaters throughout the empire.

While in Berlin, Mr. Pribyl visited Herman Fellner, of the Vitascope Company. This company is building a large studio in order to be better able to meet the increasing demand for the Vitascope product. Mr. Fellner stated that the Vitascope Co. recently produced "Der Andere" (His Other Self), in five reels, in which Albert Bassermann, Germany's greatest actor, appeared in the title role. It was learned that this five reel feature subject had the greatest sale among Continental makes up to the present time, excepting "Quo Vadis?".

The product of American manufacturers is in considerable demand in Berlin and throughout Germany, with one exception—wild animal films, which the people do not like. Exhibitors in Berlin and Germany suffer from overtaxation and censorship. In Vienna the same conditions prevail, although the censorship is not so rigorous.

Mr. Pribyl learned from reliable authority that one of the leading exhibitors in Vienna had already paid 100,000 kronen ($20,000) for exclusive rights in Austria and Hungary for all the photodramas produced within the next two years from the plays of Max Reinhardt, the famous German playwright, who is now engaged in the manufacture of feature films. The same exhibitor, some time ago, paid a large sum for the Austrian rights to "Cleopatra," in which Helen Gardner appeared, and failed to realize financial expectations on those films.

Mighty, Nowadays, is the Hired Girl.

Wilmette has a beautiful setting in the woods, nearby Evanston and about ten miles farther from Chicago. There has been a tumult among the good housewives of Wilmette of late, and it is all due to the lack of a moving picture theater in that quiet retreat.

A delegation of citizens appealed to the Wilmette board the other night to permit a moving picture theater in that suburb. The citizens explained that the north shore town was threatened with a general walkout of "hired girls," if nickel thrillers were thrown on nearby screens this summer.

Many instances were cited where servants recently have left families in Wilmette for nearby suburbs for no other reason, it is said, than the lack of kinetoscope romance to divert their minds from household routine. The nearest moving picture house at the present time is at Davis street, in Evanston, a mile or two away. Two servant girls have issued to their employers in Wilmette an ultimatum that they will have picture plays near home or quit.

A few moss-back citizens are opposing the license for a theater in Wilmette. Go for these curmudgeons, girls! Swing on them; starve them. Do everything to them, except to put them out of the reach of your displeasure, until they are brought to reason!

Chapel and School Room Turned Into Theater By Pastor.

The Rev. Dr. Oscar C. Helming, pastor of the University Congregational Church, Fifty-sixth St. and Madison Ave., this city, turned his chapel and Sunday school room into a moving picture theater some time ago, the changes being made so as to conform with the city ordinances. He has just closed his improvised "house" for the summer months.

"My theory is that children learn better through the eye than through the ear," says the pastor. "In February, I opened the classes and we have shown pictures every Sunday evening since. The films were not all that could be expected, but better ones are being made for next year. We sometimes had to give them pictures not on religious or kindred subjects. Modern religion, which takes the form of civic betterment, was on the program in equal quantity to Bible scenes.

"We have tried to teach the children patriotism in its fundamental form. We have shown civil war scenes and had the points brought out in lectures. For the older children we have tried to teach the duties of citizenship. This phase is not yet a decided success. The movement seems to be growing. I have heard from a minister in Washington who says he plans to attempt it.

"No, there is no criticism I know of. We not only have increased the attendance, but the older children are staying. They are interested. You see, the church property can be used in any way we find helpful." Scenes contrasting the better and poorer parts of cities have had a good effect on the congregation, according to Dr. Helming.

Kansas City (Mo.) Civic Films Big Success.

Alvin B. Giles, advertising director of the Advance Motion Picture Co., this city, writes from Kansas City, Mo., that he is having great success with the Kansas City civic films, made some time ago by his company. The films were shown to a remarkable attendance in Convention Hall, which seats 15,000 people.

Mr. Giles expects to have these pictures in New York during Convention week. This movement has been started by

J. D. Barker, W. A. Graham, J. H. Gilday, E. E. Davis and Tom Murray, all members of the Exhibitors' League, and prominent moving picture theater managers in Kansas City. These gentlemen say of the films: "We believe that the persons who view these pictures are entitled to see not only the superlative beauty of the city as portrayed in these pictures, but also the exploitation of its other features—business, social and transportation—which is done in this series. We are of the opinion that these pictures completely and faithfully portray Kansas City and that they are of high quality."

Picture Theaters Must Protect From Fire and Panic.

An attempt was made recently by nine aldermen of this city to override the ordinance limiting the number of seats in theaters. Their votes were sufficient to recommend to the council from the building committee an order for a special permit, said to be the first of its kind since the Iroquois fire brought about the passage of stringent theater ordinances. Repeated criticism has been caused by the passage of special orders for violations of the general building code, and a storm of protest is expected from other members of the council when this one is called up on the floor.

This order, if passed, would permit the owner of a certain moving picture theater in Chicago to add twenty-eight seats to the present capacity. The capacity of this theater at present is just within the law. It is to be hoped that the order will be signally quashed when it comes before the council. One violation of the existing ordinance will lead to its general abuse, and will tend to railroad the small theaters out of business in the long run. Picture theater patrons must be protected from the dangers of fire and panic.

Chicago Film Brevities.

"Quo Vadis?" will close at McVicker's Sunday, June 29th. At the present time, no other house within the Loop is available, but Messrs. Harris and Cohan expect to be able to secure one shortly.

* * *

Dr. Lauro Muller, Brazilian minister of foreign affairs, during his entertainment here by the Illinois Manufacturers' Association at the South Shore Country Club, was treated to about 500 feet of moving pictures, taken by the Selig Polyscope Co., showing his arrival in the city, his convoy to the Blackstone Hotel and the reception there. He will be presented with the film by Mr. Selig, inclosed in a handsome silver box.

* * *

Julius Singer, president of the Capital City Film Mfg. Co., Des Moines, Ia., was in the city last week. Mr. Singer is doing industrial work and states that his latest reel shows the University of Iowa and Iowa City. E. H. Duffy, formerly with the Mutual in Des Moines, accompanied Mr. Singer.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Farnum and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Farnum stopped over in Chicago Sunday, June 22nd, on their way to Los Angeles to join the Selig forces there. Wm. N. Selig took them out to the Selig plant and over the boulevards during their stay. They will start on "The Spoilers" about July 1st, under the direction of Colin Campbell, and this will be followed by several others of the Farnum starring pieces.

* * *

Wm. H. Bell, formerly general manager of International Pictures in Australasia, with headquarters in Sydney, Australia, is now spending a few weeks in the city. This is the first vacation that Mr. Bell has had within the last nine years.

* * *

Local No. 3 of Illinois State Branch No. 2, M. P. E. L. of America, was organized at Danville, Ill., June 17th, by Wm. J. Sweeney. The officers are: President, J. S. Quirk, Arcola; Vice-President, Dr. C. H. Evans, Danville; Secretary and Treasurer, J. W. Dillon, Danville. The first meeting of this local will be held Sunday, June 29th.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hopp and family will leave for New York Monday, June 30, where they will remain for two weeks. Mr. Hopp will attend the National Convention there.

* * *

Mr. Von Tueber sailed for South America, Monday, June 23, on an exploration trip for the Selig Polyscope Co. His stay will be indefinite.

* * *

G. P. Hamilton, general manager of the St. Louis Motion Picture Co., now stationed at Albuquerque, N. M., and in charge of two companies there, writes that everything is progressing splendidly. The St. Louis Motion Picture Co. is now releasing two pictures a week, one dramatic and one comedy, which are being well received. Mr. Hamilton writes that he will probably remain at his present quarters for the next three months, and then journey slowly towards California, stopping along the way to picture any attractive feature where it is possible.

* * *

It has been arranged that the delegates and alternates of Illinois State Branch No. 2 and of the Wisconsin league will leave for the National Convention on a special train over the L. S. & M. S. Ry., Saturday, July 5, at 10:00 a.m. It is expected that arrangements will be made for the delegates and alternates of the Minnesota league to travel from Chicago on the same train. The special will arrive in New York Sunday, at 3:30 p. m.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY, CHICAGO.

We take pleasure in publishing herewith an illustration furnished us by the Amusement Supply Company of Chicago, which shows what this enterprising company is doing in the way of introducing and selling its product to the picture theater.

The Amusement Supply Company, with offices in the Cambridge Building, Chicago, Ill., is one of the old time accessory and supply houses, having been incorporated in the early part of 1906 and has, in this time, established a name known throughout this country for fair dealing and prompt shipments.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
THEATRE SUPPLIES
CARBONS TICKETS.
CONDENSERS
EVERYTHING FROM SCREEN TO BOOTH
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO
CAMBRIDGE BLDG

Motorcycle Delivery of the Amusement Supply Co.

This company has for several years past devoted a great part of its attention to the supplying of equipment and supplies to the traveling exhibitor, but in the past two years it has gradually turned all of its attention to the established picture theater.

This firm sells all makes of standard moving picture machines, viz.—Edengraph, Edison, Motiograph, Power's, Simplex and Standard, and handles genuine repair parts and accessories for these makes. It also carries a very large stock of carbons, condensers, tickets, ticket dispensing machines, turnstiles, electric fans, exhaust fans, seating and miscellaneous supplies of every description.

A special department devoted to the buying and selling of second hand moving picture machines is a feature of this company, which also rents and repairs all makes of machines.

This concern issues a very large and complete catalog of moving picture machines, supplies and accessories for the picture theater, and this book will be found of great benefit to any theater manager.

"LES MISERABLES" IN NEW JERSEY.

The Eclectic Film Company has completed arrangements with the Famous Players' Exchange at Newark and Asbury Park for the distribution of the stupendous nine-reel production, in four sections, "Les Miserables." The film has already been booked as a theatrical attraction at the most important theaters of the State, and makes an entertainment lasting about two hours and a half. It will no doubt repeat the phenomenal success in New Jersey which it has scored wherever it has been shown.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

LAST CALL FOR THE EXPOSITION.

Some Suggestions for Getting Together on the New York Trip. Program of the Week's Events.

By Hugh Hoffman.

WELL—the Big Week is almost here. If you are one of those fortunate enough to be in New York during the week of July 7, you will probably be reading the next issue of the Moving Picture World on the exposition floor. Everything is ready for the big show except the finishing touches, and they will be put on during the one week's time that intervenes between now and the opening day. The bill posters have begun to cover the town with some of the most striking posters that ever heralded a trade exposition. A big force of expert publicity men started to work last Monday and from now on they will bombard the New York daily papers with copy and cuts, so that when the exposition opens the public will be pretty well informed that there is something at the Grand Central Palace worth seeing.

Members of the National Organization Staff, who have been attending the different state conventions recently, tell us that the number of visiting exhibitors will surpass all calculations. Wherever these men have been they have found that the majority of exhibitors they have spoken with are making preparations to be in New York on the seventh of July. There will be a big mob from Chicago and the Lake section. Chicago and Milwaukee are planning to make the trip together in a special train. The Minnesota men are anxious to go with the Chicago delegation and they probably will. The Chicago contingent will leave at 10:00 a.m., Saturday, July 5th, over the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern. There will probably be a large number of Indiana exhibitors who will prefer to start from Chicago, and there will be many from points west who will have to pass through Chicago. If these delegations wish to travel with the Chicago bunch they would best communicate at once with Mr. Wm. J. Sweeney, national vice-president from Illinois, so that he can notify the railway company how many to provide for. Perhaps if enough exhibitors notify him he can get a reduced rate. The larger the number the lower the rate, therefore it is advisable for middle west exhibitors to buy tickets to Chicago only and write Mr. Sweeney to arrange passage from there to New York. Mr. Sweeney's address is 817 W. 63d St., Chicago, Ill.

The Philadelphia men are coming en masse. When we say en-masse we mean that every live wire exhibitor in Philadelphia will be in New York, July 7, and there is a lot of live wires over in Philly. Pennsylvania exhibitors and those from points south who desire to travel with the Philadelphians, should communicate at once with Walter Stuempfig, national vice-president from Pennsylvania, care Germantown Theater, Philadelphia. Exhibitors in the vicinity of Pittsburgh desiring to travel with the Pittsburgh delegation should communicate with Harry E. Reiff, secretary of the Pennsylvania state league, care Lyric Theater, 21 Boggs Ave., Pittsburgh.

New England exhibitors who desire to make the journey with the Boston boys should communicate at once with Mr. A. H. Washburn, secretary of the Boston local, care Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Headquarters, 25-29 Lagrange St., Boston, Mass. The trip from Boston to New York ought to be a hummer. We well remember the last time a mob of Boston exhibitors came to our fair city. They are the real village cut-ups when they get started, and a finer crew of moving picture men never came to town. A trip on the same train with them would remind anyone of his boyhood days.

At the last national convention it was discovered too late that no provision had been made for the ladies who came with their husbands. A large number of ladies attended the last convention but found themselves without anything to do and no one to show them around, most of the men folk being occupied at the league meetings. There will be no such mistake at the New York convention. Aside from the exposition itself there has been an amusement program arranged so that there will be something doing all the time. There will be no occasion for time hanging heavily on anyone's hands, or any lack of sight-seeing opportunities, as may be seen by perusing the following program:

Daily Entertainment Schedule.

Monday.

By courtesy of the Universal Film Company sight-seeing busses will run from the Grand Central Palace to the offices of the Universal Company, Mecca Building, where the directors of the Universal Company will be introduced. The busses will proceed to Fort Lee, N. J., where one of the Universal studios will be visited; from thence to Palisades Park. Joe Brandt, assistant treasurer of the Universal Company has arranged for a dancing and swimming contest.

Tuesday.

The Thos. A. Edison Company will take visitors in sight-seeing automobiles through New York City. The first section will start at 9 o'clock, the second at 11, and the third at 3.

Wednesday.

The General Film Company will invite its friends to attend the baseball game at the Polo Grounds between the New York Giants and the Chicago Cubs.

Thursday.

The Kalem Company will entertain at their Aerodrome studio, Cliffside Park, N. J.

The Famous Players' Film Co. will give a ball in their studio at No. 213 West 26th Street at 8 p. m. Refreshments will be served, music will be provided and several leading stars will entertain the guests. Everyone in any manner connected with the exposition and convention will be welcome.

Friday.

This will be Vitagraph day, and the entertainment will be given at the Vitagraph studios. Mr. S. M. Spedon, assisted by Mr. Victor Smith and "Pop" Rock, will assist in receiving. In the evening the New York exhibitors will give a shore dinner at the Shelbourne Hotel and Casino at Brighton Beach. Speakers will be Gov. William A. Sulzer, of New York, Gov Cox, of Ohio, Ex-Senator Jos. B. Foraker, Mayor Gaynor, District-Attorney Whitman, and other notables.

The list of the exhibitors at last account is as follows:

General Film Co., Universal Film Corporation, Mutual Film Corporation, Famous Players Co., Al. H. Woods' "Life Target," N. Y. Edison Co., Nicholas Power Co., Precision Machine Co., Standard Machine Co., Eberhard Schneider, Scott & Van Altena, United Electric Light & Power Co., Motion Picture Story Magazine, Newman Mfg. Co., Lang Mfg. Co., Oshkosh Metal Products Co., Koeting & Mathison, Novelty Slide Co., Bell & Howell, J. H. Genter & Co., Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., G. H. Masten Realty Co., Picture Theater Equipment Co., The Spray Ozone Co., Menger & Ring, Dramatic Mirror Co., Bauch & Lomb, Whyte-Whitman Co., Day & Night Screen, Electrene Co., H. W. Johns-Manville Co., American Seating Co., Thos. A. Edison, Inc., The Billboard, Ernest Boecker, New York Telegraph, Berry-Wood Piano Player Co., National Educational Film Co., Aschenback & Miller, Inc., United Ticket Supply Co., Moving Picture World, Kinemacolor Co. of Amerca, H. C. Miner Litho. Co., The Wyanoak Co., American Theater Curtain & Supply Co., Manhattan Slide & Film Co., Excelsior Drum Works, Automatic Cash Register & Ticket Co., Hennegan & Co., Eastman Kodak Co., Gaumont Film Co., Morgan Litho Co., Ozone Pure Airifier Co., Selig Polyscope Co., Typhoon Fan Co., Photo Machine Co., National Cash Register Co., Automatic Coin Cashier Co.

Exposition Notes.

The estimated expense of the General Film Company at the New York Exposition is $15,000. At Chicago last year, $2,000 was spent. The money this year has been disbursed in various ways—$3,000 for space, $1,000 for booth decorations, more than $1,000 for novelties, $100 for space in the official program, $1,000 for theater decorations, cost of 1,500 tickets for admission to the baseball game between the New York Giants and the Chicago Cubs, at the Polo Grounds, Wednesday afternoon, July 9th, and $2,000 towards the expense of tendering a banquet to visiting exhibitors.

* * *

One of the most elaborate exhibits at the exposition will be made by the General Film Company. While the design of the booth has not been divulged, it is understood that it is to be something radically different from the conventional exposition construction.

The booth which is to be thirty feet long and fifteen feet deep, will be used exclusively for the reception of visiting exhibitors and the general public, the display of films, posters, banners, etc., being confined to the miniature theater for which the company has arranged.

* * *

Purposing to gain the hearty backing of the exhibitors' league, the American Museum of Safety will show pictures illustrating the dangers of the street, especially to children. It is the purpose of the Safety Committee to get official confirmation from the Exhibitors' League of the movement to give free demonstration to children in or out of school hours, in convenient motion picture theaters, of the dangers of mutilation and death arising from congested conditions in the streets. These pictures will make clear to the most jejune intelligence how and how not to get off trolley cars and other vehicles, the dangers of stealing rides and how roller skates may roll them into the grave or the hospital via crushing wheels, etc.

* * *

The American Museum of Safety has been assured of the hearty co-operation of many theater owners to show these pictures at hours of recess or at other times. The purpose is now to make this co-operation, now practically confined to New York City, nation-wide in scope. Being sure of places to exhibit the films, the safety committee will then go after the respective Boards of Education and persuade them to allot time in which the pupils may see with their own eyes how their little comrades lose their limbs and lives. The safety committee already has films illustrating street dangers, and to this library it will add.

* * *

The Mutual Film Corporation has given toward the entertainment fund $550 for use of automobile hire during the week. The Warner Feature Film Company has also provided the use of two large automobiles for the week.

* * *

Visitors from out of town desiring hotel reservation should communicate with Mr. Clem Kerr, chairman of the Hotel and Foreign Transportation Committee, at the Hotel Bristol, 122-124 West 49th Street, New York City, or with Mr. L. R. Thomas, secretary of the Committee, at the same address. Special rates are being arranged for visiting exhibitors.

MAINE EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE.

The first state meeting of the exhibitors league of Maine was held on Monday, June 23, at the Falmouth Hotel, Portland, Maine. The meeting was called to order by L. R. Thomas of the national organization staff. There were twenty-five members present from various parts of the state, and a fine looking set of men they were; all clean-cut prosperous looking Americans representing the better element of moving picture men in the pine tree state. Mr. Thomas made a general address on the work that is being done by the national league and by the other state and local associations. He then advised the men as to correct form of procedure and the election of state officers was held with the following result:

National Vice-President, Hiram Abrams, Portland Theater, Portland; President, Moxley Blumenberg, Portland; First Vice-President, F. J. Fortin, Lisbon Falls; Second Vice-President, J. A. McConville, Portland; Secretary, J. A. Emery, Star Theater, Bar Harbor; Treasurer, J. W. Greeley, Portland; Sergeant-at-Arms, A. P. Bibber, Lewiston.

Delegates to National Convention: Arthur A. Allen, A. B. Rosenberg, J. W. Greeley, F. E. Mortimer, J. E. Emery.

Alternates: Fred M. Engley, Samuel Davis, A. St. Ledger, M. St. Ledger, I. M. Mosher.

Committee on Constitution and By-Laws: Hiram Abrams, Moxley Blumenberg and J. W. Greely; all of Portland.

Mr. Fred V. Morphy, manager of the Mutual Film Supply office at Waterville, was largely instrumental in bringing the Maine exhibitors together in time to organize before the National Convention. Mr. Morphy called an unofficial meeting at his office two weeks previously and explained to them the good work the league is doing and the advisability of having an affiliated organization in their state. The state league was affiliated with the national body. The next state meeting will be held at Bangor at the call of the Secretary.

The list of members present is as follows:

Portland—J. W. Greely, Moxley Blumenberg, J. A. McConville, I. M. Mosher, Wm. E. Reeves, Hiram Abrams. Pittsfield—A. St. Ledger. Skowhegan—M. St. Ledger. Bangor—Arthur A. Allen. Brunswick—E. L. Crawford. Lewiston—A. P. Bibber. Freeport—F. E. Mortimer. Gardiner—A. J. Burns. Winterport— Mrs. Mesa West Stiner. Eastport—Wilbur A. Shea. Lisbon Falls—J. F. Fortin. Bar Harbor—Joe Emery. Bath—Samuel Davis. Rockland—Fred M. Engley, A. B. Rosenberg. Madison—H. M. Smiley.

Will the Maine boy's be at the convention? They certainly will, and what's more, they're coming in style. They will travel by motor cars from Portland to New York and back.

MICHIGAN CONVENTION.

A meeting of the Michigan Exhibitors' League was held at Saginaw, Mich., June 10 and 11. The sessions of the convention were held in the Vincent Hotel and a large number of exhibitors were present. Several interesting business sessions were held and the members enjoyed the sights of the city between meetings. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President, Peter J. Juep, Detroit; First Vice-President, J. J. Rieder, Jackson; Second Vice-President, Fred Richter, Muskegon; Third Vice-President, J. P. Thatcher, Bay City; Secretary, J. B. Caldwell, Battle Creek; Treasurer, Herbert Fowser, Lansing; National Vice-President, J. M. Neal, Saginaw.

Delegates to the National Convention in New York: E. M. Smith, Grand Rapids; August Kliest, Pontiac, and Peter J. Juep, Detroit.

The next state convention will be held at Battle Creek at the call of the secretary.

MASSACHUSETTS STATE LEAGUE MEETING.

The Massachusetts State Branch of the Exhibitors' League will hold a meeting on Tuesday, June 24, at headquarters, 25-29 Lagrange St., Boston, to elect a new president and to attend to such matters as may be brought before the branch. Delegates and alternates to the convention in New York will be elected. It is believed that the Massachusetts delegation, including exhibitors who are not delegates, will be about fifty strong.

REDUCED RATES TO THE CONVENTION.

Concession Made on the Certificate Plan by the Trunk Line Association.

The Transportation Committee of the Motion Picture Exposition and Convention Committee of Arrangements has secured a concession in rates for all delegates and others attending the convention in New York, July 7 to 12, from the Trunk Line Association. This concession is made on the "Certificate Plan," which means that when you buy your ticket to New York you get a certificate from the ticket agent. This ticket will be vised by the Trunk Line Association agent, who will attend the convention for that purpose on July 10 and 11, after which you will be able to purchase your return ticket at three-fourths of the regular first-class limited fare.

When you buy your ticket, don't fail to ask for a "certificate." Don't ask for a receipt—a certificate is what you must have. If the ticket agent in your town does not provide certificates, buy to the station where they can be obtained. Immediately upon your arrival in New York present your certificate to the endorsing officer, Mr. Baurenfreund, who will have an office on the Exposition floor at Grand Central Palace. Then on July 10 and 11 have your certificate validated by the Trunk Line agent. A fee of 25 cents will be charged for this service.

The Trunk Line Association and its allied roads extends as far west as Denver.

DINTENFASS VINDICATED.

The charges of libel preferred by A. W. Farnsworth against Mark Dintenfass were dismissed by Magistrate Corrigan, on June 25, before whom the proceedings were brought, on the ground that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain the charge.

Ernest Shipman's World Tour

An Original and Interesting Idea, Well Within the Bounds of Possibility. Let Us Hope it Succeeds.

By Hugh Hoffman.

A PERMANENT floating studio, equipped for world wide cruises is being planned by Ernest Shipman, a former theatrical manager who for many years had the road rights for numerous Broadway successes, such as: "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Pudd'nhead Wilson," "The Prisoner of Zenda," Wright Lorrimer in "The Shepherd King," Herbert Kelsey and Effie Shannon in repertoire, and others. He has recently been manufacturing motion pictures in California for the independent market and has lately completed "100 Years of Mormonism," under the especial patronage of the Mormon Church.

Mr. Shipman has secured the co-operation of several Los Angeles capitalists who think highly of the idea and are backing the enterprise without limit. The immediate plan of action will be to secure the proper vessel in which to make the cruise. There are several large private yachts which are particularly adaptable for such a cruise, and just now the promoters are concentrating their attention to procuring the right kind of a boat. When secured, the vessel will be remodeled for the definite purpose of picture making. There will be on board a wardrobe department, projection room, laboratory, drying rooms, property room, ammunition room, laundry, carpenter shop, scene room, library and scenario department, and every other adjunct to a regular motion picture making plant.

It is the purpose of the expedition to carry a high class acting company of at least twenty, and others who are specialists in branches of study that lend themselves well to motion picture illustration. One of these will be a naturalist of reputation who will busy himself and one cameraman with the fauna and flora of the various countries visited, while the rest of the company are doing the regular dramatic work. There will be writers of different kinds, one of whom will be a competent historian, whose business it will be to prepare historical matter of the countries visited for motion picture representation. The scenic beauties of each of the various stops will be recorded by a cameraman who has proven his ability in that line. The dramatic force will be divided into two sections most of the time, working on different pictures, except in case of big scenes requiring the entire cast. Pictures will be made wherever possible of the rulers and high dignitaries, and of the manners and customs of the people. In fact nothing worth recording will escape the camera. The expedition will stay in each location until it is pumped dry of interesting pictorial matter.

There will be a general itinerary but there will be no set time for arriving or leaving any port of call. Having its own vessel, the expedition will not be tied down to any fixed schedule, but will be in a position to remain until its work is satisfactorily completed. The vessel will be used principally as a base of operation. It is the plan to be within sight of shore all of the time except when crossing deep sea to reach another country. In the morning the members will divide into different groups and go ashore for the day's work, each party working at its own particular line of endeavor. There will be five cameramen. In the evening the negatives will be developed on board by the laboratory staff while certain members of the acting company will remain ashore and give an entertainment at a local theater. With the entertaining ability of the acting force and with a large number of motion pictures, it will be possible to give these exhibitions with a change of program every day for a month, thereby helping to defray the general expenses of the trip.

Only the negatives will be developed on the ship, and one positive for exhibition purposes. The negatives will be sent to New York where the manufacturing will be given out under the direction of Ernest Shipman who will be the general sales agent of the company. The general itinerary of the expedition, as at present laid out, is a trial cruise into Maine waters until fall; then a sojourn in the West Indies during September and October. From there the party will work its way by slow degrees along the coast line of South America on both sides. This will take about a year. A long trip will then be made to the South Sea Islands, Australia and the Indian Archipelago. This schedule will require about two years to complete, after which another itinerary will be mapped out.

For dramatic pictures there will be two photoplaywrights, one a man and one a woman. With an adequate library containing the fiction and authentic history of the lands to be visited, these writers will be well equipped for their work. In this library will be many well known novels whose locale will be touched by the expedition. With the photoplay rights to these secured in advance, they will be done in photoplay at the exact locations with which they deal. In South America most of Richard Harding Davis' stories will be done, and in the South Sea Islands many of Robert Louis Stevenson's works will be interpreted. One anachronism will be studiously avoided, and that is the mistake of having white actors enact native roles. It will be a set rule that native parts shall be played by native actors. The whites will confine themselves to European or American roles.

AN OPEN LETTER

To the Exhibitors of America on the Question of Censorship.

The question of Ohio State Censorship vs. National Board Censorship is the hottest subject under discussion in Ohio. I refer, of course, to the members of the league. The public, meaning patrons and non-patrons, refuse to become interested in the question. There is not, nor has there been the slightest movement made by a single organized body in any part of Ohio in favor of either State or National censorship outside of the league.

We have heard much and read many "special despatches' telling of the "hard fight" at the State Capitol during the past winter on the much talked of "Neff Censor Bill," but the hard cold fact remains that not a soul appeared in any capacity except three members of Cleveland Local No. 1, and they fought in vain against the bill. The writer was not one of the three.

The Cleveland film exchanges were also represented. President Neff is well liked among our members, but all through this controversy the sentiment has been against his Ohio bill from the start. Mr. Neff issued a statement in which he says, "If we had not passed a State Censor Bill in Ohio, the exhibitors might as well close up their theaters." In answer to this, I asked Mr. Neff, who attended a special meeting of Cleveland Local recently. "Why not wait for someone in some city or town to form a so-called legalized censor board, and then have the matter carried up to the courts upon a question of constitutional rights?" Nr. Neff's only answer to this was, "It is absolutely necessary to have either a National or State board with legal authority."

According to this and similar expressions made public by Mr. Neff, he does not himself believe the exhibitor has the constitutional right to the freedom of his screen. This point Mr. Neff made plain when I asked him at our meeting, "Did you not introduce the Ohio bill merely as an expedient—merely as a matter of good policy to help the exhibitor out of a temporary difficulty?" He denied that it was either a question of expediency or good policy and reiterated that "it is absolutely necessary to have legalized censorship."

Then fellow-exhibitor, what are we organized for? Can we expect our leader to put his whole soul into a fight for us against illegal restrictions, where he advocates a legalized censor board himself?

Cleveland Local No. 1 long ago passed a set of resolutions asking Mr. Neff to co-operate with the manufacturers to bring about a constitutional test of the censorship question. Copies were sent to Mr. Neff and the trade papers, but the indications point to the fact that Mr. Neff will do nothing to jeopardize his pet bill by ordering our attorneys, Messrs. Foraker and Lentz, to test the question on its constitutionality.

On the contrary, Mr. Neff informed us that he and Mr. Foraker were going to campaign in New York City against the National Board of Censorship, from now until convention, and he predicted "some of the biggest men in the film business will be with us by that time."

Fellow exhibitors, let us hope Mr. Neff is mistaken—Keep the picture out of politics. The New York National Censor Board is doing satisfactory work for the exhibitors and the public.

SAMUEL BULLOCK,

Member of Local No. 1, M. P. E. L. of A.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 15, 1913.

ROY E. AITKEN IN TOWN.

Roy E. Aitken, managing director of the Western Import Company, Ltd., London, is now in New York City, looking over the local situation and incidentally making a host of new friends. Mr. Aitken is optimistic regarding the outlook on the other side of the water. He declares that the Keystone, Broncho and Kay-Bee films, for which his company is sponsor across the pond, are creating a sensation and living up to their American reputation.

Among the Picture Theaters

News and Views of Houses Here and There.

EAST BROADWAY THEATER, LOUISVILLE, KY.

IN April, 1908, a new motion picture theater opened at Shelby Street and Broadway, Louisville, Ky., and friends of Fred Dolle, Louis Steurle and others who had been instrumental in putting up the structure, thought seriously of having alienists examine their brains to decide whether all was well with them. At that time there were already two moving picture theaters running in the Kentucky metropolis, and no one was able to see how a third could make a success. Messrs. Dolle and Steurle were among those who had faith in the business and its future, however, and they went ahead with the East Broadway Theater. The Broadway Amusement Company, which has since been formed, now operates six houses in Louisville, and is looking for more.

The East Broadway Theater, located at Broadway and Shelby St., draws its audience from a half dozen blocks in each direction. There are no other moving picture houses within six or eight squares. While it has prospered since opening in April, 1908, its career has been far from an uneventful one. The Broadway has been torn down and put up, and burnt out and reconstructed. Both evolution and revolution have played parts in its existence. Another big change is contemplated by the Broadway Amusement Company, which now is turning its attention to the first of its chain of houses. The original seating capacity of the East Broadway theater was 300. Business grew fast and the house was remodeled. Under the new conditions, it was possible to seat 500 people. Still, patronage increased, and the house again was remodeled, increasing the accommodation to 700. Then came a fire that burnt out the back of the house, completely destroying the stage. The fire occurred at 2 o'clock in the morning and at 4 o'clock, two hours later, the busy tread of carpenters was heard by passersby, who saw that the East Broadway was being remodeled some more.

Broadway Theater.

The Broadway has perhaps established a record by running steadily since the theater was established five years ago. Despite numerous alterations made in the house, not a performance has been missed. The final remodeling of the East Broadway theater will begin sometime within the next year. Joseph & Joseph, Louisville architects, have charge of plans for the new East Broadway, which will have a seating capacity of 1,800. Between $40,000 and $50,000 will be spent on the theater, which will be one of the finest in Louisville.

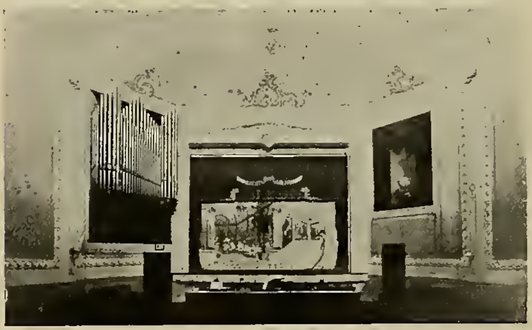
While the new Broadway Theater will embody all the most modern improvements, a feature will be the installment of a mezzanine floor which will be handsomely equipped and will be classed as reserved seats. The prices in the mezzanine will probably be twenty cents, and seats may be reserved in advance, as in ordinary theaters. Box parties may then be given by those who wish, with the assurance that all the members of the party will sit together. Ten cents will be the prevailing prices for other sections of the East Broadway for adults; children five cents. While moving pictures are and will continue to be the chief attraction at the East Broadway theater, vaudeville is presented during the winter months as a side issue. Musical comedy has been shown during the past winter. A long show is desirable in the winter. In summer moving pictures form the sole attraction.

The East Broadway theater now has a frontage of 30 feet on Broadway. Fifteen additional feet of space has been secured, which will give the theater a frontage of 45 feet. The house will extend back 150 feet, as at present. Steel, enameled brick and concrete will be used as material in the new theater. The front will be remodeled and the house improved in other respects. However, memories of the original East Broadway will linger long with the first patrons of the house, and even officers of the Broadway confess to a reminiscent fondness for the house as it originally stood. Besides the East Broadway theater, the Broadway Amusement Company operates the West Broadway, Royal, Ideal, Crown, Highland and Baxter theaters. Louis Steurle manages the East Broadway.

ABE POTIKER BUYS LINCOLN THEATER.

In the issue of January 11, of this year, we published an illustrated article telling how Mr Abe Potiker, aged nineteen, had come to this country to make his living, and how after struggling from newsboy and various other meagre occupations he managed to save enough money to purchase the Wade Park theater, Cleveland, Ohio, from which he made a nice little sum. He later sold this house and purchased the Comet theater, 113th and Superior streets, also in Cleveland. After running this house for several months, he sold it and purchased the Lincoln, situated at 3378 West 25th Street, Cleveland. We were not told how much Mr. Potiker paid for the Lincoln but we understand that the structure is valued at $13,000. The theater has a seating capacity of 600.

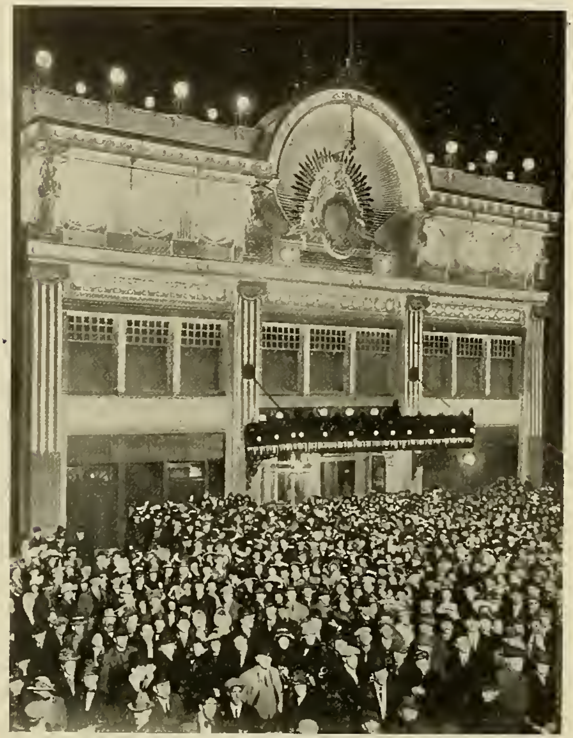
Lincoln Theater.



Globe Theater, Portland, Ore.

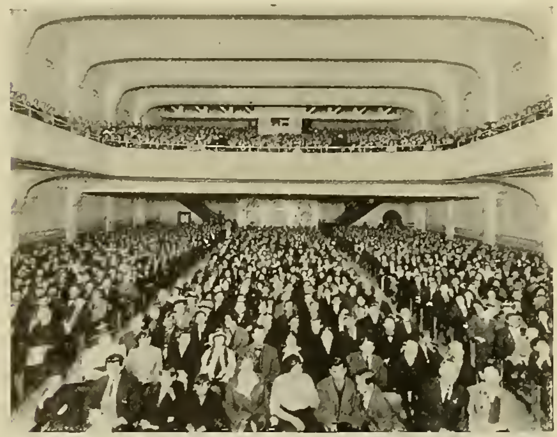
THE ISIS THEATER, DENVER, COL.

The accompanying photographs of the Isis Theater of Denver, Colorado, give an idea of the immensity of the crowd trying to get into the new photoplay house and of the crowd inside. Standing room at this new home of the moving picture was the rule from six o'clock in the evening until midnight, when the lights went out. The house was opened on May 1. Curtis street, where the new place is situated, was emblazoned by thousands of lights not only from the Isis but from all the other picture houses in that and neighboring streets, for it was May day and people out in Denver do things on that day.



Isis Theater.

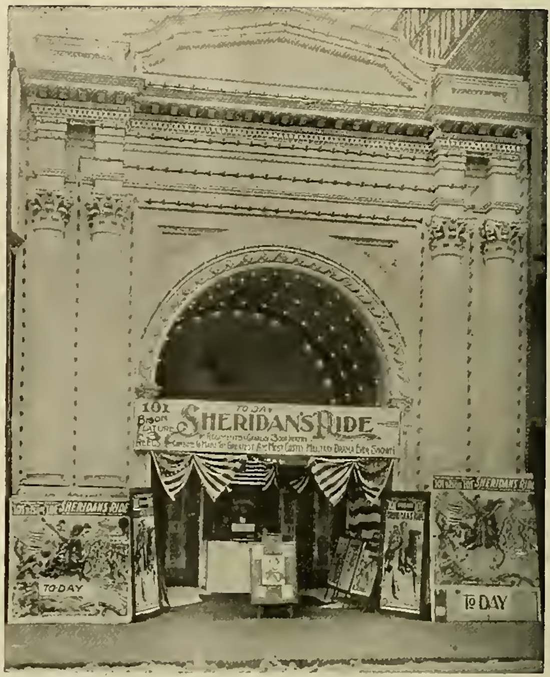
The New Isis is a work of art. Its designer is M. J. Kenney, and no theater in Denver is in more perfect taste from gallery to doors. The building is built of reinforced concrete. The color scheme is of buff, green and gold finished in the most delicate shades. There are 2,200 seats in the auditorium and each one was purchased at a cost of $5.00. Retiring rooms for men and women are located in the basement, and the general retiring room is walled with expensive mirrors. The $15,000 ventilating plant changes the air every minute. The picture is projected on a twenty-two foot curtain.



Interior View of Isis Theater.

REX THEATER, SPOKANE, WASH.

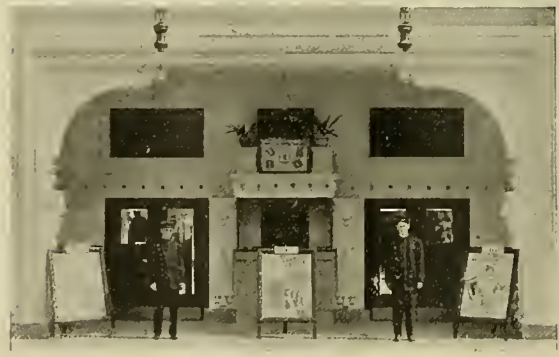
We publish herewith a photograph of the front elevation of the Rex theater, Spokane, Wash. It was opened on May 11, 1912, by B. W. Copeland. The expenditure involved was $20,000. The house is modern throughout, being equipped with every convenience and it has been a success from the start. It has a seating capacity of 500. In the fireproof operating room there are two machines, a Simplex and a Power's No. 6. The throw is 120 feet, this being the longest of any in the city. Two operators are employed, each working six hours and each receiving a salary of $25 per week.



Rex Theater.

NEW EMPRESS THEATER, MISSOULA, MONT.

Opening on the eighteenth of April last, the New Empress Theater, Missoula, Mont., of which an engraving is herewith published, has been doing an excellent business ever since. The house was erected at a cost of $10,000, and the front was designed and built by the Decorators' Supply Company, of Chicago. The theater has a seating capacity of 500 with a six foot drop to every one hundred feet of flooring, thus assuring an unobstructed view of the screen from every seat in the house. There is plenty of room between each row of chairs. A five piece orchestra and a $4,000 pipe organ furnish the music. Power's No. 6A machine is used, and the throw is one hundred feet.



New Empress Theater.

The Moving Picture Educator

THE FLOWERS OF THE FIELD.

A NEW series of nature studies is being introduced by the Gaumont Company, which will be both attractive and profitable, especially as it deals with some very commonplace subjects, and discloses their hitherto unnoticed beauties. The first set of this series of Flowers of the Field will attract the attention of the young people because of the familiar flowers dealt with.

In spring time the grass of the fields, sewn by the winds along the roadside, becomes covered with small flowers. frequently remarkable for elegance of form, and beauty of color, also possessing characteristics only revealed by such close scrutiny as that which is bestowed on them by the naturalist, and are usually lost to the ordinary observer. The kinematograph now gives unsought for and freely, to the beholder, more than even the naturalist found. In addition to that which the lens reveals, the enlarged picture makes more beautiful each subject, and reveals a new world in nature which is easily explored and appreciatively enjoyed.

Ground Ivy. This well-known, small-flowered plant becomes quite another flower under these new conditions, originally only a fourth an inch in diameter, when enlarged it seems to possess the size, shape and color of an orchid, indeed it might be readily mistaken for one, so beautiful and graceful does it become, giving one a new view of nature when seen under such advantageous conditions. The White Pimpernel and The Pumatory also reveal similar attractiveness when microscopically and kinematographically exposed.

Groundsel, and the White Nettle. Each of these well-known plants loses much of its value on account of their weed-like tendencies; on the screen they take upon themselves a new value, the former becoming with its golden bush-like head like a group of small flowers; while the latter shows off its white wreath, as graceful as a coronet. In addition to their helpfulness as a nature study, these interesting pictures may also be used botanically, as, although not shown in separated parts, their enlarged details will prove as helpful as they are beautiful.

Woodland Streams. This is another series coming from the French Gaumont, the title itself suggests the picturesque, combining all that is richest in natural beauty, making every section of the film a thing of beauty, these pictures will lend themselves readily to descriptive possibilities and true poetic license.

Life in an Ant Hill. While this is another nature study, it might also be called an "industrial"; at any rate it is positively the best specimen of insect-industrialism; it therefore teaches at least a twofold lesson. An enlarged photograph of an ant hill shows the tremendous activity which prevails in the colony; it is possible that such activity cannot be found in any other branch of life and is worthy of close attention; without doubt if it were possible for men to work in proportion to these tiny insects, the results of their labors would be tremendous. Their courage and power over a larger insect is shown in their attack on a bee, which is soon overcome by their assaults.

The provident nature of the ants is taught by the way in which they rapidly dissect and stow away a dead bird, to provide for their winter store; a short period of two days is sufficient to entirely accomplish the task.

Their treatment of eggs is very interesting, their instinct teaching them which are dead, and these they carry to their own cemetery. The picture is as useful as it is interesting.

Fruit and Vegetable Industrials.

Pineapple Culture. The culture of the pineapple in Madera is, contrary to many ideas, under glass; large conservatories when seen from the outside seem of tremendous proportions, as indeed they must be, when the extensive nature of the pineapple industry is considered. The method of planting and growing is shown in the various stages, from the time a little hole is made in the root to assist the fruit to multiply. Five weeks, six months, and the flower stages are now shown. At eight months the fruit begins to show definite enlargement, and in one year after planting the full ripe fruit is gathered. Packing and transit follows and so on to the table.

Canning Corn in Kansas. Millions of tons of what is often called nature's most valuable product, is grown and preserved in the Sunflower State. The vast acres planted and reaped is a national industry, not confined to one State; to Kansas perhaps belongs the credit of being the greatest producer. The great business of canning this necessary food is one of special importance to millions of people in all parts of the world. To most of these, the presentation of the methods, by which they are enabled at all times to enjoy in season and out of season American corn will be full of interest. Cutting, cleaning, canning and cooking are each separately shown. The knowledge of these methods, at once clean and healthy, will increase the appreciation of the food, as well as give that additional interest which comes from "knowing how things are done." W. H. J.

AN IDEAL IN PICTURE EXHIBITING.

The Lyric, in Asbury Park, is a well favored picture house. It would seem difficult to find conditions more favorable for moving pictures than to be found in this far-famed resort; on this account a picture house must prove equal to, and worthy of the surroundings; this the Lyric has happily accomplished. The house itself is an admirably adapted building, in every respect pleasing and attractive. The projection is of the highest order, and the music is in singular good taste, free from the noise and lack of harmony which is unfortunately so often found in many places.

Of course, the audience is far above the average, chiefly visitors, and therefore of a refined class: a class that would not be found there if the whole surroundings were not of the most perfect character. That the place is always crowded is full proof that everything meets with their fastidious requirements. No very elaborate program is demanded, the people want that which is light, clean, and pleasing; the children must be well entertained with everything free from that which might even border on the questionable.

The remarks made during the exhibition, as well as the after comments, are all evidences of the opinions of the average audience, and are such that the proprietor may be proud of, causing him to pledge himself to allow nothing to occur to destroy the satisfaction which is being given. It may be worth while giving the subjects presented on two evenings on which the writer was present, showing that while they were not of the larger feature film character, they were well balanced subjects, equally entertaining and amusing. "The Final Judgment," "Lieutenant Jones," "The Man Who Would Not Marry," "Checkmated," "Winning Smiles" and "The Girl of the Horseshoe." "Pathe's Weekly" is always welcome and this week No. 24 is unusually good; "The Black Hand," "The Egyptian Mummy," "The Padre's Strategy," "Margaret and the Mission Money," "The Sheriff's Son." From this list the exhibitor will see the nature of that which pleases an audience of this character.

There is an entire absence of the lurid and sensational, and a proper complement of sane and safe subjects. It must, however, be mentioned that one or two talking or singing pictures are a strong drawing power, although taking but a few minutes each, they are a sufficient change to relieve the old order, and are well received as denoting hte expectation of greater things along this line; such an audience does not, however, allow its expectations to go beyond the reasonable. From this description, it will readily be seen why the visiting writer deemed it worth while to add this house, to the list of those now so often found worthy of special notice in these pages, and to encourage the continuance of that kind of exhibition, which violates no law written or unwritten, but as a law to itself is acceptable to a representative audience of American people, and tends to maintain the high standard of efficiency, and deserving appreciation, which is so gratifying to all admirers of entertaining kinematography. W. H. J.

The Kleine Optical Company

The Oldest, Largest and Most Reliable Moving Picture Machine and Supply House in the United States.

THE Kleine Optical Company, of Chicago, is the oldest concern in the United States devoted exclusively to selling motion picture projection machines and theater supplies. For nearly twenty years the energy of this company has been devoted to this end of the motion picture business.

In the early days the Kleine Optical Company was looked upon as the leader in this business and its product as the standard. By keeping up with the rapid advancement of the art of motion picture projection, the company still maintains its high standard and enjoys the confidence of thousands of exhibitors and dealers throughout the United States.

AN INNOCENT OFFENDER

Show Room.

This company was the first to recognize the fact that good projection depended upon a high quality of lens. In the beginning the company designed a lens to be used exclusively for motion picture projection, and made an enviable reputation on that account. This firm has always been regarded as an authority on all matters pertaining to optical projection. The working force is composed of men who have spent years in the motion picture business and are familiar with every angle of the industry. No matter what question arises in the matter of projection, it can be answered intelligently by any employee.

POSITIVELY
NO SMOKING

Repair Shop.

The future of the motion picture business depends upon the quality of projection the public sees in motion picture theaters, and it has been the aim of the Kleine Optical Company to do all in its power to develop the art of projection. If an exhibitor has trouble in his booth and desires information, it is always cheerfully furnished by this company. It is the desire of the company to be of all possible assistance to exhibitors, operators and everyone connected with motion picture projection.

A new catalogue will be issued about July first which will be the largest of the kind ever issued. This catalogue will not only be a price list of all goods used for theater furnishings and for motion picture projection, but will be educational in a good many of its departments. Motion picture lenses have been gone into with great detail, and operators and exhibitors will find a good many points of valuable information in this publication.

An immense stock is always carried on hand ready for immediate delivery, consisting of every make of motion picture machine, stereopticons and carbons. In addition to this, the stock consists of chairs, cocoa matting, side wall fixtures, mercury arc rectifiers, lenses, wire, slide ink of all makes, condensers, ticket holders, ticket choppers, perfume, house 'phones, oxone, economizers, gas-making outfits, single stereopticons, cement, spot lights, genuine machine parts of all makes, motors, film boxes, ingento slide carriers, rewinds, stereopticon color wheels, curtains, cork carpet, indirect lights, cover glass, rotary converters, direct current generators and gas engines, all makes of terminals and lugs, slides, tickets, ticket machines, exit lights, poster frames, carbon sharpeners, transformers, compensarcs, double stereopticons, limes, oil, oil cans, binding tape, opera chairs, spot light condensers, slide boxes, gelatine, ticket boxes, film menders, acetylene burners, arc lamps, gas burners, flaming arcs, etc. The Kleine Optical Company does not deal in second-hand apparatus. The stock consists entirely of new machines of the very latest models. It has been the company's experience, in dealing in machines of this character, that they are very unsatisfactory to the purchaser.

The Kleine Optical Company keeps its immense stock at the warehouse, No. 20 East Illinois Street. The entire building is occupied by the company at this address. The sales rooms and offices are located at 166 North State Street, where the entire business, both retail and wholesale, is transacted. All makes of machines are on display in the showroom there, affording an intelligent comparison of the various makes. Exhibitors and operators are always welcome. Should they desire information, intelligent salesmen are always willing to enlighten them. Frank L. Hough, Jr., for many years traveling representative of the kinetograph department of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., is manager of the Kleine Optical Company. This department is entirely separate from the film department, operated by George Kleine, and the volume of business done is many times larger than that of any similar establishment in the United States.

AN ENTERPRISING ALBANY MANAGER.

The Grand Theater at Albany, N. Y., is being managed by a live wire whose name is C. L. Robinson. One of his business rules is never to let anybody put anything over on him. Last week in Albany the Knights Templar were holding a conclave. There were some cameramen in town taking animated pictures of the festivities for some of the large film corporations. Upon seeing what was up, Mr. Robinson got busy on the long distance wire and made a deal with the Commercial Motion Picture Company, of New York City. As a result three cameramen took the train for Albany and were on the job when the big parade went by. The negatives were rushed back to New York and developed the same night and a positive of same was in Albany next morning.

Meanwhile Manager Robinson was attending to the advertising. When the film arrived the newspapers were running big ads inviting the knights to come and see themselves in moving pictures. The Grand scooped the town with this particular stunt and did a clean-up business. So pleased were the local officials with this bit of enterprise that Mr. Robinson engaged the Commercial Moving Picture Company to remain and photograph well-known factories, public places and men of local renown. These will be exhibited at the Grand from time to time as business boosters.

INTIMATE VIEWS OF CARDINAL FARLEY.

What they assert are the best close-ups of Cardinal Farley that have ever been procured by the Majestic are released Tuesday, July 1. The film was taken at the Golden Jubilee ceremonies of the New York Catholic Protectory and is entitled "The Golden Jubilee." The Majestic cameramen had permits that kept them close to the great dignitary of the church throughout the exercises, and the "intimate" film was the result.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

ONE of the cleverest bunco schemes of recent times was discovered last week in the motion picture field of this city. The chief actor in carrying it out was a young Hebrew about twenty-three years old. He is now supposed to be on his way to or operating in other parts of the country and professional actors, amateurs and all others who have ambitions to figure on the photoplay screen are warned against him. So far as known at the present time, the swindler's operations were confined to the lower east side of the city, where he met and hoodwinked some of the cleverest managers and players in the Yiddish theatrical field, as well as cafe proprietors and taxicab owners. One of the latter, after reciting his experiences with the swindler, stated that he would give $10 just to get another good look at the fellow. "He is certainly a wonder. Anyone who knows anything at all about New York is aware that some of the shrewdest, most daring and successful confidence and bunco men in the country are among the people residing east of the Bowery and south of Fourteenth Street. This young man entered their midst and made a clean-up of about $2,000 in less than a week. Nothing is left on the field of operations but bogus contracts and checks in hands of disappointed and disconsolate cafe owners, Yiddish theatrical people and cab owners; and all this was turned off in the heart of that part of the city known as the rendezvous of the Rosenthal gunmen, Big Jack Zelig and others of like character. He was certainly one clever Jew, and I repeat I would give a ten to get just one more look at him; but it is not likely that my wish will be gratified as the young man has evidently put miles between himself and his victims."

* * *

A brief description of the swindler and his methods may be of service in theatrical and motion picture circles in other parts of the country. He dresses up to the minute and conveys the impression that he is exceedingly well informed on matters bearing upon motion picture affairs, as well as having an excellent business training. He claims to be a thirty-third degree member of the Masonic fraternity. He makes acquaintances quickly and gets his "business" before people just as readily. When he appeared among the east side folks he represented himself as being private secretary to the president of a leading motion picture manufacturing company and stated that he had authority to engage a number of first class people to produce in motion picture form the best of the plays produced in the Yiddish theaters on the east side. He presented printed contracts and checks bearing the name of a leading film company. The contracts were in blank form, to be filled out according to the terms arranged between the "private secretary" and his dupes. One man was signed up as a director of photoplays and part of his duty was to engage and have in readiness a dozen or more of the best Yiddish actors and actresses. This director was given a check for about $75 for two days salary in advance and expense money. The explanation for this was that the film company had a rule that all salaries start on Monday and the advance to the director was to pay him for Saturday and Sunday.

* * *

One man who had a very healthy looking contract and check thrust upon him by the bogus secretary became suspicious and insisted upon getting the film company on the telephone to see that everything was all right. "With the greatest of pleasure, my dear fellow," replied the supposed representative, "I will get the confidential man of the president on the phone and you can talk to him personally." The connection was made and the man at the other end told the suspicious actor that the representative with whom he was dealing had full authority to engage people, make contracts and issue checks in connection with them, and anything the secretary did would be fully confirmed by the film company. The next day it was learned that the supposed confidential secretary was a confederate of the bogus representative.

* * *

All these transactions took place on Friday. The bogus secretary worked like a beaver, signing contracts of employment and issuing checks. How many of the latter he floated will probably never be known, as some of the people holding them decline to admit they were duped. Saturday morning a number of checks were presented for certification at the bank upon which they were drawn. The film company had no account at the bank. Naturally, the latter promptly inquired why the company had drawn checks upon it before opening an account, and then the bubble burst.

* * *

None of the people engaged and given checks by the swindler lost any money. The actual losers were their friends—cafe people who cashed checks to give the bogus secretary ready cash with which to give the duped actors advance expenses, and taxicab people. One of the latter accepted a check for cab hire amounting to about fifteen or twenty dollars and gave the young man change. In one of the cafes the swindler hired two men to go South at once and make arrangements for picture taking sites. The "secretary" was short of funds and time could not be spared to get a check cashed at the bank, or get the money from the company's office. The accommodating cafe owner, delighted that so many of his friends and patrons had been signed up by such a large and responsible company, volunteered to cash a check and did so. As soon as the money was turned over the "secretary" gave $25 of it to the two men and they started South at once. They got as far as Baltimore before they discovered that their contract was a sham. The swindler's profit on the transaction was the amount he received from the cafe owner in excess of the $25. What the excess was has not been learned.

* * *

It is stated that a very prominent Yiddish actress was a loser by making the "secretary's" acquaintance, but exposure came before her loss assumed serious proportions. With the expectation of a most favorable contract the hired automobile of the actress was at the disposal of the impostor for two days, and he wined and dined at her expense during that period.

* * *

The motion picture field offers many opportunities to confidence men and other swindlers like the one who cleaned up the east side, for the reason that the applications for work in the studios are so numerous and the staffs are so filled that the applicants who are shut out become desperate and fall easy victims to the class of crooks who pretend that they are authorized to engage talent for studio work, or are influential enough to place people. All the film manufacturers are complaining that the visits and appeals of the dupes have become so numerous and annoying as to develop into an actual nuisance. And the pity of it all is that the crooks ply their schemes with apparent safety from punishment. None of the really aggrieved parties care about becoming prosecutors. Some prefer to lose the money paid and take their disappointment with resignation to the conditions rather than lose more time and money in going to court. Others dislike having it become known that they have been duped. Some consider the amount of money and time involved too insignificant to warrant further consideration. So, it will be seen, bogus agents and dealers in false pretense are immune from punishment so long as the initiative in prosecution is left to the sufferers. It has frequently been stated that as long as the victims in cases of this kind are not disposed to come to the front with evidence for prosecutions others should not worry. That is quite true, and it must be admitted that the victims who fail to come forward are open to censure for failure to perform a duty to the public. But something should be done to protect the unwary against the bogus agency and employment sharks. There are laws applicable to the conditions and the officers of the law have means by which evidence can be procured, even if those who have been made victims fail to come forward. Someone has suggested that if the situation should be intelligently laid before District Attorney Whitman his office could start an investigation that would soon wipe out the impostors. Only a few days ago a young man presented himself to the manager of a motion picture studio as an applicant for a try-out. He stated that the director of a school for the teaching of moving picture acting had told him the studio had set aside Saturday afternoons for try-outs, which was not true. The young man was heartbroken. He came from a Western town, he said, and had spent his savings for the tuition.

SHERRY COMPANY GETS KEARTON PICTURES.

The Wm. L. Sherry Feature Film Company, of New York City, has the New York State rights and is doing well with the production of James K. Hackett in "The Prisoner of Zenda." Now it announces the Cherry Kearton pictures of wild animal and bird life in the Jungles of Africa and India, including the thrilling capture of a lion. These are the pictures of which ex-President Roosevelt and others have spoken highly.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

This Must Be Stopped.

SOMETIMES we wonder where Bertram Williams is going to stop. His latest contribution to literature is a "Multimoto" feature. We think that should this be sprung on some audiences, the people would want to know if the animal had to be kept in a cage. If we do not check Mr. Williams there is more or less danger that he will completely rewrite the language. He bettered his recent airdome line with "The Green Beneath, the Blue Above, and Dash and Danger of Life and Love." That is poetry if you are careless about metrical feet. And all this because they had two two-part subjects the same night—and three other subjects—at the Ponca City Airdome. Some of these days they will have two three-part features and in an effort to do justice to the situation Mr. Williams will scatter type all over the State of Oklahoma.

The handbill is cut up into boxes with six point rule in an excellent layout. Mr. Williams—who sets his own type—is an expert at handling rule and border and has the trick of throwing up each individual fact by shutting it off from the others with rule work. Most printers get fussy when they start to play with fancy borders. They overlook the fact that the frame should not overshadow the picture and that rule and border work is merely the frame. For quick reading, three or six point rule, according to the size of the sheet, is more effective than the more ornamental border work, while in no case should a border be too ornate. Use rule or border to point up your paragraphs; not to obscure them, and you will get more for your money. The bill in question is nothing more than a series of boxes, but it plays up each fact.

You Get a Smile.

In many ways the best line in the ad is one that reads "You get a smile with every ticket." How is it at your box office? Do you hand out a smile or a grouch along with the change?

Mr. Williams can spur the language to fresh endeavors, but the other night he had "The Star of Bethlehem" as the attraction and he dropped the circus style completely, presenting a dignified first page and following with a running story of the film on the other three pages. It was not a Multimotor or anything suggesting a three-ring circus. The subject did not call for circusing, and the drop to the severely dignified probably had vastly more effect than the usual splurgy advertisement that would have been all out of keeping with the film.

That is where the real showman proves himself. He doesn't follow a single line of action, but can adapt himself to the circumstances, all of which is not designed to swell Mr. Williams' head, but he points a moral that others should take to heart.

When you get a religious subject, such as this or "From the Manger to the Cross," do not circus it and, on the other hand, do not go to the other extreme and copy too closely church literature. Remember that while the subject is religious it is to be shown in a theater and not in a church and while the text should be moderated to meet the quiet dignity of the picture it should not ape the prayer book or the Bible. Let your advertising say: "This is a religious subject and we shall present it as reverently as we can, that no offense may be given, but we shall not offend, either by pretending that our theater is a church."

Getting What's Left.

The other day the Eagles and Redmen, of Bisbee, Arizona, had a joint picnic. Instead of sitting down and telling themselves that they stood to lose a day's business in the matter, two of the theaters, the Lowell and the Orpheum advertised special performances after the return of the picnic train. The Orpheum took a half page, the Lowell taking a full page with a circular cut of Miss Lillian Walker and the announcement that two tickets would be given free to all who identified her.

The special matter for the picnic read:

GO DIRECT TO THE LOWELL THEATER
FROM THE TRAIN TO-NIGHT
A SPECIAL SHOW TO-NIGHT
ESPECIALLY FOR THIS OCCASION ONLY
IF YOU MISS IT YOU'LL BE SORRY

Don't let a local celebration do you out of your business, yet do not fight back. Stand in with it and get what you can.

Photoplay Pages.

Pretty soon you'll have trouble with the photoplay page of the daily papers. There are at least two concerns that are sending out their matter in matrix form. One of them charges $25 a week for its service to the manufacturer. If he submits to this polite form of blackmail his films are good. If he refuses, his films are poor.

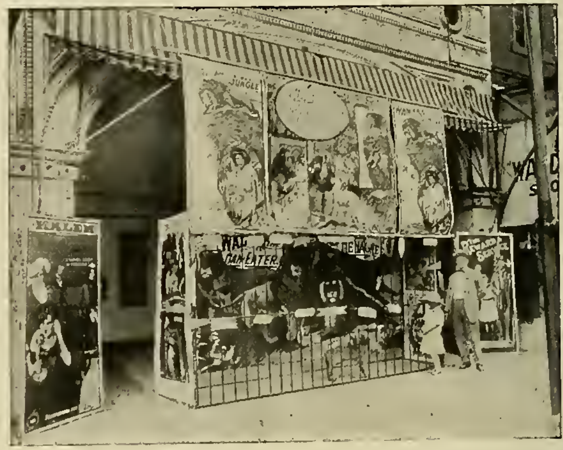
This interests you because you may have some of the films of the man who does not pay. The pages are not yet in position to attack those who do not pay, but this is merely a matter of a short time. You get a service that contains two subjects declared by the page of one of your local papers to be poor. You can imagine how your business will suffer.

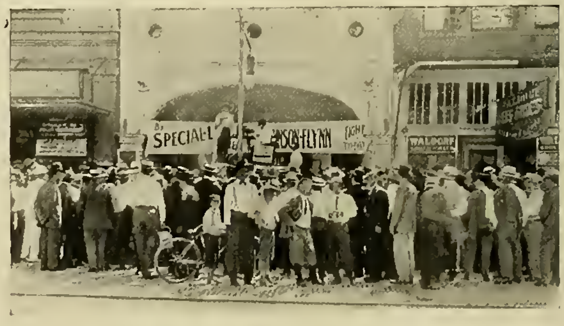
One page makes its boast that the matter is sent in such a form that it must be used by the paper. We have some exceedingly illuminating matter on this subject, letters both to the manufacturers and to the papers. If your local paper is using one of these syndicate pages, refuse to advertise in it. Give your patronage to the paper that gets up its own page and will mention your coming films instead of only the subjects put out by the men who "put up." Kill this vicious scheme before it is fairly well started or you will presently have to pay the cost of your indifference by having part of your audiences kept from your house by the attacks of some grafter whose sole purpose is to tax the manufacturer. He cannot pay them all, and you will pay the price.

This does not, of course, apply to the page made up by some local paper in the interest of the local exhibitors. Such pages as those in the Waterbury American, Beaver Times and others are written locally with a proper regard for the films you are going to have in your house, and they are not run for the purpose of graft. These should be supported because they support you, but the syndicate page, at best, will do you little good and in the end will do great harm.

Cost and Effect.

These two illustrations show the Odeon Theater, Fort Worth, Texas. One is the billing for "Wamba," but no text accompanied the photographs and we are at a loss to know what particular animal it is in the cage. It is a more genuine brute than Mr. Arnold's "lions," and even a house cat in a cage will attract attention, and here is an elaborate layout that must attract attention.





The other picture shows the theater on the night of the Johnson-Flynn fight. A special wire and operator cost $50 and the results by rounds were read off as the blows were struck. It kept the crowd outside instead of inside the house, but on the other hand it probably brought more than fifty dollars' worth of advertising, which would not have been the case had the results been read inside the house.

Covering Up.

Here in town, of late, we have noticed that many houses, not always in the cheaper districts, are using more paper to get the hot weather business. Some of the fronts are so covered with posters that it almost seems as though a guide would be needed to get one to the box office.

This is a mistake. Now, if ever, the front of the house should give the suggestion of coolness, and this cannot be done with an avalanche of lurid posters. Take down the overhead banners and posters, call in some of the side boards, give the lobby a fresh coat of light paint, hang some bunting and then keep a hidden fan going to keep it swaying in the breeze. It will make the lobby look inviting and suggest that there is still more breeze within. Perhaps you can rig your exhaust fan to do double service, but keep things breezy and the moral effect will be worth more than the display of a big battle poster that makes your housefront look like the fence in front of a vacant lot.

Put your doorkeeper into a white uniform, encourage your ticket seller to dress in white and make certain that there is a fan in the ticket box to keep her comfortable. A ticket seller with the perspiration trickling from the tip of her chin and wilting her collar is not a very good advertisement for a summer show. A better advertisement would be a girl looking comfortable in a sealskin coat.

One box office has a fan set in the ceiling. The ticket seller has fluffy hair that blows every which way in the wind and at the sides of the window there are streamers of ribbon that flutter and wave like a flag in a gale.

That's the sort of thing that backs up the perfunctory "20 degrees cooler than outside" poster.

From Nova Scotia.

A correspondent who asks that his name be omitted, sends some dodgers for criticism. He writes:

> Of course you understand that the small-town exhibitor cannot spend much money for advertising. Beyond a certain limit money is wasted. You also know that the small-town printer is pig-headed. I have marked some of the bills rotten, to show that I know myself that the presswork is poor. You will note that I use paper of a certain size for all the printing that the people may come to associate this size with my advertising.

We agree with the correspondent in his estimate of the composition. It stands to reason that the country job office cannot afford the type equipment of the large plant, and for this reason we think that often it will pay a house to spend five or ten dollars for some special type to be loaned the printer when he is doing a house job. Much of this display is the sort of type used on auction sale posters and similar work; useful for the majority of the jobs that come in but of no beauty of line. A few fonts of display faces for titles and a line cut for the name of the house will help a lot.

But as the correspondent writes, the advertising of a small house must be kept down or else it will cost more to advertise than the advertising will bring. If a circular costs a dollar and a half to print and can bring in three dollars' worth of extra business, it shows a profit, but if it costs three dollars and can bring in only a dollar and a half it shows a loss. The smaller the house the more essential it is that every piece of paper shall have a pull.

His Paper.

Most of the bills sent give the titles of the attractions and a line or paragraph about the subject. There is little space for added matter, but we think that less room might have been taken for the film story to add a paragraph of general appeal. One good point shows only in a single bill. This is a sketch of the headline feature—in this case "Pirate Gold"—and runs:

> Watch for these scenes: "The secret of the chest," "The girl who found it," "Mutiny," "Cast adrift," "Crazed with thirst," "The treasure and The afterglow."

This is much better than a bare mention, and we think that all through the mention might have been made more attractive. "Tommy's Atonement," for example, is:

"A most interesting child drama. This picture will please young and old alike."

Perhaps it will, but why? Tell in the same number of words more about the story. "Tommy's careless mischief brought misery to an aged couple, but in the end he brought them peace." There is not much in the story that can be played up, but something of the story can be told instead of a broad generality.

Another story is "A beautiful drama of the most pleasing kind." That tells nothing whatever about the story. It does not hold interest because it lacks the knowing air, and yet a file of The Moving Picture World will quickly bring a suggestion. "The price a man pays for his youthful folly," is a stronger line and yet it took but a moment to look up the story.

Keeping Your Files.

When the paper comes in make a list of the releases by dates, and manufacturers from the release dates, or cut them out of the paper and paste on cards. When your program comes in look over the cards for the release date, if this is not known to you turn to the Stories of the Film at about the date in question and you will find the story. If you let the papers lay all over the office you cannot do this, but with a spring punch or even the plain hollow punch and a hammer you can make two holes near the back and bind them together with shoestrings. We use a couple of stove bolts and nuts for the current volume and bind with shoe strings when the volume is complete.

If you want to add to the system, note the volume and page of any special story and the number and page on which the advertisement appears. In no time at all you'll have a file that will be worth not only time but money, for you can then get your advertising out in such a shape that it will pull business in.

The other day a Western exhibitor sent in for some casts. In the list were Lubin's, Edison's, Vitagraph's and Essanay's, and yet three out of four exhibitors publish these casts, the Edison and Vitagraph in book form and the Essanay on sheets. They should have had this matter on file and yet they had nothing whatever in the way of data when they needed it.

Most of the manufacturers are doing their best to help their exhibitors, but comparatively few keep this data in such a shape that it is of the least use to them.

If the exhibitor had to pay some service bureau for the information, he would value it above the cost, but because it is free he does not pay much attention to it.

Getting It Right.

In your little community, whether it be a small town or part of a large one, you should be an authority on pictures. You should make yourself looked up to. If you say that black is white and then show that black is black, the next time you say that green is green you will not be believed. In other words, if you incorrectly announce a picture you will not be believed when you say that a subject is more than ordinarily good, because the man or woman who reads your circular knows that you know no more than they do what you are talking about.

Take this same batch of bills. The "Man He Might Have Been" is announced as "An elegant educational subject showing that a man can make himself something worth while if he is so minded."

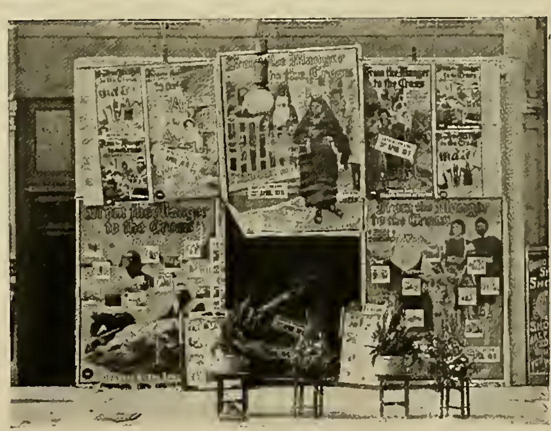
Now that, in one sense, is what the subject teaches, but what the picture shows is that a boy who does not follow his grammar school course with technical training does not stand as much of a chance as the boy who really learns a trade instead of being a mere laborer. It is a plea for the boys that they be given a chance to start right, which is something very different from this announcement. The person who sees the film and remembers the reading matter, sees that the story and its announcement are at a variance, and credits none of the advertising thereafter.

The Moving Picture World goes to great expense to get the fullest possible information for its readers. It puts them in a position to do their advertising right. All data is to be found in the paper. If your advertising is weak and ineffective, you have only yourself to blame.

No matter what the size of your town, work with a big city brain. Some of the cleverest men in the business get outside their town limits if they walk five minutes, but they get real audiences because they get after them the right way. You cannot convince a man if you do not know what you are talking about. It's easy to find out if you are willing to go to the very little trouble of listing releases by manufacturers.

Doing It In Texas.

This is the way the Crystal Theater, Texarkana, Texas, advertised "From the Manger to the Cross." We think that if some of the stands had been taken a couple of blocks up or down the street, they would have done the house much more good. R. I. Brown, the manager, writes that he used four 24-sheet stands, six 8-sheet stands, twenty 3-sheets and 50 one-sheets in addition to 2,000 heralds and 250 personal letters to ministers and leaders of various circles of society and endeavor.



From the Manger to the Cross
From the Manger to the Cross
From the Manger to the Cross

This means that much of the paper was shown away from the house, mostly the three and one-sheets. It's a mistake to center all of the paper around the house. We live in a section of Brooklyn that to all intents is a small town. Three blocks away there is a picture theater. We have not passed the house in eighteen months and yet we frequently send people down when there is something good, because they do not trust to the house display alone, but do some window advertising. One of the windows is right where we take the street car to town, and we know what they have. With the house advertising alone we would be apt to forget that there was such a place. Spread out. It pays.

Hot Weather Hints.

Get some plain white frames. Coat with glue and sprinkle with ground mica or pounded glass. Get some glass icicles from a store that is carrying over its last Christmas stock, and help the illusion along.

Put in a free ice water fountain with a penny in the slot cup attachment. The cup profit will pay for the ice and the patron will have to look at the program announcement while he draws the water.

Put up a sign "Shawls loaned those who need them inside."

Advertise "If you can't keep cool inside we'll hire a boy to fan you." If some would-be wag takes you up, have one of the ushers fan him as conspicuously as possible. You'll get a laugh and probably he'll join in.

Paste your program on a large cake of ice, arranging to get the cake about the time when you need to coax the crowd.

Advertising Wanted.

Please send along your airdome advertising in time to do the other exhibitors some good this season. Don't be bashful. It may not be just right, but still it may have the germ of an idea that can be worked up. Send it along.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by Epes Winthrop Sargent

If You Live in Washington.

If you live in Washington and want to get in touch with your fellow playwrights, send a stamped and addressed envelope and you will be given the address of a man who wants to form a circle. There is an unusually large number of playwriters in Washington, even with Emmett Campbell Hall gone to Lubinville, and it should be possible to form a good sized circle there.

Can You Beat It?

Recently we announced that a certain company was "buying only in New York." The item meant that only the New York office purchased scripts, whether these were intended for the home companies or those in the field. Most of our readers accepted it in this sense and yet one person, whose letter gave evidence of more than average education wrote, asking the return of the writer's scripts as he had learned through this Department that work was taken only from New York writers.

And yet some persons wonder why they cannot write scripts that will sell!

On Your Vacation.

Probably you'll be going on a vacation pretty soon. If you are a city man you'll go to the country or the shore. If you are at home in the country you'll come to the city.

Whether city or country, make your vacation tell. Don't just go somewhere; learn things. If you are at the shore, study hotel and boarding house life, learn about fishermen and their boats and nets and lobster pots; find out all you can. Talk to the man who is willing to talk. There never was a man or woman yet who could not tell you some things. The children even know much that you do not know. You have this opportunity to learn all of the time, but on a vacation you find yourself in fresh surroundings with broader fields of study. Don't come back all full of thoughts about hops and excursions and the girls or boys at the hotel. Come back with a new and broader view of life that you can put down on paper and win checks with.

If you know one thing, you can write of one thing intelligently. If you know of ten things you can write of ten things and by a system of combining these ten facts you can work still more variety into your stories.

It frequently happens that a script will come into a studio that is half correct but wholly interesting. Perhaps a country girl comes to the city to make her way. The city scenes may be correct and the country part utterly foolish or vice versa, and the story is thrown out because it does not run true. Now is your time to get local color for next winter's work. Don't loaf. Find recreation and interest in studying people and places and find profit as well as pleasure. The more you study the better qualified you are to write. Here is a chance.

Starting in England.

The "school" graft is starting up in England. "The Pictures," a weekly publication for the general reader has a photoplaywriter column, and in a recent issue we note this warning:

> BOGUS SCHOOLS—These traps for the unwary are very common in the States, and we hear rumors that some of them are starting here. We have already exposed one concern, and shall be obliged if our readers will let us know if they should come in contact with any of these swindlers.

As the same issue gives as the minimum and maximum prices from three half crowns ($1.20) to five guineas (about $25), it would seem that the bait is small, but the pickings good. We are glad to see that our English cousins are alive to the swindle. There are several good photoplay departments in the English papers now, most of which read more or less like an echo from this paper.

Pull.

The other day a man who is not wholly persona grata with some of the studios wrote that in sixty days he had sold sixteen scripts under three assumed names. The fact that the companies would not buy from him because of things he had said is of no great importance. The fact that he sold his product under assumed names is interesting in that it shows that a script is sold to studios on his merits. The three persons whose names were used and who cleared the scripts were not known in any way to the studio editors. It was sufficient that the scripts were good. They sold. About the same time we wrote a script over as an object lesson for a friend, who promptly sold it to the studio to which we dispose of most of our own work and he got the same price and rather more prompt attention.

This seems to hand the "inside writer" theory a plexus jolt. Three unknown persons send out scripts and sell them. The man who might be imagined to be on the inside did not sell. Another unknown writer vainly seeks to market a script. It is put in proper shape and at once sells.

It doesn't matter whether your name is John Smith or Rudyard Kipling. If you can deliver the goods you can find places to sell. The inside writer has only the advantage of knowledge and acquaintance which better enable him to turn out just what is wanted.

Bargain Prices.

These four-dollar schools in New York are seemingly getting the Chicago goat. One of the western schools has cut its price to $13.50 and $15 more when you have sold your first $50 worth. Now we look to see the New York end come down to $3.98 and the other $16.02 when scripts have been sold to the extent of $37.25.

An Interesting State.

A beginner wrote the other day to know what to do. He had an idea that he could write photoplays, but he had been told that the editors would steal the ideas and he did not want to work for nothing. He wanted to know what he could do.

There is a pleasant situation, but we do not think that we would hesitate long over the matter. If we thought that studios stole scripts we would not write them to be stolen, but if we were of a speculative and speculating turn of mind we would try them out with a few and see if they really were thieves.

We've said time and again that we do not believe that manufacturers steal stories and that a very negligible percentage of employees "remember" ideas they have read, but it is not possible to convince the man whose friends are quite certain that their stories were stolen.

If we could clean out all the photoplay editors' desks of one week's submissions and classify them, we are pretty certain that fifty per cent. would come so closely under one of about ten classifications that to use one of each group would result in charges of theft, made in entire good faith, by all the other writers in that group.

This being the case, it is easy to see where all the charges of theft come from. They are made by persons too stupid to write new ideas and also too stupid to appreciate that fact.

Don't Go To Extremes.

In writing your story do not go to extremes. You may see a story produced with seventy to one hundred scenes. Perhaps you can plot your story into that many scenes, but if you do not sell it to one of the three or four companies countenancing this butchery, you will have to cut it down before you can make your appeal to editors with more intelligent production. The story with one hundred scenes is generally a thirty or forty scene story chopped up. It could be made in forty scenes and these scenes can then be split into as many parts as may be desired in the cutting-room. If you write the forty scene play and get your story over in proper form, the extremist producer can spoil it to suit himself, but if you try to get as crazy as he is, you lose your chance with other studios. Write the good average stuff and leave the rest to the man who has holes in his brain.

It's the same way with the type of story. Someone gets something new like Romaine Fielding's two-reel picture of fear. In spite of some unpleasant features, the picture strongly impressed. If another should be done it would not be effective because a copy of the first, and yet a lot of manuscripts along similar lines are circulating around with little or no chance of success. Every once in a while an unusual picture will score an unusual hit simply because it is unusual, but that is no sign to the unimaginative to go ahead and write along those lines. It is encouragement to the imaginative author to write just one very much out of the ordinary story, but the intelligent author will write one and stop unless he can write another just as unusual, but now, in order to be unusual, it must be wholly unlike the one just written.

The same thing applies with equal force to the unusual situation. If a scene aboard a wrecked ship makes an unusually strong impression on you, do not go home and write three or four stories aboard wrecked ships on the general proposition that such scenes are useful. Perhaps the ship will have been salved before you can get the story out to the company making the first, and even if this has not been done it may be that the company will already have made a couple and be opposed to making more.

The great aim of the photoplay producer is to get variety in production. He does not want to make all railroad stories or all sea stories or all airship stories. The aim is to sprinkle these through the average releases to get the desired novelty. The better plan is to write the staple stuff and leave the rest to the people who like to gamble.

The clothing store man who sells suits for $18 each is apt to make more money in the long run than the tailor who charges $100 a suit. He has to sell more clothes, but he is dealing in a staple article for which there is a constant demand. There may come a time when the demand for $100 suits will fall off and the former patrons of the tailor will go to the clothing merchant.

It is the same way in scripts. You may get more money for the novelty script, but on the other hand you may not be able to find a purchaser for your goods, where there is always a demand for the average good story that can be made without prohibitive production cost and yet make good with the average audience.

Now and then if you have an unusual idea write it and send it around for your own gratification, but do not stop writing the staple, because you can always sell it. And please remember that staple as used here does not mean a dead level of mediocrity. It means the story that is good in itself, that is good because it is a story and not because it has a rear-end collision between two dirigibles or seven scenes at the bottom of the sea.

Writing From Knowledge.

If you do not know anything about law, try and find out something about lawyers before you use a lawyer as a hero. Of course if you merely make your hero a lawyer you do not have to know all about briefs and precedents and waivers and that sort of stuff, but you cannot make your character convincing unless you know how such a man would act. The other day a script showed up in which a young man wanted a job. The man didn't have an opening for him, but he gave him a card to a business friend stating that the applicant was all right. The voucher was made on no more firm a foundation than that the boy had a letter of recommendation that might have been written by himself for all the business man knew. He went down to the other place and got the job and a little while later he got all the money in the safe and went somewhere else.

No business man would guarantee the standing of an applicant for work unless he had good reason to believe that the person guaranteed was in every way desirable. The story was written in such a way that to get rid of this incident would have required almost the entire revision of the script. No part of it was worth a minute's work, but sometimes there are script just as foolish but with a good central idea that might be bought did not the labor entailed in making the script "right" outweigh its narrative value. Get your facts right. It pays, and it is not as much trouble as you might think it would be. If you can't find out write some other story. Don't make an exhibition of yourself.

Technique and the Idea.

One recent correspondent wants to know why it is that some of her associates sell scripts when she does not, though she knows so much more about camera limitations than her friends.

She unconsciously supplies her own answer. If she were in the business of selling camera limitations she would be right in line for the market, but her scripts are technically interesting, but void of ideas and tenderness. She is so busy wondering if her idea can be played on the photographic stage that she keeps her characters huddled together instead of permitting them to act. She never says "insert" instead of bust or calls a bust an insert, she never jumps a character from one scene into another and she is careful and precise in her leaders, but she makes technique superior to idea and so she labors with her technique where technique of form is but the manner in which the idea may be best displayed.

The technique of form is the same to photoplay as spelling is to prose or poetry. One must be able to spell to be able to write, but a knowledge of spelling does no more than permit the words to be formed. It is the arrangement of the words to expound the idea that counts. So the photoplay writer must first possess the technique of form, but only regard that as a means whereby the idea may be best shown.

Of the two, idea is of greater importance than technique, but both are needful to the person who would really do good work. At the same time do not devote yourself to technique to the exclusion of idea and do not make it your master.

Your Line of March.

Suppose that you were going up Main Street from Fourth to Tenth. What would you think if you passed the streets in this order:

Seventh
Eighth
Fifth
Ninth
Tenth
Sixth

Wouldn't you hustle off to see a doctor and ask him what was the matter with your head, that you passed your destination before you passed Sixth Street. Wouldn't you expect to pass them in this order:

Fifth
Sixth
Seventh
Eighth
Ninth
Tenth

Then what makes you put the end of your story in the middle, the middle at the beginning and the beginning at the end? You may not think that you do this, and perhaps you do not, but a surprising number of writers pass the Tenth street of their stories long before they come to Fifth.

Look your stories over and make certain that your progression is correctly made before you go very far with the rest of the development in editing up the story.

When You Ask Advice.

We've just been spanked by a lady who dropped us a line and asked how photoplays were written. Before the reply could be published in the Inquiry Department, she wrote another and more imperious letter, asking why we did not reply. We explained that it was because it was advertised that we did not reply by mail and anyhow she had not had the courtesy to enclose a stamped and addressed envelope. The spanking followed.

If you ask free information, make yourself as little of a nuisance to your correspondent as possible. Do not ask a lot of advice and then expect the advisor to pay the freight. If you do not know enough of the decencies of life to ask nicely, you are not entitled to assistance, and if you do not get it you have only yourself to blame. This Department is only too glad to give a helping hand in or out of these columns, but it does not feel called upon to spend half an hour or so writing a letter to some person who has not even the courtesy to comply with the commonest business decencies.

This does not merely apply to this department, either. We know of one New York studio that recently received in one week seventy-eight requests for information either unaccompanied by stamps or by stamps stuck to the letter instead of onto a self-addressed envelope. If you can't stick to the rules don't try to break into the game. It's a waste of time.

Inquiries

NOTE—No questions can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. A list of addresses to which photoplays may be sent will be mailed on receipt of a STAMPED AND ADDRESSED ENVELOPE.

LOIS—We'll have to send out West for that information. Keep your eye on this space for two or three weeks and we'll have it for you. Thanks for the toast. Good enough to be framed. Thank's, too, for the good wishes.

ANTHONY—We have spoken to you once before about sending us nickels with your questions. Don't do it again. You are welcome to replies without fee of any sort, but don't ask about "darling sweethearts" again. Just for that—! Miss Isabelle Lamon was Jo in Lubin's "Diamond Cut Diamond." Pathe does not give out any names of players. In "Roses of Yesterday" the old couple were Miss Caroline Cook and L. S. McKee and the nephew and niece were Jack Nelson and Miss Edna Bunyea.

C. E. B.—We think that Kalem told you that your story was similar to one they had released that you might look it up and use your own judgment about sending it elsewhere. We don't think that they thought you had stolen their idea. Look up the story of their release in Stories of the Film. If the two are too much alike retire yours and save postage, otherwise keep it going. A story may be too much like another for the same company to release both and yet not so like that another company would not take it. If you want to send in the synopsis of your story and the title of the Kalem we'll advise you more definitely.

J. T. S.—Next time sign a name, please. James Cruze is not with Kalem. He and Miss Snow are still with Thanhouser. We do not find the player you mention in casts running well through July. We cannot name the players in foreign films.

R. F. K.—In "The Sea Dog" (not the "Old Sea Dog") Captain Blunt was J. B. Sherry and Bill Squeers was Frank Brady. The child was not Lillian Wade but we do not know who it is. The Kay-Bee Identifier is on the trail.

R. A. D.—More hard luck! The Biograph Identifier says he can't quite get your question, but that it was not Edwin August in the part. He thinks it might have been Harry Hyde. The nursemaid was apparently a tryout. The book will be out in about six weeks.

N. K. F.—In "A Chance Deception" the wife was Miss Sweet. The Biograph Identifier does not know the other, who seems to have appeared only in this one picture.

L. A.—We don't think there is much the matter with a script that sells within ten days, but if it was released eighteen days later, we think that the company bought your story to prevent interference with a similar one they had already produced. They had one in film, you sent one in pretty much like it. Rather than have you think they had stolen your idea, they sent you a small check. That's how it looks to us.

JEFF.—Your interest in the Kinemacolor lady in the blue nightie is almost indecent. We have explained that she could not be in a blue nightie because the only blue in Kinemacolor is a violet flicker shutter. You thought you saw a blue nightdress, but it was a mistake. As to other colors than red and green, it is apparent that you forget that mixing colors in certain proportions will produce various other shades. Look in the Warner Feature advertisement. If the trade mark is the same it was a Warner Feature. If it is not we must confess ignorance.

MRS. P.—You cannot sell one egg to two persons and you cannot sell one play to two companies. Do not even send two copies out at the same time. If you sent the same story to two companies and they both bought it you would be in a bad fix. Sorry we cannot give you the other information, but musical celebrities are not in our line. We do not think you have the name right, if she is famous. It is not familiar.

M. E.—It is evident from the company's note that you wrote a one-reel story or perhaps a half-reel. Because it was not a two-reel, it was returned. Had it been a proper two-reel they would have made the split. A two-reel is a story that runs twice as long as a one-reel with one punch in the middle and a greater one at the end, but it is not possible to tell you just how much makes one-reel or two. This must come to you through practise and observation. Look up some two-reel stories and note about how much story it contains. That's about the best way for a beginner to study. Not even the veteran can get it exactly.

MARIE—In "The Sinews of War," John was Charles Ray and Donald was Joe King. Miss Bracken was the girl.

L. M. R.—Usually a check follows an acceptance within ten days, but the company you name is not a regular releasing company. Better write the company to which you sent the script. Use registered letter and enclose a stamped and addressed envelope for reply. We are afraid that you are out the money.

H. I. G.—Essanay's "The Letter's Mission" was released May 21st of this year.

C. L. M.—We lack the Eclair cast. Miss Florence Hackett was Iris in "The Power of the Cross." James Moore was Guiseppe in "The End of the Quest."

B. L. D.—Wallace Reid was the new Sheriff and George Field the old in "A Modern Snare."

E. H. H.—Frank Oppermann was the one-armed tramp in "An Outcast Among Outcasts."

W. Y.—No company is in the market for stories of Indian scalping. The sight of Indians scalping a girl is a bit too unpleasant. Write something else.

A. R. M.—The book may be had of the publishers of this paper. Price one dollar. We do not know of anything else that would be of much use.

A. H.—There are hundreds of reasons why a photoplay is found "not available" and these reasons range all the way from the poor quality of the script to the fact that it is too good for the company to try and put on. There is much in between. It is one of the most flexible phrases in the language. If your story is really a good one it might be accepted later if originally returned because they were overstocked. We know of a number of scripts that were sold on their second visit to a studio, but the number is comparatively small.

G. L.—Very frequently a story will stick in a studio eight or ten weeks waiting action. Sometimes it is held for consideration by some director or some member of the executive staff. It's a good plan to wait three months before getting uneasy. Sometimes you will kill a sale by writing at an inopportune moment. At the same time the company you mention is usually so prompt that you might write and ask if they received the script, explaining your anxiety. Send a stamped and addressed envelope for a reply.

Technique of the Photoplay
First edition is completely
SOLD OUT
Kindly send no more orders or remittances for above.
Second edition in course of preparation. For publication date and price, see future notices.
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,
17 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON

To the Coast and Back.

THE New York delegation, including myself, will leave New York City, Saturday Morning, June 28th and, after a stop in Chicago, will arrive in Seattle, Washington, July 5th. My route returning will be as follows:

San Francisco, stop one day, Los Angeles—one day, Salt Lake City—half day. Montrose, Colorado—two days, Pueblo—half day, Denver—one day, and Kansas City possibly a few hours. From Kansas City I shall take the Hannibal and St. Joe railroad to Le Clede, Mo., thence via. the C. B. & K. C. to Burlington, Ia., stopping off at Exline, Iowa, where I was born and raised, and where I will spend two days. There will be no other stops, except possibly in Burlington, Ia. In these various places I will be glad to meet as many of the boys as I can. To that end I will notify the Secretaries of the various locals of the time of my arrival, but this can only be done by wire, a few hours in advance.

Concerning Union Laws.

Brother C. Wallis, Hamilton, Ontario, discusses union laws, as follows:

> In May 31st edition I note brother Bason's letter with reference to moving picture operators and stage employees. I would like to say that the I. A. T. S. E. does issue charters to moving picture operators, and there are several organizations of that kind, Local 151, Toronto, Canada, being one of them. With reference to Article 6, Section 2 (as amended), I think the number of moving picture operators necessary to secure a charter should be ten or twelve, instead of fifteen, since there are several cities in which ten or twelve could be secured, but not the larger number. Section 1 and 10 of Article 8 should be repealed, as he said in his letter. With reference to theaters where the operator is called upon to run a machine and spot light, I do not altogether agree with brother Bason's views. My idea is this: If there is only one operator and the house runs vaudeville, there should be a man for the spot lamp, which should be located outside the operating room. In the Province of Ontario, it will be necessary, under these conditions, to so locate the lamp, for the reason that no one but a licensed operator is allowed inside the operating room during a performance. If there are two operators, however, I do not see what harm it would be for one of them to run a spot, since most moving picture theaters using vaudeville, only use one or two acts. One operator, however, has enough to do to look after his machines without running a spot. You, brother Richardson, are advising the operators to join the I. A. T. S. E. Why not advise them to join the T. M. A., as they will thus have the benefit of both lodge and union? I have been operating for seven years and am still learning. I have been a department fan for a long time and have had wonderful aid from both it and the Handbook (second edition), which I would not be without under any conditions. My operating room is 7 x 11 x 14 feet high, built of concrete and steel, with four-inch walls, having a skylight and ventilator in the roof. Our Six A Power's machines are giving excellent results, projecting a 17 foot picture at 78 feet, using 60 cycle, 110 volt current, through a Fort Wayne compensarc. I get a clear, white field with 40 amperes at the arc. Hamilton operators are affiliated with the stage employees at the present time.

I think you misunderstood brother Bason on one point, brother Wallis. He thoroughly understands that the I. A. T. S. E. issues charters to the operators, but the trouble is, in certain cities they insist on making the operators' auxiliary to the spotlight men, and this is what brother Bason objects to, and so do we all, for that matter. But this is a condition which I am sure will be done away with. As to the spotlight proposition, under proper conditions and with an adequate salary, I do not see any objections to the operator running a spotlight. While I am in favor of compelling, if necessary, the manager to pay adequate salaries, I am not at all in favor of compelling him to hire unnecessary labor. As to the T. M. A., I do not quite understand. Do you mean to advise them to join that instead of the I. A. T. S. E., or to join both?

In Case of Fire.

Mr. Wm. Lorence, New York City, writes, enclosing a clipping from a new publication in which a new writer gravely informs us that the latest and best projection pointers will be found in his department. Friend Lorence writes:

> I am not sending this letter especially to enclose the clipping, though it strikes me the writer thereof is rather daring, but rather to ask space on something, which, as Tad says, is getting my goat. Did you ever meet an operator who was willing to tell you the truth as to the length of his experience? Take a glance at the ads in The Moving Picture World, and read something like this: "At Liberty. A live-wire operator. Ten years' experience. Produces the goods," etc. Did you ever see an ad in which less than five or six years of experience is claimed? And now another thing: will you kindly express your opinion as to the value of an invention which would automatically cut the loops in case the film caught fire, and, in the case of the fire getting into the magazine, automatically throw on house lights, close switch to a large horn phonograph containing a record from which a carefully rehearsed speech would come forth, and, if necessary, a fire alarm could be sent in by the same invention. A phonograph will never get rattled in case of fire. Would it not be well to set aside a little space in the Department and call it the "Operators' Invention Corner," asking all operators to co-operate and send in their ideas as to labor saving, fire protection and other devices. By the way, I am the man who sprung the "Bug" idea which created so much comment.

As to the clipping, Brother Lorence, it is merely amusing. It is rather wonderful with what regularity such announcements are made. This instance was particularly amusing in that the very first question he undertook to answer he tried to slap poor me on the wrist, but merely succeeded in making a reply which such a man as Mr. Skerett, for years the chief inspector of the Electrical Bureau of New York City, says is wrong, and—there you are. However, space in the Department is too valuable to waste on such matters. As to the amount of experience claimed by operators, I have often been amused by that particular proposition myself, especially where the ten-year-experience claim happens to come from an operator whom I personally know, and who cannot really show one-fourth of that. And now as to the invention: such a contrivance could undoubtedly be arranged, but I doubt its utility, or whether its inventors would realize anything from it. My views with regard to matters of this kind is, as I have said time and again, make the operating room thoroughly fire-proof, providing an ample vent flue and arrange the wall shutters so they will drop within two seconds of the starting of the fire, and add to this a modern projection machine having all the latest safety appliances. With all due respect to your views, brother Lorence, I hold this to be amply sufficient, provided, of course, it be properly carried out. As to inventors, the whole department, or any part thereof, according to merit, is at their disposal at all times.

Double Spot Remedy.

Brother Silver, New York City, contributes the following:

> I am obliged to go against you. You condemn the jack-knife carbon set and say it has been done away with, which is true; still, with the Standard lamp you must bring your top carbon forward at the heaviest angle you can get and keep the spot in shape with the lower carbon only. Believe me, it is "on the job" all the time. As you know, the rack frame on the Standard is different from any of the others, being fixed in one position. I was troubled with a double spot, using the Standard lamp, and that is the only method I found of overcoming it. Why should a two-wing shutter synchronize on 60 cycle current? Just had my operating room remodeled. It is now 12 x 10 x 8, with an 18 x 40 inch vent flue. We have but one machine. My wall shutters work perfectly, but here is the joke. The inspector is putting up a howl. He wants the damper in the flue to close when the shutters drop. What can I do about this? Is there any one higher up whom I can reach with the matter? He also wants a fan in the flue. Can you beat it? Tell the brother who wants to know if he can get a good picture at 40 feet, using gas, to get a high-pressure burner from Edison and he will get a dandy light with the Model B outfit. It takes a little more gas, but you get results. How often should asbestos lamp leads be trimmed when using 60 cycle, a. c., running five hours a day?

If it is necessary to use the jack-knife set with the Standard lamp, then I would humbly suggest to the Standard people that they get busy and change their lamp so that this will not be necessary. A two-wing shutter should not, and will not, synchronize on 60 cycle current, except at very high speed. The frequency with which your leads should be cut off will depend on the amperage. When using 45 amperes, d. c., or 60 amperes, a. c., I usually trimmed my leads every three or four days, but when I was operating, lamphouses were smaller and there were no binding post extensions on lamps. They might not need trimming quite so often now. The point is, trim them when the wire gets soft and looses its spring and "life." Just exercise your own good, common sense, brother, remembering that when a wire gets in bad condition it offers high resistance, and that represents a loss which will very quickly eat up the cost of the amount of wire it is necessary to amputate. And now as to that vent flue, I would suggest that you call up the chief inspector and explain the proposition to him. You are evidently up against an inspector who has as much conception of the aim and purpose of the vent flue as the proverbial hog has of the New Jerusalem. Such a man is not only incompetent to hold the position he does, but he is also a dangerous man, since he seeks to do away with the very thing that makes for safety, and, by placing a damper in the pipe force the smoke out into the auditorium. I shall myself bring this matter to the attention of the department, but I wish I knew that inspector's name. Unfortunately you have not told me whether he represented the building, electrical or fire department. No, friend Silver, the matter is not a joke at all. It is a very serious matter indeed. Kindly forward me your address at once, so that I can locate this matter (without involving you) and choke this "inspector" off.

Gas Making Outfits.

Mr. George Krauss, Proprietor Midway Theater, Magollan, New Mexico, writes thusly, concerning gas outfits:

> In May 17th issue, under heading "The Best Gas," Mr. A. M. Elliott, Chicago, recommends the oxygen-acetylene gas outfit, manufactured in Chicago, for road work. My own experience with gas-making outfits, after having tried every American make, as well as one outfit imported from England, is that the Model B Calcium Gas Machine, manufactured by the Enterprise Optical Company, Chicago, is the lightest and most simple in operation. It can be set up and charged, ready for use in from five to ten minutes. There is never more than one pound pressure on the machine. When in use, the water in the upper tank regulates the gas. So long as one uses the gas generated, the water in the upper tank lowers to the lower one, generating gas as needed. The moment you shut off the gas the machine stops generating. After the show, drain off the water and take off the stand-pipe. Should there be any oxone left over, it can be used again the next time the machine is charged. I have run three continuous shows, of three reels each, with one charge of 30 cakes of oxone, but the saturator has to be recharged after every performance. I have two saturators connected with the stand pipe instead of one, which gives sufficient hydrogen for the three shows without recharging. I project a 12 foot picture at 41 feet, using my Model B gas machine, and get plenty of light. The light is steady and has no objectionable flicker, such as is present when using 60 cycle, a. c., through an economizer. I have no travel ghost or dark spots. The pictures are always the same—clear as a bell. For road work or permanent location, the Model B could not be too highly recommended.

In commenting on friend Krauss' letter, let me say that much depends on the man who handles any particular piece of equipment. The Model B is a good machine, as is also the Edison gas-making outfit; but, for some reason or other, put two men to work on the same device, under exactly the same conditions, and one will make a success and the other a total failure, but give the man who made the failure another type of outfit and, strange as it seems, even though it be an inferior one, he will produce superior results.

This is the fly in the ointment with isolated electric light plants. One man will purchase a Brush outfit, for instance, and will produce results which no one could criticise. He will get a steady, beautiful light and produce it at an amazingly low cost. Another man will purchase the same identical outfit and with much sweat of his brow will produce results horrible to see. He will swear there is something wrong with the outfit. He will also swear that nobody ever got such results out of a blankety, blankety. blank contrivance as that. But the fault does not lie with the outfit. It lies with the man who does not understand how to handle it. Finally he will dispose of his electric light outfit and get another, of a different make, and possibly get splendid results with it, even though it is no better than the one he had in the first place. Or possibly he is the type of man who could not get results out of any outfit. It simply is not in him. He does not know how, and he cannot learn, and this is the thing that manufacturers of light-producing outfits, both electric and gas, are up against. It is a queer thing when you look into it. Perhaps the man who makes the success with his outfit hardly touches the thing at all; just polishes it up once in a while and set it spinning; whereas the man who makes the failure, works on his outfit three or four hours a day and, metaphorically speaking, sweats blood to produce results which, in his case, refuse absolutely to be produced. Perhaps you say, "that is the trouble! He monkeys with the thing too much." I reply, "not so!" for the next man who produces fine results is found monkeying with his engine and generator every spare moment he has. He almost sleeps with the thing, but he gets a light that would dazzle your eyes. There really is no accounting for these things. It is a queer proposition. I, myself, have seen splendid results produced with the Model B gas making outfits. I, myself, have also seen as rotten results as one would care to look at produced with Model B gas machines, and precisely the same thing is true with the Edison, and other gas making outfits. You can take it from me that, while some are superior to others, still nearly all the outfits advertised in The Moving Picture World are good outfits, and will produce excellent results in the hands of the right man. One thing I wish to say in this connection is that none of the makers of these outfits take anywhere near sufficient pains to properly instruct the purchaser in their use. The Enterprise Optical Company comes nearest to it, but many of the electrical outfits are placed on the market with the full knowledge that they are going into the hands of men more or less ignorant of the details of the operation of such a plant and, taking this into consideration, with shamefully inadequate instructions to the purchaser. The makers of these outfits would do well to put a few hundred dollars into the preparation of really adequate instructions, covering everything in connection with their plants. So far as I know, not a single one of them has, up to date, anything like adequate instructions to go with their outfit, yet they will cheerfully sell one of those outfits to a man who tells them frankly he does not know the first thing in the world about a gas engine, or an electric generator. Such a sale is dishonest. It constitutes a fraud, since they very well know that the purchaser will not be able to so operate the machine as to get the best results from it and probably will not be able to obtain results at all satisfactory.

Unwise.

From San Francisco, comes a long letter from an individual member of Local 162, dealing with certain conditions involving a "rump" organization, and making the claim that the Exhibitors League used this organization with which to fight Local Union 162, I. A. T. S. E., of San Francisco.

After careful consideration, I cannot see any good that would come from the publication of this matter. It seems to me it would only serve to stir up more trouble. But, in any event, I would only take such a matter up in the form of a communication under seal of Local Union 162. It seems to me that it would be unwise for this department to butt into what amounts to a local scrap, unless there were very good reasons indeed for so doing.

That Rewinder.

In a recent issue, Mr. Louis N. Sorensen gave an inadequate description of his take-up device. I asked for a further description and brother Sorensen sends in the following:

> First, the name of the rewinding device is the Frederick's Auto-Rewinder. It consists of two large reels, each capable of holding 3,200 feet of film. When in operation these two reels are vertical. The upper reel is the take-up and the lower is the one that plays out film to the machine. The film is delivered to the top of the projector, thence passing down through the mechanism and, in the usual way, to the take-up. When the top reel (take-up reel) contains all the film and the lower one is empty, the two change places automatically, but, while this operation takes place, the picture is showing on the curtain the same as at any other time. There is an automatic film equalizer on the take-up and, through its agency, the strain on the film can be regulated to suit the operator. The pull is exactly the same through the run. The magazines are fireproof, have double rollers to prevent the fire entering, but these are two clamps to grab the film and extinguish the fire and to prevent any possible danger of a panic from smoke. In case fire ever should get to the reels, there is a vent pipe from the magazines to the outside of the building. The magazines themselves could, in fact, be termed a miniature operating room, with the operator outside. The films are cemented together to form an endless belt. When you start your show for the day there are no stops for the rethreading, as there is no end to your film. I find the film is in better condition when used on this device than in the old way of running. With this plan you only need one projection machine for a continuous show. After about a year's use I find the device to be perfect. In due time you will get a better description and the apparatus will be advertised. This is merely to arouse your curiosity, and then I will stand for the "slap."

I am not going to do any slapping, friend Sorensen, until I know there is some to be done. If the device is as you describe it, and operates perfectly, I see no objection to its use—if, mind you, I said. And I can tell you better whether it amounts to anything or not, after I have examined the apparatus and seen it in actual operation. In one point, however, I must differ from you, viz.: I would not advise the installation of one projector, even of such a device as this. Suppose something broke down, where would you be with only one machine? Also, carbons must be trimmed and craters burned on new carbons before the light is shown on the screen. The trimming of carbons and burning of craters might be accomplished by short waits between subjects, but no theater should attempt to run with only one projector. There should always be two complete machine outfits. We shall all, I am sure, be very much interested in further description and practical demonstration of this device.

Synchronism.

Clinton, Iowa, orders a Handbook and informs us his city is a live wire upon which roost 26,000 souls. He says there are six picture houses in Clinton, with one more soon to be built. He then asks:

> What is the meaning of the word synchronism, when you say the shutter gets into synchronism with one side of the alterations? When I run more than 70 per minute there is a steady flicker on the screen. How can I find the focal length of my objective lenses? I see where Mr. Sorensen has a plan for running the show without changing reels. My manager here has the same idea, but he will not tell its details.

Yes, brother, I have heard of Clinton all right; in fact, I passed through there many times. The meaning of the word synchronism is "concurrence of two or more events simultaneously" As applied to the shutter, one must first understand the action of alternating current, and that at each reversal of the current direction, the voltage, and consequently the amperage, is reduced to zero; therefore there is a comparatively dark period occurring 120 times a second (60 cycle current). A three-wing shutter blade cuts the light three times to every revolution. At normal speed this means forty-eight times a second, but if the crank speed be raised to one and a quarter turns per second, then the shutter will revolve twenty times a second, and three times twenty is sixty; so that the shutter may, at that speed, cut the light just at the time the arc voltage and amperage is at its maximum, or the light at its brightest; hence, it will only leave the dark period available for projection, but, inasmuch as this exact speed could not be maintained, the practical effect will be a flashing of the light, as the shutter speed changes slightly and cuts the light at a different period in relation to the alternation. There, can you understand that? It is as plain as I can make it without a long, detailed explanation. The Handbook will teach you how to figure the focal length of your objective lenses.

Won't Even Lend It.

Mr. C. L. Burdett, Detroit, Michigan, writes:

> Enclosed find money-order for new Handbook for my assistant. I have one, and find it so helpful that I cannot afford even to lend it. The book and the Projection Department are my guides in my work. Am operating in a nice 400-seat house. Equipment is as follows: Power's Six A, with large magazines (we use double reels), Gundlach lenses, Fort Worth compensarc, projecting a 13 foot picture 82 feet on a gold fibre screen, which sets back three feet from the edge of the stage and is paneled with black cloth to fit the picture, even at the corners. Our operating room is fireproof, being built from the ground up with hollow tile, with a vent flue clear to the roof, and shutters arranged as in the Handbook. We use Licensed films, from three to ten days' old, and try hard to put on an A1 picture.

Have not received the photo, brother, but your descriptive matter sounds good. Naturally, we are pleased to know that you have found our work to be of such value.

Some Class!

From a bank cashier in a small town in Wyoming, comes a rather amusing letter. It runs, in part, thusly:

> About a year ago I assisted a couple of our young townsmen to start a picture show. We are up in the mountains, fifty miles from a railroad, yet my young friends are giving a very good show. They get their films from Denver, and, after a railroad trip, they are carried here by stage, shown, and then sent back on the stage next day. The shows are pulled off in a large log building, heated by a big, round stove. The music consists of a phonograph. They have built an operating room in the rear of the "theater." It consists, for the most part, of old gasoline cans, flattened out. They have a curtain of canvas, which they have coated with aluminum such as is used to paint cylinders and engine parts of autos. I do not know the name of the projection machine, and do not think they do either, but nevertheless, using calcium light, they manage to grind out very good pictures. They play once a week and pack the house at two bits (25c.—Ed.) a head, showing three reels, with one of our cowpunchers supplying a song now and then. Usually after the show the audience will heat it for the dance hall, have a dance, and wait for the next week's show. The boys are slowly reducing their debt to me, and when they get it paid, I am going to insist on their purchasing something better than a "Sears, Roebuck" projector. I subscribed for The Moving Picture World for them and find it so interesting that they don't often see it and just about the time I get through with it the boss of the ranch (president of the bank, I suppose he means.—Ed.) grabs it and attempts to keep up to date on the new films. I might add that some company could locate here and make some mighty good pictures of the real West. They would find all the local color they want among the cowboys. Most of the bunk houses on my ranch have the walls covered with pictures of nice looking young ladies clipped from the pages of The World, so you can see that by the time the paper gets around, there isn't much left but the ads, and they are badly worn. I do not know anything about the picture show business itself, but when my subscription expires, you just send me a bill and keep it going.

Lord! man, you gave me a good laugh! I bet you folks get more fun out of that picture show, with its "Sears, Roebuck projector" than we get out of the Hippodrome here in New York. I certainly would like to drop in on you some evening and watch the stunt pulled off. And now, I will tell you what I will do: When you get ready to get that new projector, I will undertake to pick up a first class second-hand machine, in good condition, cheap. A show of that kind could not afford to invest in a new high-class projector, but, by watching my chance, I can pick you up a good machine for a song, comparatively speaking. Now don't a whole bunch of you jump in and want me to do the same thing for you. I am only making this offer because these boys are away off up in the mountains, fifty miles from nowhere, trying to get a little amusement to make life more cheerful; therefore, under those conditions, I am willing to help them to that extent; also for the further reason that I lived among God's eternal hills for quite a spell myself, and there is a feeling or comradeship on that account.

Another Union Responds.

Brother B. E. Icanberry, Secretary M. P. and P. M. Operators' Local 169, I. A. T. S. E., writes:

> At the last meeting of the union there was a "school committee" of five appointed and a special time set each week at which to meet and study to advance ourselves in our profession. We voted to take advantage of your offer, page 484, May 3rd issue. The union slide is used in nearly all of our theaters and this union insists that it be followed by good projection. It does not countenance incompetency, and this feature of the work of the union is appreciated by our employers. Local 169 is in good condition. We hope if you go to the convention you will find time to pay us a visit.

I am very glad you purpose taking advantage of the question proposition, and I most heartily compliment you on the stand your union takes with regard to poor work and incompetency on the part of its members. It is the stand to take. So many unions have demanded that I stop and visit them that it would take a month of my time to comply. To stop, even one day, would cost me approximately $25, so you see it is clear out of the question.

Wrong.

Taylor, Texas, contributes the following error:

> Will send for a Handbook soon. I have a dispute with a union operator of Waco, Texas. He said you should use a two-wing shutter on a. c., and a three-wing on d. c. I told him it was exactly the opposite and he said you cannot use three-wings on a. c. Which is right?

Neither of you is entirely correct. This whole matter has been explained in the department several times, and I think it is also fully explained in the Handbook, though I cannot remember just where. The three-wing shutter is best with d. c., and may be used with a. c., but when using 60 cycle current there is likely to be a flashing of the light, due to the blades getting into synchronism with one side of the alternations. With 60 cycle current the two-wing shutter is better if you are going to exceed 65 or 70 revolutions of the crank per minute; otherwise there will be no trouble, provided your current cycle is not lower than 60, but "60 cycle current" frequently really is nearer 55 or 65 than 60.

An Error.

On page 809, May 24th issue, we gave the number of Cleveland's local as 170. Kansas City calls our attention to the fact that their number is 170. We apologize. Cleveland's number should have been given as 160.

From Troy.

Mr. L. C. La Grow, Troy, New York, orders a Handbook and commends the Albany Film Exchange, and the projection in Troy, as follows:

> Projection in Troy is above the average, as it also is in Albany. A scarcity of "Jimmy, the Usher" helps, as does also the fact that most of the Troy and Albany operators are industrious, earnest, capable men, anxious to advance the motion picture business. We have organized, but have not as yet received our charter. And now a word on the General Film Exchange of Albany, which supplies most of the service in this vicinity. I have used the output of exchanges in nearly all the important centers in the North and East, and am willing to say that in no place have I seen service equal to that supplied by the Albany General Film Exchange. Seldom do I receive a film which is not in the very best condition, and I am not using anywhere near new stuff either. Their inspection is splendid, and they try to please. Business in this locality is good. Most of the managers are all white and they all read The Moving Picture World.

This is a good report. Brother La Grow included another town in his commendation, but I could not make the name out. It looks like Waterwheel. I trust the new union will be handled along conservative and intelligent lines, and expend at least a part of its energy in improving the knowledge of its own members. If similar remarks could truthfully be made concerning all film exchanges, what a vast improvement it would be.

A Scrap.

Milwaukee Local Union 164 sends in literature in the form of hand bills and posters which they are distributing. It seems that some Milwaukee theaters refuse to employ Union operators, and that Local 164 is seeking to induce the managers of these theaters to do so. It is not the intention of this Department to mix into local scraps. We do not feel that it would do any good, and might, in some ways, do harm. However, as a general proposition, we will say, as we have said in the past, that, in the long run, the organization of operators will benefit the managers just as much as it will benefit the men. We again repeat what we have often said before, that high-class projection means increased business; that high-class projection can only be put on by high-class men, and that high-class men can only be procured by the payment of adequate salaries. It would seem to me that, purely as a business proposition any manager would concede this. The operator is the main-spring of the whole show, and neither a watch or a show with a defective main-spring is going to give satisfactory results. I again repeat that the manager who can pack his house at five cents a head with inferior projection, can pack it at ten cents a head with high-class projection. There isn't any use in disputing that, because it has been proven time and again. Right here in New York City I know of one house that is doing a land-office business at ten cents for the lower floor and fifteen and twenty-five cents for the gallery, using nothing but moving pictures and high-class projection, in conjunction with a good orchestra, and this house has at least three, and I believe four, five-cent competitors who have inferior projection and are doing an inferior business. There are still quite a number of managers who oppose organization, simply because it is organization. Some of them are quite consistent, too. They not only oppose the Operators' Union but also the Exhibitors' League. These men are not keeping up with the times.

Montreal News.

Mr. V. Miller, who sent the Department a most interesting letter from the Holy Land last year, is now in Montreal, Canada, and writes us as follows:

> You will doubtless remember the souvenir programme and letter I sent you last year from Jerusalem. Montreal is full of moving picture theaters, and they are all doing a capacity business. Every house is equipped with two or more projectors and projection is very good. The programmes are continuous and varied. Some managers run the Licensed exclusively, and others Licensed and Independent, the latter being the greatest in number. The various feature films are going great up here. There are only two open air places and I should think there would be a good chance in this direction for a wide-awake exhibitor. The weather is nice, but not too warm. I hear you are leaving for Europe to recuperate. You certainly deserve a good rest. I may drop in on you when I visit New York.

Nothing doing in the Europe line this year, brother Miller, though I shall travel toward the setting sun and attend the Seattle Convention. Glad to see you have returned from holiness to this land of the tango and other cabaret wickedness. I should think Montreal would be pretty chilly for airdomes. So far it has been too cold for them this season right here in New York. By all means drop in when you visit Gotham. The latch string is always hanging out.

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the
MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS
By F. H. Richardson

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years to come. Have you got your copy? 430 pages, $2.50.
Address all orders and remittances to
MOVING PICTURE WORLD,

Comments on the Films

Licensed

"BURIAL OF A RICH CHINAMAN AT SUMATRA" (Patheplay), June 20.—This portrays entertainingly a long and very elaborate funeral procession in China. Banners, umbrellas, musical instruments and odd trappings of all kinds are carried by the mourners.

"ANTIBES AND ITS ENVIRONS" (Patheplay), June 20.—Pictures taken in the neighborhood of this famous French city, where Napoleon disembarked on his return from Elba. A Mediterranean sunset is shown effectively at the close. On same reel with above.

"MONUMENTS AND CASCADES IN ROME" (Patheplay), June 20.—An interesting scenic half reel, showing the Porta Maggiore, Chateau and Bridge of Saint Ange, and the thousand fountains of the Villa d'Este. Also the famous fountain of the four rivers.

"FEAR" (Essanay), June 20.—The colonel, at the dinner table, tells a lively story of the manner in which the lieutenant rescued him from peril, all of which is nicely exhibited on the screen. The other diners then determine to test Mainhall's bravery in another way. A note is left on his table advising that he would be dead before midnight. This furnishes the basis of a psychological situation which is very well depicted indeed. You can see the gradual manner in which fear begins to clutch at this brave man and finally almost shatters his nerve, until he learns the facts about the note. The situation is a creepy one and will appeal to those who like plenty of chills up the back.

"THE EVIL THEREOF" (Edison), June 20.—This department store drama presents with unmistakable directness the position of the underpaid shop girl, and we think that it is all the stronger because it does not introduce the sex question. Bliss Milford and May Abbey play the shop girl and the proprietor's daughter. The latter hears her father deny the shop girl an increase of wages and in order to study sociological conditions takes a job in the store behind the same counter with her. There is a love story introduced, in which the proprietor's son falls in love with the shop girl and finally marries her. A good offering for houses interested in this sort of reform work.

"CUPID'S LARIAT" (Kalem), June 20.—A Western comedy half reel in which the irate father pursues a cowboy in a divided skirt, thinking it is his eloping daughter. There is considerable amusement in this situation, which has been used before in a different way.

"SMOKED TO A FINISH" (Kalem), June 20.—An exaggerated situation which gets to be rather funny. The husbands, forbidden by their wives to smoke, gather before the fireplace and send so much smoke up the chimney that the fire department comes out and drenches the house with water. On same reel with above.

"HIS REDEMPTION" (Lubin), June 20.—The daughter of the warden converts a young convict. When certain prisoners escape from the institution Cole helps recapture them. He and the girl also capture his former pal, who has gone to dig up the hidden money. The plot of this production is not extremely original and the chief interest perhaps is found in the clear photography and views of the prison interior.

"FANCY POULTRY" (Selig), June 20.—A half reel showing a number of finely bred chickens, including Silver Spangled Hamburgs, Golden Polish, Houdans, and other birds.

"THE FIGHTING LIEUTENANT" (Selig), June 20.—A stirring Mexican picture, on same reel with above. There is a dash and go to the situations, in which the American hero rescues the Spanish senorita from the rascally Don. Live wolves peer into the cabin windows. There are some impossibilities performed by the hero, particularly where he jumps through an iron-barred window, but scenically and from a story standpoint this is a good adventure offering.

"YOKOHAMA FIRE DEPARTMENT" (Vitagraph), June 20.—A very interesting fire review in the Japanese city. The natives appear in their gay-colored and striped uniforms, pulling hose carts and carrying ladders. The photography is rather light in places.

"THE DELAYED PROPOSAL" (Vitagraph), June 20.—An entertaining and amusing study in seasickness. Maurice Costello and Clara Kimball Young appear as the young couple in love on board the big boat. James Young appears as Count Brainless, who is for a time Jack's rival. On same reel with above.

"A BROTHER'S LOYALTY" (Essanay), June 20.—In this two-reel number Francis X. Bushman appears in the dual role of twin brothers. As is usual in this sort of a story the leading character has to overcome the likelihood of confusing the plot and a certain aspect of improbability about the whole situation. Mr. Bushman succeeds in accomplishing this, and pulls the story through very creditably, some interesting examples of double exposure being recorded. The plot is a lively one, and in spite of the fact that it would have been practically impossible for the brothers to interchange positions in real life, we are willing to see it done in the pictures and glad when the counterfeiters are rounded up and both brothers safe and happy. Not powerful, but entertaining.

"THE COMING OF GRETCHEN" (Vitagraph), June 17.—A comedy-drama of decided appeal is this number, which has its first scenes laid in Germany. Hans and Gretchen are portrayed by James Lackaye and Josie Sadler, and Hughey Mack and Kate Price appear in minor roles. The German setting is picturesque and the costuming accurate. Gretchen comes to America and Hans follows later. She falls in love with George, an American, but he proves to be a flirt and she goes back to faithful Hans. The comedy is very pleasing and the reel is a desirable one.

"CIVIC PARADE" (Edison), June 18.—A descriptive film, showing the recent departmental parade in New York City. It is short but very interesting, and probably nowhere will it arouse more comment than in New York City.

"HE WOULD FIX THINGS" (Edison), June 18.—Occupying two-thirds of the same reel is this comedy in which William Bechtel plays Mr. Buttinsky, the man who fixes everything in sight. There will be some good laughs, especially when Eddie O'Connor, as the plumber, with great deliberation prepares to get on the job.

"MRS. HILTON'S JEWELS" (Selig), June 18.—A good story, written by Maibelle Justice Heikes—that is, if we may qualify the statement. It is likely that if Kathlyn Williams, who plays the lead, really were shut up in a vault for fifteen hours she would not, when taken out, revive in a moment, or for that matter, revive at all. Again, if when the husband, who could not open a safe in his own house—it might have been a time lock, although that would indeed be singular—should go out into the street for help, it is hardly likely he would run into two hold-up men who were also burglars with their complete kit with them. Aside from the overacting of Henry W. Otto, who plays the husband, the picture was well made; undoubtedly it will interest any audience.

"THE ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENSE" (Kalem), June 18.—There is in this drama a good punch at the climax. A young lawyer goes to the city to begin the practice of law. His stenographer falls in love with him; his attitude toward her does not appear to be in any way antagonistic. The lawyer has left a sweetheart in the country, who secretly takes up the study of law, and in two years, unaided so far as we can see, receives her certificate. In the meantime, the stenographer has withheld from her employer the letters written by the girl in the country; she has gone further—sent to him a token indicating that the girl "back home" no longer loves the lawyer. The old sweetheart comes to the city, and wins a case from the lawyer. At the close of the trial, explanations follow and the two confront the stenographer. When the employer denounces the erring girl, the rapidly-created Portia pleads for her. The picture will make good entertainment.

"HILDA WAKES" (Essanay), June 18.—Eleanor Blanchard makes a decided hit in this comedy of errors, due to the original mistake of William Bailey, who plays the part of a husband in search of a cook, going into a matrimonial bureau instead of an employment agency to find one. It did not strengthen an otherwise good comedy to make the manager of the matrimonial bureau play a sissy instead of a human being. The humor is not in one scene, but in many—not the least of these will be where the mistaken Scandinavian girl informs the astonished wife that "He ban my man; you get out!" Rattling good stuff.

"THE DROP OF BLOOD" (Vitagraph), June 18.—George Cooper and Julia Swayne Gorden share the honors in this absorbingly interesting drama. The theme is the application of the silent third degree to a murderer against whom the police have secured no evidence. It is the Italian widow of a detective who undertakes the capture. By the systematic placing of drops of red ink in places where the suspected man will see them, she breaks him down. It is convincing throughout. Mrs. Breuil wrote the script, and Frederick Thomson produced it.

"THE SACRIFICE" (Patheplay), June 18.—A well-executed play, interesting throughout. It is based on the natural inability of a bride from New England to comprehend and endure the free-and-easy ways of an artist colony; her return to her parents was to be expected. The husband, though, was a brute, even if he were in indifferent health. The sanitarium scenes are convincing. The directer is to be congratulated for making short the scene of the operation for the transfusion of blood. It was unpleasant. The ending will hardly be popular. There was no necessity for killing the wife. She was in good health; there was no reason why she should not have survived, if the operation were in competent hands. There is a distinct thrill toward the end where the husband gets out of bed and goes to the next room and finds there the one who saved his life and discovers it is his wife whom he has not seen for two years. The situation is well handled. There will be many who will feel that the child is rather large, or else that the titles should have indicated a longer lapse of time.

"A FATHER'S LOVE" (Lubin), June 19.—A well acted and sympathetic play. Father is in distress. He cannot pay the rent and his baby is dying. The hard-hearted doctor violates the ethics of his profession and refuses assistance unless he is paid. Father does not know that there are free dispensaries, so he invades the private office of a bank, holds up the cashier at the pistol point and obtains enough money to relieve his anxiety of mind. All of which goes to show that the revolver is very useful in moments of stress and mental strain. Father then rescues the cashier's daughter when she is nearly run over by an automobile—a startlingly original situation—and is forgiven in the end for having committed a crime he believed justifiable.

"ALMOST A WILD MAN" (Biograph), June 19.—Three actors fail to make a hit on the stage and try to "raise the wind" by exhibiting one of their number as a wild man in a cage. They leave him when they have collected a little money, but he is released by a fearless young lady. She takes him to her home and plays the piano to him. The common people are dreadfully frightened when they learn that the wild man has escaped; but the dreadful suspense is relieved when they meet him with the young lady and he takes off his wig. There are institutions where this comedy might be found very amusing.

"THE RISE AND FALL OF McDOO" (Biograph), June 19.—A slim pugilist has a fat wife, a washerwoman, of whom he lives in dread; but he becomes very much of a hero by insulting the escorts of two young girls and appropriating the young ladies. The escorts hunt up another strong-armed man, but the pugilist knocks out the whole three and becomes the idol of a bunch of "squabs." When his fat wife finds him and yanks him out of the bunch, the laugh is on him. She takes him home and sets him to work over the tub. This picture is on the same reel as the foregoing.

"THE RUSTLER'S SPUR" (Essanay), June 19.—There is an interesting moral in this photoplay that will suit a great many tired people. A young rustler, who is too strong to work, cuts out some cattle and gives a bunch of cowboys an excuse to kick up a lot of dust. The only clue to his identity is a spur dropped from one of his boots, evidently one of a very unique pair of spurs, because when its mate is found in the house of the sheriff's sweetheart it is at once decided that her brother is the criminal. The guilty man escapes over the border and writes a letter to his sister, saying that he is going to lead a better life, though the chances are he will not. The sister holds up the sheriff, her own sweetheart, in the telegraph office, but no damage is done, for she embraces him in the end. The moral seems to be—"don't work."

"THE OUTLAW'S LOVE" (Patheplay), June 19.—A cattle thief who is in love with the half-owner of a herd, her brother owning the other half, advises her to cut out her share and join him. She attires herself as a man in order to drive away her own animals and is on this account mistaken by her brother for a rustler. He fatally wounds her and, in her dying moments she sends for the outlaw. He makes a desperate effort to reach her and does so just before she dies.

"THE GOLD BRICK" (Selig), June 19.—There is no incentive to crime in this picture, although it reveals the astonishing fact that gold bricks may be had when needed at jewelry stores in country towns. Three newspaper men attempt to sell a gold brick really worth $737 for $2.50, but, like the Englishman who tried to sell sovereigns for shillings on a wager, they are unable to dispose of real value because of human incredulity. One of their number plays a trick on his associates. He takes the brick of real gold from his case, goes into a small jewelry store and buys one of those brass bricks that it seems jewelers keep for sale, and substitutes it for the genuine article. His companions are nearly put in jail on this account, but they finally escape and are driven out of town. Those interested in gold bricks will find this play highly instructive.

"BUNNY'S DILEMMA" (Vitagraph), June 19.—There is more than one laugh in this little comedy. Two women come down upon Bunny and Cutey in bachelordom and attempt to carry them off, but Bunny escapes by disguising himself as a lady cook. He is "some cook." What he does in the kitchen is amusing enough, but his antics every moment he is shown on the screen are laughable.

"ON THE BRINK OF RUIN" (Kalem), June 21.—Fine drama of everyday life. It is impressive throughout. The acting is never overdone, which means, for one thing, intelligent direction. Paul Hurst and Marin Sais play the man and wife, and William West, the employer; all three are worthy of praise. So also is the young man who portrays the office boy.

"FROM IGNORANCE TO LIGHT" (Lubin), June 21.—A picture made almost exclusively of exteriors, the backgrounds of which (all Southern) are well chosen. The story portrays the disappointment and humiliation of a girl unable to read when in trying to win the regard of a man whose association with her is to him merely a vacation pastime he learns of her lack of knowledge. She appeals to a school teacher, who is honestly in love with her, and through his aid she emerges from ignorance to light. The story is not especially strong, but it goes over. Edwin Carewe, as the teacher, is good.

"'ARRIET'S BABY" (Vitagraph), June 21.—An unusually strong drama of humble life, with the veterans Shea, Gaillord and Delaney in the leading roles, with, also, Miss Norma Talmadge as 'Arriet. This writer has never seen Miss Talmadge in such serious work, but she acquitted herself with distinction. Of the three men, it need only be said they give of their best. There are moments of real pathos, one of these marking the return of the sailor and his meeting with 'Arriet. Another is the death of 'Arriet, in which, by the way, the sometimes painful features are noticeable for their absence. There is a baby, too, which, as the mother is dying, almost knowingly strokes the face of the sailorman who is to be its future protector.

"THE JURY'S VERDICT" (Pathe), June 21.—The strong scene in this drama is a murder trial, in which a lawyer finds himself called upon to defend a wife wrongly charged with the slaughter of the former's son. The courtroom is well staged. The picture will interest throughout. The acting is good; the father-lawyer was at times inclined to be melodramatic, especially in the scene where he enters the home of the son and finds there also a wife and baby.

"LOVE'S OLD SWEET SONG" (Edison), June 21.—A pretty story, rather weird, notable for picturesque settings and smooth action. Augustus Phillips and Mabel Trunnelle play the lovers, and Richard Sutton the father of the former. The photography is good; in the meeting of the lovers in the graveyard, unusually so.

"ALKALI IKE AND THE HYPNOTIST" (Essanay), June 21.—The story is of a hypnotist and his usual stunt in small towns. Bill Todd is as convincing as a comedian as he is as chief pirate. The comedy is of the ruffstuff order and unquestionably will amuse Alkali Ike audiences.

"THE MOTHERING HEART" (Biograph), June 21.—A big picture. An evidence of this is the fact that it is in two parts. The feature is the work of Lillian Gish. Even those who favor more mature players must concede that this young girl acts far beyond her years. Walter Miller as the husband finely depicts the young man whose head is turned by his transition from the struggling stage to prosperity. The third corner of the triangle is a new player in the Biograph forces; as the restaurant flirt she is a decided success. The restaurant scene, by the way, which alone is said to have cost $1,800, is a superb setting. The story is the thing, however. It holds, from the beginning to the finish. The punch comes suddenly, but it strikes hard.

"MARY STUART" (Edison), June 21.—This special three-reel release has been reviewed at length in The World of May 31. It is a masterpiece.

"THE KENTUCKY DERBY AT CHURCHILL DOWNS" (Selig), June 23.—A full reel—it might well have been a half—showing the preliminaries and many scenes of the race. There is too much of it to closely hold the interest, even though it be well photographed.

"A COMPROMISING COMPLICATION" (Biograph), June 23.—Short comedy, forced; it is not particularly amusing.

"MISTER JEFFERSON GREEN" (Biograph), June 23.—On the same reel is this coon comedy with Charles Murray in the lead. It is a burlesque of an operation for appendicitis—that is, an attempted one. The patient escaped. It will make fun.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 26," June 23.—The finest picture in this number is the review of the West Point cadets by War Secretary Garrison. There are other pictures, some of them interesting, but this one is unusual.

"THE LION'S BRIDE" (Vitagraph), June 23.—An interesting picture, well staged. It is notable for the "sand" displayed by Julia Swayne Gordon in her handling of a fine old lion; these scenes will thrill. Tefft Johnson and Harry Morey are the other principals in the cast.

"THE DETECTIVE'S TRAP" (Kalem), June 23.—An interesting and logical detective story of the theft of jewels and of their recovery. The young man who purchased at auction the bag of loot the thieves had been prevented from claiming took it to his home and emptied out the bag into a right hand drawer, putting the bag itself in a left hand drawer. When the police precede the innocent buyer on his return, the jewels are all in the bag in the left hand drawer—a minor oversight, due probably to taking scenes on different days.

"RUSTIC HEARTS" (Lubin), June 23.—A melodrama containing a coincidence that is as improbable as it is unconvincing. A hospital nurse is imposed upon by a doctor from the country and led into a mock marriage. When the woman discovers the deception she goes to the country. Not only does she land in the doctor's town, but right in his family. Of course, when the doctor comes home the two meet. The girl in the meantime has fallen in love with another man; the girl thinks she cannot marry him. Anyway, the doctor tears himself from the house, mounts a horse, and rides away. He falls and is killed. All is lovely then between the lovers.

"THE PYRAMIDS AND THE SPHINX, EGYPT" (Edison), June 23.—Fine scenic containing also pictures of native life.

"A TASTE OF HIS OWN MEDICINE" (Edison), June 23.—On the same reel is this fine comedy, produced by Charles M. Seay, showing what happened to a "suspicious fool" of a husband who tried to trap an innocent wife and gets caught himself. Herbert Prior and Mabel Trunnelle do good work in the leads.

"THE WEAKER MIND" (Lubin), June 18.—A good story of everyday life, written and also produced by Romaine Fielding. There is a temperance sermon running through these two reels, although at no time is it of the sort that gets on the nerves of the occasional drinker. There are many fine touches of the home; for instance, the engineer (Mr. Fielding), when asked by his little child to stand on his head, promptly tries to do so. The story includes three families—the engineer and his two motherless children; the fireman and his sister, the former of whom is sometimes led to drink and to get very drunk through the influence of a girl who also is the daughter of a sot. How the fireman is straightened out and later the drinking girl is led into the straight path makes a story of strength without artificiality. The photography is excellent.

"WHERE SHORE AND VALLEY MEET" (Edison), June 24.—The excellent scenic effects in this are its strongest points, the story lacking any very definite originality of plot. It is the tale of a young husband lost in a boat at sea. On his return a year or so later, he finds his wife about to marry her former lover, but he explains everything that has happened to him and all ends happily. In the opening scenes the hero would have appeared to better advantage if he had not walked on the inside of the street with the girl and puffed so vigorously at his cigar while doing so. These are small matters, but in a comedy of this type they stand out very strongly in the eyes of critical observers. The piece lacks a certain degree of action, but was sincerely presented and by no means uninteresting.

"NO SWEETS" (Vitagraph), June 24.—Without being uproarious, this comedy number brings out a number of giggles from the audience and is generally pleasing. Hugh Mack, Flora Finch, Charles Eldridge, Kate Price, and others appear. The story concerns a fat man and fat woman who decide to take reducing exercises without telling their better halves. This leads to complications at the gymnasium, where the suspicious wife and husband appear and create a scene. But the feud does not last long and winds up with a dinner party. Quite amusing.

"AT THE TELEPHONE" (Lubin), June 24.—A breezy, little comedy over the wires, in which a husband and wife become involved in complications in their attempted conversation. An amusing half reel.

"THE ZULU KING" (Lubin), June 24.—This, on same reel with above, is also an entertaining little plot. Smith, finding himself on an island among the Zulus, sets himself as king. Everything works nicely until Mrs. Smith is shipwrecked in that vicinity and comes to take her rightful place as queen. Quite nicely worked out and well pictured.

"THE CARRIER PIGEON" (Patheplay), June 24.—An interesting and informing study of carrier pigeons, showing them in the act of hatching their young, how they are marked with gold rings on the legs, how they are taught to fly away and return by signals. Ten thousand birds are released from their cages in one scene, and a close view is obtained of a bird which covered 578 miles in nine hours. Well worth while.

"HOW A BLOSSOM OPENS" (Patheplay), June 24.—This, on same reel with above, is another exhibition of flowers in the act of blossoming. Carnations and gladiolas are seen in the act of opening and closing. Very wonderful and attractive.

"ACROSS THE RIO GRANDE" (Essanay), June 24.—Explanatory subtitles are needed to make this number clearer in the eyes of the observer. The relationship of the characters is very vaguely suggested. Were the original sweethearts ever married, and if so, and the boy finds his father in the west twenty years later, why was the mother referred to as a widow? There are a few good situations in this and one very striking one at the last, where the son rides to safety across the Rio Grande, but they do not save the film from disappointing obscurity of plot.

"THE MARSHAL'S CAPTURE" (Selig), June 24.—A Western offering, and while not overly fresh in plot, one that tells a consistent story. The marshal is compelled to arrest his wife's brother. The brother is released by a pal, but the marshal thinks his wife has done it. In the desert scenes, the escaping brother saves the marshal from death and shows himself worthy of freedom. The jail scene was not very convincing, as the cell seemed to face upon the street, where anyone might free a criminal.

Independent

"BROTHER AND SISTER" (Victor), June 27.—There is suspense in this picture when an employer is lured from his home where he has left his money by a message that his factory is in danger. A strike is on. One of the men has seen the employer take the money from the factory. The men break into the house, break down doors and rush up stairs and force their way into the room where the wife and child and also the messenger who has notified the woman are awaiting the attack. The picture is not new, but it is well done, especially the staircase stuff.

"THE MERRY WIDOW" (Solax), June 25.—A young widow with two suitors tries to discover which is the stronger of the two. She loads a suitcase with a bunch of junk, including pistols. At the railroad station the suitcase bursts, the police find the pistols and arrest the three. In the meantime a porter has substituted another suitcase. The policeman carrying the substituted article makes so little fuss about it the widow decides to take him—until the sergeant on the desk gets her away from the cop.

"DYNAMITED DOG" (Solax), June 25.—On the same reel as the foregoing is this short picture of a dog with dynamite tied to his tail and who refused to be destroyed. He chased around a whole lot, but did little damage.

"THE MESSAGE TO HEAVEN" (Solax), June 27.—An unsatisfactory picture. It does not hold the interest; the scenes intended to be pathetic fail in their object. The drama seems forced, not natural.

"AN UNEXPECTED MEETING" (Solax), July 2.—A man anxious to get away from the society of his wife concocts a scheme with a doctor whereby the two may escape. The first man has a fit, the doctor orders him to the mountains (in his charge); the two start for the seashore, indulge in flirtation; the wives decide to look at the sea, discover the truant husbands. That's the story.

"THE FLEA CIRCUS" (Solax), July 9.—An interesting picture showing fleas under the microscope. We see the little animal eating; also we see it, with a wire measuring in diameter one two-thousandth of an inch harnessed to it, drawing toy vehicles of two thousand times its own weight. The flea operates a treadmill, walks a tightrope, runs a merry-go-round and "hugs the ball." An unusual film. The photography is fair.

"OUR FUTURE HEROES" (Dragon), June 30.—A single reel of life at West Point. There is such a variety to the scenes that at no time do they tire; in fact, they are interesting throughout. Some of the views are of the boys at mess, at church; infantry, light battery, park and mountain howitzer drill; inspection, riding, amusements, evening parade, saluting colors, taps, etc.

"MOTHER'S BIRTHDAY" (Imp), July 7.—An effective film story, based on one of Longfellow's poems. The leading man, impersonated by W. E. Shay, never forgets to send his mother flowers on her birthday. He is falsely imprisoned, but on her natal day escapes and carries flowers to her, which leads in her recovery from a serious illness. There are certain features of the production that lack conviction, but on the whole, it is far above the average film and leads up to a very effective close. A good offering.

"THE OLD MELODY" (Imp), June 30.—A two-reel drama, produced by Harold Shaw. The opening scenes are very attractive, being laid at an old farm house where Silas and the girl play together on the organ and violin. After their marriage and removal to the city, he begins to neglect her for a fascinating widow. The scenes at the roadhouse were well portrayed, but at the same time resulted in such a display of character weakness on the part of the husband as to almost destroy the observer's sympathy with him, so that the final reunion at the old country home was not as appealing as it might have been. It is difficult to let down the moral standing of a hero and then regain it at the last moment. The acting and photography are good.

"LEO'S GREAT CURE" (Imp), June 28.—There is some excellent humor of a knock-about sort in this reel, and it is free from vulgarity of any kind. Leo agrees to cure the son of nervousness and goes about injecting his medicine into everyone with whom he comes in contact. The film was made in France and contains some good "rough-house" scenes of a laughable sort.

"FUN IN FILM. BY HY MAYER" (Imp), June 28.—This is more clever artistry by the well-known cartoonist, on same reel with above.

"AN HOUR OF TERROR" (Crystal), July 1.—A drama in which Chester Barnett appears as a doctor with a rascally step-brother. Pearl White is the doctor's wife, and the chief scene is where she discovers the step-brother robbing the safe. The pictures are well taken, but the scenes lack tension and in places create laughter.

"THE BADGE OF POLICEMAN O'ROON" (Eclair), June 25.—An O. Henry story in two reels. The story furnishes plenty of plot, showing us the young English hero in the Cuban War. The photography here is not of the best and the jungle scenes not very realistic, being plainly made up for the occasion. The second reel is best, in which the hero becomes a mounted policeman. His friend assumes his job for a day and rescues the girl and her father in a runaway. The girl turns out to be Walter's sister, instead of his sweetheart, as the observer had supposed, which is the characteristic O. Henry twist at the end. Jack, of course, marries the girl. An entertaining number.

"HER FINAL CHOICE" (Reliance), June 30.—A story with a simple and somewhat familiar plot, in which the girl chooses one of two rivals for her hand. There is an explosion in the coal mine and Jim goes to rescue his successful rival. But Tom is not in the mine and when it comes his turn for heroism refuses to go after Jim. The girl then reverses her decision and marries Jim. The explosion, which is the chief feature of this film, was very realistic.

"THE TANGLED WEB" (Reliance), June 28.—A three-reel number, featuring Irving Cummings as the hero, and Rosemary Theby and Virginia Westbrook as the principal women of the cast. Miss Theby appears in her familiar role of the heartless adventuress and succeeds in having the hero falsely imprisoned for a number of years. In the end, he is restored to his rightful position in the world, but the death of the adventuress was not led up to very well, and the hurried scenes in the production seemed to lack a very strong interest for some reason. A dog show is pictured toward the last of the story.

"ONE ROUND O'BRIEN COMES BACK" (Majestic), June 29.—Fred Mace in his character of One Round O'Brien, here hands out a number of laughs, though the number does not quite come up to its famous predecessor. There is a typical prize-fight audience assembled and the humor works up nicely in a clean, legitimate way. Good comedy of its type.

"DORA" (Majestic), June 28.—An effective story is this, based, as we remember it, on a poem by Tennyson. William Garwood, Marguerite Loveridge and Francelia Billington share the honors. The piece is daintily pictured and the hayfield and other pastoral scenes are very attractive. In the end the grandfather takes both Dora and Mary and the grandfather to live with him, after William's death. A pretty and heart-touching production.

"A TALE OF DEATH VALLEY" (American), July 5.—A number of incidents in this film weaken its story considerably, the desert setting being entirely lacking. The death of the villain was hardly convincing, and though the photography is adequate, the production as a whole, does not compare with former successes by this company.

"THE PRIDE OF LONESOME" (American), July 3.—This picture gets a good start, but later along relies too much upon mere statements in the sub-titles and not enough on the action of the characters. The girl leaves her foster parents, traveling in a covered wagon, and becomes the pride of the town. One man becomes her enemy for a reason not well indicated, and the hero frustrates an effort to kidnap her.

"QUICKSANDS" (American), June 30.—Warren Kerrigan plays the leading part in this two-reel number. He leaves his sweetheart because of financial troubles and ships on a sailing vessel. There is a mutiny on board and he is cast ashore on an island. He marries the daughter of a missionary who, for some reason, was colored like a native girl. Later, he pines for civilization and goes back. He catches Jack in a theft, but because Jack loves his former sweetheart, he accepts the blame and goes back to his island wife, allowing the girl to marry a man he knows to be a scoundrel. The photography and acting in this are superior to the plot, though it has points of interest.

"WHO IS IN THE BOX" (Crystal), June 29.—Pearl again enacts the part of a woman detective and is dragged through the streets in a trunk supposed to contain the remains of the man she saved from death. Passable burlesque.

"MRS. SHARP AND MISS FLATT" (Crystal), June 29.—A very thin comedy effort appearing on same reel with above. The idea was hardly strong enough to make a story.

"THE SQUAW MAN'S REWARD" (Frontier), June 26.—This film goes over the old story of the young, white man who marries an Indian girl and then later wants to go back to his former sweetheart. He leaves the squaw, but the white girl sends him back to her and she presents him with a "papoose" as his reward. As drama, this is not successful, and the photography is not up to the standard in places.

"JUANITA" (Nestor), August 13.—This offering is a fair one, with Mona Darkfeather in the leading role. As a child, she is stolen from her Mexican father by Indians and rescued many years later, when she again meets her father. The stabbing of her unwelcome Indian husband was a little too realistic and the various incidents of the story were not of the most convincing sort.

"THE WRONG ROAD" (Rex), July 17.—Margarita Fischer plays the role here of a girl on the seacoast who becomes enamoured of a young artist and goes to the city. She leads the gay life and falls very low in the social scale. In the end, she returns home to find her first lover married to her sister. She jumps into the sea and drowns. The photography and acting in this production are quite good, but the story fails to grip the observer, owing, no doubt, to its rather sordid character.

"POOR JAKE'S DEMISE" (Imp), August 16.—A company of burlesque players appear in this. Jake absorbs much beer and is supposed to die, but comes to life later. This is simply horse play without any very special appeal, though it is harmless and free from vulgarity.

"EVERY INCH A HERO" (Gem), June 23.—Billy Quirk elopes with a girl, and in order to support her has to join a company of barnstorming actors. His experiences are painful and he gets back home still out of funds. The chief fun in this film is in the scenes where the show troupe appears, which are quite amusing.

"ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 67" (Universal), June 18.—This number contains glimpses of practice work for the recent International polo games, a view of Percy Lambert breaking the world's circular track record, Alfred Vanderbilt opening the present coaching season, fashion hints, etc.

"HIS CROOKED CAREER" (Keystone), June 26.—Another piece of fairly amusing nonsense, running something over a half reel, in which Mack Sennet and Ford Sterling disport themselves in burlesque character work. There are several funny happenings in this.

"LARGEST BOAT EVER LAUNCHED SIDEWAYS" (Keystone), June 26.—In spite of its long title, this is only a snapper on the end of the above picture. The Keystone Company make merry as a big vessel is launched on the California Coast.

"THE CRIMSON STAIN" (Kay-Bee), June 27.—A three-reel offering, which works up to some rather new situations in the third reel. The opening of the story is somewhat conventional, the young wife being separated from her husband and leaving her child on her grandfather's porch. Years later, the mother plays the part of her own child and yet in spite of this, the grandfather does not suspect her identity as his granddaughter, a weak feature of the production. The scenes in the third reel are dramatic and help the picture wonderfully. The cottonfield scenes were attractive and the photography good. The overseer and his mulatto companion are the troublemakers in this piece.

"SIDE-TRACKED BY SISTER" (Thanhouser), June 22.—This story, pictured at Catalina Island, gives some attractive views of its picturesque coast. The young sister, who made a hole in the boat used by the older sister and her lover, came near causing a tragedy. The fact that she saved the man from drowning, helps somewhat to regain the observer's sympathy for her. We feel that the lover took the right course in sending her a child's present and leaving her. A film story more attractive in form and setting than as a character conception.

"THE POLITICIAN" (Majestic), June 24.—A story of love and politics, in which the young boss turns reformer and makes himself unpopular with the politicians. He is finally dethroned, but the girl remains true to him. We did not consider the political atmosphere in this very strong; it seemed like a rather weak arrangement of situations that have been shown before. The photography is good.

"A MODERN LOCHINVAR" (Thanhouser), June 29.—The idea in this is hardly strong enough to make a very attractive release, or it was not handled in a way to give it much appeal. While the young lawyer is pleading for the cause of suffrage, his rival steals away and marries the girl. Real views of the recent suffrage parade in New York City are shown to give this a realistic effect, but the parade feature is of no great help to the plot in this particular case.

"THE LOST COMBINATION" (Thanhouser), June 27.—This plot has been used before in almost identically the same way. The child becomes locked in the safe while playing hide and seek and her father, convicted for safe-blowing, is brought from prison to get her out. James Cruze appears to advantage in the part of the father, but the scenes were not arranged to get quite the right degree of suspense. The photography is good.

"FORGIVE US OUR TRESPASSES" (Thanhouser), June 24.—There is one very good situation in this, where the tramp telegrapher tells the dispatcher he will not sidetrack the train on which the latter's wife and child are riding. Later, his better nature asserts itself, but not before the dispatcher had learned what it means to suffer. This is not a well rounded story and is poorly developed in places, but it has several points of interest.

"ALL RIVERS MEET AT SEA" (Broncho), July 2.—A story of love and jealousy. The moving picture man appears in a stage wedding and then later surprises the company by really marrying the leading lady. The envious lover knocks him off the yacht on their wedding trip. He is rescued by fishermen, but his mind is a blank. From this point the plot becomes very obvious and loses strength accordingly. The villain falls in the sea at the close of the picture when husband and wife are reunited.

"MORGAN'S TREASURE" (Powers), July 11.—A two-reel adventure film, containing many thrilling and delightful impossibilities. A storm at sea, a wrecked vessel and an unknown island figure in the forepart of the picture. The hero lives among the natives and marries a native girl, who later drowns herself when he is rescued and goes back to civilization, where his former sweetheart awaits him. A successful adventure story, not entirely convincing, but generally entertaining.

"JOHN, THE WAGONER" (Nestor), July 9.—A rather strong story in which the deputy-sheriff makes love to the wagoner's wife. The latter learns of this. He covers both the deputy-sheriff and a house breaker with a gun and takes them to the sheriff's office. The robber is placed under arrest and the deputy-sheriff loses his star. The simple strength of the man playing the part of the wagoner does much to make the film a good one.

Scene from a Recent Monopol Importation, entitled "In the Toils of the Devil."

A LESSON FROM "LES MISERABLES."

Years ago in Spain an assemblage of nobles and wise men were belittling the efforts of Columbus in discovering America. Calling for an egg, Columbus asked which one of them could stand it on end. They declared such a feat impossible; whereupon Columbus tapped it flat at one end and the egg stood up.

When "Les Miserables" was first advertised as a twelve-reel production, the wiseacres who had never seen it began to pass opinions that it would be a failure because of its great length. There was nothing about the film to knock except its length. Mr. Linn, growing weary of this babble, called for a pair of scissors and a bottle of film cement. He cut out some scenes and titles that could be spared, and shortened some other scenes and titles, thus reducing the picture to nine reels.

Columbus with his egg and Mr. Linn with his scissors had about the same trick to perform.

SMILEY HAS A BIRTHDAY.

Col. Joe Smiley, centurion director of the Lubin military stock company, celebrated his st-th birthday on June 18. A goodly crowd assembled to offer congratulations and presents, among which was a handsome walnut desk and bookcase and a diamond scarf pin. Ira M. Lowry, general manager of the Lubin plant, made the birthday speech, which was ably responded to by the giant director. A very enjoyable evening was spent and no one watched the clock.

MIMI NIGHT AS THE COMEDY.

A clever idea was originated last week by the management of the Comedy Theater, at Broadway and 14th Street, which succeeded in rousing the enthusiasm of the audience at that theater last Tuesday night. "The Comedian's Mask," in which King Baggot and Little Mimi Yvonne, the popular six-year-old actress, shared stellar honors, had been booked for the evening, and Mimi was asked to appear before the audience and make an address. Mimi accepted the challenge and appeared Tuesday night as big as life, and achieved new glory as an infant orator. Mimi proceeded to let the audience in on the inner secrets of her art, and would have continued ad. infin had she not been interrupted by the pleased audience that insisted on applauding.

Foreign Trade Notes

BRITISH NOTES.

By Our Own Correspondent.

The British and Colonial Company were engaged recently in the production of a stupendous battle scene for their picture "The Battle of Waterloo." A friend of mine, a journalist, who was privileged to witness the taking of the scene, thinks it the most ambitious military effort staged in this country. The battlefield was the tiny village of Irthlingborough in Nottinghamshire. 4000 players with half of them as mounted cavalry were engaged in the conflict which was so fierce at times, that many received minor injuries, particularly in the blowing up of Napoleon's carriage, which cost $1000. So close was the cameraman that the splintered wood flew on his instrument. The finished film, so far as can be ascertained, will be released sometime next fall.

* * *

Exhibitors are being notified this week of one or two amendments to the State Cinematograph Act of 1909. No illuminants other than electricity, limelight or acetylene, are to be used, and in the case of the latter it must be supplied from vessels specified by the Act, excepting when the pressure does not exceed 150 lbs to the square inch. These containers must also be marked with the name of the manufacturer and date of filling.

* * *

Miss Leah Baird arrived in London two days ago to take part in the British productions of the Imp Company.

* * *

Another new film producing firm of modest pretensions has come to notice this week from Manchester. Their first subject was taken last week at Kuntsford and is entitled "The Magic Wand."

* * *

Sir J. Forbes-Robertson's version of "Hamlet" will shortly be released by the Gaumont Co., who hold sole rights for the filming of the newest actor-knight. As another instance of sub-contracting, the Gaumont Co., have let out the work of production to the Hepworth Co.

* * *

The announcement that a favorite theater was to be fitted up for the King at Buckingham Palace, has created no end of competitive jealousy among various London firms and Kinema fitters. One stupid manager suggested to a court official that "their's was the only firm that could do it," hoping that he would obtain the order.

* * *

Lieut. Rose, of the Clarendon Co., who has been seriously ill for the past three months is now back at work figuring in a new subject "Lieut. Rose in the Polar Regions."

* * *

Geo. Moyart (better known as Coney), "Teddy" Pain, and Billy Merson, all comedians of repute are to appear shortly in productions by the Kinematograph Trading Co., and Selsior Ltd. The number of artists who are abandoning the music hall stage for pictures is really astonishing.

* * *

I have a serious grievance to level against a well known and very popular member of one of the East American stock companies. In a recent release he can be perceptibly seen using objectionable language. Lip reading is not easy for some people but mutes can follow photoplayers remarks quite plainly.

* * *

Just another instance of the striking laxity of British manufacturers is furnished at the Imperial Exhibition at Liverpool. In the Kinematograph section there are several exhibits by American and Continental film manufacturers but not a single British firm is represented.

* * *

Mr. Seymour Hicks and Miss Ellaline Terriss have entered into an agreement with the Zenith Film Co., to appear solely in their releases for five years. The first subject featuring the famous actor and actress will be "Richard III."

The following American films are being shown most prominently this week in London and provincial centers: "Battle of Mush," drama by Essanay. "California Oil Crooks," drama by Kalem. "Duke's Dilemma," comedy by Edison. "Diverging Paths," drama by Selig. "False Friend," drama by Lubin. "Finger Print," 2-reel drama by Selig. "The Ferrets," drama by Selig. "His Heroine," drama by Thanhouser. "Jack's Burglar," comedy by Melies. "Joke Wasn't on Ben Bolt," drama by Vitagraph. "Misunderstood Boy," drama by A. B. "Night of Terror," comedy by Reliance. "Pickwick Papers," 2-reel comedy by Vitagraph. "The Portrait," drama by Edison. "Stronger man," 2-reel drama by American. "Toys of Destiny," 2-reel drama by Powers. "Ways of Fate," drama by American.

* * *

Mr. George Smith of the British Vitagraph agency announces, this week, that he will be transferring his business shortly to 31 Charing Cross Road, London. By the way, Miss B. L. Smith, his daughter was married last week. She is a familiar figure in several Vitagraph productions.

* * *

The Parliamentary bill promoted by the London County Council, seeking powers to control celluloid stores and thereby exercise a certain jurisdiction over film warehouses, has been thrown out at the second reading.

* * *

Mr. H. A. Spoor, Essanay's representitive is making special efforts this week with their new subject "Into the North." It is being shown at trade matinees at ten provincial centers.

* * *

The manager of the Stedman School for Cinema Actors, London, admits that middle-aged people make the most successful photoplayers but of all those pupils they are training, says Mr. Moore, only 25 per cent. can be expected to reach prominence.

* * *

So far the workings in this country of the Edison players have been kept inexplicably secret. They have, however, during the past six or seven months, produced three subjects in this country and these, I am informed, when released shortly, will constitute something of a surprise for other home producing concerns.

* * *

In accordance with the time-honored custom the Derby was again filmed in detail at Epsom. For the dealer in topicals it is undoubtedly the foremost of the hardy annuals and invariably results in 600 feet being rushed out the same evening. These Derby Day pictures, although of seemingly limited interest, find their way all over the globe and copies of this year's, a manufacturer tells me, are already well on their way to Mexico City, Seattle, Los Angeles, and the Fiji Islands. The incident where a suffragette overthrows the King's horse and jockey is given a vivid representation.

* * *

Two Sheffield engineers have recently invented a combined microscope and Kinema-camera for attaching to steel testing machinery. Its object is to reproduce the chemical changes which take place during testing and it is estimated to be of great value to engineers.

* * *

Wherever there is a patch of vacant ground in London the obvious conclusion drawn is that there will shortly be built over it a moving picture theater. It seems in fact to be almost superfluous to erect the customary sign, for I have noticed a site in a West End street which runs "Everybody's Building Them. Another One."

* * *

Mr. J. D. Goldgraber, of the Big A Features, Ltd., of London, will reach New Work shortly before this letter to negotiate for sites for English manufacturers at the forthcoming exposition at the Grand Central Palace in July.

THE WOODYS REPLY TO MORPHY.

Recently an item appeared in this publication to the effect that Messrs. Oreny and John S. Woody, known as the Woodys, had disappeared from Vancouver, B. C., with certain features belonging to W. E. Morphy of the Pacific Film Exchange of that city. The item was sent in by Mr. Morphy. It came to the notice of the Woodys who reply to it as follows:

"We notice on page 1232 of M. P. World, dated June twenty-first, an item entitled 'Looking for the Woodys,' which is misleading and absolutely false.

"Several months ago we rented a number of features from one W. E. Morphy, of Vancouver, B. C., who constitutes the Pacific Film Exchange of Vancouver, and is not a branch of the old and reputable Pacific Film Exchange, Inc., of Seattle. We contracted with Morphy and rented the features outright for Prince Rupert, B. C., and Alaska to fill in with our own features.

"The agreement made with Morphy on Pilgrims Progress was that after all expenses had been deducted, incurred in the booking and exhibition, the same applies to Siegfried, we were to divide the profits 50-50. Morphy also vested in us the authority to sell either features at any time provided we received a fair and reasonable offer.

"Our agreement with Morphy was verbal and there was no time stipulation as to how long we were to keep the films. The productions where booked were not a financial success, and expenses far exceeded box office receipts. Morphy received reports from time to time, but failed to answer a number of letters written to him.

"Our address is The Ethelton, 1317 3rd Ave., Seattle, Wash., and mail sent to that address will always reach us.

"Your obedient servants, The Woody's
"Signed Oreny Woody.
"Signed John S. Woody."

VITAGRAPH NOTES.

Far up in the Adirondack Mountains, at Saranac Lake, Mr. Ralph Ince, the celebrated Vitagraph director and impersonator of Lincoln, is now located among the pine woods accompanied by several members of the Vitagraph stock company, producing a drama with rustic and sylvan surroundings. Miss Anita Stewart will play a prominent part in this drama. Her portrayal in "The Wood Violet" has won for her a fitness for these naturally artistic scenes.

* * *

Miss Mary Charleson, formerly of the Western Vitagraph company and who has appeared in several Powers pictures, is now a member of the Eastern Vitagraph company at the Brooklyn studio.

* * *

A new member of the Vitagranh stock company has already attracted considerable attention in her appearances in Vitagraph life portrayals. Miss Louise Beaudet, who has been for many years prominent on the professional stage, is now proving a competent and unusual artist in moving pictures.

* * *

The new addition to the studios of the Vitagraph Company is now nearly completed and will probably be finished by the first of September. Not only new studio room, but also new costume rooms, new developing rooms and more office room will be provided. It will fill a need that has for a long time been felt, for, with the amount of work that is now being done by the company, the present space has been found entirely inadequate.

"THE STRONGEST LINK" (Essanay).

Rarely have we seen a dramatic photoplay that holds the interest as does "The Strongest Link." The gripping situations and the portrayal of characters are excellent.

Larry and Marie, of the underworld, determine to ruin Roger Summers, an elderly millionaire. Larry impressed with Marie's beauty and enchanting mannerisms, gives her a locket and chain and tells her that he will love her until the strongest link in the chain breaks. Marie is successful in inveigling Mr. Summers into marrying her. Natalie, the daughter of the millionaire, disgusted with her father's procedure, leaves his house, never to return. Larry, disgusted with Marie, leaves the city and goes to work on a farm. There he meets Natalie. The two become infatuated with each other. Some time later, Larry proposes to Natalie and makes a full confession of the unscrupulous life he had led. Natalie marries him. A little later the adventuress, now a widow, calls at the farm and tries to win back her old lover. Larry repluses her and the strongest link breaks, leaving Marie to travel her weary path alone. Natalie rejoices at the strong will power of her husband.

THE ALMO FEATURE FILM COMPANY.

The Allardt Feature Films, Inc., and the Moore Feature Films, two well-known feature film exchanges in Chicago, both formerly located in the Straus Building, have pooled interests and amalgamated to form the Almo Feature Film Company. The new firm occupies a magnificent suite of offices in the Delaware Building, 36 W. Randolph Street.

The Almo Feature Film Company has been incorporated for $50,000. The officers of the company are Menlo E. Moore, president; Sidney Stein, vice-president, and H. J. Allardt, secretary and treasurer. Other officers on the board of directors are Boyle Woolfolk and L. F. Allardt. Daniel Webster McKinney, formerly manager of the Allardt Feature Films, Inc., is general manager.

KINEMACOLOR CHANGES.

Henry J. Brock has been made Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Kinemacolor Company of America and A. P. Barnard, at present Chairman of the Executive Committee, has been elected president and general manager. W. H. Hickey, General Manager of the Natural Color Kinematograph Company of London, and London representative of the Kinemacolor Company of America, who has been in New York for several weeks, will shortly return to London. Plans which have been for some time under way for the formation of a large Kinemacolor producing company, which shall produce Kinemacolor pictures for Kinemacolor companies throughout the world, have been practically consummated, and Mr. Brock will return with Mr. Hickey to London in the interests of this project.

RELIANCE BALL TEAM LEADS THEM ALL.

The Reliance baseball team won its sixth successive victory on Lenox Oval, Saturday afternoon, June 21, defeating Pathe by a score of five to four. Following Pathe's previous victory over Lubin, this puts the Reliance team at the top of the list of motion picture ball teams.

MISS MARION SWAIN,

The Clever Solax Leading Woman, Who Is Leaving for a Vacation.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE AIRSHIP FUGITIVES" (Great Northern).

No vehicular means of transportation is despised by an eloping couple with determination in their hearts. Neither is any such means too desperate for them when the "old man" is hot on the trail, as happens to be the case with "The Airship Fugitives."

Hilda Higgins is being courted by a young man who is "in Dutch" with her father, Magistrate Higgins, a stubborn old fellow with a will of his own. They elope in an automobile, and after a fast ride take passage in the great Zeppelin dirigible airship, which is making its first public voyage. The girl's father misses the airship and telegraphs ahead to the police that his daughter has been kidnapped by a lunatic. When the airship lands, the elopers are taken by the police and Eric is placed in an insane asylum under lock and key. Hilda pretends to be grateful to the asylum superintendent for being rescued from a madman. She dupes him long enough to smuggle tools to Eric for his escape. Eric scales the walls and with Hilda gets away to safety.

Scene from "The Airship Fugitives" (Great Northern).

They next take passage in a gypsy's wagon, having interested the gypsy and his wife in their story. The lovers are happy in the thought that their eventful journey is nearly over, but it is discovered soon that the wagon is afire, caused by the gypsy's child playing with matches. The horses take fright and run away, thereby causing the fire to burn more furiously. When all hands are nearly suffocated the wagon tips over and the horses are stopped. Hilda and Eric make their way to a parson's house and are married, after which they telegraph her father the news. The old fellow is glad to get his daughter back and forgives them and apologizes.

During the action of the picture there are some interesting telescope views taken from the Zeppelin airship.

NEW MILLER BROS. 101 RANCH PRODUCTION.

The ranch has been the scene of great activity for the past three weeks during the producing of a new three-reel feature entitled "Ranch Life." The picture consists of 158 scenes and dates back from the days of the buffalo up to the present time. While this production has been under way on Miller Brothers' Oklahoma Ranch, J. C. Miller has been busily engaged in personally directing a new production of the 101 Ranch Wild West Show, every scene being taken from actual performance during the two weeks' engagement in Brooklyn.

"CUPID'S SCORE" (Great Northern).

In many respects this comedy offering will doubtless prove one of the most joyous of the series being presented weekly by the Great Northern players. It has as its background a fancy dress ball, and in spite of the light character of the plot there has been provided ample opportunity for splendid settings and attractive costumes. Cyril and Florrie, so the story goes, are in love with each other, but the latter's mother objects to the match and forbids Cyril the house. The young man sends a note to his sweetheart, inviting her to attend a fancy dress ball, and this missive falls into the hands of mamma. She decides to go in her daughter's stead. Uncle Joe visits Cyril's apartments during the latter's absence and appropriates the fancy costume that has been carefully arranged on a couch.

Scene from "Cupid's Score" (Great Northern).

Of course the young people do not attend the ball, but Uncle Joe and mamma enjoy several dances, and when the time arrives for unmasking an old love affair is renewed. Uncle Joe is a bachelor and Florrie's mother is a widow. In the succeeding scenes there are many laughable situations, but the climax is reached when the elderly couple and the young lovers discover each other in adjoining stalls in a fashionable cafe. It is almost needless to state that all ends well.

ITALA ITEMS.

W. B. Schram, who has been operating as a state rights buyer in Michigan, will henceforth do business under the name of the Wolverine Feature Film Company with offices at Room 209, Equity Building, Detroit, Mich. This company has purchased "The Fatal Grotto" from the Itala Film Company and may handle the Itala output in the Wolverine state. Sam Benjamin of Chicago has purchased the rights for "Tigris" for Iowa. Alex Wall of Birmingham, Ala., has purchased rights for "The Great Aerial Disaster" for Alabama and Mississippi. David Mundstuk of the M. & F. Feature Film Co., of Chicago, has contracted for the Itala output for Northern Illinois. W. E. Greene of Boston is now booking "The Dread of Doom" and "The Fatal Grotto" as is also the Emby Feature Film Co., of New York City, Attractive Feature Film Co., of Philadelphia, Golden Gate Film Exchange of San Francisco, Monarch Feature Film Co., of Kansas City, Mo., and the Weiland Feature Film Co., of Pittsburgh.

"BRANDED FOR LIFE" (Itala).

"To err is human, to forgive divine" is the preachment of "Branded for Life," the two-reel Itala "Big Film." Here is a good story, excellently photographed, staged with a craftsman's hand, redolent of southern gardens and pulsating with the fortissimo tempo of the Latin temperament.

There is little frivolity, little facetiousness in the Itala scenarios. The "Big Films" are always incursions into the darkling, exposes of the mightier emotions. No exception is "Branded for Life."

Scene from "Branded for Life" (Itala).

The brand referred to in the title is not inflicted by a hot iron a la Spanish Inquisition, but by a good rawhide whip which snaps across the belligerent lover's features, much to their disfigurement, when he attempts to remonstrate physically with the more favored suitor. A deeper scar, however, is made on his soul and his memory, and he there swears by the "pale mune" and the great Garibaldi that some day he will have r-r-r-revenge. We can imagine him rolling his r's as a telephone operator does. An interesting film this and worthy of tired eyes and fresh.

NATIVE DANCES AT DJAKJAKARTA, JAVA.

One of the most interesting places visited by the Melies Company, on their picturemaking tour of the world, was the Island of Java. The natives there are so fond of amusement and ceremony that a large part of their time is given up to celebrations and festivities of various kinds. All of which costs considerable money and keeps the natives poor. but they would rather be poor than dispense with the merry-making. Professional native dancers are engaged to perform at these feasts and are an indispensable part of native Javanese life. The illustration herewith is from a half reel subject taken in Java by the Melies Co., entitled; "Native Dances at Djakjakarta, Java." It shows a group of these dancers in their dancing regalia doing the "Tjetilan" or "Horse dance." Mr. Gaston Melies is to be seen in the picture just behind the dancers.

Gaston Melies and Group of Javanese Dancers.

"WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH FATHER?" (Essanay).

This comedy is full of clever and unique situations. Beside using a novel theme, the Essanay Company have given the roles to players especially adapted for these particular characters.

"Old Man" Davis, a rheumatic grouch, tells Herbert, his daughter's fiance, to leave his home immediately and to never cross his threshold again. Herbert, however, through a doctor friend, secures a patent medicine that guarantees the cure of rheumatism. Herbert crosses the threshold of protest and informs Mr. Davis of the remarkable discovery. In return the genial prospective son-in-law is promised the hand of Gertrude, providing he can cure the old gentleman. Over enthusiastic, Old Man Davis takes more of the medicine than the law allows. Stop work used here makes this excruciatingly funny. Mr. Davis' sister tries some of the medicine and she goes through the same funny antics that her brother did. The side-splitting contortions that both Mr. Davis and his sister perform, will make any audience laugh. The "affair" is straightened out in the police court. Herbert, portrayed by Minor S. Watson, is a true to life character of an up-to-date lover. Beverly Bayne as Gertrude gives a splendid performance. Clara Smith as Mr. Davis' sister pleases. Thomas Commerford portrays the role of Old Man Davis in an exceptionally clever manner. This production is booked for release Friday, July 4th.

Scene from "What's the Matter With Father" (Essanay).

GENERAL FILM COMPANY NOTES.

Every week something is added to General Film Service to make it more attractive to exhibitors. Following close on the heels of the announcement of such elaborate multiple-reel features as "Mary Stuart," "The Snare of Fate," "The Struggle," "The Tiger Lily" and "Shenandoah," comes the statement that two Pathe Weeklies will be supplied every week, on Monday and Thursday, beginning in the near future.

George Balsdon, formerly owner of the Photoplay Advertising and Specialty Company of Pittshurgh and elsewhere, and now manager of the Poster Department of the General Film Company, was in Albany during the past week establishing a poster branch in connection with the local distributing office.

The early part of the month the Boston poster branch was opened and has proved a great boon to exhibitors in that territory.

H. J. Cohen, formerly a special representative of the General Film Company in the East and in Canada, recently assumed charge of the new City Hall Square branch at 139 North Clark Street, Chicago.

AMERICAN PLANT INCREASES CAPACITY.

The capacity of the drying room of the American Film Mfg. Co. has been increased to twice what it formerly was. This was necessitated by the large and steady increase in business during the past several months. Other improvements are also being installed so as to insure an even better photographic quality than has heretofore been deemed possible.

"DICK'S TURNING" (Reliance).

The story of this clever little picture play was written by Forrest Halsey, who has contributed so many good things of late to the Reliance Company. It is the story of two young people of the tenements who, when work is scarce and times are hard, are dispossessed from their little home and all their furniture taken back by the installment man. Dick, the young husband, takes his girl-wife back to her father's home. The old man will care for her, but not for him. Seated alone in the park, wondering what he will do, Dick notices a poor little cat tormented by some children. He decides that perhaps his wife would like the little cat. So he rescues it and while taking it to her, it runs away from him. He follows it into an alley that is the back entrance to a rich home. A little boy in this house has just been given a new gun. Seeing the cat he decides to take a shot at it and strikes Dick instead. The boy, already weak and faint with hunger and worry, falls unconscious and is carried into the house. The little boy's mother sends for Dick's wife and decides to take the two young people under her protection. Later we see Dick in the uniform of a chauffeur returning to his new home, which the tide of good fortune has enabled him to provide again for his wife and himself.

Scene from "Dick's Turning" (Reliance).

Edward Genunge plays Dick, Isabelle Lamon, his wife, Edgena de Lespine, and Alan Hale, the parents of the rich little boy, ably portrayed by Master MacNacomber. Directed by Lawrence McGill, this picture is full of heart interest and romance.

KINEMACOLOR KOPY.

Kinemacolor captured the S S. Imperator on her first arrival in New York harbor and the same evening showed motion pictures of the gigantic German steamship in natural colors at the Proctor theaters. This is pretty near a record in motion picture news reporting, and certainly the first time that natural color photographs have been taken, developed, printed and exhibited with such speed and satisfactory results.

* * *

With a clever eye for combining business with pleasure, Al "Kinemacolor" Lowe has installed Kinemacolor in a summer resort circuit comprising the Idle Hour Theater, Far Rockaway; Arverne Pier Theater; Happyland Theater, on Staten Island; Ocean Theater, Asbury Park; and Ocean Theater, Long Branch. Looking after these theaters provides "week end" excursions for the entire summer, and between times Mr. Lowe can attend the big, open-air Burland Theater, in the Bronx.

* * *

William H. Hickey has gone on a flying tour of Chicago, Detroit, Toronto and Montreal. He will return to New York to attend the exposition and then sail for London, where he is general manager of the Natural Color Kinematograph Company, Ltd., or "Kinemacolor."

"FLYING A" MULTIPLE REELS.

The American Film Manufacturing Company will release a two-reel subject every other Monday. "The Ashes of Three," a recent two-reel release, created such a demand for more multiple "Flying A" releases that in future the one-reel subject of every second Monday is to be replaced by a two-reel subject.

"THE WAGER" (Reliance).

A coming picture announced by the Reliance Company for release on July 9th contends that, despite the kind of family a child is taken from, that child will grow up good or bad, according to its own soul. On these grounds two young men make a wager—one, that a child from the slums given the same advantages as a child of fine ancestry will turn out as well. The gutter waif is found and the experiment begins.

Fifteen years later the girls, grown to womanhood, are equal in appearance and education. The slum child has developed into an earnest student—the child of good family into a society butterfly. In a moment's madness this girl is about to throw her life's happiness away, but is saved at the very brink of the chasm by her foster sister, who later, to shield the girl from whom so much is expected, takes the whole blame of the escapade. Even the man who had staked his wager on his protege, who is now his sweetheart, doubts her, and she, about to go away forever, is cleared by the other girl, who confesses her weakness and her sister's strength.

This picture is a remarkably strong one and is played by a notable cast including Rosemary Theby, Isabelle Lamon, Alan Hale, Stanley Walpole, and the Reliance children, Runa and Rosanna.

"THE PROFITS OF THE BUSINESS" (Lubin).

This picture may be termed a melodrama, but it is of high class and an excellent lesson against the too frequent occurence of parents insisting on mating their children in marriage. Many crimes have been committed by this folly. Lives have been lost and years of misery have been experienced by all concerned. Remorse often comes too late and reparation is impossible. The picture employs a cast of best players in the Lubin stock forces.

John Regan, president of a great department store, has searched for his daughter, whom he drove from home because she married against his wishes. He learns at last that his daughter and her husband are dead, and that a child, Mary, is in New York seeking employment. Mary gets a position in the department store, but Regan does not know of it. Her wages are only $5 per week, and it is hard for her to procure food and neat clothes. She is pursued by Avis Lusk, a well dressed roue, but she rebuffs his advances. A few weeks pass and she falls sick and her wage is cut to $2.50. This means starvation, Avis watches his opportunity and Mary accepts an invitation to dine. She reads her fate in his eyes and recoils in horror. Regan is informed of the girl's lodging and when he arrives she is nearly dead. She is removed to Regan's home and restored. Lusk then discovers that he is really in love, and remembering the fate of his daughter Regan gives Mary to him.

Scene from "The Profits of the Business" (Lubin).

RODMAN LAW IN DEATH'S SHORT CUT.

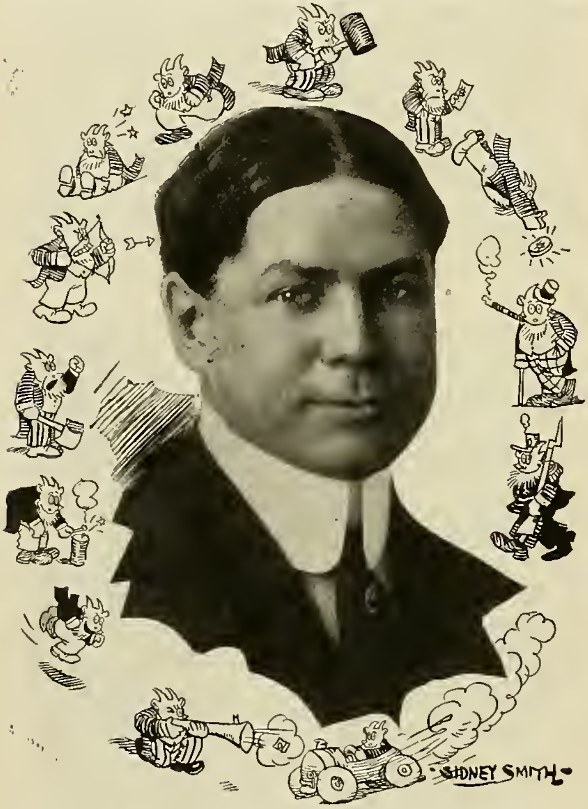
The sensational Reliance drama in which Rodman Law made his daring plunge over Still Water Falls in an open boat will be released on Saturday, July 5th, in one reel. Three alert cameramen succeeded in catching him from different angles, and the result is a splendid climax to a very unusual story of the Maine lumber camps.

MORE ABOUT "ALKALI" IKE DOLLS.

The "Alkali" Ike dolls have become so popular that several newspapers in the East are running contests, giving these novelties as prizes. The General Film Company branches have ordered the dolls to supply the various different photoplay theaters in their territory. One photoplay theater in Pennsylvania has ordered 200 dolls to give away as souvenirs. Some of these theater managers are progressive, and in spite of the intense heat that is looked for this summer, they will be able to draw the crowd with nothing more or less than an "Alkali" Ike doll. It has been predicted by a doll manufacturer who knows his business that practically every child in the United States and Canada will have a doll before the first of January. This ought to be a good tip for exhibitors and department store managers.

SIDNEY SMITH'S CARTOONS IN SELIG FILMS.

Sidney Smith, the famous Chicago Tribune cartoonist, whose portrait appears herewith, surrounded by his famous character, "Old Doc Yak" in various poses, has made his advent as a motion picture entertainer. Mr. Smith has completed the first of a series of animated cartoon novelties which will be released by the Selig Polyscope Company on July 8th. The general title of the series will be "Seligettes." The first release in the series runs approximately six hundred feet and will be called "Old Doc Yak." It required several thousand separate drawings to obtain the desired results.



MRS. MARSTON A REGULAR LAMB.

The only recognition anybody who has been following Thanhouser pictures has of Mrs. Lawrence Marston is in "Amazon" parts, for on the screen she looks a pretty representative of the Amazon type. Her vigorous roles in "Good Morning Judge," "A Militant Suffragette" and "A Business Woman" seem to exactly suit her. But now we have a Thanhouser announcement that in the leading female role in support of Maude Fealy in "King Rene's Daughter," Mrs. Marston is a—nice, tame nurse. They swing 'em around some in these picture parts! With Mrs. Marston in Miss Fealy's support are Harry Benham, Mignon Anderson, David Thompson, William Russell and Leland Benham. The subject is in three reels; out Tuesday, July 1.

"MAN AND WOMAN" (Ramo).

Here is an interesting plot. It is almost actor-proof because of its strong fundamentals. Guilty conscience vs. condemned innocence is always a strong dramatic situation, but in many cases it is overdone to the point of artificiality. Still dwelling on the plot and not the players, this one is entirely within the bounds of reason and free from the overworked tricks of double identity, the long lost brother, the rejected lover, and all the rest of the "modern conveniences" of so-called dramatists.

The story is natural. It is natural for a man to become so engrossed in his business that he neglects his wife. Neglected wives by the hundreds are always yearning for the attention that is denied them by their husbands. Result: an outside attachment that gets some of them into trouble and teaches others a good lesson. In this instance the wife becomes interested in a musician who loses his head over her. She then thinks it is time to quit, and tells him so. Being a crazy musician he writes her a farewell note and commits suicide. She hastens to prevent him, but finds him dead with a note in his hand. She takes the note and hastens away. A strange man is arrested for the crime. This woman's husband, who is a lawyer, is appointed to defend the man. The case goes against him. The night before the case goes to the jury the wife confesses all to her husband. The two notes prove an alibi for the prisoner. He is freed and the lawyer's ambition is realized, but at the expense of his wife's reputation.

Scene from "Man and Woman" (Ramo).

It will be seen that there are opportunities in this plot for some strong acting at every point. The Ramo people have done their best with it, and that is saying a good deal. It will be a two-reel picture.

RECENT STATE RIGHT PURCHASES.

The Eclectric Film Co. has sold the rights to exhibit "The Mysteries of Paris" in Oregon, Washington and Idaho to the Famous Feature Film Co., of Seattle, Washington. Only the three states mentioned are included in this deal.

Feature Film Man Wanted

A WELL KNOWN FILM COMPANY requires the services of an experienced and competent feature film man. The job is a big one and will grow bigger. It calls for a man of tact, energy and keen judgment. If you possess these qualifications, write, stating full particulars about yourself; otherwise, save your time and ours. F. F. M., c.o. The Moving Picture World, New York City..

CORRESPONDENCE

LOUISVILLE.

THE new owner of the new airdome which will open in South Louisville in the near future is A. C. Winston. The new theater will have a seating capacity of about 400. Pictures and vaudeville will form the program. Ten cents admission will be charged.

About fifteen Louisville exhibitors will attend the national convention in New York in July judging from present intentions. This delegation will be augmented by about a dozen more from various sections of Kentucky. A special car probably will carry the contingent from the Bluegrass State. Louis J. Dittmar, president of the Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, is in charge of plans for the annual meeting, from the Kentucky standpoint.

The Arcadia Hall, Louis J. Dittmar's splendid new place, has been closed for the summer, and will reopen next September as a dance hall for select affairs, according to the original intentions. Mr. Dittmar will give all his attention to the Majestic Theater.

At the instance of the Louisville Dental Federation a reel of moving pictures showing the work done by dental clinics in other sections of the country will be exhibited in photoplay theaters of Louisville shortly, the exhibitors co-operating with the dentists in their efforts to awaken public interest in the proposition.

A contract calling for the erection of a $50,000 playhouse at Jackson, Ky., has been awarded and work will begin immediately. The new theater will be utilized both for moving pictures and vaudeville. Concrete and brick are to be used in the construction work. Both local and foreign capital has been interested in the venture. The theater will easily be the largest and most imposing in the mountain town, which has been somewhat neglected in amusement matters in the past. The house is to be completed by November 1.

New ceiling fans and new opera chairs are features of alterations in the Princess Theater, of Earlington, Ky. Several hundred dollars were spent in the improvements.

The Hipprodrome and Annex Theaters, of Lexington, Ky., have been closed for the summer and will be opened in the fall as one new house. The Hipprodrome is one of the oldest moving picture theaters in Lexington, while the Annex followed in a few months, occupying an adjoining building. L. H. Ramsey, owner of the two theaters, will spend several thousand dollars in improvements. A larger stage, an increased capacity and better progress will be features of the new theater. The name has not yet been selected. The theater will be ready for the public by September 1.

J. A. Needham, owner of the Lyric Theater, of Pineville, Ky., has extended his interests by opening an airdome in Harlan, Ky., another town in the coal-mining section. Mr. Needham plans to add other amusement enterprises to those now in operation in the two towns. If the Harlan theater proves successful, a substantial theater will be erected to run during the winter months.

J. E. Fawcett has secured control of the Idle Hour Theater, of Earlington, Ky., and is contemplating the establishment of a house for colored patrons of the animated pictures. The exhibitor is making something of an innovation in requesting opinions of his clients as to the films used. He proposes to take a vote on the question, and will utilize the service favored by the majority. Mr. Fawcett now is using Universal service in the Idle Hour Theater, and will have the same program in his colored house, probably. The latter will be ready for the public by July 1.

Mayfield, Ky., is to have a new moving picture theater, W. F. Grau, of Hopkinsville, Ky., being the promoter. Mr. Grau has leased a big store room in Mayfield, and will have the theater ready for use early in July.

Three new moving picture theaters are proposed for Cincinnati, Ohio, the most important being an airdome at the corner of Flora and Warner Avenues for the Fairview Amusement Company. The airdome will be built alongside of the Orthodox Theater and will be used when the weather permits. It will have a seating capacity of 800. A combination moving picture theater and office building will go up on Carthage Pike, in St. Bernard, M. Van den Eynden and A. Kenne being the owners. The house will contain 500 seats. The third theater will be erected on the main thoroughfare in Mt. Healthy. Bids are being received by B. J. Bilger, the architect in charge of plans.

A. P. Barnard, treasurer of the Majestic Theater Company, of Louisville, will retain that office, despite his election to the presidency of the Kinemacolor Company, of New York. Mr. Barnard, a local man, has been in the East for the past two months and his elevation to the head of the big concern caused no surprise to Louisville friends who were familiar with the situation. Mr. Barnard, with Louis J. Dittmar, manager of the Majestic Theater Company, has had great faith in Kinemacolor. The nature films were first popularized in Kentucky in the Majestic, and did much toward making that house among the most popular in the Kentucky metropolis. Kinemacolor now is an established part of the Majestic program, and shows daily to big crowds. Mr. Barnard's future home will be in New York. However, he will retain an interest in the Majestic Theater Company, and will make frequent trips to Louisville. Henry J. Brock, former president of the Kinemacolor Company, remains with the concern, according to a telegram received by Mr, Dittmar. His new position will be chairman of the board of directors. In this capacity his executive ability will have full sway and his services are expected to prove invaluable to Mr. Barnard and the company.

The park season and hot weather have arrived in Louisville and both are having some effect on the moving picture business. It cannot be denied that the parks are a powerful counter-attraction during the sweltering days, and attendance has fallen off to some extent with the animated picture houses. However, the parks always take a little business away when they are first thrown open to the public, and exhibitors are not concerned over the situation. They have made every provision for the comfort of the public, which will shortly return to its accustomed haunts.

Louis J. Dittmar, manager of the Majestic Theater, is becoming something of a traveler. Mr. Dittmar has left for the East on another trip, and will spend a week or ten days in the metropolis.

Crossed electric wires started a blaze which was responsible for the temporary discontinuance of the moving picture performance at the Avenue Theater. The fire started in a laboratory in the building, and smoke quickly filled the show-house. Fortunately the crowd was small and all made their exit without trouble. The show closed down for the remainder of the day, but resumed as usual twenty-four hours later.

The program plan under way in Louisville is materializing rapidly and it is probable that the weekly feature will make its appearance in the near future. J. D. Inman, a printer, is at the head of the venture, and has received assurances of support from a number of exhibitors who are anxious to take advantage of this opportunity for publicity of the desirable kind. It is likely that several houses in the residential section of the city will be included in the program. The original plans provided for two distinct programs, one for theaters in the main business district, the other for those in outlying sections.

L. R. Evans has opened the Dixie Airdome at Mayfield, Ky., with a capacity of 900 seats. A new player piano, with new projection machines and other modern equipment, have been installed. Mr. Evans closed the Dixie Theater temporarily, the annual Chautauqua being scheduled to arrive shortly. Pending the re-opening, Mr. Evans will make numerous changes in the Dixie, which will open with an enlarged capacity.

Moving picture theaters of Fulton, Ky., were given due recognition in the anniversary edition of the Daily Leader, the foremost newspaper of the Western Kentucky city. A photograph of the Rex was run. C. W. Owen is the owner of the Rex, which is one of the most modern houses in that section. Recent improvements in the house comprise both oscillating and ceiling fans, with high power exhaust fans. The operating booth has been improved with automatic devices, approved by moving picture experts. The Orpheum Theater, of Fulton, is the other house of importance, costing about $15,000. The seating capacity of the Orpheum is 500. A new Powers No. 6 machine recently was installed, improving the pictures materially.

The McFerran-Knopf Company has been formed in Louisville to handle advertising slides in moving picture houses of the city. Mr. McFerran was the head of a similar venture a couple of years ago, the old company being unsuccessful. He believed, however, that there is a legitimate field for such a concern, and is advertising to advertisers in the daily papers of the city.

The Harrodsburg, Ky., Amusement Company has been formed to operate an airdome in that town. James P. Spillman is head of the company, which is incorporated at $1,000. E. J. Wiseman and Joe Spillman also are interested. The airdome will open about July 1.

Alexander Walker is to erect a new moving picture theater at Lancaster, Ky., shortly. The details of the new structure have not been decided upon. Lancaster at present has no modern theater, and Mr. Walker will endeavor to give the town one of the handsomest in that section.

The tightness of money, which has caused trouble to so many builders, is not noticeable in Cincinnati. The Hyde Park Amusement Company, which is constructing a new motion picture house on Erie Avenue, has borrowed $12,000 from the Hyde Park Savings Bank Company with which to complete the theater.

T. Nolan, owner of the Pastime Theater, of Cincinnati, will become interested in another branch of the business shortly, having decided to open a supply house in Cincinnati. Mr. Nolan has left for the East to order his stock. His store will be at 29 Opera Place. Projection machines, opera chairs and other equipment are to be handled by the exhibitor.

Philip Painter has been elected president of the Dixie Photo-Play Company, recently formed at Birmingham, Ala. Walter Blackman is vice-president and R. E. Lassier secretary of the company, which will begin operations at once.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

BUFFALO.

A PLAN to have a moving picture board in Buffalo has been suggested by Alderman John P. Sullivan of this city. "This moving picture business is growing so rapidly that the whole matter of its control and regulation should be turned over to a special commission," said Alderman Sullivan. "Applications for new permits are now coming in faster than they can be disposed of by the common council." Alderman Sullivan made this statement at a recent meeting of the Aldermanic Fire Committee of Buffalo. Several citizens appeared at the session and opposed the building of a moving picture theater by the Nassoy Amusement Co., at 400 Prospect avenue. The hearing was postponed.

The village board of trustees of Fredonia, N. Y., has adopted an ordinance prohibiting moving picture shows, or shows of any kind for which admission is charged Sundays. The ordinance went into effect on June 28th, and provides a fine of $25 for each offense.

Several thousand Canadian troops encamped at Niagara-on-the-Lake, a Canadian town a few miles from Buffalo, have moving pictures as part of their diversions. Col. Samuel Hughes, Minister of Militia of Canada, who inspected the troops, pointed out that the moving pictures, which are in every camp in Canada, have a good effect in keeping the men in their quarters. Major Maddocks, orderly officer to General Hamilton, suggested to Col. Hughes that the moving pictures might be combined with musketry. In the old country, Major Maddocks said, they had moving pictures showing tigers and other moving objects. The soldiers shoot at these, and when they shoot the pictures stop for a moment so that the accuracy of the shot may be seen. Colonel Hughes thought the suggestion was good and that the plan might be carried out.

A Toronto, Ont., report says that the Amalgamated Moving Picture Shows, Limited, has been organized, with a capital of $500,000. The charter gives the company permission to buy, sell, lease or operate as principal or agent, moving picture theaters and other kindred projects, and to manufacture, buy, sell, or deal in films, machines, equipment, furnishings, decorations and other theatrical apparatus, etc. The report says, in part: "It is evidently the intention of the company's management to corrall many of the largest and most profitable houses in Canada."

Manager Sherry has been featuring "Satan" in moving pictures at the New Lyric Theater. His recent attraction at The Family Theater has been "Jack and the Beanstalk," in Kinemacolor.

J. J. Maher, W. S. Bennett and Anna A. Jornad, have formed the Mars Amusement Co. of Buffalo, with a capital of $30,000. The concern will operate a moving picture theater.

The petition of G. Morton Wolfe, to build a moving picture show at 444-446 Connecticut street, Buffalo, has been granted by the Buffalo Aldermen.

The old Clinton Hotel, in North Main street, Warsaw, N. Y., is to be torn down and a moving picture theater erected. The lease is held by Henry Myerhoff, of New York City.

The Fillmore Theater, 675 Fillmore avenue, Buffalo, was recently entered by burglars, who forced a door, and a quantity of carpenters' tools stolen.

BILLY BISON.

ST. LOUIS.

SIX members of the Municipal Assembly of St. Louis, a committee appointed to investigate conditions in St. Louis theaters including picture houses, are to hold public hearings in the near future at which theater owners and managers will be present and their presence made imperative by threatened subpoenas. Coincident with the purposed plan of placing restrictions on local theater people a concurrent resolution, drawn up by City Councilman Otto G. Koenig, provides for bids to draw plans looking forward to protection insofar as the same concerns the safety of theater-goers. The resolution states that many of the smaller theaters lack fire protection, which Koenig claims the proprietors expect to be exempt, as they do not come within the provision of the law. The author of the bill makes it known that it is the intention of the city fathers to go after both large and small theaters, playing no favorites.

Frank Talbot of the Hippodrome left Sunday, June 15, for an extensive Eastern trip to book new acts for the coming season and line up some special picture films for the St. Louis Hippodrome.

The weather man has been kind to the operators of the airdomes and everyone is doing a good business. Hot weather, however, has not interfered to any great extent with the regular picture houses and everyone reports smooth sailing.

F. J. FEGAN.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE Carnegie Museum, Alaska-Siberian motion pictures started an engagement at Tremont Temple, Boston, beginning June 9. A matinee is given daily at 2 p. m., and the evening performance starts at 8 p. m. Prices are advertised as 15, 25 and 50 cents, but special discount tickets have been very generally given away, which cut the admission prices down about 50 per cent. Business has started in only fairly good, but this is no doubt due to the season of the year, as most of the Boston photoplay houses are complaining of slow trade.

The Beacon Theater, Boston, has just installed two new Simplex machines, which were purchased by General Manager Lowrie, from the R. D. Marson Moving Picture Company of Boston. The Beacon had been using Power's Machines. Mr. Lowrie states he is greatly pleased with the pictures projected by the new Simplex, and feels he has a perfect picture.

On Monday, June 9, the society of Eagles held a large parade in Boston, which was filmed. The pictures were on exhibition at the Star Theater, Boston, on 6 o'clock the same evening. This topical reel created considerable interest.

A recent incorporation in Boston, is the Picture Theater Corporation. This concern filed its certificate of incorporation for $30,000. Frank L. Jones, Henry H. Gooding and Sarah Vander-Woude are named as the promoters.

Mrs. Helena Bradford Churchill is giving a most interesting and instructive lecture on the Carnegie Museum, Alaska-Siberia pictures, at Tremont Temple, Boston. Mrs. Churchill enlarges upon the animal existence north of the Arctic Circle, and gives much valuable information regarding the life of the Eskimos.

Beginning Monday, June 16, the "Quo Vadis?" reels were exhibited at the Tremont Theater, Boston, at prices ranging up to fifty cents. The Tremont is a legitimate theater, which has closed its regular season for the summer.

George T. Chaffee has awarded the contract for the construction of his new theater at Rutland, Vermont, to F. H. Remington. The plans call for a thoroughly modern and fireproof theater, that will seat about 1,100. The new house, which has already been named the Playhouse, has a fine location on Centre street, and should prove a money-maker, as it will be the most expensive and modern theater in Rutland. One balcony will be built. Thomas A. Boyle has secured a lease on the Playhouse, and expects to offer popular priced vaudeville and moving picture programs, with an occasional road show.

In many moving picture theaters in this section, and in other buildings, where there is always a possibility of fire, and great danger from this source, the fire departments have posted cards, which give instructions as to what is the proper action to take in case of such a happening. The card contains a number of excellent suggestions, which, if followed out, would prevent any serious disaster, but there is one suggestion that seems to be rather sarcastic, namely:—"In case of fire, keep cool."

Daniel J. Sprague, manager of Lake Nipmuc, a summer park near Milford, Mass., reports that his theater is doing a capacity business, with programs of vaudeville and motion pictures. Mr. Sprague is a fixture at Lake Nipmuc, having been in charge there many seasons, and knows what his audience likes.

It took eighteen months for sufficient capital to be raised to rebuild the Opera House, Milford, Mass., which was burned to the ground by fire. The Milford Realty Company finally decided to rebuild, and erected a first-class modern theater, with a total seating capacity of 1250. The new lessees have a very handsome theater, with interior decorations of red and gold. Franklin Tompkins is to have charge of the new house, and will offer vaudeville and photoplay programs, and, now and then, dramatic attractions. The people of Milford have not had much doing lately in the amusement line, and on this account, it is believed that the Opera House will do very well.

The new theater, scheduled for Malden, Mass., has been temporarily held up, due to finances. It is believed that additional capital will be raised in the near future, which will allow the building of the house to be continued.

Joseph A. McConville, manager of the New Portland Theater, Portland, Me., has changed the policy of his theater, over the summer months. The theater is now offering musical comedy attractions, instead of vaudeville and photoplay programs. The special added feature has been retained—Kinemacolor films.

Portland, Me., is to have still another new theater, to be devoted to the exploitation of vaudeville and pictures, as these columns have already noted. The new house has just been named the Empire, and every effort is to be made to have it ready for its opening performance by September 10.

The Allen Academy of Arts of Hartford, Conn., which is composed entirely of young women students, recently held a vote as to who is "the most handsome and most competent moving picture actor" they had witnessed in moving picture productions. By a vote of 806 ballots, out of a possible 1007, Mr. Courtney Foote, of the Vitagraph Company, was awarded the prize. This is surely a most flattering condition of affairs.

Joe Shea will be seen in charge of Freebody Park, Newport, R. I., and the summer season of this popular resort opened on Monday, June 16.

The Scenic Theater, Waltham, Mass., has closed for the summer, and will reopen early in August, with moving picture programs. The Scenic tried out stock-company attractions for a few weeks late this spring, but business did not respond to this policy.

The Massachusetts Motion Picture Company, is a recent concern to file its papers of incorporation at Boston. This is a $100,000 company, with William H. McNiff, Jacob C. Morse and Lawrence H. Martin, as the promoters.

Another recent incorporation is the United Motion Picture Theater Company of Boston, Mass. S. H. Steinfeld, A. A. Kellman and F. H. Baer, of Boston, are named as the officers. The corporation filed papers, calling for $250,000 capital.

John T. McCarthy of Lewiston, Me., is having plans made for a moving picture theater at Bangor, Me. Mr. McCarthy intends to erect a modern fireproof theater, to seat about 800.

The Novelty Feature Film Company has incorporated at Boston for $5,000, with S. H. Steinfeld, Anna A. Henke and Frank H. Baer named as the promoters.

Manager Hebrew, of the Boston offices of the General Film Company, has resigned, and has been succeeded by Manager Skates of Chicago.

The "Battle of Gettysburg," the five-reel feature picture, has been booked by the National Theater, Boston, from the Mutual Film Corporation, 1106 Boylston street. The National started the engagement on June 23, and will exhibit the reels for an indefinite period.

A new theater is promised for Biddeford, Me., which will be built and managed by the Balsam Amusement Company, of which F. H. Burt is president. Mr. Burt is now looking after the New Columbia Theater, Bath Me., which opened recently to large business. W. M. Burt is vice-president of the company, which intends to open several other theaters in the near future, all of which are to be devoted to moving picture programs.

S. B. Leland, the well known moving picture exhibitor of Vermont, has purchased the state rights for Kalem's "From the Manger to the Cross," for Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. Mr. Leland is a live wire, and should be able to do well with the five-reel subject.

The Bijou Theater, Fall River, Mass., has taken a new lease on life, since it reopened, under the new management. Charles E. Cook, well known to all the New England trade, is now in charge of the Bijou, and is offering unusually good programs of vaudeville and pictures. There is no reason why this photoplay theater should not do very nicely, and business has been very nearly capacity of late. There is but little of the moving picture business that Mr. Cook has not mastered, and he is putting his best efforts into the Bijou.

The Massachusetts State Branch of the Exhibitors' League still peacefully slumbers, and is unable to even call a meeting, much less get a quorum. On this account, it is unlikely that this branch will select delegates to the New York convention, but it is very probable that a handful of enterprising exhibitors from Massachusetts will make the trip as individuals.

The B. F. Keith interests have two theaters in St. John, Canada, and two new corporations have been formed in connection with the newest Keith house, the Imperial Theater. The St. John Theater Operating Company, Limited, and the St. John Theater and Realty Company, Limited, have been incorporated. The former is a $2,000 concern, while the authorized capitalization of the latter corporation is $5,000. Messrs. A. Paul Keith, Edward F. Albee and Maurice Goodman, all of New York, and Walter H. Golding and George H. V. Belyea, of St. John, are the members of both concerns. W. H. Golding is the manager of Keith's Nickel Theater, and will also take charge of the Imperial, as soon as that house is ready to open. Both houses run moving picture programs.

Another piece of Canadian news that has drifted into Boston, is that John Griffin, a well known exhibitor of Toronto, Canada, is to build a new theater at Berlin, Canada, to seat about 1,500 people. Messrs. Longo Brothers are now building a first-class, fireproof theater in Berlin, to seat 800 people. G. O. Philip has acquired the Auditorium Theater, Berlin, which he completely renovated and improved. The Auditorium is offering programs of vaudeville and pictures. Mr. Philip is also operating the Star Theater in the same city. In addition to all these moving picture theater activities, H. L. Jansen is well along on the erection of his new vaudeville and picture theater at Berlin, to seat 1,000. Evidently this Canadian city is peopled with moving picture fans!

The Empire Theater, Hartford, Conn., reports very satisfactory business, with photoplay programs, the lateness of the season considered. The Empire exhibited its own local Memorial Day film, which created much interest.

The Goldstein Brothers Amusement Company of Springfield, Mass., operating a chain of theaters, are being sued by Henry W. Savage, who seeks to recover $400 for royalties.

Manager Al. Rosenberg of the Rockland Theater, Rockland, Me., is doing a nice business with vaudeville and moving picture programs. Mr. Rosenberg is very particular about his projection, and has just installed a new machine, as he is determined to show "perfect pictures."

The Auditorium Theater, Manchester, N. H., reports good business, with vaudeville and picture programs. This house expects to remain open all summer, as does the Crown Theater, a straight moving picture theater of that city.

Motion pictures of the recent McCarthy-Pelky fight in Canada, in which the former was killed, have been barred from Boston by Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

HENRY.

PHILADELPHIA.

ONE of the newest ideas to attract attention and draw patrons into a theater in Philadelphia is that of the Bijou Dream Theater. A large thermometer is fastened to a blackboard, which is also shaped to represent a thermometer, with a number of blank spaces to represent the different hours of the day, in two columns. One column gives the temperature of the inside of the theater and the other, with the thermometer on the outside, show that it is fully 20 degrees cooler on the inside. Another novel feature is a large electric-lighted dial clock which is located directly over the picture screen. Many people go into a theater just to stay a few minutes. This is especially so in the business section of the city, and patrons now do not have to bother looking at their watches by a poor light, but have the correct time before them at all times.

D. Baylinson has added the airdome at Forty-first street and Parkside avenue to his chain of motion picture houses acquired by his syndicate.

One of the largest picture houses yet designed for Philadelphia will soon be erected at Juniper and Market streets, by one of the large real estate operators of the city. According to the size of the lot, the theater will be the largest on Market street, used exclusively for motion pictures.

The Grand Theater, at Broad street and Montgomery avenue, is making a hit with the people who want a lot for the money spent. The Grand is showing eight reels of "first-run" pictures for five and ten cents, and they are getting the crowds. Included in the eight reels is one three or four-reel feature.

Ben Abrams, of Warner Features, is having no trouble to book his features, and the exhibitors are calling on him for more productions. The Gene Gauntier pictures are making a tremendous hit.

Miss May Wooly, auditor of the Independent Film Service, has been compelled to remove her office from 231 to 233 North Eighth street. She states that on account of the increasing business her former offices is now used for the accommodation of new reels.

Pearce Poster Company recently added three more artists to its new banner painting department, having now a total of five men, who are able to turn out sixty banners a week. In this new service Mr. Pearce announces that he will soon complete a banner of a Vitagraph feature which promises to make all exhibitors sit up and take notice. The work is not only artistic, but exceptionally well executed and is sure to please the most discriminating.

Mr. Kellner, a local man, has had great success with the "Sanozone" disinfectant for moving picture theaters. Almost every theater in Philadelphia has installed the air purifier, and the managers are pleased with the results.

Several business men from other lines of trade, opened the Casino Theater with pictures several weeks ago. However, the transit of that section of the city was not sufficient to make the undertaking pay, and the theater is now closed again.

The William Penn Theater has discontinued vaudeville for the summer and is showing pictures only to large houses. The show is continuous from 1 o'clock till eleven o'clock at night.

Local picture exhibitors are showing a keen interest in the Vivaphone, the new talking picture which is being demonstrated and handled by the Keystone Singing & Talking Picture Company, with offices in the Lippincott Building, on North Twelfth street.

A large number of exhibitors attended a private showing of "A Woman's Heart," a great Parisian romance, showing the most magnificent scenes of a carnival, which was given at Forepaugh's Theater on Sunday last. The exhibitors were much pleased with the production and a large number of bookings were made on the spot. The feature is the property of the Liberty Features of this city.

CONGDON.

Picture Theatres Projected

West New York, N. J.—William Walzer, 400 Sixteenth Street is to build a theater to cost $25,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Carson Realty Company has sold the property 1730 South Broad Street, lot 30 by 124 feet, to the Philadelphia Amusement Company for a consideration of about $11,000. The site will be improved by the erection of a moving picture theater.

Is Filicide Justifiable?

See "The Seed of the Fathers," America's Greatest Feature Production.

A Marion Leonard Special.

Monopol Film Company.

Helen Gardner

—IN—

THE WIFE OF CAIN

An Original Romance of the Primal

IN THREE PARTS

Written and Directed by Charles L. Gaskill

Copyrighted 1913, by Helen Gardner (all rights reserved)

NOW READY TO DELIVER

A picture of surpassing beauty and interest, gorgeously tinted, dealing in masterful style with the universally interesting story of Cain and his crime, and the final regeneration of the man through the philosophy of a wonderful and charming woman.

CHARLES L. FULLER DISTRIBUTING CO., Inc.

SOLE SELLING AGENTS FOR HELEN GARDNER PICTURE PLAYERS, Inc.

Phone 758 Main

472 FULTON ST., BROOKLYN, N. Y., U. S. A.

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES

MONDAY, JUNE 30th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—A Gamble With Death (Drama)
EDISON—The Story of the Bell (Drama)	1000
EDISON—The International Polo Association (Sports)	1000
KALEM—A Fight to a Finish (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—The Penalty of Crime (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.)	2000
LUBIN—Her Atonement (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 28 (News)	1000
SELIG—The Beaded Buckskin Bag (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—Roughing the Cub (Comedy)	1000

TUESDAY, JULY 1st, 1913.

EDISON—The Patchwork Quilt (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—Retaggel (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Drummer's Umbrella (Comedy)
LUBIN—Her Husband's Picture (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—The Miracle of the Roses (Drama)
SELIG—Songs of Truce (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—Bingles and the Cabaret (Comedy)	700
VITAGRAPH—Sight Seeing in Japan (Scenic)	300

WEDNESDAY, JULY 2d, 1913.

EDISON—All On Account of a Portrait (Comedy)	1000
ESSANAY—The Strongest Link (Drama)	1000
KALEM—The Raiders from Double L Ranch (Drama)
KALEM—Historic New York (Scenic)
PATHEPLAY—The Missionary's Triumph (Drama)
SELIG—Arabia and the Baby (Drama)
SELIG—The Sultan of Sulu (Educational)
VITAGRAPH—The Song Bird of the North (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—The Tiger Lily (Spec.—3 parts—Dr.)	3000

THURSDAY, JULY 3d, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—Faust and the Lily (Comedy)
BIOGRAPH—An Old Maid's Deception (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Live We Live (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—The Angel of the Slums (Drama)
MELIES—The Rice Industry in Java (Industrial)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 29 (News)	1000
PATHEPLAY—The Joy Ride (Comedy)
SELIG—In God We Trust (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—Sweet Deception (Drama)	1000

FRIDAY, JULY 4th, 1913.

EDISON—A Gentleman's Gentleman (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—What's the Matter With Father (Comedy)	1000
KALEM—A Victim of Deceit (Drama)	1000
KALEM—Shenandoah (Spec.—3 parts—Drama)	3000
LUBIN—The Waiter's Strategy (Comedy)	400
LUBIN—The Wrong Hand Bag (Comedy)	600
PATHEPLAY—Consecration of a Buddhist Priest (Manners and Customs)
PATHEPLAY—Pisa (Italy) and Its Curious Monuments (Travel)
SELIG—Sally's Sure Shot (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—An Unwritten Chapter (Drama)	1000

SATURDAY, JULY 5th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Sorrowful Shore (Drama)
EDISON—The Signal (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—At the Lariat's End (Drama)	1000
KALEM—The Hidden Witness (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—His Niece from Ireland (Drama)
PATHEPLAY—A Modern Garrick (Drama)
PATHEPLAY—The Miner's Destiny (Sp.; 2 parts; Dr.)
VITAGRAPH—Love's Quarantine (Comedy)	1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 7th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—A Sea Dogs Love (Comedy)
BIOGRAPH—The Noisy Suitors (Comedy)
EDISON—Over the Great Divide in Colorado (Scenic)
EDISON—Winsome Winnie's Way (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Forbidden Way (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
KALEM—A Stolen Identity (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—The Mysterious Hand (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 30 (News)
SELIG—The Trail of Cards (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—The Glove (Drama)	1000

TUESDAY, JULY 8th, 1913.

EDISON—Scenes of Other Days (Scenic)	1000
ESSANAY—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—The Profits of the Business (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—The Airman's Bride (Drama)
SELIG—Old Doc Yak (First of the Seligettes Series), (Comedy)
SELIG—A Jolt for the Janitor (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—Count Barber (Comedy)	1000

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th, 1913.

EDISON—His Mother-in-Law's Visit (Comedy)	1000
ESSANAY—The Outer Shell (Drama)	1000
KALEM—The Treachery of a Scar (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—A Hero Among Men (Special—2 parts—Dr.)	2000
PATHEPLAY—The School Ma'am (Drama)
SELIG—The Reformation of Dad (Comedy-Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—A Millinery Bomb (Comedy)	500
VITAGRAPH—Solitaires (Comedy)	500

THURSDAY, JULY 10th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Enemy's Baby (Drama)
ESSANAY—A Flurry in Diamonds (Comedy)	1000
LUBIN—When Love Loses Out (Comedy)	400
LUBIN—Building a Trust (Comedy)	600
MELIES—His Chinese Friend (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 31 (News)
PATHEPLAY—Hannigan's Harem (Comedy)
SELIG—Made a Coward (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—The Carpenter (Drama)	1000

FRIDAY, JULY 11th, 1913.

ECLIPSE—The Statue of Fright (Special 2-part Dra.)	2000
EDISON—In the Old Dutch Times (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—The Sign (Drama)	1000
KALEM—Entertaining Uncle (Comedy)
KALEM—Cosmopolitan New York (Tropical)
LUBIN—On Her Wedding Day (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Porcelain (Industrial)
SELIG—Budd Doble Comes Back (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—A Spirit of the Orient (Drama)	1000

SATURDAY, JULY 12th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Mistake (Drama)
EDISON—The Diamond Crown (Being the First of the Series of "Kate Kirby's Cases"), (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the Western Girls (Dr.)	1000
KALEM—Rounding Up the Counterfeiters (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—Her Only Boy (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Dynamite, the New Farm Hand (Ind.)
PATHEPLAY—A Little Trip Along the Hudson (Sc.)
SELIG—A Wild Ride (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
VITAGRAPH—The Moulding (Drama)	1000

CLEARANCE SALE OF POSTERS

One-Sheet Posters for all Licensed Releases over 4 months' old, 5c each; 3-sheets, 15c each (One Reel Subjects); we are compelled to sacrifice them at half their cost to make room for new stock. Exhibitors or Exchanges, send in your film lists at once and orders will be filled the same day as received. On small orders include 1c per sheet for postage, otherwise sent by express. Send for our free booklet and advertising matter.

EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO.
Arthur D. Jacobs, Pres.
30 Union Square, New York

Observations of an Expert

Simplex

led all other projectors in quality and appearance at the recent Exposition at Olympia in London, England.

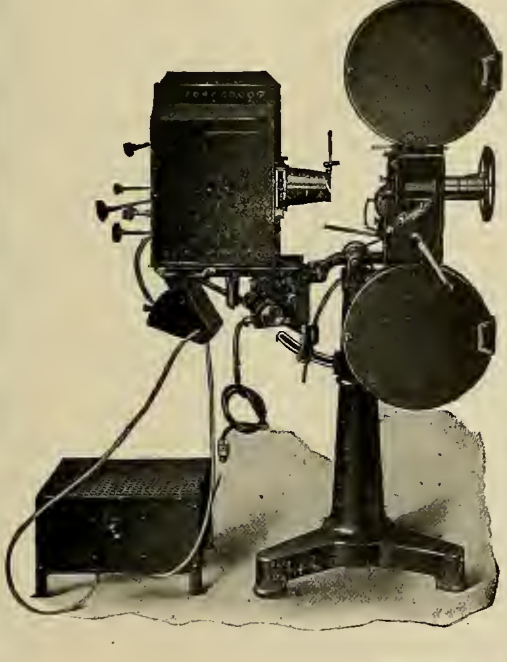
We quote the following from a man you all know.

The Precision Machine Co., Inc.
317 E. 34th Street, New York.
April 14th, 1913.

Gentlemen:—As per your request, while in London recently, at the Cinematograph Exposition at Olympia, I interested myself in looking after the exhibition of the Simplex machine.

Without doubt, it is the greatest and most solid looking projector exhibited at Olympia. In talking with exhibitors, it was generally conceded that the Simplex led all other machines at the Exposition, and in all new theatres that were being installed the Simplex was accepted as the up-to-date machine.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) F. E. Samuels,
Secretary International Exposition Motion Picture Art



Will the Simplex lead at the Exposition at Grand Central Palace in New York, July 7th to 12th?

Come and judge for yourself. See the Simplex and other machines and draw your own conclusions.

You are cordially invited to visit our factory. Nothing pleases us more than to show our wonderful equipment to an expert mechanic. It is interesting to the layman as well as the expert.

To those who cannot come, catalogue A will furnish much information.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

The PRECISION MACHINE CO.

317 EAST 34th STREET NEW YORK

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co. Current Releases

SUNDAY, JUNE 29th, 1913.
CRYSTAL—Who Is In the Box? (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—Mrs. Sharp and Miss Flat (Comedy)
ECLAIR—He Was Not Ill, Only Unhappy (Comedy)
ECLAIR—Torpedo Fish (Zoology)
REX—Draga, the Gypsy (Drama)

MONDAY, JUNE 30th, 1913.
IMP—The Old Melody (Two parts—Drama)
NESTOR—An Indian Nemesis (Drama)
GEM—Mistaken Intentions (Comedy)
GEM—Teak Wood (Scenic)

TUESDAY, JULY 1st, 1913.
101 BISON—The Battle of Manila (Two parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—An Hour of Terror (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 2d, 1913.
NESTOR—The Range Dead Line (Drama)
POWERS—The Quarter Meter (Comedy)
POWERS—British-American Polo Match (Topical)
ECLAIR—The Witch (Three parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly No. 69 (News).

THURSDAY, JULY 3d, 1913.
IMP—Jane Marries (Comedy)
REX—A Woman's Folly (Drama)
FRONTIER—The Secret of Padre Antonio (Drama)

FRIDAY, JULY 4th, 1913.
VICTOR—The Shifting Fortune (Drama)
POWERS—The Heart of Hernanda (Drama)
NESTOR—He and Himself (Comedy)
NESTOR—To the Brave Belong the Fair (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JULY 5th, 1913.
IMP—Leo, the Indian (Comedy)
IMP—Lightning Sketches by Hy Mayer (Novelty)
101 BISON—At Shiloh (Two parts—Drama)
FRONTIER—A Rose at Sixteen (Comedy)
FRONTIER—A Cactus at Forty-five (Comedy)

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 6th, 1913.
CRYSTAL—The Girl Reporter (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—Muchly Engaged (Comedy)
ECLAIR—In the Night (Comedy)
ECLAIR—How Diamonds Are Made (Industrial)
REX—Suspense (Drama)

MONDAY, JULY 7th, 1913.
IMP—His Mother's Birthday (Drama)
NESTOR—The Proof of the Man (Drama)
GEM—Billy, the Wise Guy (Comedy)

TUESDAY, JULY 8th, 1913.
101 BISON—The Powder Flash of Death (2 parts—Dr.)
CRYSTAL—True Chivalry (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th, 1913.
NESTOR—John the Wagoner (Drama)
POWERS—Elsie's Aunt (Comedy)
ECLAIR—The Trail of the Hanging Rock (2-part Dra.)
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly No. 70 (News)

THURSDAY, JULY 10th, 1913.
IMP—The Wop (Drama)
REX—Beauty and the Beast (3 parts—Drama)
FRONTIER—The Frontier Twins Start Something (Comedy.)

FRIDAY, JULY 11th, 1913.
NESTOR—Four Queens and a Jack (Comedy)
NESTOR—When He Wore the Blue (Comedy)
POWERS—Morgan's Treasure (2-part Drama)
VICTOR—A Modern Witness (Drama)

SATURDAY, JULY 12th, 1913.
IMP—Oh, You Flirt (Comedy)
IMP—Lightning Sketches by Hy Mayer (Novelty)
101 BISON—The Head Hunters (2-part Drama)
FRONTIER—The Line Rider's Sister (Drama)

Mutual Film Corporation Current Releases

CURRENT RELEASES

SUNDAY, JUNE 29th, 1913.
MAJESTIC—One Round O'Brien Comes Back (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—A Modern Lochinvar (Comedy)

MONDAY, JUNE 30th, 1913.
AMERICAN—Quicksands (2 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—For Love of Mabel (Comedy)
RELIANCE—Her Final Choice (Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 1st, 1913.
MAJESTIC—The Golden Jubilee (Topical)
THANHOUSER—King Rene's Daughter (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 2d, 1913.
BRONCHO—All Rivers Meet at Sea (Drama)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 27 (News)
RAMO—I'm No Counterfeiter (Comedy-Drama)
RELIANCE—Dick's Turning (Drama)

THURSDAY, JULY 3rd, 1913.
AMERICAN—Pride of Lonesome (Drama)
KEYSTONE—Rastus and the Gamecock (Comedy)
MUTUAL—(Title Not Reported).
PILOT—The Code of the U. S. A. (Drama)

FRIDAY, JULY 4th, 1913.
KAY-BEE—The Crimson Stain (3 parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—Her Two Jewels (Drama)

SATURDAY, JULY 5th, 1913.
AMERICAN—The Tale of Death Valley (Drama)
MAJESTIC—Gaffney's Gladiator (Comedy)
RELIANCE—Death's Short Cut (Drama)

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 6th, 1913.
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported)
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Reported)

MONDAY, JULY 7th, 1913.
AMERICAN—San Francisco, the Dauntless City (Scenic)
KEYSTONE—Safe In Jail (Comedy)
RELIANCE—A Rural Romance (Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 8th, 1913.
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported)
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Reported)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th, 1913.
BRONCHO—Grand Dad (2-parts Drama)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 28 (News)
RAMO—Man and Woman (2-parts Drama)
RELIANCE—The Wager (Drama)

THURSDAY, JULY 10th, 1913.
AMERICAN—The Foreign Spy (Drama)
KEYSTONE—The Telltale Light (Comedy)
MUTUAL—(Title Not Reported)
PILOT—Sanitary Gulch (Comedy)

FRIDAY, JULY 11th, 1913.
KAY-BEE—The Banshee (2-parts Drama)
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Reported)

SATURDAY, JULY 12th, 1913.
AMERICAN—The Song of the Soup (Comedy)
AMERICAN—A Garden City In California (Scenic)
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported)
RELIANCE—Hearts and Flowers (2-parts Drama)

Exclusive Supply Corporation Current Releases

MONDAY, JUNE 30th, 1913.
DRAGON—Our Future Heroes (Topical)

TUESDAY, JULY 1st, 1913.
GAUMONT—Sauce for the Goose (Comedy)
GAUMONT—Atom Life In the Deep (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 2nd, 1913.
SOLAX—An Unexpected Meeting (Comedy)
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 69 (News)

THURSDAY, JULY 3rd, 1913.
GAUMONT—Tricks In All Trades (Comedy)
GAUMONT—Production of Wine In France (Industry)

FRIDAY, JULY 4th, 1913.
SOLAX—True Hearts (Drama)
LUX—Pat Gets on the Trail (Comedy)
LUX—An Easy Day (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JULY 5th, 1913.
GREAT NORTHERN—Winning a Prize (Comedy)
GREAT NORTHERN—The Trondhjem Railway (Scen.)

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 7th, 1913.
DRAGON—Ticket of Leave Man (2-part Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 8th, 1913.
GAUMONT—His Master's Voice (Drama)
GAUMONT—Making of Tapestry (Industrial)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th, 1913.
SOLAX—The Flea Circus (Scientific & Comedy)
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 70 (News)

THURSDAY, JULY 10th, 1913.
GAUMONT—The Trombone Marathon (Comedy)

FRIDAY, JULY 11th, 1913.
SOLAX—As the Bell Rings (Drama)
LUX—(Title Not Reported)

SATURDAY, JULY 12th, 1913.
GREAT NORTHERN—The Jolly Recruits (Comedy)

Mutual Film Corporation

Executive Offices: 60 Wall Street, New York City

EVERY DAY IS FEATURE DAY WITH THE MUTUAL PROGRAM

THE PROGRESSIVE THEATER EXHIBITS THE MUTUAL PROGRAM

Because it is composed of All-Feature Films, including one, two and three reel subjects. The list of multiple reel features on this page is the greatest collection of money-getters in the world.

IF YOU ARE LOSING MONEY

Cast off the mill-stone of mediocre films which will destroy you and

INSTALL THE MUTUAL PROGRAM

Which has saved hundreds of theaters from failure. Don't delay until some other house has secured the exclusive service of these great films.

Exclusive Agent in the United States and Canada for the following popular brands:

THANHOUSER, KAY-BEE, BRONCHO, MAJESTIC, RELIANCE, AMERICAN, KEYSTONE, MUTUAL EDUCATIONAL and MUTUAL WEEKLY.

RELIANCE	"Ashes"	July 12
KAY-BEE	"The Banshee"	July 11
BRONCHO	"Granddad"	July 9
KAY-BEE	"The Crimson Stain" (3)	July 4
AMERICAN	"Quicksands"	June 30
RELIANCE	"The Tangled Web" (3)	June 28
KAY-BEE	"The Seal of Silence"	June 27
BRONCHO	"The Transgressor"	June 25
GAUMONT	"The Demon of Destruction"	June 24
KAY-BEE	"The Failure of Success"	June 20
BRONCHO	"From the Shadows"	June 18
THANHOUSER	"The Snare of Fate"	June 17
AMERICAN	"The Soul of a Thief"	June 16
RELIANCE	"Half a Chance" (3)	June 14
KAY-BEE	"The Boomerang" (3)	June 13
KAY-BEE	"A True Believer"	June 6
BRONCHO	"A Dixie Mother"	June 4
RELIANCE	"The Master Cracksman"	May 31
KAY-BEE	"A Child of War"	May 30
BRONCHO	"Drummer of the 8th"	May 28
THANHOUSER	"Carmen" (3)	May 27
AMERICAN	"Ashes of Three"	May 26
KAY-BEE	"The Miser"	May 23
BRONCHO	"The Sea Dog"	May 21
KAY-BEE	"For Love of the Flag"	May 16
BRONCHO	"A Slave's Devotion"	May 14
RELIANCE	"The Big Boss"	May 14
THANHOUSER	"The Marble Heart"	May 13
MAJESTIC	"Children of St. Anne"	May 6
KAY-BEE	"A Black Conspiracy"	May 2
RELIANCE	"The Bawler Out" (3)	Apr. 30
BRONCHO	"Bread Cast Upon the Waters"	Apr. 30
AMERICAN	"Oil Upon Troubled Waters"	Apr. 28
KAY-BEE	"Will o' the Wisp"	Apr. 25
BRONCHO	"Retrogression"	Apr. 23
BRONCHO	"A Southern Cinderella" (3)	Apr. 16
RELIANCE	"Held for Ransom"	Apr. 16
KAY-BEE	"On Fortune's Wheel"	Apr. 11
BRONCHO	"The Grey Sentinel"	Apr. 9
KAY-BEE	"With Lee in Virginia"	Apr. 4
BRONCHO	"The Sinews of War"	Apr. 2
RELIANCE	"The Judge's Vindication"	Apr. 2
THANHOUSER	"Cymbeline"	Mar. 28
BRONCHO	"The Iconoclast" (3)	Mar. 26
BRONCHO	"The Pride of the South" (3)	Mar. 19
RELIANCE	"The Vengeance of Heaven"	Mar. 19
KAY-BEE	"The Sergeant's Secret"	Mar. 14
BRONCHO	"The Sins of the Father"	Mar. 12
KAY-BEE	"The Lost Despatch"	Mar. 7
BRONCHO	"The Barrier"	Mar. 5
RELIANCE	"The Man from the Outside" (3)	Mar. 5

AKC

STATES RIGHT MEN:
EXHIBITORS WHO CARE:

AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION

1018 LONGACRE BUILDING
BROADWAY AT 42nd ST.
NEW YORK CITY

HAS ENTERED THE FIELD, HANDLING

PEERLESS EMPRESS COLUMBUS HECLA AJAX

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN COPYRIGHT FEATURES

Our Goods Are Right
Our Prices Are Right
Our Methods Are Right

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION

AKC

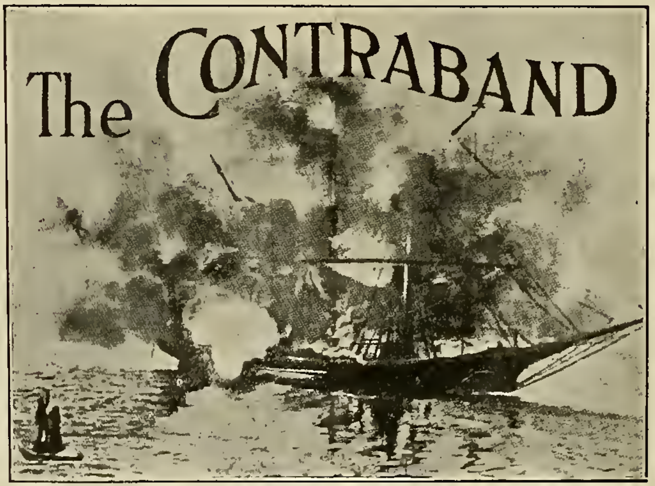
1018 LONGACRE BUILDING
BROADWAY AT 42nd ST.
NEW YORK CITY

AKC

THE KING OF FEATURES

State Right Buyers Don't Miss the Best Opportunity of Your Life

Right Terms to the Right People



The World's Greatest Sensational Three Reel Feature Ever Produced

Write, Wire or Call for State Rights
Large Territories to You

A STORY OF THE SEA

A Burning Vessel Blown Up by Dynamite in Mid Ocean. A Helpless Man and Woman on a Small Raft at the Mercy of the Waves. Sensational from Start to Finish. Watch Our Future Announcements for World's Sensational Features.

Monarch Feature Film Co.
149 North 9th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Phone Filbert, 5483
CODE CONTRA
CABLE ADDRESS, "SCHWARZKRAU"

Gaumont Regulars

RELEASES

JUNE 25	The Gaumont Weekly No. 68.	1 sheet posters
JUNE 26	When the Cat's Away. Kings of the Kennels.	" " " "
JULY 1	Sauce for the Goose. Atom Life in the Deep.	" " " "
JULY 2	The Gaumont Weekly No. 69.	" "
JULY 3	Tricks in All Trades. Production of Wine in France.	" " " "
JULY 8	His Master's Voice. Making of Tapestry.	" " " "
JULY 9	Gaumont Weekly No. 70.	" "

ALL UP TO GAUMONT'S USUAL HIGHEST STANDARD

WATCH OUT For release of No. 1 of the greatest series of cracksman vs. detective dramas: "Fantomas, Phantom Crook."

RELEASES

Gaumont Co.

FLUSHING, N. Y.

WE RENIG—
WE WITHDRAW
all previous announcements
STATE RIGHTS for

"100 Years of Mormonism"

are NOT for sale

Murder of Joseph Smith at The Carthage Jail.

The demand for bookings from the best theatres, and the excellent returns pouring in from companies now touring, have decided us to exploit this money-maker ourselves. We have bought back Illinois and the other States already sold and can book all territory East of the Rockies, and North of the Mason & Dixon line. Therefore theatres that want this six reel feature on equitable sharing terms, communicate at once with ERNEST SHIPMAN, Mgr. Road tours, 7th Floor, Candler Building, 220 West 42nd Street, New York City.

The GOLDEN STATE MOTION PICTURE CO. H. M. RUSSELL
General Mgr.
PHONE BRYANT 6886

HECLA FEATURE FILM OF PARIS AND LONDON

ZOE

(A Woman's Last Card)

From the world-read novel "ZOE."
by Coralie Stanton and Heath Hosken

3 REELS 3 REELS
3 REELS

Every buyer who has seen this production has bought it.

State right buyers don't miss this magnificent masterpiece

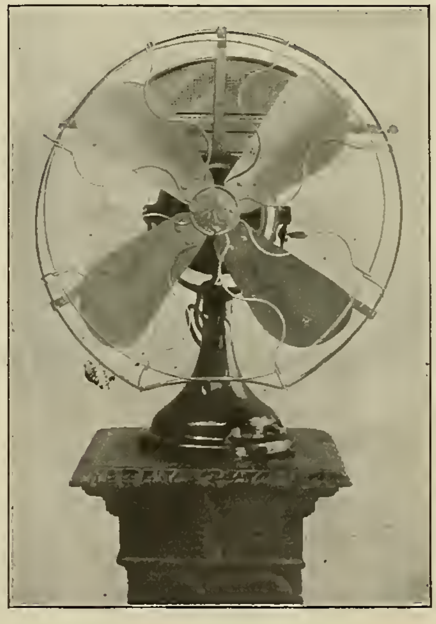
Remember it's a "HECLA." Presenting Regina Badet, the celebrated Parisian actress and dancer

STATE RIGHTS NOW BOOKING

1, 3, and 6 Sheet Posters Still Photographs, Heralds, etc.

ALBERT BLINKHORN
110-112 West 40th Street NEW YORK
Agent for Hecla and Hepworth Films

"THE AIR IS SO PURE AND SWEET"



That's what every patron says who visits a theatre equipped with

The OZONATOR

Made entirely of brass, and attaches to the rear of the fan guard on any electric fan—either oscillating or stationary. The draft of the fan disseminates the delicately scented disinfectant throughout the hall, destroying all unpleasant odors and purifying the air. Does equally efficient work in winter, without the fan, as the evaporation of the liquid continues. Being placed behind the fan, The Ozonator is concealed, and no expense is incurred for operating, as no attendant is required and no additional current is consumed.

Highly recommended by theatres, moving picture houses, hospitals, factories and homes. The fluid used is a highly effective disinfectant, delicately scented—a choice of a dozen odors is offered. Each machine sent complete with one pint of deodorizer—sufficient to last about two weeks.

PRICE, $2.50 EACH

L. BARTH & SON
32-36 Cooper Sq., New York City

MAMMOTH, THRILLING, SENSATIONAL
DETECTIVE STORY

ON THE TRAIL OF THE SPIDER GANG

3250 FEET OF THE MOST THRILLING
AND DARING ADVENTURE EVER
DEPICTED IN MOTION PICTURES!

TERRITORY ALREADY SOLD

Illinois, Wisconsin, Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia, New Jersey, California, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Texas

ONLY 7 SETS LEFT TO BE SOLD
FOR THE REMAINING TERRITORY

SELECT YOUR OWN TERRITORY AND WIRE IN YOUR OFFER FOR THIS GREATEST OF MONEY MAKERS

THIS AD WILL NOT APPEAR AGAIN. OUR NEXT AD WILL CONTAIN THE NAMES OF THE LUCKY BUYERS

DON'T WAIT — WIRE IN NOW

APEX FILM CO., 145 W. 45th ST., N. Y.

LICENSED FILM STORIES

VITAGRAPH.

THE GLOVE—(July 7).—An unexpected matter of business prevents Henry Lawrence from staying to a dance with his wife, and he returns to the house, promising to call for her at the end of the evening. Engrossed in his work, he forgets all about her and she is brought home by Count Vladimer Bredowski, whom she has met at the ball.

After this, the Count becomes a regular caller at the Lawrence's and often goes out riding or driving with Mrs. Lawrence when her husband is too busy to accompany her. The young woman becomes extremely piqued with her husband and contrasts his actions with the ever willingness of the Count to oblige her.

One day, coming home from a gallop through the park, the Count attempts to embrace Mrs. Lawrence and begs her to fly with him and let him give her the love she desires. Fearing herself, she goes to her husband and asks him to take her to Europe, but he replies that he has too much to do and cannot spare the time. Enraged at what she considers his neglect, Mrs. Lawrence goes to the telephone, and, calling up the Count, tells him that she will join him at once.

When, having arrived at the Count's apartment, he attempts to take her in his arms, she realizes what she is doing and tries to get away from him. He will not let her go, however, but bars the way to the door. Just then, Henry, having suspected where his wife has gone, hammers at the door for admittance. Mrs. Lawrence makes her escape by jumping out of the window to the ground, and, taking her husband's taxi, she returns at once to her home.

Henry is amazed when he sees that his wife is not in the room, but, seeing her glove there and noticing the open window, he guesses what has happened. After soundly thrashing the Count, he returns to his home and hears the whole story from his wife, who asks him to set her free. His love for his wife surges back to his heart and he begs her to stay, promising that he will make up for all his neglect of the past. She readily consents, happy to have awakened again the tender passion in his breast.

COUNT BARBER (July 8).—A million-dollar legacy having enabled Miss Ophelia to give up her boarding house, she goes to New York in search of a gay time and a handsome husband. Arrived at the city with her maid, Belinda, she takes a suite in the Hotel Magnifique and prepares for conquest.

The day after her arrival she sallies out, accompanied as usual by her faithful attendant, and visits the parlors of Mme. Du Bluff, an instructor in deportment and etiquette. Belinda annoys the madame by imitating her behind her back and is rather suddenly turned out of the house.

On the way home she makes a few purchases and, seeing a rather distinguished looking man watching her, she drops a parcel, thus giving him the opportunity to pick it up for her and so break the conversational ice. She finds that he is a barber's assistant and that he is then due to be at work, so she makes a date to meet him later on. Hearing of Miss Ophelia's millions, Mme. Du Bluff determines to get all she can of them. She tells her that she would like to introduce her to her brother, "the Count," and a meeting place is arranged, in the park.

Belinda grows suspicious when she sees her mistress going out without her, a thing she never ordinarily does, and follows her to the park. She sees her mistress introduced to "the Count" by Mme. Du Bluff, who cleverly fades away, leaving them together. Belinda is furious when she sees her mistress being taken in by this man, whom she recognizes as the barber with whom she herself has a later appointment. When she tells Miss Ophelia of the man's real identity, she is not believed, but the next day she takes her mistress to the barber shop, where they see him shaving a customer. The manner in which Mme. Du Bluff has tried to fool her at once becomes evident to Miss Ophelia, who rushes into the shop and exacts summary vengeance from the terrified "Count Barber," fastening him in his own chair and giving him a generous bath of soap-suds, hair-oil and scalp-tonics of all kinds.

A MILLINERY BOMB (July 9).—Although Reggie Burrows is afflicted with toothache, his wife, Cora, presses him for money for a new dress and he gives her one hundred dollars. It is soon spent on a swell hat and the latest thing in gowns. Reggie stays at home, reading the paper, and sees an article about bombs sent out in hat boxes. Shortly after this the hat is delivered and placed on a chair by the butler. Reggie sees it and, thinking it a bomb, sends for the police. Officers Jack Hogan and Jimmy Boyle answer the call and come into the house. When the case is explained to them they suggest that the bomb be placed in a tub of water, which is done. Cora arrives home, and, finding the new hat in the wash tub, goes into hysterics. The policemen beat it hastily and leave Reggie to make what explanations he can. The lady is pacified by another hundred and goes out again to buy an even more gorgeous creation.,

SOLITAIRES (July 9).—Frank and Julia are very good friends, both being single, and live in adjoining apartments. Getting a letter from a friend who asks him to buy an engagement ring, Jack does not know what to do and fears lest he make a mistake. He asks Julia to help him and together they sally forth to the jewelry store, where the ring is purchased.

At the store they are seen by Mrs. Gossip, who tells everyone that they are engaged, with the result that the couple are deluged with presents and congratulations. Julia is furious, blaming Jack for the occurrence, but he is more amused than anything else. Finally Julia is persuaded that a real engagement between them would not be so bad, after all, and they go out again to buy yet another solitaire.

THE CARPENTER (July 10).—It is a source of great grief to Alkanah Dyzer that his son Rupert has joined the rebel army. He drives him from the house, telling him that he never wishes to see him again. Rupert's brothers are also furious with him and will likewise have nothing to do with him. George Dyzer, who has joined the Northern army, loses his arm in a battle and is made prisoner by the rebels.

While in the hospital he makes the acquaintance of the "stranger in gray," a man greatly beloved by the soldiers. The stranger takes him to his brother and by his strange influence causes the hate between the two men to vanish.

The stranger in gray arrives at Alkanah Dyzer's house just as he has heard the news of the loss of his whole fortune. He is cordially welcomed and offered the best hospitality. While in the house the stranger prevents a growing rift between John Dyzer and his wife Emily, who is almost on the point of elopement with Harry Faulkner, a visitor to the house. By reminding them of their dead child and their duty to their remaining little one, Lillie, he causes husband and wife to realize their real love for one another.

The stranger calls Mr. Dyzer and his family into the parlor, where he bids him to take down his father's portrait, reputed to be very valuable. Taking off the back, the stranger shows them that between the painting and the backing had been hidden a fortune in bills, put there by his father. This treasure is enough to re-establish Dyzer's fortunes.

To complete their happiness the stranger stays on for the birthday party that is being given that evening. Leaving the house for a few moments he returns, bringing with him the two soldier boys, George and Rupert, whom he presents to their father and mother.

The work of the stranger being completed, he bids all farewell and passes out into the night. As he blesses them on his departure, they are brought to think of the Carpenter of Nazareth and of the loving kindness that watches over us all.

THE SPIRIT OF THE ORIENT (July 11).—A wealthy Englishman living in the suburbs of Bombay, the Hon. Sir Leslie Gillespie, is ensnared into marrying a beautiful but half-caste Hindu girl. He had rescued her from starvation and taken care of her, thus coming within the fascination of her dangerous wiles.

The girl, Normallee, loves a neighbor of Gillespie, Abdalla el-Ashur, and conspires with him against the life of her husband. Abdalla gives her a vial of poison, instructing her to drop it into her husband's wine.

Normallee puts a few drops of the poison into Sir Leslie's glass, but the dose is not sufficient to kill him. He becomes violently sick but is pulled through by Dr. Ericson, another neighbor and a very dear friend, who had hoped that Sir Leslie would have married his daughter, Madeline.

The next day Normallee gives Sir Leslie more of the poison, but again does not give him a full dose. Dr. Ericson discovers that his sickness in each case came after he had drunk the wine poured out by his wife, and, putting two and two together, reaches the conclusion that Normallee is trying to poison him. He tells Gillespie, who is furious, and restrains him when he would go at once to his wife to thrash out the matter. He tells Sir Leslie to wait for further developments before taking any action.

A day or two later Abdalla asks Normallee about the poison and tells her that she should have emptied the whole vial. He meets her in the garden, where she is waiting for her husband to come for refreshments, and seeing the glasses of wine there, he empties the whole phial into one of them. When Sir Leslie comes, Abdalla tries to push the poisoned wine towards him, but Sir Leslie will not take it. Pretending to be explaining a game of checkers, Sir Leslie keeps on moving the glasses around so that Abdalla does not know which glass contains the poison. Sir Leslie does, however, and succeeds in passing it to Abdalla, who, on drinking it becomes seized by convulsions and dies a horrible death.

Normallee, who sees that her treachery is known, rushes away, and to avoid public disgrace, drowns herself in the lake of the park. Sir Leslie seeks consolation in the society of Madeline, whom he later makes his wife.

THE MOULDING (July 12).—While out in the country in search of pretty subjects for his brush, Walter Dale, an artist, meets Edith Jones, an uneducated but extremely pretty country girl. He is at once struck by her unusual beauty and long before he has finished the painting he has fallen in love with her. He asks her to be his wife and she gladly accepts him. When he introduces her to his people he is somewhat ashamed of her, as she is abolutely ignorant and knows nothing of correct dress or etiquette, and seems almost unable to learn.

After a while Edith discovers that her husband is ashamed of her and determines to leave him. She speaks of this to Mrs. Carson, the only friend she has made, and is invited by her to go on a trip to Europe. Mrs. Carson promises that she will so mould her that she will return a fully fledged society woman, able to hold her own everywhere.

Walter has no idea where she has gone and the detectives put on her trail are unable to find any trace of her. He realizes why she has left him and is filled with remorse that he had not been more considerate of her. He is obliged to give up the search for her, as it is necessary for him to take a business trip to Paris. In Paris he receives an invitation to the embassy ball and meets his wife there in the company of Mrs. Carson. She is introduced to him, as though he were a stranger, under the name of Miss Fleming. After taking his hand coldly, she leaves him to dance with Harold Anderson, a wealthy American obviously very much in love with her.

Seeing her husband watching her, Edith encourages Anderson to flirt outrageously with her, and when Anderson leaves her in search of refreshments, Walter goes to her and angrily demands an explanation, but she leaves him with a laugh.

That night, all his love for her having returned, he prowls about the grounds of her house longing for a sight of her. She comes out on the terrace and he climbs up to meet her. At first she will not listen to his pleadings for forgiveness, but at last she allows him again to take her to his arms. Her happiness is now complete, for she has gained her heart's desire and won for all time the love of her husband.

EDISON.

OVER THE GREAT DIVIDE IN COLORADO (July 7).—This picture was taken along the route of the highest standard gauge railway in the world. A considerable part of the route of this line lies not only above the timber line but above the snow line as well. Huge valleys thousands of feet deep drift by; white clouds float placidly hundreds of feet beneath us, and roaring torrents, swollen by the melting snow, flash down the mountain sides like bright, eager swords.

Not the least interesting of all is the equipment of this railroad of cloudland. Almost incredible grades and curves are successfully negotiated. The line frequently doubles back on the same mountain side above its old tracks, and at one place it is possible to jump off a passenger train, take a gentle stroll up the hill, and board the same train twenty minutes later five miles further along its course. In some parts of the line, as many as three engines are used to push the train up the terrific grade. Snow-sheds are placed at all critical points to avert accidents by avalanches.

WINSOME WINNIE'S WAY (July 7).—Winnie can't help being pretty and altogether delightful, so it really isn't her fault that the boys pay her so much attention. John takes Winnie to a picnic in his machine. At their arrival the young men immediately desert the other girls and flock about Winnie. The other girls, greatly chagrined, refuse to have anything more to do with the picnic, turn their backs on Winnie, and walk away. John, indignant at Winnie's apparent liking for the other men, accompanies the girls. Winnie is greatly vexed at this turn in affairs. Leaving the boys at the picnic grounds, she follows John and the girls.

An approaching thunder storm threatens the girls' dainty summer finery, and they attempt to seek refuge in the house of a confirmed woman-hater. The woman-hater refuses them admittance in no uncertain terms. John argues with him, but the man remains obdurate.

At this juncture, Winnie, who has been pursuing the girls and John, appears at the cabin window. Winnie smiles at him appealingly and the woman-hater discovers that like the rest of mankind he is not proof against the irresistible Winnie. Despite the protestations of the aggrieved John, he opens the door and invites Winnie inside.

When Winnie begs the rapidly melting woman-hater to let the other girls come inside, he is unable to refuse. On account of this intercession the girls readily forgive Winnie for alienating the affections of their beaus, and when a little later the boys, driving by, are called into the cabin by this masterful girl, it seems that the picnic is going to be a success after all.

All this time, however, John has stood sulkily to one side, and has refused to meet Winnie's tentative overtures of reconciliation. The appearance of the

Oh, What A Week!

Exhibitors, You Cannot Afford To Miss It!

YOU will see the advances made by Cinematography and Electricity. The latest projecting machines, projecting pictures on various up-to-date screens, chairs, fans, slides and other advertising novelties. The most approved lighting systems. Musical instruments of every description suitable for motion picture accompaniment, and hundreds of other novelties displaying the educational and scientific side of our business.

An ELABORATE ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAM has been arranged for you, your friends and families.

DON'T FORGET, CONVENTION and EXPOSITION, GRAND CENTRAL PALACE, JULY 7TH TO 12TH

NEW YORK STATE EXHIBITORS

State Convention, July 5th, at Imperial Hotel
We expect a good representation from each Local

IF YOU'RE NOT WISE TO IT, WRITE TRIGGER, 136 THIRD AVE., NEW YORK CITY ex-woman hater, dressed in the height of fashion of a day happily long since defunct, puts an end to John's obstinacy. For the reformed misanthrope declares stoutly that if John doesn't pay attention to the girl, he will. So everything ends happily, and Winnie rewards the delighted old matchmaker with a kiss.

SCENES OF OTHER DAYS (July 8).—At the battle of Piedmont Heights, one of the culminating episodes of Sherman's march to the sea, a wounded Confederate sharpshooter is saved from death, and carried into the Northern lines by a Union scout. During the convalescence of the prisoner, a warm friendship springs up between the two men, which is interrupted by the return of the Southerner, and the close of the war shortly afterward.

Years later, the Northerner is robbed of his money on the train, and forced to alight at Atlanta. He recognizes a gentleman at the station as his former captive and friend. The Southerner, with the characteristic hospitality of his race, immediately gives up all other affairs to suitably entertain his friend.

After luncheon in the Southerner's comfortable home, the two men ride about the city in an automobile, that the Northern man may see the prosperous city which has arisen from the smoking ashes Sherman left.

The Peace monument, in Piedmont Park, marking the spot of the desperate battle in which they met, is of course of the utmost interest to the two soldiers. To the ordinary spectator, the splendid public buildings, the shady streets, the towering skyscrapers and the evident signs of business activity so typical of the new South will be even more interesting.

In addition to numerous views of this beautiful and progressive city, characteristic pictures of the Hon. J. G. Woodward, Mayor of Atlanta, and of Governor Joseph M. Brown, governor of Georgia, are shown.

Finally, after the Northern veteran has seen all the sights, and met most of the prominent people in the city, his generous friend lends him sufficient funds to continue his trip, takes him to the train and wishes him Godspeed on his way. The Northerner leaves with a firm resolution to return for a longer visit to this delightful city of charming people.

HIS MOTHER'S-IN-LAW VISIT (July 9).—Mrs. Brandon is such a prim, particular person that you would never believe she had ever been so unconventional as to give up school teaching to get married. It is a delightful thing to see a young wife taking an interest in her home, but Mrs. Brandon rather overdoes it. She takes so much interest in her home that she forgets to take enough interest in her husband.

When Brandon comes into the house wearing his wet rubbers, Mrs. Brandon scolds him, not because she is anxious about his health, but because she doesn't want her carpets to be spoiled. When he lights a cigar, it is her curtains rather than his throat that she is worried about.

Brandon is a good-natured, easy-going chap, but his wife's exactions gradually wear on his disposition. He falls into the habit of going to the club in the evening with his friend Bill. Mrs. Brandon, unable to appreciate her husband's dissatisfaction with his home, is deeply aggrieved and sends for her mother. Owing to their sudden marriage, Brandon has never met his mother-in-law, and her prospective arrival seems to him to be the last straw.

However, Mrs. Nowall is a charming woman with a great deal of experience and tact. Discovering immediately the source of the discord in the Brandon household, she gives her daughter good advice, with the result that the husband is surprised to find a fashionably dressed young woman awaiting his return from business, in place of the severe looking person he is accustomed to expect. Instead of being treated coldly, Bill is greeted with enthusiasm and asked to stay to dinner, and afterward Mrs. Brandon lights her husband's cigarettes with her own hands.

IN THE OLD DUTCH TIMES (July 11).—Peter Van Horn and his wife, while making a trip on horseback, are killed by accident and a highwayman decides to impersonate Peter. Because Hulda, Peter's little daughter, smiles at him, the highwayman's heart is softened and instead of putting her out of the way, he takes her to a roadside inn and leaves her in the care of the mercenary innkeeper and his shrewish wife. He then goes to Rotterdam to pose as the heir to the Van Horn estates.

Five years later Hulda is very unhappy. The innkeeper and his wife have made a little drudge out of her. She is dressed in rags, made to work hard and frequently beaten. One day Hulda goes to the spring for water. Frightened by a flock of geese, she drops her heavy pitcher and it breaks. Hans, the goose tender, comes to her aid and promises to protect her from the ferocious monsters. Hulda forgets her troubles and she and Hans go dancing to the spring hand in hand. Just as Hulda and Hans have discovered that Hans is a fairy prince and is going to carry Hulda away some day on a beautiful white horse, the innkeeper's wife comes upon them. She drags Hulda away from her little playmate and whips her severely. A blind old botanist hears the child's cries and interrupts the woman at her cruel occupation. He gives her money and takes Hulda to his own home.

Meanwhile the highwayman, assuming Peter Van Horn's name, has prospered greatly in Holland. Repentant and anxious to atone for his crimes, he sends word to the innkeeper that he is coming to America to get the little girl. On the way across his ship is wrecked and the usurper doomed, but not before he has written a full confession and sealed it in a bottle.

Hans, disconsolate because his little playmate has gone away, is sitting on the seashore writing "Hulda" in the sand, when the bottle is washed up at his feet. He reads the confession and takes it to the burgomaster. Then the burgomaster and Hans hury to the botanist's home just in time to save Hulda from the villainous innkeeper. Hulda is proclaimed the heiress of the Van Horn fortune and the old botanist is appointed her guardian. Then, to make Hulda happy, the old botanist adopts Hans and everything ends as it should.

THE DIAMOND CROWN (Being the first of the series of Kate Kirby's cases July 12).—Mrs. Wethersby comes to the station with the complaint that several thefts have been committed in her house, and Kate Kirby, a detective, is allowed to undertake the investigation as her first case. Accordingly she enters Mrs. Wttbersby's house as her private secretary. She subjects the inmates of the house to a severe scrutiny. Besides Mrs. Wtehersby, the household consists of a dissipated son and three servants of suspicious appearance. While writing invitations to a house party in Mrs. Wethersby's room, Miss Kirby discovers a revolver in the drawer of the desk, which Mrs. Wethersby explains she keeps on hand for protection. An inspection of the desk and the wall of the room causes a peculiar expression to pass across Miss Kirby's face. With the aid of a piece of chewing gum, she takes an impression of the key to Mrs. Wethersby's room, and has a duplicate key made for herself.

The guests arrive at the house party and go to their rooms to dress for dinner. Miss Kirby, sitting at Mrs. Wethersby's desk as the hostess makes her preparations, is aware of a subtle delicate perfume, which is markedly different from the odor of the cologne with which Mrs. Wethersby is liberally spraying herself. Immediately the girl's suspicions are confirmed, and she sends immediate instructions to the police. That night after the guests have retired, Miss Kirby steals along the dimly lighted hall, and listens with her ear against the wall outside Mrs. Wethersby's room. Suddenly she glides to the door, unlocks it with her duplicate key, and enters. Taking the revolver from the drawer of the desk, she waits quietly. After a few moments, the wall of the room slides out of place without a sound, and Mrs. Wethersby, herself the thief, enters through the secret panel, carrying the jewel boxes of the young heiress, whose room is next to hers. Confronted by the quiet figure of her secretary, Mrs. Wethersby rushes to the desk drawer. The discovery that the revolver is missing leaves her no other alternative than to await the arrival of the police, who quickly answer the young detective's signal.

SELIG.

THE TRAIL OF CARDS (July 7).—In a bustling little coast town a blustering man, who poses as a sea captain, and a trig U. S. Revenue officer, are in love with the same girl. The latter gets word from headquarters to get busy about his duties, as a gang of smugglers are operating very successfully in his vicinity. One day this belle of the town goes to the drug store to make a purchase, and finds the old druggist playing solitaire. While they are talking, an earthquake wrecks the building, and she and the druggist are dropped into a chasm that yawns under the floor. It happens that the said captain is the leader of the smugglers, and they have tunneled from the sea under the town. Those precious rascals are in the tunnel at the time of the seismic disturbance, and the girl drops down into the arms of her rough wooer. Fearing detection, he and his gang hustle the girl and the druggist to an island. As they go through the tunnel, the druggist drops his cards, blazing the way. A child, falling in the tunnel, is rescued by the revenue officer, who detects the clue, trails the gang to its island, fastens and captures them and his true love—a credit to his calling and a joy to himself.

OLD DOC YAK (Seligettes. Series No. 1) (July 8).—Sidney Smith, the artist, incurs the displeasure

Commercial films for rent. All leading Independent makes. Posters and Banners free.
Feature Film & Calcium Light Co.,
125 Fourth Avenue,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

$3.50 CRYSTAL WHITE
$4.00 SILVER FINISH
Curtain Coatings
PREPAID
ALFRED C. STANGE, 15 S Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

THE SIMPSON SOLAR SCREEN
The only Metallic Screen without seams, patented. Buy the real thing. Beware of imitations
ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.
No. 113 W. 132nd St., N. Y. City

SHERLOCK HOLMES SERIES
Eight subjects to choose from—two reels each. Territory in Indiana, Kentucky, Wisconsin (south of Green Bay), Illinois (north of Springfield).
Almo Feature Film Co. (Inc.)
D. W. McKinney, Mgr.
36 W. Randolph St. Chicago
Phone, Randolph 2345

KEEP YOUR CASHIERS BUSY WITH OUR FEATURES
Write for complete list.
Booking now the Itala Masterpiece "DREAD OF DOOM" and other big productions.
M. & F. FEATURE FILM CO.
167 W. Washington St. Chicago, Ill.

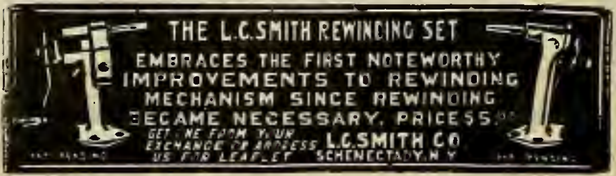
WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US!
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176 N. State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

Junior Professional Camera
and Film Making Outfit, simplest method, none better. World's greatest productions made with this camera. Expert advice and guarantee. Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Perforators, Raw Film, Lenses. Developing done, whole building to the business Write for catalogue.
Eberhard Schneider, 219 Second Ave., N. Y.

Stop the Leakage
Use Corcoran Tanks.
No. 6 price list is a money saver.
A. J. CORCORAN, INC.
11½ John Street New York City

We buy and sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
538 S. Dearborn Street Chicago, Ill.

THE VERY BEST VAUDEVILLE SERVICE
W. S. CLEVELAND, Mgr.
Fidelity Booking Offices
THEATRES, PARKS, FAIRS, CLUBS, CABARETS
Knickerbocker Theatre Building 1402 Broadway, N. Y. C.



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET
L.C.SMITH CO
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

TO MOVING PICTURE MANAGERS

Just What You Have Been Waiting For—Gaston Anchini's Remarkable Invention

THE KINEMATOPHONE

WHICH WILL POSITIVELY GIVE LIFE TO ANY MOVING PICTURE

Now being demonstrated daily to moving picture managers at the offices of Counihan and Shannon, Suite 601-602, Geo. M. Cohan Theatre Building, 1482 Broadway, New York City.

To live managers who are constantly on the lookout for something new to increase their business this instrument speaks for itself. One operator can take care of the kinematophone and piano at the same time.

Address THE KINEMATOPHONE CO., (Inc.,) W. J. Counihan, Pres. and General Mgr.

In Care of COUNIHAN & SHANNON, Suite 601-602, Geo. M. Cohan Theatra Bldg., 1482 Broadway, New York

FOR FEATURE FILMS SPECIAL KEYBOARDS CAN BE ARRANGED, DEPICTING EVERY EFFECT

BY THE COMBINATION OF KEYS, SEVERAL MOST STARTLING EFFECTS—FOR INSTANCE, THE STARTING OF A RAILROAD TRAIN—THE ESCAPE OF THE STEAM—THE RINGING OF THE ENGINE BELL—THE RUMBLE OF THE CARS CAN ALL BE PRODUCED AT ONE TIME.

A Few of the Sounds Produced by the Pressure of the Keys:

Engine Whistle, Station Master's Trumpet, Whistle, Siren, Steamboat, Steamer, Auto Horn, Lion, Tiger, Pig, Dog, Rooster, Bird, A Kiss, Village Bells, Ambulance Gong, Sheep, Sleigh Bells, Doorbell, Knock at the Door, Rapid Firing Gun,Tambourine and Cymbals, Clock, Cymbals, Engine Exhaust, Anvil, Ox, Thunder Storm and Rain, Chains, Applause, Motor—Auto or Motor Boat, Rumble of Trains, Breaking of Dishes, Aeroplane Motor, Snare Drum, Trotting Horse, Galloping Horse, Rifle Shot, Bicycle Bell, Ocean Waves, Car Bell and Rumble, Telephone, Sawing Wood, Cannon Shot, Saxophone, Chimes, Baby Crying, Pipe Organ.

Keyboard of the Kinematophone, with sounds produced illustrated above each key. This illustration gives some idea of how the keyboard would appear above the fallboard of a piano.

SIZE OF INSTRUMENT, 43 INCHES HIGH, 47 INCHES LONG, 25 INCHES WIDE.

DEMONSTRATIONS DAILY FROM 1 to 4 P. M.

"Oh, East is East, and West is West,
And never the twain shall meet—
But the Deagan 'Bell' in a picture show
Brings both of them to her feet."
(With greatest apologies to Kipling)

WE don't often write poetry, but sometimes we feel like singing loud praises when we get a bunch of letters from exhibitors all over the country telling about the way their business has increased since they began to feature musical programs with the pictures, using our novelty instruments.

Why don't you get in on this, friend exhibitor, and do just as well? You know the weather is getting pretty hot now and things will be mighty slow for a while. Then it's time to do something. Liven things up and get something new.

Get a Set of Deagan's Beautiful Novelty Instruments

They are played from keyboard like a piano. Anybody can play them. Will work great as a solo. Better and less expensive than any vaudeville act. Easy to operate and easy to install. No complicated wiring. Your musician or operator can install any of our instruments in less than half an hour.

Our Musical Electrical Bells greatly improved in tone and action sell from $42.00 Per Set and Up

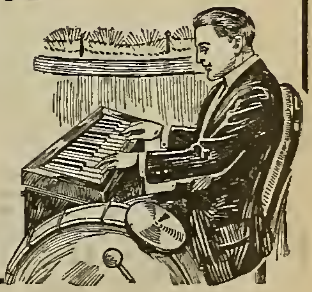
Our Electrical Cathedral Chimes

are beautiful instruments for your orchestra or lobby.

Our Organ Chimes, Electrical Marimbaphones, Orchestra Chimes, etc., are all attractions, bound to make a great hit in a motion picture theatre.

Write for our Catalogue F.



J. C. DEAGAN

1770 BERTEAU AVENUE CHICAGO, U. S. A.

of the Sunday Editor by his oft-repeated failure to report at the art room on time. A moving picture producer one morning applies for, and obtains, permission from the newspaper to reproduce in animated form their comic supplement character, "Old Doc Yak." The producer's requirements call for one thousand separate, carefully prepared original drawings from the pen of Artist Smith before noon of that day. The Sunday Editor rushes to the art room, but Smith has not shown up that morning. Along about noon the artist comes sauntering in very leisurely. The Sunday Editor, peeved at Smith's seeming indifference to newspaper office discipline, tells him of the work before him and that one thousand drawings must be absolutely finished inside of an hour. Smith offers to bet $50 that he can accomplish the task. The Editor bets him that he can't and the stakes are placed in the hands of another artist. Then we see a close-up view of Smith's hand as it rapidly draws and inks in a face of the ever laughable goat. This face then comes to life and its contortions are wonderfully amusing. Next he draws a scene showing "Doc" standing in a room looking intently at a bee. The drawing suddenly comes to life and the antics of the pair are truly funny. Another scene shows an enlarged view of "Doc's" face after it has been stung by the bee. This and many other amusing and novel scenes are climaxed by the unique illusion which is secured in the finis piece. Needless to say, Smith wins his bet and the art room takes a vacation for the afternoon, while the money is spent.

A JOLT FOR THE JANITOR (July 8).—A comical story of the Flannigan Flats, showing how the janitor got the worst of it when, through his carelessness, water came in through the roof and leaked from one flat to another.

THE REFORMATION OF DAD (July 9).—Tom Jones is a good farmer when sober, but a noisome pest when in liquor. His son and daughter, not to remark his wife, are much distressed over his growing weakness. One day the good doctor brings him home from the town groggery and tells the family that their "awful Dad" will soon have delirium tremens if he does not reform. An itinerant show with a menagerie comes that way, and the clever son digs into his savings and hires the outfit for a day. He stocks the barnyard with the animals. When the old man comes home at nightfall, he staggers out to milk a cow, and encounters a camel instead. He rushes into the barn and collides with an elephant. Then he flees to his room and real monkeys swarm over his bed. His family finally rescues him and he takes the pledge, promising never to drink again. The reform accomplished by this drastic method sticks, so it saves a good farmer for a useful life.

MADE A COWARD (July 10).—Bud Harris, a young miner with a reputation for courage, goes prospecting in the desert with Tom Jones in an attempt to locate a turquoise mine. Their water gives out and their horses die on the way. Bud thinks that Tom has water in his canteen and strikes him down. Then the terrible, haunting thought of murdering his friend and the loneliness of the desert possess him with such fear that he flees the spot in terror, an abject coward. Tom revives, finds water and discovers a rich mine. Bud, after dragging himself out of the sandy wastes, is laid low with fever, and when he comes to himself seems to be a nerveless wreck. He becomes the butt on a ranch, where he finds employment, and is beaten and kicked about—never resenting these humiliations. One day he meets his old partner, Tom, who comes as one from the dead to tell him of his fortune. Tom exonerates Bud and tells him that he has a share in the mine. Then the coward of his conscience undergoes a complete regeneration and he goes back to the ranch and thrashes the fellows who had enjoyed insulting him. He next joins his partner and buys a full line of supplies—including an ample quantity of water to serve them enroute to their mine.

BUDD DOBLE COMES BACK (July 11).—A spirited drama of the track, featuring one of its most famous figures, Budd Doble, and several equine stars from his racing stables in California, has an interest strong in the past and telling in up-to-dateness. For play purposes it is assumed that evil days have fallen on the famous stock farm, Oliver, a rival, having secured a mortgage on the place. This canny individual offers to give up the paper for a certain likely two-year-old. As Doble has secured means to take care of the pressing interest, he declines the proposition. Crafty Oliver finally induces him to race the two-year-old against his own filly, the stakes to be the mortgage. This looks game and attracts Doble, but Oliver has a bad one up his sleeve and slips a bribe to have Doble's driver "throw the race." Oliver's son, who is in love with Doble's daughter, frustrates this villainy and wins the girl as handily as her father wins the race. So Doble gets an Oliver, from either viewpoint.

ESSANAY.

RE-TAGGED (July 1).—Gene Bradley reprimands her husband for paying too much attention to his books and refusing to accompany her to a matinee. Bradley leaves the house in a huff, and strolls into the park, where he meets a dashing young miss. His enthusiasm aroused over her beauty, he goes to the florist's, where he directs a package of beautiful carnations to be delivered to his new acquaintance. Bradley next purchases a large box of expensive confections, and ordered these to be sent to Miss Smile. The errand boys from the two companies meet on the street and engage in a game of dice. The cards bearing the address of the young lady are lost from the packages. The boys return to the store and are informed that the packages are for Mr. Bradley's wife, "of course." When Bradley returns to his home that night, he finds his wife in a very pleasant state of mind, and all on account of a mistake, which never could be understood by the deceitful husband.

THE DRUMMER'S UMBRELLA (July 1).—This is an uproariously funny comedy, in which two traveling men try to assist a young lady by loaning her an umbrella. The situations are new and clever.

THE STRONGEST LINK (July 2).—Larry and Marie, of the underworld, determine to ruin Roger Summers, an elderly millionaire. Larry gives Marie a locket and necklace and promises her that he will love her until the strongest link in the chain breaks. Marie inveigles Summers into marrying her. Natalie leaves the roof of her father. Larry, disgusted with Marie, goes to work on a farm; there he meets Natalie. Some time later he proposes to Natalie and tells her of the life he had led. Natalie marries him. A little later the adventuress, now a widow, calls at the farm and tries to win back her old lover. Larry repulses her, and the strongest link breaks, leaving Marie to travel her weary path alone.

THE LIFE WE LIVE (July 3).—Joe Mackey, out of employment, enters his cabin in the far West, where his wife is lying ill, only to tell her the same old story, that he had been unable to secure work. Out of food, Mackley's wife offers him her wedding ring to pawn. Sam Sheppard, an express messenger on the D. L. & D. Railroad, is given a money package to deliver to W. B. Scott, superintendent of the Tropical division. Sheppard places the valuable package in the inside pocket of his coat, but when he reaches his destination he discovers that the package has disappeared. Mackley, in the meantime, tries to pawn the ring, and is rewarded by finding the money package on the railroad tracks. Mackley's wife makes him return the money to the proper authorities and he is rewarded for his honesty, which saves Sam Sheppard from going to the penitentiary.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH FATHER (July 4).—"Old Man" Davis, a rheumatic grouch, tells Herbert, his daughter's fiancé, that he will have none of him, and to leave his premises. Herbert, however, through a doctor friend, secures a patent medicine that guarantees the cure of rheumatism. Herbert informs Mr. Davis of his remarkable discovery, and is promised the hand of Gertrude, providing he can cure the old gentleman. Over-enthusiastic, "Old Man" Davis takes more of the medicine than the law allowed.

AT THE LARIAT'S END (July 5).—Jet receives a note from her chum, Bessie, delivered by Fred Church, stating that the bearer is going to marry her real soon, and to come over and see her. Jet's fiancé, Jack Ryan, is told about Church being in the company of the girl he loves. Jealousy almost causes the life of Church. An imbecile gets in the way of Ryan and is knocked down for his trouble. The imbecile shoots him. Fred is accused. The sheriff straightens out the trouble.

THE DAUGHTER OF THE SHERIFF (July 8).—Sam Morley, sheriff of White Horse county, California, downhearted at being unsuccessful in the capture of Black Spark and his notorious gang of outlaws, writes a note to the town council, telling them that he will resign at once. A member of the council calls on the sheriff and is successful in making the latter try once more. Morley's daughter returns from boarding school in the East. Black Spark is captured by the clever girl of the West and turned over to her father.

THE OUTER SHELL (July 9).—Mr. Jerry Todd, who through hard work and shrewdness, has amassed a neat fortune, becomes lonesome for his old life, as he does not care for the life mapped out for him by his wife and daughter, also disapproves of his daughter's desire for a title, and refuses to consent to his daughter's marriage with a duke. This angers the mother and daughter to such an extent, that they make life miserable for him, so he becomes tired of their wrangling and decides to visit the little cottage where he and his wife first kept house. Arriving there, he stands at the gate and dreams of his youth. The father through his own day dreams, finally persuades himself to allow his daughter to marry the man she thought she could not love, because he was not a pillar of the financial world. Her desire to marry a man of title is cast to the four winds.

A FLURRY IN DIAMONDS (July 10).—"Izzy" Bernstein, a street fakir, tries his wonderful oratory accomplishments on the farmers, in persuading them to buy his wonderful patent medicine, with which he gives a diamond (?) with every bottle. A little later in the day we discover "Izzy" taking to the road, where he plugs along until he reaches the next town. At the general store he discovers a two hundred dollar reward for the return of a diamond that had been lost that day by a motorist. The clever fakir removes three of the stones from the rings he gives away, and entering the store, informs three of the "natives" that he has just found a diamond. Each of the "natives" in turn, but unbeknown to each other, purchases a diamond from

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
130 Kearny St., San Francisco. Cal.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
Moving Picture Machines and Films.
Theatre Brokerage Exchange,
440 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
Send for Booklet
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

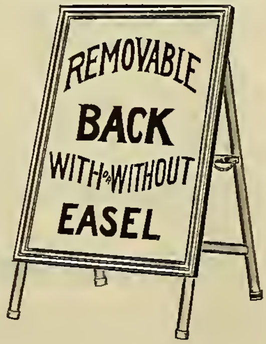
MAKE YOUR OWN SLIDES
WITHOUT AID OF PHOTOGRAPHY
From Newspaper Cuts, Post Cards, Etc. Announcement Slides, Advertising Slides, Slides from Political Office Seekers' Cards, just the thing for elections. Slides can be made in a few minutes, plain or in colors. Where colored picture is used, colors will appear on slide same as in original. Complete outfit and directions, $1.00.
MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO.
313 Ramge Bldg. Dept. W Omaha, Neb.

SLIDE MATS
Standard Size
1000 $2.50 ‖ 10,000 $22.50
5000 12.00 ‖ 20,000 42.00
5000 Binding Strips $3.00. Cash with order
Heese Printing Co.
1320 Main Street
Kansas City, Mo.

J-M ASBESTOS BOOTHS AND CURTAINS

Made in styles to meet all requirements. They meet the approval of fire underwriters of every city. Write for Booklet.
H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO.
New York and Every Large City.

—Poster Frames—



With door to lock, if so desired.
Made up with soldered joints
—they are beauties.
Send for illustrations
MANUFACTURED BY
CHICAGO METAL COVERING CO.
2833-41 W. LAKE ST. CHICAGO

HOTEL IMPERIAL

Broadway, 31st to 32nd Street
New York City

HEADQUARTERS FOR COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORTATION AND ARRANGEMENTS (including Ladies' Reception Committee) FOR MOVING PICTURE EXPOSITION, JULY, 1913

A hotel of the highest class, but with no fads nor fancies; a comfortable home for rest and recreation in which to meet your friends. Convenient to Grand Central Palace, where Exposition is to be held; one block from Pennsylvania Station, center of theatre and shopping district. Special accommodations for ladies. Write for booklet. Special rates to exhibitors, delegates and their friends.

ROBERT STAFFORD, Proprietor COPELAND TOWNSEND, Manager

We Trust You Will Visit the

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

— BOOTH —

During the INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION—July 5th to July 12th

"Agfa"

MOTION PICTURE FILM

Used by Makers of Quality Films

WRITE FOR PRICES

Sole American Agents

Raw Film Supply Company

15 East 26th Street New York, N. Y.

TO FILM BUYERS ALL OVER THE WORLD

Bargain films for buyers of best second-hand films:

6,000 ft. of comic and drama, including one feature	$90
12,000 ft. of comic and drama, including two features	$200
24,000 ft. of comic and drama, including four features	$350
50,000 ft. of comic and drama, including six features	$750

We also include free 10 posters for each reel, extra posters at 10c. per sheet; banners for features.

Splendid assortment of dramas, comics and travel films, guaranteed condition, title and finish, perfect sprockets, at one cent per foot.

Send us your requirements. We carry everything in stock from a camera to a bottle of cement.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH WITH ORDER

G. W. BRADENBURGH

231-233 N. Eighth St., Philadelphia, Penna.

Bell 'Phone, Market 334. Cable, Bradfilms, Phila.

Operators Who Produce Good Pictures

insist upon the best lens equipment. Discriminating operators everywhere prefer the

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

One expression missed, one gesture distorted, may spoil an entire picture and give to your house a reputation that means failure.

Equip your machine with Bausch & Lomb objectives and condensers, and be sure of an even white light, sharp definition, and brilliantly clear screen images. Your audiences, and necessarily your profits, will rapidly increase.

The Edison and Nicholas Power Machines are regularly equipped with our lenses.

Owners and operators will find our free booklet well worth writing for.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

566 ST. PAUL STREET ROCHESTER, N.Y.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO

THE CARBON FOR PERFECT PROJECTION

ELECTRA

HUGO REISINGER, 11 Broadway NEW YORK

the fakir. When a farmer boy discovers the real diamond and returns it to the owner, the three jays who had been stung by "Izzy," give the latter a good ducking for his crooked transaction.

THE SIGN (July 11).—Pietro, an Italian workman, refuses the company of his fellow workmen, to return to his home immediately with his pay envelope. On the way he passes the Giuseppe Bank, and is accosted by Lorenzo, the banker, to deposit his money with him, so that some day Pietro might be able to return to sunny Italy. Pietro arrives at his home, tells his wife about the banker and she consents to his depositing their savings. Some time later, Pietro, having saved six hundred and seventy-five dollars, calls at the bank, only to discover that there is a run on same. The now almost maddened Italian calls at the home of the banker, and finding that gentleman out, sits at his desk and writes a note, asking for the return of his money. Pietro accidentally turns over an ink-well. In his excitement, Pietro wipes his ink-blackened hand on the curtain, the blotter on the desk, and on some stationery. Lorenzo returns, and thinking that the black hand is after him, returns the money to the Italian and to the rest of the depositors of the bank.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE WESTERN GIRLS (July 12).—Evelyn and Irene Courtney, through the helplessness of their father, who is a cripple, are given charge of the general store and post office. A large bag of gold with registered letters, etc., are delivered by the mail carrier one day. Dick Lee, a notorious outlaw, sees the delivery of the valuable bag. That night, with a gang, Lee breaks into the postoffice and would have carried off the treasure, had not Evelyn escaped through a back window, mounted her horse, and rode away. One of the men sees her, however, and the three go in pursuit. Irene is quick to inform Broncho Billy, and the latter arrives just in time to save Evelyn from the hands of the bandits. The three are captured. Broncho Billy falls in love with Irene and the two are left to plan their future happiness.

ECLIPSE.

A VILLAIN UNMASKED (Special—2 parts—June 27).—Part One.—Mrs. Borden, a wealthy widow, visits at the seashore. She there makes acquaintance with Robert West, a handsome stranger, and the two grow very intimate. Mrs. Borden receives a letter from her son, Gilbert, telling her that he will be at liberty in a few days and will spend the week-end with her. This news Mrs. Borden confides to West, who receives the intelligence with little enthusiasm. The following day, intent upon pushing matters, West proposes to Mrs. Borden and is accepted. Gilbert arrives and conceives an instant antipathy toward the debonaire West, a feeling cordially reciprocated by that gentleman. That evening, Gilbert, strolling through the gardens, overhears a strange conversation between West and a rough-looking man, and determines to investigate.

Part Two.—Several days later Gilbert's suspicions are aroused and he carefully follows West to a low hovel in the suburbs. He enters and sees West apparently examining some bank notes with great care. One glance is sufficient to assure Gilbert that his prospective step-father is head of a gang of forgers. He is placed in a difficult position, and finally decides to see West in person and explain the impossibility of marriage with his mother. This he does, but West blandly denies the entire matter and refuses to drop the prospect of marriage. Nonplussed, Gilbert then seeks the aid of detectives and a trap is laid. On the marriage eve the police have succeeded in obtaining the needful evidence. The great ball room is ablaze with light and West and his wife-to-be receive the many guests and their congratulations. Two plain-clothes men are admitted and in a moment the hand-cuffs are slipped over West's wrists and the guests flee in confusion. Time heals the wound and Mrs. Borden realizes that the best love is not the love of a second marriage in her case.

LUBIN.

THE MYSTERIOUS HAND (July 7).—Bob Winters, a cowboy on the Bar Z ranch, is in love with and loved by Elsie, the daughter of John Marston, the owner of the ranch. When Bob goes to ask Marston for Elsie's hand, he refuses and a quarrel ensues. Later Marston is seen rescuing a little Indian boy from Dick Thomas, a drunken cowboy, who is beating the little Indian. One night as Bob is eating supper in his cabin a hand appears through the window and takes the knife from his belt. The next morning Marston is found murdered and the knife with which the deed was done is recognized as the one belonging to Bob. A posse is quickly formed and they search for Bob. He is found and charged with the crime, but denies it. The men refuse to listen to his denial and urged on by some of the hot-headed members of the party they decide to lynch Bob. The Indian boy, who has been loitering in the vicinity, goes to the ranch house and tells Elsie that Bob is about to be lynched. She determines to go to the men and plead with them to give Bob a chance to prove his innocence. She arrives at the scene as the rope is about to be pulled, and in an unexpected manner the real murderer is discovered.

PHOTOGRAPHS FOR LOBBY DISPLAY

size 8x10 of all 2 and 3-reel FEATURES of the following: KALEM, EDISON, THANHOUSER, LUBIN, BRONCHO, KAY-BEE, RELIANCE, PILOT, MAJESTIC, AMERICAN.

SET of 12, $2.00. SET of 6, $1.00.

KRAUS MFG. CO., 14 E. 17th St., N. Y.

DISTRIBUTORS WANTED IN CANADA, FAR WEST and SOUTH for our PHOTO PLAYERS POST CARDS, Association and Independent, 200 different players.

Does Your Camera, Printer or Tripod Need Repairing?

Try STAR "A" SHOP

129 W. Chicago Avenue, Chicago

ATTENTION!

LET US DO YOUR

Developing and Printing

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
BY OUR YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

WE ARE MAKING

FILM TITLES and ANNOUNCEMENTS

For All the Reel Exchanges and Film Renters

Let Us Make Yours

3 Feet for 25 Cents
In Any Length

GUNBY BROS., Inc.

199 Third Ave. New York City

FEATURES WITH THE PUNCH

Balaoo the Demon Baboon - - -	3 Reels
Zigomar III the Black Scourge - - -	4 "
Palace of Flames -	4 "
Zigomar the Phantom Bandit - - -	4 "
Parsifal - - -	3 "
Siegfried - - -	3 "
Power of Destruction	3 "
Round Up Y-6 Ranch	3 "
Gambling Exposed -	3 "
Land of Lions - -	2 "
Roosevelt - - - -	2 "

AND OTHER BIG ATTRACTIONS

Big Fronts and Full Line of Advertising with above

Write, Wire Booking to

McIntyre & Richter

MOTION PICTURES

23 E. 14th St. New York

THE PROFITS OF THE BUSINESS (July 8).—For twenty years John Regan, president of a great department store company, has searched for his daughter whom, because of a marriage of which he did not approve, he drove from his home. He at last learns that his daughter and husband have been long dead and that a child, Mary, is supposed to be in New York, seeking employment. Regan plans to make reparation for his harshness to his daughter by taking care of her child when she is found. The great success of Regan's store is admitted to be based on the low wage scale in force. Mary obtains employment in Regan's store. By close economy she manages to sustain life, though hard put to it to obtain both food and clothing to make the neat appearance demanded of employees. She rebuffs the advances of Avis Lask, a well-dressed beast of prey, and Avis shrugs and bides his time. Mary has several days' illness and her weekly wage of $5 is docked $2.50, leaving her only enough to pay her rent. She is weakened by illness, then comes starvation. Mary accepts Avis' courteous invitation to dine. A few days later Regan is informed by his detective that Mary has been located and hurries to her lodging. When Regan arrives the girl is nearly dead, but they revive her and Regan takes her to his home. A week afterwards Regan announces the profits of the business for the month $30,002.50. Avis, who has found out he loves Mary asks for her hand in marriage. Regan shows anger, but remembers his daughter and gives Mary to him.

A HERO AMONG MEN (Special—2 parts—July 9).—Ethel, daughter of Richard Menten, president of the Imperial Arms Co., is secretly engaged to Martin Bently, the secretary of the concern. Being in poor health she is sent to the country, and there, with her mother, lives with Mr. and Mrs. Landers. Harry Landers, the son, and Ethel enjoy many outings and eventually fall madly in love. Harry proposes, but Ethel tells him that she is engaged, and, being unable to combat her daily increasing love, urges her mother to take her back to the city.

Sometime later Menton, having a vacancy, induces Harry to accept a position in the company. He bids farewell to his parents and hastens to the city. Ethel knows nothing of Harry's presence in the office, until one day when she is leaving with her father and Bently, she encounters Harry at the door. Half dazed he goes through the formality of an introduction. He then realizes that Bently is his rival. Harry holds his love in leash and continues a friendship with Ethel.

Richard Menton has for weeks been contending with several hundred of his workmen, who demand a 10 per cent. raise in wages and Harry is taken into conference. He has looked into the homes and condition of the workmen and reports that the demand is not unfair. Menton still opposes the raise and refuses the demand. A mass meeting of the men is called and they decide to strike. Ethel sees the men marching to the plant and warns the startled officials. The day watchman, intoxicated, has descended into the basement and fallen asleep, while smoking a cigarette. The cigarette falls into a heap of excelsior and sets the building on fire. In the corridors are stored many boxes of ammunition and powder ready for shipment. The officials of the plant, on seeing the mob, have fortified themselves in Menton's private office when the terrified watchman rushes up and tells them that the basement is in flames. The workmen, knowing of the ammunition in the building, beat a retreat. Menton hearing that the building is on fire swoons from heart failure. Ethel, who is also in the executive offices, is in hysterics. Harry drags Menton down the courtyard and instructs Bently to look after Ethel, who has fainted: he, however, in a paroxysm of fear, leaves her and dashes into the crowded yard. Harry places Menton in an ambulance and then learns that Ethel is still in the building. The explosion of the cases commences, but Harry, disregarding the danger, rushes in and drags her down the stairs amid the cheers of the mob of strikers. The strike ends and the firm gives in to the demand of the men. Ethel ignores Bently and Harry asks Menton for the hand of his daughter, which is cheerfully granted as the brave lover is pronounced "A Hero Among Men."

WHEN LOVE LOSES OUT (July 10).—Jennie Knox, a trim little old maid, is wooed by Bob Johnson and Slim Lusk. Bob weighs three hundred and Slim one hundred. She doesn't like either one, saying that Bob is too fat and Slim is too thin. They decide to go to a sanatorium to try and meet the requirements by treatment. They reach the station and try to get a team to take them to the sanatorium, but everyone turns them down on account of Bob's weight. Finally they get a wagon and start on their way. They go but a short distance when the wagon breaks down, the driver is sore and chases them both. They arrive at the sanatorium and are immediately put in training. At meal time Bob gets a cracker and a small glass of milk and Slim enough to feed an army. Slim is fed on milk by a funnel and hose, into which an attendant is constantly pouring milk. Johnson is so sore that he grabs a large steak from Slim's plate and runs out of the window, followed by Slim. He eats the steak while running down the road to the station. Arriving back in town they go to Jennie's home and rush-

Exhibitors' Opportunity to see the latest

KINEMACOLOR

Dramatic, Comedy, Scenic, Fashion and Topical Productions

at the EXPOSITION, JULY 7th-12th

in the Special

KINEMACOLOR THEATRE

NEAR MAIN ENTRANCE (MEZZANINE FLOOR)

"Seeing Is Believing"

Mechanical Display Showing New Inventions Including 35 Ampere Machine

in the

KINEMACOLOR BOOTH, Center Aisle, Main Floor

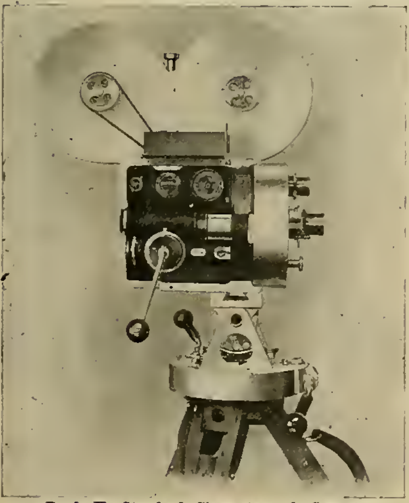
B. & H. STANDARD MOTION PICTURE MACHINERY

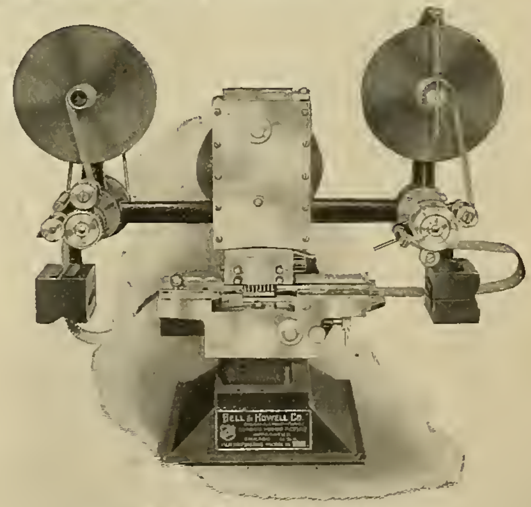
These Perforators—Printers—Cameras brought the mechanical development of the motion picture business abreast of its artistic development

THEY MAKE POSSIBLE THE PERFECT MOTION PICTURE

Study them carefully at our exhibit at the First International Exposition of the Motion Picture Art—Section 310, New Grand Central Palace, New York, July 7 to 12



B. & H. Standard Cinematograph Camera.



B. & H. Standard Film Perforator.

Designed and Manufactured only by BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, 217 W. Illinois Street, Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

ing in find her with her wig off. They are then willing to let the other fellow have her and both exit.

BUILDING A TRUST (July 10).—Wun Lung and Mary Murphy are business rivals—both running laundries. Lung does fairly well, but Mary gets the best of the game, as the policeman naturally would work for his countrywoman. Then Mandy Jackson opens another "white as snow" laundry and Lung and Mary hold a conference of war, united against the colored lady. Mrs. Murphy reads the papers and gets much knowledge of the advantages of the big laundry trusts and, with the co-operation of Lung, she organizes a trust. They scoop in all of the washerwomen of the neighborhood and boom prices. The scheme is a big success; the new acquisitions are proud of the institution and work hard, while "the trust" sits at ease and bosses things.

ON HER WEDDING DAY (July 11).—Paul Clark, unable to find work, sends his wife to her parents. Next morning he reads of his wife being shipwrecked and, upon calling at the dock, he hears that all on board were lost. Paul leaves his boarding house for a nearby lumber camp. He meets Clara Jackson at her father's place and asking her whether he can be put up for the night, Clara induces her father to let Paul stay. Clara is attracted by the stranger and the next morning after breakfast she wins over her father to give him a position. Later, as Paul is working at the saw mill, Clara and he stroll off to the water's edge where Paul tells her of his wife's death. Being in sympathy with him she tries to make Paul forget his grief.

In the interim, Paul's wife has been picked up partly demented after an all night struggle in the water. Jim Croft, a fisherman, brings her to his hut where she is attended by his wife. As the days pass, Paul's wife regains her senses and writes a letter to her husband. A strong love has sprung up between Paul and Clara and while strolling along in the woods, Paul proposes and is accepted. In the meantime, the wife's letter has been returned to her. Feeling this blow, she decides to go to hunt for Paul. Her search is long, but accidentally she picks up a newspaper and reads of her husband's wedding announcement, to Clara. Reaching the Jackson's home, she meets Clara in her wedding dress and showing her the newspaper account asks for Paul. Clara, feeling that she is about to lose Paul, pushes her outdoors and chases her off the grounds. Standing in the doorway, Clara sees Paul's wife fall exhausted across the railroad tracks and at the same time espies an approaching train. Clara decides to rescue the wife and is just in time as the train comes rushing by. Bringing her near the house she meets Paul and her father in a buggy ready to leave with Clara for the wedding. Paul is happily surprised to be fondly embraced by his wife. Clara, telling her father to leave her, sadly looks into blank space and, feeling the trying strain, tears her wedding veil, vowing silence to the world.

HER ONLY BOY (July 12).—Ed. Ryan is the spirited son of John Ryan. He was brought up on a Western ranch and, through association with reckless cowboys, drinks often and heavily. His father is stern and has little sympathy for his wayward son, but his mother's love finds excuses for her boy many times. At last the crisis comes and Ed. is driven out by his father, while his weeping mother and sister protest, but to no avail.

Time passes and Ed. writes home to his mother. The father, fearing a scene, keeps the letter from her. After waiting for months for a reply, Ed. becomes dejected. He decides to leave the country and goes to the postoffice for the last time to ask for news from home. The mail bag is on the counter and Ed. overhears the postmaster tell the R. F. D. man to be very careful of a registered package, as it contains the payrool of the Two Bar Ranch. In his embittered state of mind, Ed. becomes imbued with the spirit of a desperado. He decides to hold up the mail man and secure the money. He does so. Ed.'s father, in the meantime, has died and his mother finds the son's letter in the dead man's clothes. She writes at once, but too late to save her boy. The first letter he tears open contains a picture of his mother and sister and the long-looked-for letter from home. He is overcome and for the first time realizes the enormity of his act. He decides to atone as best he can, and hurries to the town and confesses all to the postmaster. In the meantime, the sheriff and posse are on his trail. They return and Ed. is made prisoner, the sheriff promising to be as lenient as possible. Ed. asks the postmaster one favor: it is that his mother and sister shall never know. The postmaster marks the letter "Opened by mistake." "Letter unclaimed." "Return to sender." Ed. goes to prison, while the mother and sister wait and hope in vain for his return.

KALEM.

A STOLEN IDENTITY (July 7).—Steve Carnes, the son of a wealthy manufacturer, leads a useless life and is disowned by his father. After a night of gambling he returns, penniless, to his apartment. He is on the point of ending everything when his bell rings and he finds an abandoned baby on his doorstep.

Steve and his valet, Hodges, attempt to pacify the child. The distracted mother, who has hoped to place the little one in a comfortable home, repeats her act and comes to Steve's house, begging that the child be returned. Steve complies with her request and secretly follows her home. He sees that she lives in a disreputable tenement and finds a note from her husband's father, in which the latter states that the marriage was against his wishes and that the young woman has no claim upon him.

Awakened to the misery that exists around him and filled with a desire to help the girl, Steve decides to impersonate the father-in-law, whom the girl has never seen. He sends a message, stating that he regrets sending the former communication and expressing his intention of calling upon her. Steve sells all of his belongings and is forced to become a laborer to keep up the deception. In a clever make-up he pays frequent visits to the tenement and one day he is set upon by two thugs. Badly injured he is carried into the tenement, where the young widow discovers that it is not an old man who has been visiting her, but a young man in disguise, who has proven a good Samaritan.

The elder Carnes, learning of his son's sacrifice, rejoices and the future happiness of the young people is assured.

THE TREACHERY OF A SCAR (July 9).—Ralph, a crook, shows Tom, his pal, a peculiar scar on his neck and tells him the story of the adventure in which he acquired the mark. A few days later Ralph passes the house of Vincent, a banker, and concluding that no one is at home he decides to ply his trade—that of a sneak thief.

The crook is surprised by Ann, the banker's daughter, and is so impressed by her beauty that he abandons his purpose. At that instant the hall is filled with smoke and the house is soon a mass of flames. Knowing that Ann is in the room above and powerless to escape, the thief turns back and carries the girl to a place of safety. He picks up her handkerchief and creeps away before she can express her gratitude.

Ralph has learned a lesson and enters a new life. Several years pass and he enters Vincent's bank, well recommended. Vincent's daughter does not recognize the employe as the stranger who saved her from the fire and the two young people fall deeply in love.

Business takes Ralph to the bank one night after hours and he discovers his old pal, Tom, at the vault. A struggle ensues, in which Ralph proves the victor and he leads the thief into the street without disclosing his identity.

It happens that Tom sees the scar on Ralph's neck and recognizes his former companion. Ralph proves his mettle when he convinces Vincent and Ann of his honesty, despite the exposure of the captured thief.

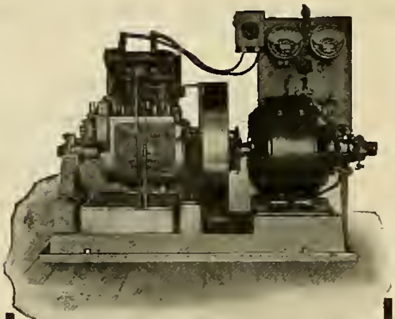
ENTERTAINING UNCLE (July 11).—George and Helen remember Uncle Amos as a very sedate and pious old gentleman. When he announces his intention of paying them a visit, they hastily hide all signs of worldliness and invite Deacon Jones to spend a week with them.

The fact is that Uncle Amos has come to the city to have a good time and soon tires of the restrictions of the "model household" which George and his wife purport to maintain. When uncle is introduced to George's pretty stenographer, Flossie, he arranges to meet her in the evening.

Uncle has the time of his life keeping his date, particularly as he is supposed to sleep with the deacon. The next morning George and Helen receive a message, requesting that a suitcase be shipped to a certain couple who have eloped.

COSMOPOLITAN NEW YORK (July 11).—New York City has been called "the melting pot," in which the nationalities of the world become Americans. In this interesting photoplay we visit many different sections of the greatest cosmopolitan metropolis. We see the Greek emigrants landing at the Battery; Orchard Street, the most densely populated street in America; an Egyptian cloth shop; Little Italy; the Sicilian and Russian quarters; a Jewish funeral procession; the curb market in Broad Street; Broadway and glimpses of fashionable Fifth Avenue.

ROUNDING UP THE COUNTERFEITERS (July 12).—Tom Young is sent on the trail of a gang of counterfeiters. He knows that a man named Miller is the leader of the criminals, but Miller makes no move which will implicate himself or accomplices.



4 Kilowatt Direct-Connected Outfit

Very many readers of "The Moving Picture World" are using

Brush Electric Lighting Sets

We want everyone to know something about the best and most dependable Electric Generating Set ever placed upon the market—the only one that makes a perfect light.

We now make these Lighting Sets in sizes 2 to 10 kilowatts, both Direct-Connected and Belted.

Send for catalogue

The Chas. A. Strelinger Co.
Box MP-2
Detroit, Michigan, U. S. A.

For Rent—FILM—For Sale

Do you want good service cheap? Write today.

NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.,
Ellsworth Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

ON THE BORDER LINE

How About Your

LOBBY FRAMES

We Make All Sizes. Write for Illustrated Literature.

NOTE SPECIAL PRICE ON

HANGING Frame, WITH GLASS - $4.00
EASEL " " - $5.50

Remember our Address and Call when in New York

THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO., Inc.
357 WEST 42nd STREET - - - - NEW YORK

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

For the most sensational drama of the Parisian slums that has ever come across the Atlantic. A highly finished motion picture production, adapted from the famous novel by Eugene Sue, entitled

THE MYSTERIES OF PARIS

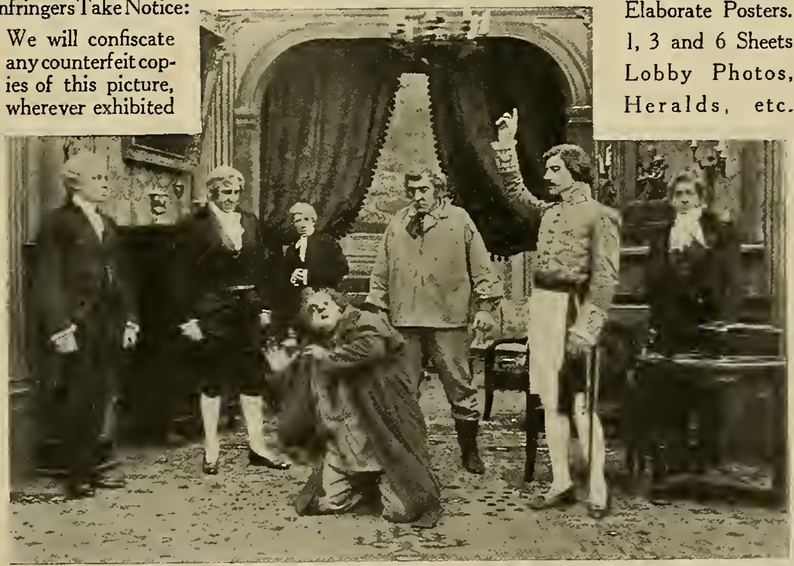
Ready Now

5000 Feet

(Copyrighted)

Infringers Take Notice: We will confiscate any counterfeit copies of this picture, wherever exhibited

Elaborate Posters.
1, 3 and 6 Sheets
Lobby Photos,
Heralds, etc.



The terrible sentence pronounced by Prince Otto upon the "Wolf" for his cruel deeds

ECLECTIC FILM CO.

110 West 40th St. New York City

"THE CREAM OF THE EUROPEAN MARKET SELECTED FOR AMERICA"

PLEASE NOTE OUR NEW ADDRESS

Miller has a clever scheme through which he keeps in touch with his gang. He writes a note on thin tissue paper and places it in his hat band. At a lunch room, which he visits every day, he exchanges hats with a confederate without communicating with the latter.

It happens that Tom's sweetheart, Alice, is cashier at the restaurant and notices the peculiar exchange of hats. She informs Tom of the affair when he drops in to see her. One day the young detective follows Miller after the leader has received a message, but the crook swallows the little paper.

Not to be discouraged, Tom hits upon a plan. With the assistance of the restaurant proprietor he cuts out a small portion of the wall, near the rack on which the hats are always hung. While Miller and the accomplice are lunching Tom extracts the message in the hat and puts in its place a decoy note which demands the presence of Miller at the gang's headquarters. The leader is trailed to the rendezvous and the whole band of criminals is apprehended.

MELIES.

HIS CHINESE FRIEND (Produced at Singapore, Straits Settlements, Asia—July 10).—Playing on the streets of Singapore with his little Chinese friend, Wing, Charlie Foster, an American lad of three years, is suddenly kidnapped. It does not take the earlier-matured mind of Wing long to grasp the whole situation, and by promptly telling the police, he saves his playmate.

Twenty-five years later finds the two companions still. Foster, now married, is a speculator. He plunges in rubber. There comes a slump in this stock and financial ruin stares him in the face. Once more the Chinaman, with his savings and by raising money on his personal credit, comes to the rescue of his friend, tiding him over until another boom in rubber makes Foster wealthy.

Ten years more pass and Wing is a high official, but secretly a leader in the Chinese revolution. The ministry becomes aware of his double dealing and issues a proclamation offering a reward for his arrest. Foster learns of the proclamation and quickly hurries in his automobile to Wing's palatial home, and spirits him away to his office. But they are followed and the Chinaman is fired at. He drops apparently lifeless.

News spreads that Wing is dead and a great funeral is held. But Wing was very much alive and dropped, not from a bullet wound, but as a precautionary measure to save his skin. Foster nails him in a box marked for shipment to Europe, from which, when it is hoised on the steamer, he comes out. The two friends part, swearing everlasting devotion, though seas may part them.

PATHEPLAY.

THE AIRMAN'S BRIDE (July 8).—The first quarrel between Hans Anderson and his beautiful daughter, Frieda, occurred when the girl refused to marry Anderson's business partner, Karl Muller, preferring to be the bride of a young aviator, Paul Hallet. Frieda leaves her father's roof and goes to live in a lighthouse tended by Oscar Jurgens, the husband of Anderson's elderly housekeeper. While waiting for her father to relent Frieda sends the lighthouse keeper with a note to her lover. During Oscar's absence a fire breaks out in the tower. From the shore Hallet and the old man see the girl on the balcony of the tower in a circle of flame. Quickness is necessary. Hallet hurries to his hangar and in a few moments is sailing in his aeroplane toward the lighthouse. He drops a rope from his machine. Frieda siezes the rope as it passes her, and after a wild ride finds herself safe and sound in Hallet's arms. When Anderson learns the news he informs his partner that he has changed his mind.

THE SCHOOL MA'AM (July 9).—Her husband's failing health and lack of money compel Mrs. Helen Walls to seek work. She secures a position as a school teacher at Silver Lake, but to do so is forced to pose as an unmarried woman, the regulations of the school board requiring that the teachers must be single. Her husband's presence places Mrs. Walls in an embarrassing position, but while the school board is investigating, a fire in the school gives Walls an opportunity to display his courage. Even though he is in poor health Walls proves himself so much the man that by unanimous consent of the school board Mrs. Walls is allowed to continue in her position and her husband given such work as will help him out of his difficulty.

HANNIGAN'S HAREM (July 10). — Everyone knows that it takes only one drink too many to make your head spin. Poor Hannigan was all right if he had not taken the last drink, but he did, and immediately he imagined himself the honored guest of the Sultan who gave him unrestrained authority and the key to the harem. You can imagine what happened to Hannigan!

PORCELAIN (July 11).—The millions of persons that seem to have not the slightest idea of the method of manufacturing the simple things in everyday use will be greatly enlightened and delighted with this film, which shows in all its stages the making and moulding of porcelain dishes, plates, pitchers, etc. The skill displayed by the workmen employed in this industry has an odd fascination, but even greater is the skill of the finishing artists, who complete the sculpturing work on various beautiful statuettes.

THE EXHIBITOR'S DELIGHT:

"FROM THE GRAVE TO THE THRONE"
IN 3 PARTS

"THE DEVIL'S DAUGHTER"
IN 3 PARTS

"REVENGE"
IN 3 PARTS

"KARAMBO"
IN 5 PARTS

"GENISSAR"
IN 4 PARTS

"THE WEAKER VESSEL"
IN 3 PARTS
(HAND COLORED)

"JAIL BIRDS"
IN 3 PARTS
(JUST OUT)

BOOK ALL S.C.D.L. FEATURES FROM FEATURE FILM COMPANY
127 FOURTH AVENUE
PITTSBURGH, PA.
108 EAST 12th STREET
NEW YORK

DYNAMITE, THE NEW FARM HAND (July 12).—The lack of laborers on farms throughout the United States has brought to prominent notice the use of dynamite as a substitute for farm hands. In this film the marvellous effectiveness of dynamite is shown in various views, such as the blasting of a drainage ditch, removing a dead tree, blasting four tree stumps at one operation, breaking up a boulder and the more delicate work of breaking soil with dynamite for planting fruit trees.

A LITTLE TRIP ALONG THE HUDSON (July 12).—Following the camera upon the far-famed Hudson River with its lordly Palisades on either bank. A most delightful and beautiful journey.

Picture Theatres Projected

Howell, Ind.—Henry Backes, Barker Avenue, Evansville, Ind., has let the contract to Koch and Griesbacher, for a one-story moving picture theater and store building.

Washington, D. C.—J. D. Brady, 1407 Ninth Street, N. W., has let the contract to J. C. Marsh, South Building, for the erection of a moving picture theater to seat 280.

Santa Barbara, Calif.—H. K. Marble, has received bids for the building of a one-story moving picture theater to cost $25,000.

Montclair, N. J.—United Realty and Amusement Company, are to erect a one and two-story moving picture theater at the corner of Bloomfield Avenue and Valley Road to cost $100,000.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Columbia Amusement Company, 701 Seventh Avenue, New York City, have received estimates to build a theater to seat 1,600 and cost $250,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Negotiations have been closed by Joseph M. Berg for the sale of the Northeast corner of Sixth and Pike Streets and the large lot adjoining to Adolph Bonnem as a site for a moving picture theater. The corner property, 17 feet 10 inches by 74 feet, 10¼ inches, was bought from Joseph Schmitt, and the adjoining tract, 85 feet 10 inches by 74 feet 10 inches; from John Miller, giving the purchaser a lot 103 feet 8 inches on
J. B. C.

Harrisaon, Va.—Virginia Amusement Company, have received estimates for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater to seat $200.
Sixth Street by 74 feet 10 inches on Pike Street.

East Oranga, N. J.—Daniel J. Lynch Company, Orange, N. J., have received sub-bids for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 56 by 119 feet, to cost $25,000.

Newark, N. J.—F. E. Proctor, 1493 Broadway, New York, has received estimates for the building of a seven-story theater and office building, to cost $300,000.

Sunapea, N. H.—Billy Van, George Mills, N. H., has received estimates for the erection of a one-story summer theater, 64 by 98 feet, to cost $10,000. The work consists of a frame building, shingle roof, hard pine floors, gas and electric fixtures.

State College, Pa.—J. P. Akins is to build a three-story moving picture theater, 42 by 90 feet, to cost $12,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Lyceum Company have awarded the contract to W. B. Bennett, North Negley avenue, for the erection of a two-story hall building, 29 by 115 feet, to cost $28,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Imperial Amusement Company will erect a three-story theater, 60 by 125 feet, to cost $60,000.

Oberlin, O.—W. B. Hoobs, has plans under consideration for the erection of a two-story moving picture theater and store building, to contain two stores and a theater, with a seating capacity for 500, to cost $15,000.

Cincinnati O.—Anthony Kuntz, Jr., 955 West Court street, has been engaged to prepare plans for a two-story theater and store building, 47 by 130 feet, with a seating capacity for 295, to cost $20,000.

Salisbury, Md.—Green & Brewington, have plans under way for a two-story moving picture theater, 40 by 100 feet, to cost $15,000.

Grant City, Mo.—Grant Improvement Company, have had plans prepared for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 33 by 116 feet to cost $4,500.

Detroit, Mich.—French & Fleisher, 49 University Building, have been engaged to prepare plans for the erection of a two-story theater and store building, 60 by 100 feet, to contain two stores and theater to seat 398; cost $12,000.

Greencastle, Pa.—George Hellman is having plans prepared for the erection of a one-story theater and skating rink, 45 by 100 feet, to cost $6,000.

Fairport, O.—E. A. Lawrence, will build by day's work a one-story moving picture theater, 20 by 70 feet to cost $5,000.

St. Paul, Minn.—Mrs. H. Cameron, 64 East 11th Street, has received estimates for the erection of a theater to seat 500, 40 by 20 feet and to cost $10,000.

Detroit, Mich.—T. E. Shiel, 608 Blamlet Building has been engaged to prepare plans for a two-story hall and store building, 40 by 60 feet.

Black Creek, Wis.—Dr. J. J. Laid and other stockholders will soon invite bids for the erection of a two-story theater and dance hall, 50 by 100 feet to cost $7,000.

Bicknell, Ind.—Mitchell Bicknell will build a one-story moving picture theater to cost $5,000.

July 5th

"The Little Puppet Seller"

A picture which touches the spot and will hold any audience from start to finish

July 12th

"In the Hands of Conspirators"

A gripping story of Plot and counter-plot, full of thrills and excitement

One, three and six sheet posters with all releases

Remember, There Is Something Coming

AMBROSIO AMERICAN CO., 15 E. 26th St., N.Y.C.

Bound Volumes for 1912 of Moving Picture World

JANUARY to MARCH
APRIL to JUNE
JULY to SEPTEMBER
OCTOBER to DECEMBER, 1912
JANUARY to MARCH
APRIL to JUNE, 1913

Six Volumes in Substantial Cloth Board Binding with Index, $1.50 per Volume, Express Charges Collect or 70c Extra for Each Volume to Cover Postage

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS AND REMITTANCES

Moving Picture World
Box 226, Madison Square, P.O., New York City

Now Ready for Delivery

Motion Picture Annual and Yearbook for 1912

Contains complete alphabetical list of all Licensed and Independent Films released during last year, a fairly complete trade directory of leading houses in all branches of the industry, tabulated list of Educational Films of the year. 140 closely printed pages

Paper Covers	$1.25, Post Free
Cloth Board Covers	1.50, " "

Address all Orders and Remittances

Chalmers Publishing Co.
Box 226, Madison Square P. O., N. Y. City

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

POWERS.

MORGAN'S TREASURE (2 parts—July 11).—Finding that his son, Ned, is determined to marry Carrie Cummings, his stenographer, the elder Langmuir, in a rage, disinherits him. Ned and Carrie depart and Ned decides to make a stake for himself and the girl of his choice.

Fate takes Ned's affairs in hand and leads him in his musings to the wharf, where he sits in deep thought. His attention is aroused by a scuffle a short distance away, and dashing up, Ned saves Peg Morgan, an old sailor, from a couple of ruffians who are attempting to rob him. Ned assists Peg, who is wounded, to his home, which is in a loft on the wharf.

Peg's home is typical of a sailor's quarters, and Ned is filled with curiosity as he gazes about. Ned assists Peg to remove his blouse and stepping on the top of an old sea chest, Ned reaches for a bottle of liniment on the shelf over the chest. The top of the chest gives way under Ned's weight. In examining the break Ned uncovers an old map. It proves to be a chart to the location of an island where a buried treasure is to be found.

Peg knows the location and he and Ned plan to look up a captain who will take them to the location for one-third of the treasure. They find a captain who seems overjoyed at the chance, but who in reality plans to steal the chart and secure the entire treasure for himself. Ned tells Carrie of his plans and she accompanies him to the dock and bids him a fond farewell. Ned's father, who has decided to forgive the young pair, sends Baldwin (who is also in his employ and who also loves Carrie), to tell Ned of his forgiveness, but Baldwin, in jealousy, watches Ned depart without attempting to stop him.

A frightful storm prevents the captain from carrying out his plot against Ned and Peg, and all work together frantically for their lives. Peg is hit on the head by a broken spar, and Ned is not allowed to help his friend into the boats that are being lowered away. Later Peg regains consciousness, and, swimming to an overturned boat, manages to keep afloat until he is picked up by a passing boat and is eventually taken back to his starting point. Ned and the others make a landing on the shore which proves to be an island. In exploring the island, the party come upon an Indian maid by a spring. The sailors treat her roughly, but Ned, drawing a revolver, protects the young girl from their advances. The Indian maid is very grateful, and that evening, when the men of her tribe prepare to revenge the insult offered to the Indian maid, she protects Ned so that he is the only one of the party who escapes the poisoned arrows of the blow-pipe warriors. By breaking her blow-pipe and arrows and placing them at Ned's feet, the Indian girl indicates that she is his friend.

Ned's father, hearing of the wreck of the "Bessie Bates," is heartbroken and seeking Carrie, persuades her to return to his office as his private secretary. Baldwin, in the meantime, has been discharged.

Ned, in wonder at the golden ornaments worn by the Indians, is led to a shack overgrown with foliage, where the Indian maid discloses to him the source of their wealth—great chests of loot from pirates' plunder. Two or three skeletons are lying about and as Ned seats himself at the table overcome by the wealth on every side, he sees, as in a vision, the pirates of old bringing in the plunder. Then he sees them quarreling and fighting until none is left but one pirate, badly wounded, who dropping his head on the table, dies.

Ned is fairly content in his new surroundings, and the Indian girl's gratitude turns to love. One day the chief orders a queer ceremony and before Ned realizes what is being done he is married, according to the native custom, to the beautiful Indian girl. He tries to tell her of the other girl, but she cannot understand. Later, when he finds her about to pierce her breast with one of the poisoned arrows, he realizes her love for him and the unlikelihood of his being rescued, he breaks the arrow and leads her back to the hut.

Carrie, on an errand to the dock, one day encounters Peg, who remembers her. Peg tells the girl of the shipwreck and of his belief that all on the ship were saved. Carrie hurries back to the office, where Peg relates his story to Mr. Longmuir, who loses no time in fitting out a ship to go in search of the missing one.

Ned and the Indian girl are on the hill-top looking out to sea when the relief ship is first sighted. Ned dashes down the bach and wades to the boat. He carries his sweetheart to the shore and embraces her passionately. The Indian girl realizes that she has lost her lover, and extending her arms to the sea, leaps from the cliff into the surf below.

BISON.

THE POWDER FLASH OF DEATH (2 parts—July 8).—Three pals—Reid, Neilan and Kirkland—breast the breakers of their roving life with but one condition of creed—nothing was to come between them to sever or impair the sincerity of their ties of friendship. Regardless of what extremity of life they encountered, they religiously respect their one law of sharing alike; that is, until——

With the fall of Sumpter, when the call to arms invaded homes and divided brother against brother, that same loyalty to their country's cause creates a triangle of sentiment that calls one of the pals to the South, one to the North, and the remaining one to the more roving life of the guerrilla.

For three years the blood of the nation is spilled in bitter strife. The same three years spared the three former pals and each in his peculiar lot has reached the office of captain. As the war raged, and each fought for his own respective people's cause, through the irony of fate their lines gradually convert toward a common point south of the Dixie line, where dwells a Southern lass, one unconsciously destined to play a part in romance where tragedy was to unite for a brief moment the sundered ties of friendship, then call in death the three who once has been pals.

Her home was marred by the stain of war when a company of guerrillas enter. And while she suffers the terror of that invasion, a Northern company and a Southern company likewise each skirmish for victory—each of the three common enemies commanded by three men who had, during the reign of peace, lived as pals. And "she" is the prize for which a personal battle is waged—more bitter than that fought with shot and shell by the three common enemies. As their companies fight, the three captains agree (knowing that "she" would be had by but one), to stand backwardly to the points of an angle, lay a fuse to a charge of powder in the center, and at the flash turn to meet and begin firing—the winner to claim the prize.

While the preparations are being made, "she" stands in terror to watch the ending. At the flash, three shots ring out. The guerrilla captain falls and lays motionless; the Southerner staggers to his Northern pal with the dying words: "A woman burst us up after all." The Northerner clasps his extended hand as his pal falls, then, with an ever gathering stain on his own breast, he doffs with a valorous deference his own hat to the "cause" and "joins in eternity" the two who were once his pals.

THE HEADHUNTERS (2 parts—July 12).—At the close of the Spanish-American War, Margaret Marshall's schooldays end. She bids farewell to her girl chums, and with many heartaches, parts with her sweetheart, Jack, a soldier, in the American forces. Her father is a rich merchant in the Philippines, and has for a partner Alvarez Cordero, a wealthy Filipino. Alvarez falls in love with Margaret at sight, but she, true to Jack, refuses his advances. His hot blood knows no check, and he woos Margaret so passionately that her father interferes and orders him from the house. Alvarez, meanwhile, has an affair with Lilita, a notorious woman known as "The Firefly of the Philippines." On his final dismissal by Margaret and her father, Alvarez goes to visit Lilita, and becomes incensed upon finding another there usurping his place. He accidentally drops a photograph of Margaret, which he had stolen from her father before her arrival at the Islands. Lilita finds it. A quarrel ensues and Alvarez leaves her. Lilita, however, manages to retain the photograph and vows vengeance against Margaret and Alvarez. She plots to have Marshal and his daughter kidnapped and given over to the savage Igorrotes. She secures the services of some Filipinos, and pays them to carry out her plans. They are successful in kidnapping Margaret and her father, but on their way to the Igorrote village, Alvarez, who has been informed of the plot by Lilita's servant, overtakes them and bribes the leader to take Margaret and her father to his mountain home, where he hopes to bend Margaret to his will.

Aguinaldo's uprising now necessitates the calling out of more American troops, and Jack is ordered to the Islands with his company. Arriving in San Mateo, Luzon, the troops have a severe struggle with the natives and Jack is wounded in a street battle and carried into the house of Lilita. The sergeant forces Lilita, at the point of a gun, to administer to Jack.

Jack's wound being slight, he soon recovers and is horrified to see Margaret's picture on the mantel. Upon inquiry he learns from Lilita a false story of Margaret's death, and is overcome by the news. The battle in the street is still raging, and Lilita manages to escape and goes out for assistance. During her absence the Mateza servant tells Jack the truth concerning Margaret and her father, but is unable to tell him their hiding place. When Lilita returns with a number of Insurrectos, Jack and the sergeant fight their way to the stairway. The Mateza servant rushes from the house, and getting some of the American troops, leads them to Jack's rescue. Jack again joins his own troop in repulsing Aguinaldo, and during the skirmish a shell explodes on the porch of Lilita's home, wrecking the house and killing her. The Americans successfully rout the Insurrectos, when news is brought to Jack by a scout that Alvarez had taken Margaret and her father to the Igorrote village. Jack and his regiment immediately set out to rescue them. Meanwhile, amid scenes of horror, Margaret and her father are held prisoners. Alvarez shows his depravity and demands her promise of marriage as the price of liberty. Margaret refuses, in spite of his threats. Jack and his regiment surprise a detachment of Insurrectos advancing to reinforce Aguinaldo, and a running fight ensues. The Insurrectos are driven back toward the Igorrote village. Alvarez is killed by the explosion of a shell, the Americans fire the village and rescue Margaret and her father, and a happy party wends its way toward San Mateo.

FRONTIER.

THE FRONTIER TWINS START SOMETHING (July 10).—The beginning of this story is the ending of the twins' punishment for the pranks they played upon their luckless uncle, the professor. They have been locked up. Joe, who loves Vic, has had mercy upon them and brought them some good things to eat. Naturally he gives Vic more than Dot, and right then the trouble begins. Dot and Vic have a small tussle as to which shall consume the eatables, and Joe gets his face plastered with jelly as his share of the feast. Father and mother come to visit their erring youngsters and are so impressed by their promises to be good that they release them. Mother thinks that young ladies should learn to cook and she has Dot and Vic peel apples and potatoes as a first lesson. When she has left them to the pursuit of their respective occupations, the girls throw apples at their uncle until he is forced to forego his afternoon nap in the hammock. Wun Lung, the cook, takes his place and the girls tie him in the hammock instead of their uncle.

They create so great a disturbance throwing apples and potatoes at Mammy and the cowboys and the burro, that the entire ranch organization appeals to mother for protection, father and Joe having gone to town on business. This fond parent is helpless to control her offsprings, and the delegation decides to take vengeance in its own hands. Headed by Mammy with the butcher-knife, the pursuit is begun.

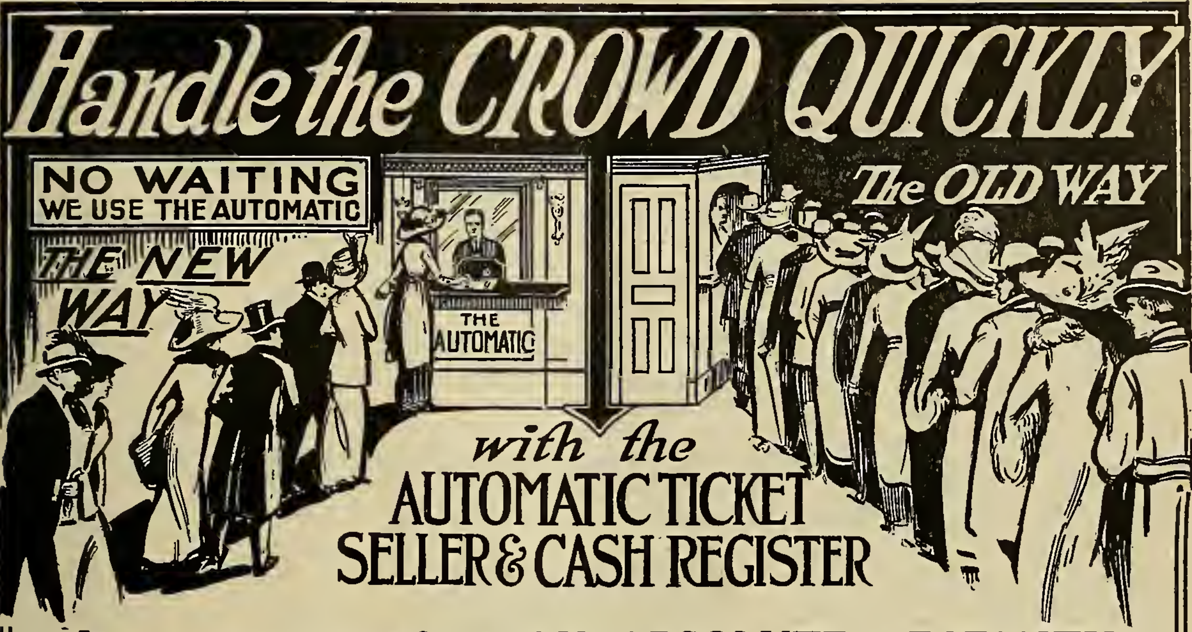
Meanwhile, the twins have taken their supposed uncle, hammock and all, down to the irrigation ditch and souse him in the mud and water. This treatment failing to have the desired results, they tie the Chinaman to a tree and throw apples at him. The pursuit is continued, but soon this changes to a search, for the twins have effectually disposed of themselves in some place unknown. Nobody misses the cook and the twins are asleep, so things naturally return to their former place at the ranch, while the youngsters dream of their next batch of mischief.

THE LINE RIDER'S SISTER (July 12).—Ray and Florenz agree, on their graduation day, to meet again in ten years, wherever they may drift in the meantime. Shortly before the ten years' time expires, Rance brings his sister to the West. She has hip-disease, and he being poor, is hard put to it to take care of her. He gets a position as line rider, where he can come home each night. Daily he carries her to a comfortable seat on the porch, which is screened by vines or location from the ranch house. Rance draws only half as much money as the cowboys, and as the ranchman likes him, he gives him an opportunity to become a cowboy and get more money. Rance refuses, because the work would prevent his coming home every day to care for his sister. The cowboys think he is a coward on account of this and spurn him. He quarrels with one of them about it. Meanwhile, Ray has become a country doctor near the ranch. Florenz is a great specialist, whose word is the last when hip disease is considered. Florenz comes to visit Ray in completion of the agreement of ten years before.

The ranchman one day sends Rance to town to get the money for the monthly payday. Rance is unable to get across the river, which is flooded, and returns to report his failure. This angers the cowboys a great deal and he has a hard time to "ward off" a serious fight. Hbe goes home and the cowboys follow. They discover a woman in the house and are plotting all sorts of meanness when they hear Rance tell her that he wishes they could get Dr. Florenz to consider her case, as he could cure her. They make up a purse and present it to Rance, but his foolish pride will not let him accept it.

The ranchman's daughter sustains a fall from a horse and a doctor is needed. The cowboys are all out at work and the ranchman offers Rance $1,000 to cross the river and get the doctor. Upon receiving a promise that his sister shall be looked after in case he should perish, Rance sets out. After a perilous swim and a narrow escape, he succeeds in getting the doctor. The recrossing of the river is made in a boat, which was on the other side and Florenz accompanies Ray on the trip.

The ranchman grudgingly pays over the $1,000, but Rance has him give it to Florenz, who, inquiring as to the reason, learns of the sister and her troubles. He refuses the check, declaring that it would be only right to aid her as a reward for her brother's heroism. He discovers that he can cure her. Six weeks later she takes her first step, stumbling into his arms. The romance which has begun during the treatment, finds its culmination there, as Ray and the ranchman's daughter, who have a romance of their own, stand smiling in the background.



Is now recognized as AN ABSOLUTE NECESSITY

By Theatrical Managers who want to conduct their box office business

EXPEDITIOUSLY, ACCURATELY AND SAFELY

BECAUSE You can sell INSTANTLY 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5 tickets, by simply pressing a button and foot pedal—THIS SPELLS RAPID SERVICE.

BECAUSE All tickets are sold through our automatic machine—your cashier will handle no tickets, only the cash—any possible collusion between cashier and doorkeeper will be a thing of the past. Every dollar's worth of business will mean ONE HUNDRED CENTS in your pocket—THIS SPELLS SAFETY.

BECAUSE EVERY ticket sold through the machine IS AUTOMATICALLY REGISTERED—the register is accurate and can make no mistakes. The register is locked, and YOU HOLD THE KEY, and the register acts as your bookkeeper—THIS SPELLS ACCURACY AND EFFICIENCY.

BECAUSE The AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER handles the crowds with mechanical precision—in this speed age it means a great deal to supply customers with tickets in a fraction of the present time required. The AUTOMATIC does it, and box-office congestion is eliminated.

USED WHEREVER TICKETS ARE SOLD
THE AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER CO.
INCORPORATED

THEREFORE

DON'T SUBJECT YOUR EMPLOYEES TO TEMPTATION—GET AN AUTOMATIC—WITH THE KEY TO THE REGISTER, YOU HAVE THE KEY TO THE SITUATION.

Illustrated descriptive catalogue and terms upon request. Write nearest office.

Reliable agents wanted everywhere—liberal contracts

USED WHEREVER TICKETS ARE SOLD
THE AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER CO.
INCORPORATED

The Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Co.

Suite 515 Longacre Building
Times Square
42nd and Broadway
New York City

Suite 605
Third National Bank Building
St. Louis, Mo.

Room 929
California Building
Los Angeles, Cal.

No. 9 Doane Street
Boston, Mass.

NESTOR.

THE PROOF OF THE MAN (July 7).—Two brothers, Dick and Bill, are in love with Alma. Dick is accepted, while Bill receives his dismissal. Dick and Alma are married. Dick goes to work his claim nearby, and during his absence an old prospector, all in and with a final effort, crawls to Dick's cabin and is helped inside by Alma. She notes that he has been dragging a bag of nuggets, which he has tied 'round his neck, the bag having a small hole in it. She does all she can for him and he shows his gratitude. Before he passes away he thanks her and draws a rough map of the location of the valuable vein of ore he has struck and gives it to her. Soon afterwards he dies. Bill has been an interested spectator through the window, and while Alma runs for assistance he enters the house, draws and substitutes a "fake" map for the original one, which he takes with him.

When Dick returns Alma shows him the fine nuggets and Dick resolves to lose no time in going to find and record the wonderful claim which is to make them rich. Bill has also hurried off. He finds the claim and knows the discovery is a fine one. He locates and returns to have the claim recorded. His conscience smites him, however, and he is drawn by some strange influence to his brother's home. He looks in the door and sees Alma sewing on some baby clothes. He suddenly realizes that he has caused Dick to go upon a dangerous errand, and determines to go after him. He goes in, and writing a letter, he adds some papers, which he addresses to his brother, and leaves with Alma. He then starts to search for Dick.

In the meantime Dick has found nothing but disappointment. He turns back and suffers for lack of water. When Bill eventually finds him, he is all in. Together they start to return, but their progress is slow, for Dick is weak and the water which Bill carried along is nearly gone.

That night Bill gets up while Dick sleeps heavily. He sees there is but little water left. He leaves a note for Dick, saying that he has divided the water and has gone. He then starts off, but does not take any of the precious fluid with him.

Dick finds the note, but does not understand its purport. He starts out and reaches home. He finds the letter which Bill left, telling him the truth and enclosing all the papers necessary to claim the mine. Bill lays himself down and dies in the arid desert.

JOHN THE WAGGONER (July 9).—John thinks all the world of his little wife, Edna, but does not possess the delicate art of showing it. She even has to remind him of that good-bye kiss at times, for Edna has a great capacity for loving. Roy, a deputy sheriff, a good-looking young fellow, calls upon her by chance and is struck by her youth and beauty. Being of an unsuspecting nature, and flattered by the attentions of this attractive man, who reads her like a book, Edna unwittingly encourages him. In time John begins to take notice, and although he does not affect to see anything, he grows more taciturn and morose.

One day his suspicions aroused, he halts his wagon and returns to the house. He hears voices nearby and following the sound, discovers his wife and the tempter, who is telling her that her husband neither understands nor loves her. John sees the man's arm steal around the waist of his wife and turns and goes, but seeing that she resents the familiarity. His smouldering passions roused, John goes to his house and gets his revolver and goes into the woods to form his revengeful plans. Roy returns to the town and the sheriff tells him to go with him to hunt a desperado who has just robbed the stage. At the cross roads the sheriff and Roy separate and Roy, well pleased at the chance, rides towards Edna's home. Edna sits, torn with doubts, when she is confronted by the hold-up man, who demands that she hide him. They hear an approaching horse and the man runs into an inner room, threatening to kill her if she discloses his whereabouts.

Roy enters, but does not understand her terrified looks. He goes to her and takes her in his arms. the hold-up, thinking she is giving him away, confronts them from the inner door. Roy has drawn his gun, but drops it in his fear, and John, who has come to his conclusion and returns, sees the trio thus. Roy, his yellow streak to the fore, hides behind the terrified Edna and the outlaw slowly covers them both. John is roused to action. He shoots and the gun drops from the hold-up's maimed hand. John picks up Roy's revolver, and throwing Edna off as she runs to him, marches the two men before him, and taking Edna with him, goes to the sheriff's office. The sheriff has returned, and after a brief recital of the facts, he arrests the hold-up, and tearing the star from the craven Roy's coat, sends him on his way. Despite her entreaties, John slowly points Edna to follow Roy. She, bewildered, comes up with the coward, when he turns and appeals to her and she lashes him with her tongue until he cowers and hurries away. John, the reaction having set in, goes slowly home. He buries his head in his hands and then looks unconsciously for the pretty little woman who was such an integral portion of his home. His hand goes out and he takes a shawl from the back of a chair and it goes to his lips as Edna, her face full of appeal and misery, kneels at the threshold with her arms outstretched. John sees her and his great love banishes all else from his mind, and he gathers the sobbing girl to his breast.

TRY US
Developing and printing.
Cameras and Camera men furnished.
Feature Films made.
Send us your old films to be renovated. We make them look like new by our own Parisian Process. Work Positively Guaranteed.
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO
4940 Wantworth Ave. Chicago, Ill.

TO THE TRADE
Negatives Developed. 1c per ft.
PRINTS MADE ON
Eastman Stock.... 4½c per ft.
(In quantities over 5,000 feet)
Including Tinting and Toning
TITLES, 8c per ft.
Prompt deliveries. All work guaranteed.
Commercial Motion Pictures Co., Inc.
102 W. 101st Street. New York City
Telephone, 8724 Riverside

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS
MAKE $20 TO $50 PER NIGHT WITH OUR NEW 1912 FIRE-PROOF MACHINE AND LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT DEAL DIRECT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS
EVERY MACHINE GUARANTEED
COMPLETE TRAVELING-OUTFITS FOR SCHOOLS CHURCHES LODGES, AND SMALL TOWNS A SPECIALTY
WE FURNISH YOU WITH FILMS & EVERYTHING AND START YOU INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS WITH A COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL OUTFIT ON A SMALL PAYMENT DOWN, THE BALANCE YOU PAY OUT OF YOUR PROFITS WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG MOVING PICTURE SALES CO.
Ellsworth Building
Chicago, Ill.

AMERICAN
MOTION PICTURE
CAMERAS
are acknowledged by the leading expert film producers to be the finest and most accurate Cameras in the world.
We also manufacture a complete line of Studio and Dark Room Equipment.
Send for Catalogues
AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO.
617-631 W. JACKSON BLVD. CHICAGO, ILL.

Make Your Own Moving Pictures!
Our Ideal Motion Picture Camera Does the Work!
Excellently constructed, beautifully finished, simple to operate, fitted up with a Bausch & Lomb Zeiss Tessar Lens, 1. C., F 3-5, one of the best and fastest lenses in the market; holds 200 feet stock.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue
PRICE COMPLETE $75.00
Motion Picture Camera Co., Inc.
Dept. A 5 West 14th Street, New York

WHEN HE WORE THE BLUE (July 11).—Wifie wants Mac to go to the suffragette meeting, but naturally Mac wants to get out of it and affects the gout. Wifie goes, and in answer to an urgent call from the club, Mac unties the foot bandages and blithely sets forth. He and his companions have a bully game of cards, which is interrupted by some officious cops, who proceed to arrest every one in sight. Mac is not in sight, for he disappears through a window. Policeman 23 is on the alert and sees him and there is a lively chase up the fire escape, into a bedroom window, up a stairway and out onto the roof. Ha! Ha! cries Policeman 23, but he reckons beyond his host, for Mac is husky and overcomes the cop and borrows his costume, leaving him securely tied in an extremely draughty position. He is eventually rescued, but in the meantime Mac has his troubles. He is called upon to regulate the traffic and to quell a family disturbance. He is interrupted during a really pretty capture when his victim, Policeman 23, appears on the scene. Mac makes explanations and his peace, and is enabled to get home before Wifie, having had an exciting time.

FOUR QUEENS AND A JACK (July 11).—Jack is an adept at flirting and Evelyn is a close second. He leaves a train of smiling maids and dames and angry men in his wake. He flirts with Corinne and Lee yanks her indignantly away. He flirts fith all ensemble until he sees Evelyn and pa entering the hotel. He flirts with her then, but there is a more serious note to his advances than usual, for Evelyn is very cute and pretty. Pa is having his troubles trying to keep Evelyn from flirting, and he is constantly telling men to behave themselves or—

Pa sees Evelyn and Jack at it and warns Jack to sheer off, but Evelyn finally manages to send a message to Jack, written on the back of one of her mother's visiting cards. Jack receives it and notes that Evelyn will join him at the pier soon. He turns the card over and sees a married woman's name and is surprised. But, well—— guesses he will wait anyhow.

In the meantime, Jack gets impatient and sends a note to Evelyn, and addressed to her mother. Evelyn has already skipped, while her father takes forty winks. He takes the note from the boy, reads it, rages and goes. He nearly gets assaulted for tearing an umbrella away from a perfectly innocent couple doing a little love making on their own account, and finally runs down the two guilty parties. Jack tries to get away and might have succeeded, only he looks around and cannons into a passer-by. Pa secures him, but a diversion is created by the arrival of ma, who has just come in. Explanations follow and Jack sees that the name on the card is mamma's. Mamma intercedes and Jack is allowed to call, but the young couple are not permitted to go out. They have to sit and do their flirting where pa and ma can keep their eyes on them.

CRYSTAL

TRUE CHIVALRY (July 8).—Major Morgan makes an impassioned speech denouncing Colonel Allison, who is seeking the nomination for Governor of the State of Georgia. His son, Dick, saves the life of Georgia, the only daughter of Colonel Allison, be stopping her runaway horse. The colonel goes to the major's home and seeks to quarrel with him, but serious trouble is prevented by the major's wife. He returns home and is introduced to Dick by Georgia. He thanks the young man for saving his daughter's life, but orders him from the house, saying that in view of his strained relations with the major, that he could be friends with none of his family. The young couple, however, have fallen in love, and think it wrong that they should suffer for the personal quarrels of their parents. Unknown to her father Georgia attends a party where she knows she will meet Dick. Her father follows her there and takes her home. The following week a grand dance and affair is given by a matron of the country and the young couple are invited. Georgia's father finds out that she intends to meet Dick there and prevents her going. Dick attends and Georgia tells him over the telephone that her father has learned that they are not to be kept apart and intends taking her to California so as to be away from him. Dick immediately hastens to Georgia's home where he is let in by her. Jackson, the old butler, sees him passing a window on the porch and thinking him a burglar, tells Colonel Allison. The colonel hastens upstairs and discovers the young couple in each other's arms. He immediately sends Georgia from the room and handing Dick a pistol insists on fighting him a duel, claiming that his family's good name has been besmirched and a scandal raised by Dick's midnight visit to his daughter's boudoir. Dick refuses to shoot and Georgia re-enters the room. Her father insists that to avoid a scandal the young couple must be married immediately, and they give an only too ready assent. The colonel telephones for a minister and, unknown to either, Georgia goes out and telephones to Dick's father to come over to the house. He arrives just as the ceremony is finished and is induced to shake hands with the colonel and forget their feud.

IMP.

THE WOP (July 10).—Luigi is employed by Cramp, the millionaire contractor. He is a widowner and lives alone with his daughter, Rosie. There is a strike and Luigi tries to return to ATTENTION EXHIBITORS!

Are You Going to Attend the Third Annual National Convention

of the

Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America

at

New York City, July 7th to 12th, 1913?

IF SO

Fill out the following blank immediately and mail to the Special Convention Hotel Committee at once. This committee will take especial pains and time to make all arrangements for your Hotel accommodations for you and your friends (without any charge). You will get just what you want and at the price you desire to pay.

Don't wait. Get busy. Fill in the Reservation Blank today and mai to the Special Convention Hotel Committee

CLEM KERR, Chairman, Hotel Bristol, 122-124 West 49th Street, New York City

HOTEL RESERVATION BLANK

Special Convention Hotel Committee of The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.
Clem Kerr, Chairman, 122-124 West 49th St., care Hotel Bristol, New York City, N. Y.

Please have reserved for me Mr...

of....................................city.......................State, the following

Hotel accommodations for.. days:

American / European Plan Room for.................persons without bath at $..............per day

American / European Plan Room for..................persons with bath at $................per day

American / European Plan Suite for................persons..........at $.................per day

State approximate number days you anticipate being here ....days work, but is hustled away by the labor pickets. The strike continues, and Luigi is reduced to abject poverty. Cramp is arrested for stealing a large sum of money, but is treated as a gentleman. Grace, the daughter of the judge, devotes her time to charity in the poor quarters. Luigi and Rosie are freezing and Luigi goes to the railroad yards to pick coal. He is arrested and dragged to jail, leaving Rosie at home waiting for his return, suffering from the cold. He tries to expostulate with the officer but to no avail.

Cramp is released on an alabi, while Luigi is sentenced to two years at hard labor. He breaks down, and, wild, with rage, he curses the judge and threatens to get even. His sentence is served; he hastens to his late home in search of Rosie, of whom he has heard nothing. He finds the house he lived in occupied by strangers who can tell him nothing of his daughter. He wanders forth on the street asking everyone he meets to tell him of Rosie. He passes the house of the judge and sees the man who sentenced him come out with his daughter. Luigi is possessed of but one idea—to kill the child of the man. That night he gains access to the house. In the bed is the form of a girl. Luigi approaches the bed with drawn knife, stoops over and is about to plunge the knife into the bosom of the sleeper when she awakes, rises and looks at him—it is his daughter, Rosie, who has been cared for by Grace. Luigi drops the knife and takes his beloved Rosie in his arms.

OH! YOU FLIRT (July 12).—Tom, a city clerk, goes to a summer resort where he decides to wage war upon the hearts of the village beauties. He has many adventures and is beaten by almost everyone in the village, but at last he meets a gypsy beauty who smiles upon him. There is a scare over kidnappers in the village. The gypsy girl flirts with the city sport and they exchange their head-dress, as she laughingly wonders how he will look as a gypsy; then she eludes him and he races through the woods after her. A nurse girl drowses over her novel and a mischievous boy silently wheels her carriage and baby away. He leaves it on the road and the city masher, who cannot find the gypsy, looks at the crying baby. This is seen by the nurse girl who, believing him to be a gypsy kidnapper, alarms the village, and all the rubes, including the frenzied parents of the lost babe, get guns and ropes and start after the supposed gypsy. They encounter him as he is walking along and open fire upon him with shotguns. Believing that he is attacked by escaped lunatics, he runs away and they chase him into a barn which they set on fire and are about to lynch him when a village girl enters with the missing baby. Explanations follow and he rushes away. By the side of a waterfall he pauses, exhausted, and the gypsy girl touches him on the shoulder, and, with a shriek of horror, he turns from her and falls into the waterfall.

REX.

THROUGH STRIFE (July 13).—In one of the mining districts there lived a young and faithful wife, whose finer sensibilities were suffered to tolerate the abuse of a brutal husband. Longing for sympathy and heart affection, she responds to the warmth of friendship affectionately extended by a neighboring miner of corresponding youth and understanding.

The story opens and closes in the highly dramatic scene wherein she stands over her wounded lover and answers the accusation of the vigilantes, who have come upon the scene to ascertain the cause of death of her husband. Before their accusing gaze she relates the cause which is depicted as the action follows:

"Up the stream there was a man who loved me. Learning of the abuse which my ties as wife made necessary that I should suffer, he pitied me. One day a bottle brought a message down the stream to me, asking that I go away with him to new lands. But I remembered the oath which bound me to this brute and signalled 'No' by a single shot. My husband grew suspicious at the sound of my gun and questioned me. I was silent. I would not lie. The next day I went again to the stream. His message came as before, bidding that I signal twice if I cared a little, that he might come and say "good-bye" forever. I told my husband that I wanted flour from the mill and watched him depart for the village. I answered the dictates of my heart and signalled twice. He came to say farewell. My husband must have forgotten something, for, as our hands were clasped in parting, my husband fired from ambush and Paul fell wounded at my feet. I tried to explain. My husband only sneered, and, with an oath, drove me before him toward the cabin. Paul, fearing for my safety, followed in pain to my window, where he fell exhausted. My husband mocked his piteous call for water and in my suffering I begged that he would kill me with a knife I had quickly taken from the table. To this he only laughed—a brutal laugh—and in answer to my pleading gathered me roughly in his arms. I struggled and broke away from him. As we stood facing each other across the table, with fury in our eyes, he made a quick lunge at me with the knife. His weight knocked the table over and as he fell, the knife intended for me, buried itself deeply in his side."

The Vigilantes, with bowed heads, slowly went, leaving the two in fuller understanding and happy anticipation.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 68 (June 25).—Yale vs.Harvard Boat Race—The 'Varsity Boat Race on the Thames is won by the Harvard eight.

The English Derby—Attended by all England's nobility, is run off at the famous Epsom Downs race course.

Twenty Thousand Kiddies march in the Annual School day parade—Bronx Park, New York.

Fashions—Smart costumes that will be seen on Fifth Avenue next week.

Baby Review—The kiddies compete for prizes at their annual parade—Jersey City, N. J.

Government Submarine Test—The "Cage," submarine, coming to the surface after being submerged for thirty-six hours, breaks all former records—Los Angeles, Cal.

King George presents colors to the Battalion of Gentlemen Cadets at Camberly, Aldershot.

Remarkable Endurance Test—The first annual Rocky Mountain marathon is won by Garwood Burkett, Denver, Colo.

The Imperator—Largest ship afloat, arrives at New York on her maiden voyage.

Disastrous Steamboat Explosion—Many killed and injured when the boilers of the barge "C. K. Peck" explode at Racine, Wis.

The King of Spain visits the Minister of Foreign Affairs in Paris and is present at the review of his honor.

Who's Who in Pictures—Clara Horton (Eclair).

ECLAIR.

HE WAS NOT ILL, ONLY UNHAPPY (Newlywed Series, June 29).—Poor little dear! This time our little Snookums is in real trouble. No—he was not ill—but, believe me, he was—unhappy. And the entire household and all the neighbors had their troubles until the poor little fellow found a real friend in his dear mother's mama. She found the cause of all this trouble—and it was no small cause.

After Snookums had caused his dada and his mother to do everything but send in a fire alarm, grandmother Newlywed found a great big safety pin—and it was sticking poor 'ittle Snookie where he could feel it, and feel it good. No wonder he yelled.

THE TORPEDO FISH (June 29).—The torpedo fish is a most unusual animal owing to its ability to throw from its body an electric shock. It is in a way dangerous to handle, although the shock is not deadly to man. Some most interesting experiments are shown in which the electric vibrations are measured by instruments.

THAT BOY FROM THE EAST (June 22).—Missing a train in Tulsa, Okla., George Burton decided to run out to see his uncle and aunt for a day. His arrival caused somewhat of a commotion in the household, owing to the presence of three very pretty cousins.

These same cousins had three young men, who were quite attentive, but on this day the girls decided that they would devote all of their time to George, showing him the "sights." The little party visited the county fair and had quite a good time, to the discomfiture of the three young men who had expected to escort the girls, and so the three Western boys planned a little revenge on "that Eastern feller."

The three Tulsa boys disguised as Indians and ambushed the party on their way home, but, strange to say, George did not take to his heels, but showed fight. The result was that before the Westerners knew just what had happened they found themselves in a heap by the roadside with the three laughing girls and their cousin moving slowly towards home.

That evening the three "Indians" watched from under cover, as best they could with their battered eyes, the departure of "That Boy From the East."

FORTUNE'S PET (2 parts, June 18).—A widow and a widower or neighbors. Both have children—the widow a daughter, the widower a son. As these children are always quarreling with each other, it causes a heated discussion between the parents and one day one family moved away. A few years later the young son, now grown to manhood, has become a "good fellow" at the club, spending his money freely and having no desire to work. He receives a letter from his father saying that he must stop loafing, otherwise he will receive no more assistance. To show the other members of the club that he has grit in him, he signs a contract with them whereby he is to start out without a cent and earn $10,000 within a year. He makes a start by getting a position as bellboy in a fashionable hotel in which resides Miss Edith Perry, the owner of the motorboat "Lightning Edith," which is to compete in the race to come off that day.

Through the fact that he is generally conceded to be a worthy business man, Joe Burns, an underworld leader, bribes the driver of Miss Perry's boat, as he has planned to have one of his gang bet heavily against it. The chambermaid, who overhears the plot, tells the son, who follows Burns and sees the money given. The son intervenes, knocks the crooked driver down, takes the wheel himself and brings the boat in victorious. For this he is given $500 and a position as butler in Mrs. Perry's household. He is getting along nicely until his love for Miss Perry is discovered, causing his discharge. That night he returns to the house to steal a photograph of Miss Perry, and just as he is leaving he hears a struggle coming from the next room. Upon investigating he finds Burns gagging the maid. A fight ensues, but Burns escapes into the street with the son close upon him. Calling a policeman to his assistance they trail the underworld leader to his den where the entire gang is rounded up. For this the son receives a reward which is more than the stipulated amount he is to earn. He reports at the club on the night that he is due to show his $10,000 and was telling the members and his father how he procured the money and the photograph of the girl he has fallen in love with when his father tells him that the photograph is a picture of the girl who was their neighbor years ago. Father and son hurry to the home of the Perrys where a reconciliation takes place.

THE BADGE OF POLICEMAN O'ROON (2 parts—June 25).—O'Roon, who was a favorite with the boys on the ranch, was the first to enlist in the regiment of "Gentle Riders," when war was declared with Spain. In a skirmish with the Spaniards, O'Roon proved his mettle when he rescued, under fire, one of his comrades named Jack Remsen. Just after the war, O'Roon mailed a letter to a charming young lady named Alice, the daughter of the Earl of Ardsley, Scotland, from whose beautiful old castle he was ordered away many months ago, saying that as the war was over, he will sail for New York, where he hopes to secure a nice position. When Alice received the letter, she pleaded so fervently with her father to go to America that he at last consented. By a chance happening of accidentally dropping her glove, Alice came face to face with Remsen, who was sitting at one of the tables at the entrance of a fashionable summer garden. He picked up the glove and returned it to her father. Remsen felt the sting of love enter his heart and he wished that he knew the beautiful young girl. For the next few days, Remsen, as he was riding in his big touring car, passed Alice as she was driving with her father in their carriage, and each time he doffed his hat and wondered how he might secure an introduction.

When O'Roon arrived in New York, he visited his comrade, Jack Remsen, through whose influence he was given a position on the mounted police stationed in Central Park. One day as he was on duty he was surprised to be handed an invitation by Remsen to a reunion of the "Gentle Riders," who were in the city at the time. O'Roon attended the reunion, and after spending the night in revelry and imbibing freely, he started to go home, but found that his legs would not perform their duty. Remsen, feeling that he was to blame for his friend's condition, put him to bed and took the position as mounted policeman in the park. He raced after a pair of runaway horses, and when he saw the occupants of the carriage he was greatly surprised to discover that he had saved Alice and her father. For fear of betraying his friend he could not give his name, but gave O'Roon's badge number. The next day when Alice and her father called at the police station and asked to see the man who had saved them, O'Roon came forward. Great was their surprise when Alice and O'Roon ran into each other's arms. The father wanted an explanation, but O'Roon hurried away, intending to bring their real rescuer to them. Into the handsome apartment of Remsen were ushered Alice and her father, and everything ended the way that Remsen wished it to end.

Is Filicide Justifiable?
See "The Seed of the Fathers," America's Greatest Feature Production.
A Marion Leonard Special.
Monopol Film Company.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

AMERICAN.

SAN FRANCISCO, THE DAUNTLESS CITY (July 7).—A remarkable, interesting and comprehensive series of views depicting the marvelous growth of the city of San Francisco since the disastrous earthquake and fire of six years ago. American energy and enterprise has made it possible to rebuild a city more gigantic and beautiful than the old, and have made capital out of the scholar, student and public at large.

THE FOREIGN SPY (July 10).—The arm engineer and his daughter are deeply interested in each other, but, of course, the will of the father predominates. As a result the girl experiences many heart aches, because it does seem as though she is about to lose her sweetheart because he is not an arm man.

The issue is brought to a climax by the presence of a spy in the father's home. Plans for the border fortifications are stolen and the impending disgrace

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII

A Four Act Extravaganza

Produced at Fabulous Cost, with Thousands of People in the Cast

MOST EXTRAVAGANT SPECTACULAR EVER PRODUCED!

The battles fought between the colonists, the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, the destruction of the famous temples, the fire that consumed the doomed City of Pompeii in the year 63 A. D., is well known to all who read of this greatest catastrophe in the world's history.

REASONABLE PRICES FOR STATE RIGHTS

Lithographs from one to twelve sheets, and plenty of other lobby display

WRITE OR WIRE TO

THE ITALIAN POMPEII FILM CO.

1202 Race Street Philadelphia, Pa.

and ruin drive the officer to the verge of despair, from which he is rescued by the daughter and her sweetheart, who rescue the plans, and apprehend the spy.

THE SONG OF THE SOUP (July 12).—A group of city folk visit the country in an automobile, and the girl of the party strikes a fancy for the daring deeds and accomplishments of a cowboy. This arouses the jealousy of her suitor, and the chagrin of her parents. A society affair in the city undeceives the girl and clears the domestic realm of impending storm.

RELIANCE.

HER FINAL CHOICE (June 30).—May Walcott, living in a Pennsylvania mining town, has two lovers, Tom Hodges and Jim Hastings, both of whom are miners in one of the great collieries of the town. She has always regarded them with equal favor, but one day the men quarrel and agree to put the matter plainly to May and let her decide between them. She is unaware of Tom's real character, and as Jim has been somewhat backward in his attentions to her, she chooses Tom.

That evening a neighbor rushes into the house of May's family and announces an explosion and cave-in at the mine. May rushes out to the shaft in company with the villagers. At the mine she meets Jim and begs him to go down into the mine and save Tom. Jim refuses at first, but finally gives way to her entreaties and enters the shaft. Instead of going to work that evening, however, as May thought, Tom has stopped on the way at a saloon, where he is drinking and gambling. He and his companions are not moved by the news of the disaster, but continue their game. Finally Tom goes broke and quits. He goes to the mine, where he meets May. May begs Tom to go down and rescue Jim. He pushes her aside with a sneer and refuses. She is shocked at his intoxicated condition. Just then Jim appears, borne on a stretcher. The contrast is enough to show May which man is worthy of her love, and falling on her knees beside Jim, she begs his forgiveness, which is freely granted.

DICK'S TURNING (July 2).—Dick—only a boy in years—is married to Milly—sixteen. He is able to support her until the big strike comes and his job is taken away. Unable to get another he is forced to see their little bits of furniture taken away, and himself and wife put out of the poor rooms. The girl has to go back to her father's home and he accompanies her. At the door her father calls him a loafer and sends him away. In the park Dick sits and thinks. Work is hard to find. Milly is being cared for and since they think him a loafer, he will be one. He decides to be a hobo. At this point a kitten jumps on his knee. Before he goes he will take it to Milly, for he knows she will like it. On his way to his wife, the kitten gets away from him and he follows it into an alley leading into the courtyard of a rich home. A boy in this house has just been given a new rifle, and seeing the kitten on the fence, he aims at it but hits Dick instead. Dick is carried into the house, where the rich boy's mother, touched to the heart by his pathetic story, cares for him and sends for Milly. When he is all well again she gives him a position in her household as a chauffeur and the young couple resume housekeeping.

DEATH'S SHORT CUT (July 5).—In the small town of Milward, two men are in love with Bessie Lee. She gives her heart to John Armstrong, and refuses the hand of Jim Brady, the burly foreman of the mills. He is filled with jealousy and hatred of John and looks about for a way in which he can disgrace the younger man in Bessie's eyes. Bessie has a brother, Bob, a worthless sort of a chap, who is inclined to drunkenness. Seeing him stagger home one evening, Jim thinks that he is John, and getting Bessie, he points out what they both suppose to be John in a terrible state of drunkenness. On the spur of the moment Bessie consents to elope with Jim to the nearest parsonage, ten miles away. She leaves a note for John. When he gets it he realizes who was really to blame, and going to Bob, he tells him frantically that they must find a way to prevent the marriage. There is a short cut to the next town across a large falls. Bob says he will make this trip in his boat. John tries to dissuade him, but the boy rushes away and in his frail craft makes the perilous voyage over the water falls and down through the treacherous rapids. His boat is overturned, but he manages to swim ashore in time to prevent Bessie's marriage and bring his sister back to John.

MAJESTIC.

ONE ROUND O'BRIEN COMES BACK (June 29).—Times were hard for "One Round" O'Brien, the once famous pugilist. The proprietor of a theater also felt the pinch of poverty, for the audiences which gathered in his auditorium were very small.

O'Brien suggested to the theatrical man that a sign be posted outside the theater offering $50 to the man who could beat "One Round" in a boxing bout. The idea was adopted and the theater was crowded with men who came to see the bouts. All who tested the prowess of O'Brien were quickly worsted. Frequently a sponge came hurling through the air in the thick of the conflict, and "One Round's" antagonist soon became helpless. The sponge contained chloroform, which the ingenious pugilist used to secure the "sleep producing" punch.

Sad to relate, the wrong man got the sponge one evening, and O'Brien himself took the count. The enraged theatrical owner kicked "One Round" into the street, and this time "One Round" did not come back.

THE GOLDEN JUBILEE (July 1).—For fifty years the Catholic Protectory has held a prominent place among the charitable institutions of the United States. It was formed in 1863 for the protection of destitute boys and girls of the Catholic faith, the Civil War leaving many orphaned and homeless children whose patriotic fathers and brothers had fallen on the field of battle while fighting for the preservation of the Union. To these were soon added other thousands, the sons and daughters of impoverished immigrants from Catholic countries.

To save these boys and girls and gather them into a Home where they would be educated and taught a useful trade, and where, especially, their faith would be preserved, was the object of the illustrious founders.

The exercises at the jubilee were of a very impressive nature. His Eminence Cardinal Farley, Archbishop of New York, attended with all of the prominent Catholic clergy in New York, and many prominent citizens of the city. Various drills were given by the boys and girls at the protectory, and the value of the institution thoroughly demonstrated.

GAFFNEY'S GLADIATOR (July 5).—Jack's rich uncle sends money and large remittances to perfect his nephew in sculpturing, which art he is supposed to be pursuing. Jack, however, spends all his remittances with his chum and together they have a glorious time with fellow artists and models. Jack, writing uncle that he is engaged on a statue of Apollo, receives another remittance which is quickly squandered. Uncle sends word unexpectedly, that, accompanied by a friend, an art connoisseur, he is on his way to inspect the statue. Jack, never having started work, is in a quandary, but finally induces his chum to pose as Apollo. Uncle and friend admire Apollo's lifelike appearance and the friend desires to purchase the statue. Jack refuses, but uncle insists on the sale, so in spite of the statue's frenzied gestures of dissent behind uncle's back, has to submit, only stipulating upon packing and delivering statue himself personally.

The supposed statue is placed in the friend's house, and much admired, but at the first opportunity rushes from the house, shivering and hiding from pedestrians until he reaches the studio, where a merry party is awaiting his return. Meanwhile, the friend and uncle find the pedestal empty and the front door open, so thinking that the statue has been stolen, invoke the aid of police and rush to the studio to tell Jack. There they interrupt the party, where Apollo, wrapped in a bath robe, is pledging the merry crowd. Uncle sees through the scheme; Jack has to return the purchase money to uncle's friend and is marched off from studio life and artistic surroundings to remain under uncle's watchful eye.

THANHOUSER.

A MODERN LOCHINVAR (June 29).—His family tree contained proof that Percy Lochinvar was descended from the bold Scotchman who won his sweetheart despite all opposition. Percy was proud of his ancestry, but privately admitted that he himself would be more likely to swim the East River to get away from a girl than to get one. For Percy was bashful.

He was deeply in love, but up to date had actually been afraid to propose. The girl liked him and showed it, but the young man could never nerve himself up to pop the question.

The girl's mother was an ardent suffragist, and she often referred to Percy as the meek type of man that should be controlled by woman, his rightful ruler. Another suitor, a bold, self-reliant man, noted as a lawyer, artfully protested his loyalty to the cause of suffrage, and won the mother's heart. The girl did not like the lawyer nearly as well as her timid suitor, but when the orator was selected to deliver a speech at the suffrage parade in New York City, it seemed as though Percy was hopelessly out of the race for the girl's hand.

Poor Percy was a melancholy spectator of the beginning of the parade and saw the girl he loved ride by in an auto with his hated rival. Then Percy went home and gloomily decided that life had lost all its charms. Fortunately for him, he glanced at the portrait of his bold ancestor, which was hanging on the wall. The spirit of days gone by revived him. What one Lochinvar had done, Percy decided, another Lochinvar would do, then he seized his hat and started out to make history repeat itself.

When he arrived at the grand stand he found the young orator completely surrounded by his own eloquence. The girl's mother was listening with admiration, and already had decided that he should be her son-in-law. The girl was weary and inattentive. Young Lochinvar appeared, and with an imperious gesture bore her off. They returned later, just as the orator had completed his speech, and informed him that they had "just stepped out and got married."

KING RENE'S DAUGHTER (July 1).—To bring to an end the enmity which has existed between King Rene, who ruled in Provence in the fifteenth century, and Count Vaudemont, the later gentlemen agreed with the former through their mediator, the Duke of Burgundy, to betroth his new-born daughter, Iolanthe, to Tristan, the nine-year-old son of the count. Not long after this agreement was made the palace was partly destroyed by fire, and in being rescued by a soldier the baby girl became blind. The king sent to Cordova for a famous physician named Ebu Jahia, who told the father that his daughter should be kept in ignorance of her affliction until she attained the age of sixteen, at which time she would regain the use of her eyes. Acting upon this advice the king built in a secluded spot in his dominion a cottage, where the childhood days of Iolanthe were spent in the company of nobody but her nurse, Martha, and the former's husband, Bertrand, a forester. She was not permitted to receive anybody and even when the king paid her visits he was known as a humble knight named Sir Raymbaut.

As the years went by King Rene began to fear that Tristan would not wed a blind girl and that the feud would thereby be rekindled. The count kept his son strictly to the pledge and when Iolanthe reached her sixteenth year Tristan was sent to Provence to meet her. He wandered away from his escort, and, with his retainer, Sir Geoffrey of Orange, he accidentally came upon the cottage. Peering in through the half open door, Tristan saw a beautiful girl sleeping on the couch. Upon lifting the talisman that Ebu Jahia had placed upon her breast to produce sleep, the girl soon woke. He went into the garden and was soon followed by Iolanthe. When Sir Geoffrey saw the girl he tried to get Tristan away from her, but the young man had fallen in love with her and would not go. During their conversation Tristan learned that Iolanthe was blind and was greatly surprised that she did not know anything about it. He gently broke the news to her and when he left, it was with a promise to call again the next day. All were surprised to learn that a stranger had been there and had revealed the secret to Iolanthe, but it soon developed that it was a fortunate occurrence for the physician declared it necessary. Ebu Jahia then took the blind girl into the cottage and began working over her eyes. While the king waited outside he received a message from Tristan renouncing his daughter because he loved another. But when Tristan arrived he learned the true state of affairs, and the long-buried feud will never be rekindled.

HER TWO JEWELS (July 4).—The wealthy widow lived a selfish life, with little regard or consideration for anybody except her son. He was her idol and she was blind to all his faults.

The young man gave his mother a handsome jeweled pin, and the woman proudly wore it on her dress. But that very day an inkwell on her desk upset and her handsome gown was stained. A girl from the dress cleaners arrived to take the dress away, and the owner, who had now changed to another gown, took the soiled dress to the window, where she showed the stains to the messenger.

After the girl had gone the woman discovered that the pin had disappeared, and a careful search revealed no trace of it in her room. She decided, although she did not know positively, that the girl must have taken it. The pin was not in the gown when it reached the shop, the girl was accused of theft by the woman, and was sent to prison. A short time later it was proven that the pin fell from the window while the widow was showing the gown to the girl, and was found by a little Italian boy. The girl, her innocence established, was released from prison, but the woman made no effort to atone for her error.

A few years later the woman received a shock when her son informed her that he was going to marry a girl for whom he cared very much, although he admitted that she was a manicure. The mother argued with him, but could not change his mind, so she decided to call on the manicure herself and bribe her to renounce her son. But, to her surprise and consternation, the manicure proved to be the little cleaner girl whom she has so grievously wronged. The manicure was no longer as light-hearted as she had been in the days gone by, and she scornfully told the mother that she could not buy her off, and she intended to marry her son. The woman pleaded, but she found no mercy in the girl whom she had given none.

The manicure married the son, and it is generally conceded by those who knew him in the past, that she made a man of him. The widow sees very little of her son and lives alone, revengeful and unforgiving.

PILOT.

THE CODE OF THE U. S. A. (July 3).—At a lawn party in Washington Ned Burton of the United States Diplomatic Service becomes attracted by the wiles of Nedda Baroff, an adventuress. Oti Noji, an emissary of the Japanese government, recognizes Nedda and proposes that she obtain Burton's confidence in order to steal the cipher code book of the diplomatic service. Burton is plainly infatuated with Nedda and in a diplomatic office Nedda manages by a clever ruse to obtain possession of the cipher code book.

Burton discovers his loss and he tracks Nedda to a rendezvous with Noji by a ruined mill, just as Nedda is telling the Japanese how she has fooled Burton. Ned breaks in the door and endeavors to gain possession of the book. He is attacked and in the struggle the lamp is overturned and

Copyright 1913 Wray Physioc

RAMO FILMS

The New Film of Quality

The Fourth Release—July 2nd

"I'm No Counterfeiter"

STUDIOS
102 W. 101st St.
New York City

COMING RELEASES

July 9th—	"Man and Woman"	2 reels
July 16th—	"A Dog-gone Baron"
July 23rd—	"The Silent House"
July 30th—(Watch for special announcements!)

Scene from "I'm No Counterfeiter"

Southern Exhibitor's Guide to Success

NOW BOOKING FEATURES THAT ARE FEATURES

James K. Hackett
In his greatest success

"The Prisoner of Zenda"

This record breaking feature—the greatest the FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. have so far produced, should interest every enterprising exhibitor in the States of North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama.

"Helen Gardner in Cleopatra"

This is another one of our money getters, that every exhibitor in the States of North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, and Mississippi, should make every effort to show to his patrons.

Satan

This feature they all talk about, has pleased every exhibitor in the States of Louisiana and Mississippi who had the good fortune to exhibit this wonder film.

EXHIBITORS WHO HAVE NOT SHOWN THESE PICTURES Wire, write or call immediately.

Franklin Feature Film Co.

803 James Bldg.
Chattanooga, Tenn.

We have always features that are features the mill is in flames. Burton is struck down by Noji and he is left to die in the flames. By a superhuman effort he manages to escape and tracks the conspirators as they are leaving their hotel en route to Japan. Burton follows their automobile and while in transit manages to jump on the machine, opens their package, securing the coveted book, and leaves a dummy in its place. The conspirators arrive in Japan to claim their reward from the government, when, to their intense surprise, they discover that the supposed code book has been substituted by a useless one.

MUTUAL WEEKLY

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 25 (June 18).—New York City.—5,000 policemen attend their annual memorial service at the Cathedral.

Tallulah Falls, Ga.—Construction work of the new dam.

The Fashion in Paris.

Wilmington, Del.—While excavating the basement of building, adjoining block collapses.

Germany.—A German, on a bet, travels all over the country, pushing an iron ball weighing 3,000 lbs.

Decatur, Ga.—Reception given to 8,000 Presbyterians by Agnes Scott College.

Saint Cyr, France.—King Alfonso of Spain visits the military aviation field.

Berwick, Pa.—Governor Tanner of Pennsylvania arriving for the Memorial parade.

Straaburg, Germany.—The Kaiser is received with great honors here.

Baltimore, Md.—Firemen testing new high-pressure engines.

Toledo, O.—Over 7,000 people attend motor cycle races.

Rouen, France.—The Swedish war vessels visit the French ports.

Fashion in New York.

Cuba.—Boat races of the American fleet.

Glasgow, Scotland. — Lord Roberts, England's greatest living soldier, visits the town.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Washington University crew, winners of the Pacific Coast championship.

Arlington, Va.—Union and Confederate veterans shake hands at the unveiling festivities of the "Southern Cross."

Tuxedo.—Opening of the Horse Show.

Birmingham, Ala.—Vulcan, the tallest man in the world.

New Orleans, La.—City Park festival.

Vienna, Australia.—Archduke I. Ferdinand wins the aeronautic contest.

New York City.—Col. Theo, Roosevelt, Vincent Astor and Park Commissioner Chas. B. Stover in Central Park, watching an army of 10,000 public school boys in a demonstration of physical training.

His Majesty the Sun cuts the prices in clothing.

KAY-BEE.

THE CRIMSON STAIN (3 parts, July 4).—Major Sibley and Colonel Medford, veterans of the war with Mexico, are old friends. Their children, Jack Sibley and Mary Medford, are sweethearts. The fathers quarrel and forbid their children to see each other, but Jack and Mary are married secretly. While Jack is visiting his wife at night Major Sibley sees him making his exit from a window, and thinking him a burglar, shoots and kills him. Mary confesses her marriage, but her father refuses to forgive her and orders her away. Colonel Medford has incurred the enmity of his overseer, whom he whipped and discharged for consorting with a mulatto, Casa. Mary has a child, and suffering poverty and privation she leaves the infant on the doorstep of her father's house. Major Sibley finds the child and adopts it. The overseer and the mulatto see Mary, but keep the secret to themselves.

Twenty years later the war has broken out. The child, Mary, has grown into a beautiful young woman, and is the image of her mother. She is in love with a young man who enlists, and asks her to marry him before he goes to the front. As the wedding is about to take place the overseer Cox, a captain in the northern army, makes an attack on the town. He interrupts the wedding and arrests Colonel Medford, and arranges to horsewhip him. He also makes the announcement that Mary is the daughter of a negro woman, and that he, Cox, and Casa, placed her on the colonel's doorstep. Casa, the mulatto, bears him out in this statement.

Before Cox can carry out his plan to publicly horsewhip the colonel, the southern troops retake the city after a fierce battle. Cox hides in Casa's cabin and the soldiers, not knowing that a woman is with him, blow up the place. Cox is killed and Casa mortally wounded. Before dying she confesses, and reveals the fact that Mary, the adopted child, is the daughter of Mary, the colonel's daughter, who died in a convent.

Is Filicide Justifiable?

See "The Seed of the Fathers," America's Greatest Feature Production.

A Marion Leonard Special.

Monopol Film Company.

EXCLUSIVE FILM CORPORATION

GAUMONT.

GAUMONT WEEKLY NO. 68 (June 25).—Shakespearean Festival.—Birthday of great dramatist is celebrated at Stratford-on-Avon.

Stage Children's Outing.—Little performers hold a picnic in Central Park, New York.

Great Catholic Gathering in Toledo.—Many dignitaries attend religious celebration in Ohio city.

Is Polo Popular?—40,000 people attend international match at Meadowbrook, L. I.

A Colorado Camel.—First specimen of this animal to be born in Denver.

The Queen of the Seas Arrives.—Giant Hamburg-American steamer, Imperator, reaches New York on maiden voyage, with 2,000 passengers.

Roses Galore in Portland.—Annual festival in Oregon city excels all previous efforts.

Thirty-Six Hours Under Water.—Cage submarine boat breaks all records at Long Beach, Calif.

Mrs. Murphy Moves.—Big hippo takes up summer quarters in Central Park, N. Y.

Suffragette Throws King's Horse.—Militant Miss Davison loses her life and produces world-wide sensation at Epsom Downs.

College Boat Races.—Harvard conquers Yale and Syracuse bests opponent in annual contest.

WHEN THE CAT'S AWAY (June 26).—Mr. and Mrs. Butterworth go to a masquerade ball. In their absence their three servant girls entertain three policemen, who proceed to eat and drink up everything in the immediate neighborhood.

About 3 a. m. Mr. and Mrs. Butterworth stagger in. The policemen are caught unawares and do not know how to escape without being caught. They pretend that they entered upon hearing a "burglarous" noise. To carry their deceit further, they arrest Mr. and Mrs. Butterworth, pretending to believe them to be he and she-male burglars. The Butterworths make an awful howl on being arrested as burglars in their own home. They are quickly released upon being identified. The police inspector strongly reproves the policemen for their overzealousness. The Butterworths are soft-hearted ninnies and believe that inasmuch as the policemen show excessive zeal in keeping such strict watch they should be rewarded. Accordingly, they send a check for $100, to be distributed among them. Inasmuch as the three policemen are about to be married to the three maids, the $100 comes in handy.

GREAT NORTHERN.

SHANGHAIED (June 21).—William Sanderson is a young seafaring man who has risen from the ranks of an ordinary seaman until he has reached the post of second officer on board the ship "Aetna." He is in love with, and is beloved by Edna, the only daughter of Miller, the shipowner, and the latter favors the match because of the manliness of the young officer. It is partially on this account that Willie, as he is called by his shipmates, receives his commission as second officer. The "Aetna" sails on a long foreign trip and after being granted shore leave, falls into the hands of evil companions and finds himself in a resort frequented by sailormen. His better judgment is overcome by a desire for frivolity and he proceeds to "treat" all hands without any regard for expense. But when he is left alone and is called upon by the boarding house keeper to pay his bill for refreshments, Willie is in financial straits. The boarding house keeper takes whatever money he has left and then causes the young officer to sign a paper, the contents of which the latter knows nothing about. Willie is bustled into a bedroom and left to sleep off his stupor, but Millie, the daughter of the boarding house master, has become suspicious and plans to bring about the release of the young officer. On the following morning Willie is rudely awakened from his slumbers and bustled aboard the ship "Cuttlefish," which is being made ready for a long voyage. She is well on her way to sea when Millie notifies Edna and her father of what is happening. Their steam yacht is brought into commission and after many hours the "Cuttlefish" is sighted. Willie has been ordered to do his trick at the wheel and when he overhears the skipper remark that the vessel is being chased, he decides upon desperate means and leaves the wheel, after shifting the course of the "Cuttlefish" in the direction of the approaching steamer. Willie scales the shrouds and when the crew of the vessel attempt to overtake him, he plunges headlong into the ocean and eventually is rescued by the sweetheart and good friends who are aboard the steam yacht. There is general rejoicing and while the "Cuttlefish" tacks into the breeze and disappears, the young second officer and Edna enjoy a reunion. In the meantime, Millie, the daughter of the boarding house master, who is also aboard the yacht, finds an admirer in one of the young officers and all ends happily.

CUPID'S SCORE (June 28).—Cyril is deeply in love with Florrie. The young girl's mamma, however, is not inclined to favor the match and their meetings, in consequence, are clandestine. Cyril sends a note to his lady love inviting her to attend a fancy dress ball, but the missive falls into the hands of Florrie's mamma, who decides to attend the ball without her daughter's knowledge. About this time Cyril's uncle, Joe, who is a jolly old sort, enters the apartment of his nephew and finding a fancy masquerade costume on the couch, decides to appropriate the same in revenge for some little joke played upon him by Cyril. Florrie's ma and Uncle Joe meet at the ball and when the time arrives for unmasking, they recognize each other and an old love affair is renewed. Mamma is a widow and Uncle Joe is a bachelor. The evening is enjoyably spent, but Cyril and his sweetheart are unable to attend because of Uncle Joe's sly action in appropriating his nephew's fancy dress costume. On the following morning the uncle is discovered on a couch in Cyril's apartments clad as a knight of old. At first the young man is inclined to have revenge, but upon second thought he decides to wait. In a fashionable cafe uncle and mamma keep their first rendezvous and it so happens that Cyril and Florrie are partaking of refreshments in an adjoining booth. The sounds of merriment attract the attention of both parties and after much peering over the partition, Uncle Joe and mamma and Cyril and Florrie decide to make it a one-party affair. The partition is removed and the two generations of lovers make merry while pledging their individual good health for the future.

SOLAX.

THE FLEA CIRCUS (July 9).—The professor, after many years of hard work, has succeeded in training a number of fleas, and some of them have become very intelligent, one in particular. One day, when taking this flea out for an airing, it escapes, and the professor is much disturbed. He follows it on his hands and knees to his apartment, but is not quite as nimble as his pet, which gets into the next apartment and proceeds to make enemies with an old gentleman with a bald head. This old gentleman, by a dexterous movement of his hand and fingers, catches the pet, and is about to throw it into the fire, when the professor appears and explains to him what a terrible crime he is about to commit. He saves his pet and takes the old gentleman and says that he will show him a few things he did not know about fleas. We next see the professor in his laboratory with his wonderful microscope, and then we see through the microscope the marvelous performances of the flea in question and his brothers. They walk a tight rope, they pull guns and roundabouts, they work a treadmill, they jump through hoops, and do many other novel things. The method of feeding them is shown, and the method of placing the chain around their necks. It is by means of this chain, composed of a wire one two-thousandth (1-2000) of an inch in diameter, that the flea is trained.

AS THE BELL RINGS (July 11).—John and Phil Burton are brothers. John is a young minister and Phil a young heartbreaker. Phil plays with the affections of all the girls in their town, and one in particular, Mary, who loves him. John is angry with his brother for his soulless conduct, and on leaving for another city, where he has been nominated, he makes his brother promise to marry Mary. This Phil promises after some remonstrance. When John has departed, however, Phil forgets his promises and instead of marrying Mary, goes through a mock ceremony with her, helped innocently by a college chum.

Five years later we see John in his new home. Mary comes along the village road with her child, weary and sad, seeking John. She has been deserted by Phil. John receives her and promises that his brother shall right the wrong done to her and sets detectives to find Phil. In the meantime, the village gossips are busy and decide that the conduct of John in receiving a young woman and child in his parsonage is shameful and that such immorality should not be allowed. They therefore request John to vacate the parsonage. John finally succeeds in finding Phil and in a very dramatic scene forces a return of Phil's manhood and succeeds in this way in arranging a marriage between Phil and Mary. John himself marries them in his little church, and as the gossips arrive to insist on his immediate departure, they are greeted at the door of the church by John, who introduces them to his brother, his wife and child.

LUX.

PAT GETS ON THE TRAIL (July 4).—No man is absolutely perfect, not even Pat. His chief failing is, however, a very plausible one, namely, a weakness for the ladies. After having tried many callings without having attained eminence in any one, Pat takes a situation in a boot shop, where he is soon instructed in the mystery of tootsy measuring. Among those who submit their pedal extremities to his handling is a particularly sweet damsel, and he falls a victim to her charms. When she leaves the shop Pat decides that she is now, henceforth and forever, the "one and only," and is in despair till he remembers that he possesses her foot measurements and has therefore a certain means of discovering the whereabouts of his would-be inamorati. Armed with his ruler he flies through

Special reduced rates at

Hotel Martinique
Broadway and 32nd St.

To Delegates and their friends for

The Motion Picture Convention

Outside rooms with private bath
(occupied by a person $2.00)
Double outside room with private bath
(occupied by two persons $3.50)
Large double outside rooms with private bath
(2 beds $4.00)

Restaurant prices very moderate. Walter Chandler, Jr., Manager

---

Feature Film & Calcium Light Co.
125 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Jobbers. Powers, Motiograph, Simplex Machines and Parts.
Machines repaired by expert mechanics.
Supplies of all kinds ready for instant shipment.
Sterling Economizers mean better light, lower electric bills. Ask us.

STOP

PAT. APL'D FOR

and think what it would cost you to burn up your films.

Why take chances?

Your films insured for life against fire for $10.00, by using one of our safes.

Our Safe fits any booth. And by means of a fusible link is held in place. The first flash drops the safe to within reach of lobby floor, where it can be carried to safety.

Recommended by State inspectors and fire underwriters as the finest safe they ever saw.

Manufactured by

R. D. QUIN

Willoughby Ohio

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

GENUINE URBAN CAMERAS

Professional type—with two film boxes, two leather carrying cases $325.00, F. O. B. Chicago.

Junior (150 ft. capacity) size—with six magazines $225.00 F. O. B. Chicago.

(Any other STANDARD make if you want it) Film 3½c per foot.

Why buy machine shop made imitations?

MORTON H. POWERS

946 First Nat'l Bank Bldg. CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR SALE — FEATURES!

NOTE REDUCED PRICES FOR QUICK SALE.

Blazing the Trail	2 reels		$50.00
Post Telegrapher	2 "		50.00
The Crisis	2 "		50.00
Dead Man's Child	3 "	(Ohio)	75.00
Wreck of the Aurora	3 "	"	75.00
Last of the Frontignacs	3 "	"	75.00
Florodora	3 "		75.00
Lured from Home	3 "		75.00
St. George and the Dragon	3 "	(Ohio)	150.00
Paul Revere	3 "	South ½ Ohio	125.00
Dalton Boys	3 "	(Ohio)	200.00
Dalton Boys	3 "	W. Va.	125.00
Wage Earners	3 "	(Ohio)	200.00
Secret Service Steve	3 "	"	200.00
Midnight Express	3 "	"	200.00

Renovated and in A1 condition.
Plenty of paper at 7c per sheet, heralds, $1.00 per thousand. Herald plates for last four subjects, $10.00 each. Discount of 10% on three or more subjects taken at one time. Terms, 10% with order (draft) balance C. O. D., subject to inspection. Above features also for rent.

Royal Feature Film Co., Schultz Building, Columbus, Ohio

Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches

"Made On Honor."

Absolutely Reliable. Safeguard Against Panic Disasters.

Approved by New York Board of Underwriters, City of New York Bureau of Buildings.

Applied on thousands of Buildings in more than 500 Cities in the U. S. A. and Canada.

Send for Catalogue No. 10 D.

VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO.,
General Distributors,
Indianapolis, Ind.,
U. S. A.

Can you afford to be without them?

Safe Exit Is a Universal Demand

EYE COMFORT LIGHTING System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium..........
Ceiling Height..........
Width of House..........
Name..........

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.

Chicago
229 W. Jackson Blvd.

New York
505 Fifth Ave.

the street, seizing everyone he meets and measuring their "daisies," likewise their "beetle crushers," as the case may be. Eventually, after passing through some fierce experiences, Pat locates the lady's abode and waits outside with patience for her to reappear. Presently he sights the captivating "shoesies." He rises to his feet and clasps the wearer in a wild embrace. But he has reckoned without his hostess, for the wearer is not the lady of his soul, but her maid, who has appropriated her mistress's footgear, and is out for a stroll. She turns indignantly upon the little counterjumper and brings him to his knees, and likewise his senses, by a deft application of her hands to his aural appendages, in a manner both abrupt and vigorous, and Pat's dream is at an end.

AN EASY DAY (July 4).—All the boarders are in love with their landlady and are anxious to lighten the burden of her labor as much as possible.

Each man, on finding her at work, takes over the work himself, with the result that she spends a very easy time, but they are sadly disappointed when the day's toil is over to find that she has a husband whom she appreciates far more than themselves.

Is Filicide Justifiable?

See "The Seed of the Fathers," America's Greatest Feature Production.

A Marion Leonard Special.

Monopol Film Company.

MISCELLANEOUS

MONARCH.

THE CONTRABAND (Feature Subject).—Captain Merlo and Malteno are joint owners of the good ship "Swallow." They carry a cargo of dynamite, which is against the law, and therefore make every effort to conceal the fact from the crew. One of the latter is Pietro, an old school friend of Venella, the captain's daughter. These two share a mutual liking, which later events only tend to strengthen. During the voyage Malteno declares his love for Venella, who repulses him. Furious, he dashes down into the captain's cabin, thinking to influence her father in his favor, and in his haste upsets a lamp, which, falling on the floor, sets the vessel afire. The flames gradually approach the place where the dynamite is stored, and the crew cast themselves overboard. Venella insists upon staying by her father's side, despite the efforts of Pietro, who attempts to persuade her to accompany him on the raft which he has constructed.

Captain Merlo, however, realizing that his ship is doomed, shoots himself. There is, therefore, nothing left but for Venella to accompany Pietro, so they launch their little raft and trust themselves to the mercy of the waves.

They have just reached a safe distance, when, with a deafening crash, the vessel is rent apart. The dynamite has exploded. For two days they are drifting about on the ocean, and after suffering dreadful agony, Pietro and Venella are at last rescued off the coast of Holland. Here they are cared for by the kindly fisher-folk, and soon after they are married, when they set sail again for their native home.

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO.

THE AIRSHIP FUGITIVES (Special Feature).—Having been forbidden by Magistrate Higgins to visit his daughter, Hilda, Eric, her sweetheart, plans to outdo him. He accordingly boards a Zeppelin airship, and when it passes his sweetheart's home, he ties a note to a piece of string weighed down by a small stone and lowers it to her window. The note calls for an appointment, and at the designated hour Hilda drops her valises to her lover in the garden. She descends by means of a perilous way—climbing down the side of the mansion. They then hasten by auto to the Zeppelin airship, which carries them to another part of the country.

But in the meantime the magistrate has learned of his daughter's elopement and has telegraphed to the first station of the big airship for the authorities to be on the lookout for his daughter and the insane man she has eloped with. Having obtained a description of the pair the police are not long in finding them, and Eric is led away to an asylum for the insane.

The superintendent of the asylum makes loving advances to Hilda, and for the sake of her lover and having a plan in mind she encourages him. She accepts an invitation to have supper with him at his apartments and, while he is under the influence of liquor, she dons his clothes and hastens to the asylum. Disguised thusly she has no trouble in gaining admission to the place. She goes to her lover and takes from under the long black cloak that hides her form a bar of iron and a heavy rope. She then goes back to the superintendent's apartments, dons her female attire and returns to the asylum. Eric, in the meanwhile, has pried away the iron bars and is lowering himself to the ground by means of the rope given him. After having scaled the wall they run into the country where they encounter a gypsy driving a caravan wagon that carries his wife and child. They welcome the runaway lovers. Not long after the start, the little gypsy child, by playing with matches, sets fire to the wagon, all unknown to the driver. Eric climbs through the window to the top of the wagon and yells to the driver to stop the racing horses, as the speed is adding fury to the flames. Just then the horses swerve around a bend in the road and the wagon is overturned in the adjacent stream. Eric and the gypsy rescue the unconscious women and child.

Later Eric and Hilda are married. They send a telegram to this effect to the magistrate who, longing to see his daughter and feeling sorry for having placed Eric in an asylum, wires his parental blessing.

KINEMACOLOR.

SHRINERS' PARADE AND SPORTS (Los Angeles, Cal., 1912).—Beginning with the parade, in which we see some wonderful drilling and marching of the Shriners, we proceed to the field where the sports were held. A beautiful view of Broadway, Los Angeles, with all the fluttering flags and bunting flying in the breeze, is shown.

Some interesting scenes include the big barbecue at Eddie Maier's El Rancho Selecto. Here are shown the barbecue pits in which were roasted whole oxen in Mexican style. Races and sporting competitions of every kind are next shown, concluding with a very funny snake march, with the host, Mr. Maier, at the head.

DISILLUSIONED (2 parts).—John Graham and his wife live in a small village, content with their modest home and the love of their little girl. A rich uncle dies and leaves the entire estate to John.

The scene changes to gorgeous rooms, fashionable people, card playing and reckless spending and speculation. The fever of money making attacks John, and while he hangs over the ticker studying stock, the wife drifts into a flirtation with a man about town. Just at the most exciting point of the story John becomes a bankrupt, their child's life is despaired of, the wife's flirtation has reached the danger line. There is a nervous tension to this film which never relaxes until the child recovers, and then husband and wife leave for their village home.

EAST AND WEST (2 parts).—Amid the rush and flurry of the great city, a little flower of love sprang into existence in the heart of Agnes Carew, but her father would have none of the man she loved. So an elopement was planned. This the stern father discovered and thwarted, having set his mind upon another husband for his daughter. Unable to overcome her father's objections against Lloyd, they plight their troth and Lloyd goes to the far West to investigate some mining frauds, but the news of his mission had preceded him.

On his arrival at the mines he was waylaid by two of the men implicated in the frauds and left for dead on the roadside. There he is discovered by a little Indian girl, who, with the aid of her father, takes Lloyd to their cabin and nurses him back to life; but with returning consciousness all memory of the past has gone from his brain. Won by the sweetness of this little Indian maid, he woos and wins her.

Back in the East, Agnes has discovered that Jackson is really the man she cared for, but she feels in honor bound to Lloyd. Jackson pleads with her, recalling Lloyd's long silence and offers to go West, and see if he can find any trace of Lloyd. This Agnes consents to, and again we are on the wild plains of the West, where Lloyd lives with his little Indian wife and baby. There, in perfect happiness, Jackson finds them.

Gradually, Lloyd's mind awakens to the memory of the past, and Jackson in honor bound, pleads with him to go East. Lloyd hesitates, but seeing his little baby and dainty Indian wife, he sends Jackson back to the noise and bustle of the city, and remains in his humble home with these he loves. So two happy homes result.

A FAMILY AFFAIR.—Dan lives on the bounty of his uncle, who supposes his nephew is married and the father of a baby. Uncle telegraphs he's coming. Dan explains the situation to the spinster landlady and servants, forgetting to mention the baby. He goes to his sweetheart, begs her to pose as his wife for the afternoon, and she consents. In his absence the uncle calls; the old maid declares herself Dan's wife. The uncle is horrified when Dan comes home and introduces the servant girl as his wife. The mystified uncle points to the old maid, but Dan declares she is the man servant's wife. The old maid is furious, the servant girl jealous, and the man servant wild. The uncle demands to see the baby. The old maid gets one from an an orphanage, the servant girl gets a child from a friend, and Jobson steals one from a baby carriage. In turn these babies are brought on, to Dan's horror and the uncle's delight; but the last baby, when unveiled, proves to be black.

Meanwhile, Dan sends a message to his sweetheart not to come, but the messenger boy passes her on the street. She arrives and proclaims herself the wife. The negro mother enters and demands her child, and the wildest confusion reigns. Dan confesses, Sallie goes to her Jobson, and the negro woman gets her baby. Uncle grants his forgiveness and blessing when he is freed from the attentions of the old maid, who is left with two babies in her arms.

PICTURE THEATERS PROJECTED.

Orange, Texas.—H. J. L. Stark, has plans under way for the erection of a three-story theater and office building, 81 by 224 feet with a seating capacity for 1,000.

Santa Barbara, Calif.—A. Lawrence Volk, 933 Union Oil Building, Los Angeles has been engaged to prepare plans for a one-story theater, 25 by 140 feet to cost $6,200.

Brantford, Ont., Canada.—James O'Reily, Brantford Street, has plans underway for the erection of a brick and fireproof theater and office building, two-story to cost $50,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Fry & Jacobson, 3969 Elston Avenue, have let the contract for the erection of a one-story theater and store building, 150 by 125 feet to cost $26,000.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Eckel Co., Inc., have awarded the contract to the Heffernan Contracting Company, 522 Gwiney Building for the construction of a seven-story theater and office building, 67 by 180 feet to cost $75,000.

Washington, D. C.—Columbia Amusement Company, have let the contract for the erection of a two-story moving picture theater and office building, 51 by 68 feet to cost $14,000.

Baltimore, Md.—Contract has been let to the Cowan Building Company, Inc., 106 W. Madison Street, for the alteration of a one-story moving picture theater to cost $1,000.

Newark, N. J.—John C. Eisele, 752 Broad Street has let the contract for the erection of a two and four-story theater, and dance hall, theater to seat 600; cost $60,000.

Middletown, N. Y.—W. J. Goetz, 32 East Main Street, has let the contract to Giles, Giles & Company, 18 Union Street for the erection of a two-story theater, 50 by 136 feet.

Chicago, Ill.—William F. Pagels, 192 North Clark Street, has been engaged to prepare plans for the erection of a one-story theater, 50 by 150 feet to cost $25,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Kaska & Milac, 4054 Loomis Street are to build a one-story theater to seat 300 and cost $10,000. Building 25 by 116 feet.

Chicago, Ill.—F. R. Crane is to remodel a local theater to seat 600.

Galva, Ill.—J. G. Beadle, 207 Main Street, Galesburg, Ill., has been engaged to prepare plans for the erection of a two-story theater.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Thomas Bennett, 3rd Avenue and 52nd Street is taking sub-bids for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater 47 by 60 by 100 feet to cost $20,000.

New York, N. Y.—Mr. Rosenthal is considering plans for the erection of two-story moving picture and store building, 84 by 100 feet to seat 650 and cost $35,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Smith, Hardican & Co., have been awarded the contract for a moving picture theater to be erected at 3941-43 Market Street for the Eureka Amusement Company. The new theater will be 40 by 120 feet, and will seat 500 persons. The cost will be $25,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. Pinkleman has taken out a permit for alterations to an outdoor moving picture theater at 41st and Aspen Streets for F. M. Pile to cost $110.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Shea Amusement Company, Court Street, have received bids for the building of a two-story theater and store building, 112 by 216 feet to seat 3,000 and cost $200,000.

Washington, D. C.—H. R. Howenstein, 1314 F Street, N. W., has plans about completed and expects in a short time to commence the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 58 by 100 feet to cost $12,000.

Chicago, Ill.—M. F. Strauch, 1350 Diversey Parkway, is preparing plans for a one-story theater, 25 by 125 feet, to cost $12,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Columbia Avenue Trust Company, executor, has conveyed to Emma M. Dennis, the triangular plot of ground formed by the intersection of 52nd street, Girard avenue and Old Meeting House lane. Same will be reconveyed to the Felt Amusement Company, for use as a site for a large vaudeville and moving picture theater, to be known as "The Triangle."

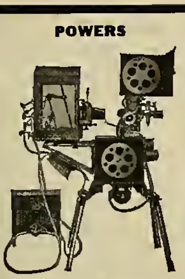
St. Joseph, Mo.—The Tootle Theater belonging to the Tootle Estate, N. H. King, manager, 212 North 6th Street have had preliminary plans completed for the remodeling of the interior and exterior of the theater to cost from $15,000 to $20,000. Leasees are Shubert Theatrical Company, New York.

Ruston, Wash.—Town of Ruston are to build a frame town hall, one-story, 30 by 48 feet shingle roof and to be equipped with electric fixtures; cost $2,500.

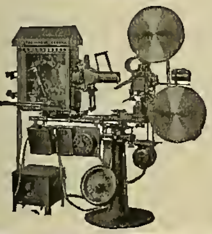
Greensboro, N. C.—Sealed proposals have been received by the city commissioner, for the remodeling and altering the Grand Opera House which is a part of the municipal building.

Chicago, Ill.—West Park Commissioners, Union Park, have sketches in progress for the erection of an amphitheater with a seating capacity for 20,000 and to cost $50,000.

POWERS



MOTIOGRAPH



Carbons : Tickets : Chairs : All Machine Parts

We Are Authorized Jobbers of These

MACHINES

We've Got What You Want

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Complete

PROMPT SHIPMENTS

We Receive Your Order in the Morning Mail. Shipment on its way to you by Noon.

Did You Get Our Catalogue?

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO.

The Biggest Motion Picture Supply House in America

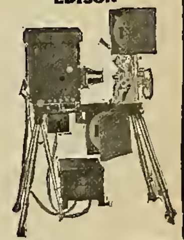
MAIL ORDERS FILLED

21 E. 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Condensers : Slides : Rewinds : Screens : Reels : Reel Cases

SIMPLEX

EDISON



HIS FIRST CINEMATOGRAPHIC APPEARANCE IN AMERICA

THEODORE BURGARTH

Actor and Stage Director of the IRVING PLACE THEATRE, New York City, acting the Leading Part in this most thrilling financial Drama in FOUR ACTS

TORTURES WITHIN PRISON WALLS

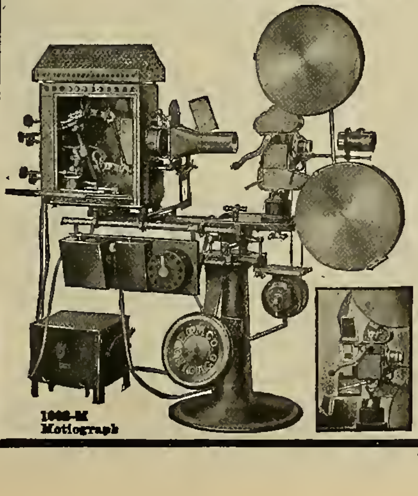
Will be ready for delivery to State Right Buyers about July the First.

One, Three and Six Sheet Lithographs, Heralds and Photographs.

NEW YORK FILM CO., 145 West 45th Street, New York City

NEVER AN ANXIOUS MOMENT

When You Have a Motiograph Installed in Your Booth.



1908-M Motiograph

Insist gently, but firmly that your dealer show you the merit of the latest model of this THE MACHINE OF QUALITY.

Do you know about our service department?
Do you know the Motiograph guarantee?
Do you know this is a "built" machine and distinctly different from an "assembled" one?
If your dealer knocks—write us.

Manufactured by

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company
Main Office and Factory, 564-572 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

Eastern Office
21 East 14th Street, New York City

Western Office
833 Market Street, San Francisco

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cente per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

SERVICE FURNISHED.—At liberty, expert operator with machine, booth and high-class films. Address J. W., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

ORGANIST—A leading church player, best references, particularly gifted in improvising to fit situations, desires location in a Northern of Western picture house. Address G. B., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

MANAGER—High-class manager, pictures or vaudeville, or combination, invites offers. Can show results. Experienced in every branch of amusement business. Address P. O. BOX 290, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Wanted—Position as manager of picture or vaudeville theater, by young man of proven business ability. Absolutely reliable. Address D. E. DE VOSS, Wilmington, Ohio.

MANAGER open for engagement in any N. E. city or town. Long experience in all branches of amusement business. Address MANAGER, 77a Revere St., Suite 4, Boston, Mass.

AT LIBERTY—A-1 operator, five years' experience; sober and reliable; can furnish references. Address W. K. RICHARDS, 807 Cheery St., Findlay, Ohio.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—A young man capable of filling the position of sales manager for our new theater construction and equipment department. Must have a discriminating taste for artistic furnishings and architectural effects. No special knowledge necessary. Will have an opportunity to become interested in a prosperous and promising business. Address HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY.

I WILL BUY anything from a second-hand roll of tickets to a theater. I sell machines, chairs, pianos, etc., of long ago, or up-to-date. Have also a few picture theatres for sale. Address TRIGGER, 212 Third Ave., near 18th St., New York City.

MOVING PICTURE STUDIO FOR RENT, day or week. Adress CHEAP, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANTED—To buy, in Wisconsin, moving picture theater. Must bear investigation. No agents. Address C. W. RICE, care of Unique Theater, Marshfield, Wis.

WANTED—To buy or rent, with option to buy, whole or one-half interest, good paying moving picture house. Don't waste time unless proposition is first-class. Reply, with full particilars in first letter. Address P. O. BOX 143, Paducah, Ky.

WANT TO BUY—For cash, picture theater in N. C., S. C. or Ga. Write full particulars in first letter. Address J. E. Simpson, Thomasville, N. C.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—275 second hand opera chairs. State price and size. Address OTTER, 421 Irving Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

WANTED—Alternating current fans and large exhaust fan, sell or exchange No. 5 Power's compensarc, two steel booths, rheostat, lenses. Address GRAND THEATER, Breckenridge, Minn.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Two moving picture theaters, one billiard parlor and cigar store, and one fine residence in county seat town of six thousand. Opportunity for live one. Investigate. Will sell separate or together. Address C. S. WHIPPLE, Wapakoneta, Ohio.

FOR SALE—In Ohio town of 20,000, good lease. Clearing $60 to $100 weekly. Price $1,400. Selling because of health. Address MANAGER, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in live town of 15,000. Seats 350. Fine location. Address S. W. LAWRENCE, Little Rock, Ark.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater, capacity 250. 5,000 people to draw from. Nearest theater four miles. Reason for selling, sickness. Building sublet for enough to pay expenses. Everything new and doing good business. Address A. B. SLYFIELD, Port Huron, Mich.

FOR SALE—Strictly first class theatre seating three hundred. Best location in city of thirty-five thousand and one of the best tourist cities in the world, showing to over three hundred thousand people last year. Reason for selling, have other business out of town; or will sell one-half and give full management to the right man. Price, three thousand. Address THEATRE, 28 Falls St., Niagara Falls, N. Y.

THEATRE FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Airdome, only one other show house in town of 10,000 population. $125 for season, including piano. Address E. BORSDORF, Main & Franklin Sts., Nyack, N. Y.

FILMS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—State Rights for Pennsylvania, "From Sing Sing to Liberty," three reels; "The Wage Earners," three reels; "The Acrobat," four reels; "Nemesis, or "19 Down Express," three reels, and "Retribution," two reels. Plenty of advertising, heralds, photos, banners, one, three, four and six sheets. Good condition. Address D. SOBEL, 504 Market St., Wilmington, Del.

FOR SALE—500 reels of film with posters to match, all in good condition. Many subjects practically new. Address McINTIRE & RICHTER, 2 E. 14th St., New York City.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED—One and two-reel features in A-1 condition, with paper. Must be cheap. Address DR. CHAS. LYNDON, Homeworth, Ohio.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SCENARIO WRITER—And assistant director, practical, wants connection with progressive picture producers. Has ideas that are, and knows what the public wants. Address CHRISTIAN, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED—Pianist to send for sample leaf of my booklet on "How and What to Play for Pictures." Address E. A. AHERN, 436 Sixth Ave., N., Twin Falls, Idaho.

FURNISHED ON PERCENTAGE—Complete pony or piano contest, a trade stimulator; investigate. Address NATIONAL CIRCULATION SYSTEM, Dubuque, Iowa.

Picture Theaters Projected.

Camden, N. J.—Moffett & Stewart, Inc., Jessup Building, are preparing plans for a two-story theater, 90 by 150 feet to cost $40,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—F. Roe Searing has been awarded the contract for a moving picture theater to be erected at 203-05 North Broad Street for Goddard & Ringler, to cost $10,000. The new theater will seat about 500 persons.

Conneaut, O.—Theater Stock Company have plans under way for the erection of a two-story theater, 80 by 140 feet to seat 1,000 and cost about $35,000.

Cincinnati, O.—J. A. Pendery has plans under way for the building of a one-story moving picture theater, 28 by 100 feet, seating capacity for 300 and cost $6,000.

Indianapolis, Ind.—William Rembush is considering plans for the remodeling and additions to his moving picture theater so as to accommodate 800 persons.

Laporte, Ind.—George McLean, manager of Hall's theater are considering plans for the remodeling of two two-story stores into a theater and store building to cost $25,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The plot of ground at the southeast corner of Germantown Avenue and Tulphocken Street, lot 87 by 112 feet, has been sold by Cohen & Gross, real estate brokers to purchasers who will improve it with stores and apartments on the Germantown Avenue front and with a motion picture theater in the rear, which will have an entrance from Germantown Avenue and will front on Tulpehocken Street. The cost of the lot and improvements will be $95,000.

Monroe, Mich.—J. H. Reaper, 52 Humphrey Avenue, has plans under way for a two-story theater with a seating capacity for 700.

St. Paul, Minn.—Starland Palace Theater, 8th and Wabash Streets, have received estimates for the building of a new balcony.

Wilmer, Minn.—John U. Koester has prepared preliminary plans for a theater, 60 by 125 feet with a seating capacity for 1,500 and to cost $25,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John McKenna & Sons are estimating on plans and specifications for a building to be used as a moving picture theater, stores and apartment house combined, 78 by 90 feet, of brick, stone and concrete.

Minden, Neb.—C. G. Binderup contemplates the erection of a one-story moving picture theater and business building, 40 by 110 feet.

Parsons, Kan.—J. A. Straussberger has plans under way for the building of a two-story theater and business building to cost $50,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Belmar Company has been awarded the contract to erect a hall building on the southeast corner of Eighth and Fulton Streets for Thomas Brown. The new structure will contain a moving picture theater, dance hall and lodge rooms. It will be 38 by 77 feet and cost about $18,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Jacob Naschold, is preparing plans for extensive interior alterations to the theater at the northwest corner of Ninth and Arch Streets. Plans will be completed in a short time.

Boston, Mass.—Park Square Theater Company, have let the contract for the erection of a large theater building to Cramp & Co., Denckla Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

Newark, N. J.—Joseph O'Kin, 222 Washington Street, has let the contract for the building of a two-story theater, 75 by 168 feet and to cost $55,000. The new structure will be located at 99 Springfield Avenue.

DO YOU WANT A BRITISH AGENT?
We are open to undertake sale of films, or letting or purchase of exclusives. Bank references and deposit. Central offices & Projection room
THE STATE FILM AGENCY.
191 Wardour St., LONDON, W. England.
Cables:—Kinesafs, London. Codes:—Anglo-American, 4th edition; A. B. C. 5th edition.

We have a Catalogue of full line of Moving Picture Machine repair parts ready to put in your machine at reduced prices. We make them, and for that reason can sell them very low. We also sell Stereopticons for $12.00; Calcium Jets, $3.50; 100 Carbons, $2.00; Condensers, 50c.; Arc Lamps, $2.25; Stereopticon Lenses, 50c.; Slide Carriers, 25c.; Moving Picture Objectives, $2.75; Jackets, $1.75; Ticket Holders, 15c.; Rheostats, $4.00; 60 Candle Power Stereopticon Lamps, 75c.
L. HTEZ, 302 East 23rd Street, New York City

BRUNSWIG BROS.
"NEW YORK HARMONY BOYS"
Ninth Week--CLASSIC THEATRE, Asheville, N. C.
July 6th--Open in COLONIAL THEATRE, Lexington, Ky.
—ALWAYS BUSY—
Ask our Representative: Miss A. V. COX
Memphis Reliable Booking Ex., 546 Randolph Bldg., Memphis, Tenn.

World's Largest Mfrs. WURLITZER Established 1856

ORIENTAL THEATRE

Wurlitzer PianOrchestra in Oriental Theater, San Francisco.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI [illegible] E. 4th
NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d
CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash
PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS [illegible] Pine St.
CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road
BUFFALO 701 Main
LOUISVILLE 426 W. Greene
COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

Exhibitors and Visitors

When You Go To

NEW YORK

And want the most satisfactory hotel accommodations, for a reasonable amount of money, register at the

Park Avenue Hotel

32nd & 33d Sts. and Park Ave,

Noted for its Dining Verandas and Famous Sunken Palm Garden. New York's most beautiful and attractive dining place.

Five minutes from the Pennsylvania Station via 34th Street crosstown cars.

Three minutes from the Grand Central Terminal via Subway. Entrance to Subway in Terminal. Next downtown stop, 33rd Street Station, lands you at the Hotel entrance.

The Moving Picture Convention and Exposition at the Grand Central Palace can be reached in five minutes by surface car.

FRED A. REED, Proprietor.

BIO CARBONS
Carbon
IN ALL THE WORLD
NONE OTHER SO GOOD

MORE
USED EVERY DAY

BIO CARBONS

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK
165 Greenwich Street

MILWAUKEE
114 Huron Street

SAN FRANCISCO
12 Sutter Street

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES AND SUPPLY DEALERS

THE VIVAPHONE

SINGING AND TALKING PICTURES

A SUCCESS EVERYWHERE

THE GREATEST OF THEM ALL!

See article Moving Picture World
Page 1347, Issue June 28, 1913

Simplicity, Perfection and Cheapness Our Chief Points

Remember This and Get in Touch With Us.

For State Rights Apply

Vivaphone & Films Sales Co.

INCORPORATED

110-112 West 40th Street, New York City
Phone 3095 Bryant ROOM 1803

A. Blinkhorn, Sole Agent U.S.A. and Canada

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..............40
AMONG THE PICTURE THEATERS............35
BUFFALO 57
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES..........60
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES.....62
CHICAGO LETTER 30
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).........47
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)......49
CORRESPONDENCE 57
ERNEST SHIPMAN'S WORLD TOUR............34
ETERNAL RECURRENCE,
by Louis Reeves Harrison.....................24
FACTS AND COMMENTS.........................23
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES........................51
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES...................80
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES..............96
INQUIRIES 43
ISADORE BERNSTEIN TO MANAGE WESTERN UNIVERSAL 29
ITALY'S FILM CENTRE, by W. Stephen Bush..25
KLEINE OPTICAL COMPANY, THE.............38
LAST CALL FOR THE EXPOSITION............32
LICENSED FILM STORIES......................68
LICENSED RELEASE DATES....................98
LOUISVILLE 57
MAINE EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE...............33
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.........53
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE....32
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR, THE...........37
NEW ENGLAND 58
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN......39
PHILADELPHIA 58
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 42
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 44
ST. LOUIS 57
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)...........68
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)........80
UNIVERSAL GOES TO COURT..................27
"WHAT HAPPENED TO MARY,"
by Louis Reeves Harrison.....................26
"WILD RIDE, A" (Selig), by Jas S. McQuade...28

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E.............................. 101
KIEWERT, L. E............................. 93
REISINGER, HUGO.......................... 73

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO..................... 101
BELL & HOWELL............................ 75
BENDER, GEORGE.......................... 102
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO...................... 101
CHICAGO METAL COVER CO.................. 72
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO.................. 101
GENERAL ELECT. CO........................ 95
HALLBERG, J. H........................... 105
HOKE, GEO. M.............................. 70
LAVEZZI 104
MOORE HUBBLE CO......................... 103
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO......... 91
SCHNEIDER, E.............................. 70
SMITH, L. C. & CO......................... 70
STRELINGER, CHARLES A.................. 76

FILM DEALERS & IMPORTERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS........... 102
WESTERN FILM BROKERS.................... 70

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.
ALMO F. F. CO............................. 70
APEX CO.................................... 67
ARAB AMUSEMENT CO....................... 11
AMBROSIO F. CO........................... 79
BLINKHORN, A.............................. 66
ECLECTIC FILMS............................ 77
FEATURE FILM & CALCIUM LIGHT CO....89-70
FEATURE FILM CO.......................... 78
FRANKLIN F. F. CO......................... 87
FULLER'S, CHAS. L., DISTRIBUTING CO.... 59
GENERAL FILM CO.........................16-17
GOLDEN STATE M. P. CO................... 65
GT. NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO. 14
ITALA FILM CO............................. 104
ITALIAN POMPEIAN F. CO.................. 85
KINEMACOLOR CO........................... 75
MONARCH F. F. CO......................... 64
MONOPOL FILM CO......................... 6
MOORE, F. E............................... 100
NEW YORK FILM CO........................ 91
QUO VADIS FILM CO......................8-9
ROYAL F. F. CO............................ 89
SHERRY, WM. L............................ 101
UNION FEATURES........................... 95
VIVAPHONE CO............................. 93
WARNER'S FEATURES....................... 97

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO................ 72
TRAINER, C. W............................. 72

FILM EXCHANGES.
BRADENBURG, G. W......................... 73
FULTON, E. E............................... 102
GOLDEN STATE M. P. CO................... 65
GUNBY BROS................................ 74
HETZ, L..................................... 92
LAEMMLE FILM CO.......................... 103
McINTIRE & RICHTER....................... 74
M. P. SALES CO............................ 82
M. & F. FILM SERVICE...................... 70
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION............... 63
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE.... 104
SOUTHERN FILM CO......................... 103
THE STATE FILM AGENCY.................. 92

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN 7
BRONCHO FILM CO......................... 12
GAUMONT CO............................... 65
KAY-BEE 12
KEYSTONE 12
MAJESTIC 106
N. Y. MOTION PICTURE CO................ 13
RAMO FILM CO............................. 87
RELIANCE 10
THANHOUSER 2
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURERS.........4-5

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON 19
ESSANAY 3
KALEM 22
LUBIN 20
MELIES 107
PATHE FRERES.............................. 18
SELIG 15
VITAGRAPH 21

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LOMB............................ 73

MISCELLANEOUS.
AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO............ 82
AMERICAN KINETO CORP.................... 64
AUTOMATIC TICKET CO..................... 81
BARTH, L. & SON........................... 66
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS............... 92
CLEVELAND, W. S.......................... 70
COMMERCIAL M. P. CO..................... 82
CORCORAN, A. J............................ 70
EASTMAN KODAK CO....................... 105
EX. CONVENTION.........................69-83
HEESE PTG. CO............................. 72
HOTEL IMPERIAL............................ 73
HOTEL MARTINIQUE........................ 89
KINEMATOPHONE CO........................ 71
KLIEGL BROS................................ 101
KRAUSE MFG. CO........................... 74
LUMIERE JOUGLA CO........................ 101
McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO................. 102
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO.............. 82
NATIONAL M. P. CO........................ 76
NATIONAL TICKET CO...................... 96
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.......... 89
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO.. 82
PARK AVE. HOTEL.......................... 93
POWERS, MORTON H....................... 89
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO...................... 73
REYNOLDS & CO............................ 102
SARGENT, E. W............................ 102
STANGE, A. C.............................. 70
STAR "A" SHOP............................. 74
SPRATT CO., C. G.......................... 103
THEATRE BROKERAGE CO................... 72
TICKET PREMIUM CO....................... 103
VONNEGUT HDW. CO....................... 89
ZENITH MFG. CO........................... 103

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON 19
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO.................. 91
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH.................... 108
SIMPLEX 61

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER SALES CO....... 72
DEAGAN, J. C............................... 71
SINN, C. E................................. 102
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH..................... 93

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO.................... 104
ANDREWS, A. H............................ 104
BENNETT, GEO. W.......................... 104
HARDESTY 104
STEEL FURNITURE CO...................... 104

POSTERS & FRAMES.
A. B. C..................................... 94
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO............ 98
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO........ 60
GENERAL FILM CO.......................... 99
NEWMAN 100
THEATER SPECIALTY MFG. CO............. 76

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO.......... 105
GENTER, J. H............................... 100
MIRROR SCREEN CO........................ 100
SIMPSON SOLAR SCREENS.................. 70

SONG & ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROS................................. 103
MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO.............. 72
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO............... 89

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.................. 103

READY NOW

ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS

KALEM'S (Three Parts) Shenandoah Released July 4th

LUBIN'S (Two Reels) A Hero Among Men Released July 9th

ALSO One, Three and Six Sheets for KALEM'S

The Hidden Witness Released Saturday, July 5th Treachery of a Scar Released Wednesday, July 9th

Order at Once. A. B. C. COMPANY, Cleveland, Ohio

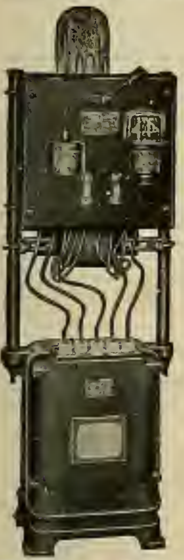
This Trade Mark The Guarantee of Excellence on Goods Electrical.



Motion Picture Rectifier Set Front View

Better Light for Your Machine

The first requirement of good projection is a powerful steady light.

An arc lamp using direct current from a G-E Rectifier gives the finest light that can be obtained. The light is powerful and does not flicker like the light of an alternating current arc.

The G-E Rectifier not only improves the quality of the light, but at the same time it reduces the cost for current, because the rectifier furnishes current at the exact voltage needed by the lamp. Losses in rheostats are therefore entirely eliminated.

Further information and prices on request.

General Electric Company

General Office: Schenectady, N. Y. Sales Offices in Fifty-Four Cities

4279

The Trade Mark of the Largest Electrical Manufacturer in The World.

ZUKON THE SOCIAL PIRATE

—OR—

(THE PRIVATE INQUIRY OFFICE)

—IN THREE PARTS—

A SENSATIONAL EXPOSÉ OF THE MACHINATIONS OF A VILLIANOUS DETECTIVE.

·WONDERFUL·PAPER·

TWO KINDS OF ONES — THREES AND SIXES

(WRITE OR WIRE FOR DETAILS)

—TO—

·UNION·FEATURES·

225 W. 42nd. ST. N.Y. CITY.

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

June 16—Soul of a Thief (2 parts—Drama)...2000
June 19—Unwritten Law of the West (Drama)1000
June 21—Marine Law (Comedy)..............1000
June 23—A Husband's Mistake (Drama)......1000
June 26—Calamity Anne Takes a Trip (Com.)..1000
June 28—Dead Man's Shoes (Drama)..........1000
June 30—Quicksands (2 parts Drama).........2000
July 3—Pride of Lonesome (Drama)..........1000
July 5—A Tale of Death Valley (Drama).....1000
July 7—San Francisco, the Dauntless City (Sc.)1000
July 10—The Foreign Spy (Drama).............1000
July 12—The Song of the Soup (Comedy).......
July 12—A Garden City in California (Scenic)..

AMBROSIO.

Apr. 26—Golden Rain (2 reels, Drama)........
May 3—The Spider (2 parts—Drama).......
May 10—Tempest and Sunshine (2 parts—Drama) ....
May 17—A Maid of Honor (2 parts—Drama)..
May 24—The Yellow Man (2 parts—Drama)...
May 31—An Unruly Father (2 parts—Drama)
June 7—The Sold Title (2 parts—Drama)....
June 14—The Girl of the Hidden Spring (2 parts—Drama) ....
June 21—Loves Shadow (2 parts—Drama).....

BISON.

Drama) ....
June 10—The Grand Old Flag (2 parts—Drama)
June 14—The Capture of Aguinaldo (2 parts—Drama) ....
June 17—In Love and War (2 parts—Drama)
June 21—Women and War (2 parts—Drama)..
June 24—The Guerilla Menace (2 parts—Dr.)
July 1—The Battle of Manila (2 parts Drama)
July 5—At Shiloh (2 parts Drama)..........
July 8—The Powder Flash of Death (2 parts—Drama)..............................
July 12—The Head Hunters (2 parts—Drama)..

BRONCHO.

June 18—From the Shadows (2 parts—Drama)..
June 25—The Transgressor (2 parts—Drama)..
July 2—All Rivers Meet at Sea (Drama......
July 9—Grand-Dad (2 parts—Drama).........

CRYSTAL.

June 29—Who Is In the Box? (Comedy)........
June 29—Mrs. Sharp & Miss Flat (Comedy)....
July 1—An Hour of Terror (Drama)..........
July 6—The Girl Reporter (Comedy)..........
July 6—Muchly Engaged (Comedy)...........
July 8—True Chivalry (Drama)................
July 13—Pearl's Dilemma (Comedy)...........
July 13—Squaring Things With Wifey (Comedy)

DRAGON.

May 19—The Sergeant's Daughter (2 parts—Drama) 2000
May 26—Love's Monogram (Drama)............1000
June 2—Comrades (Drama) 1000
June 9—The Ace of Hearts (Drama)..........1000
June 16—The Ghost of Sea View Manor (Drama) 1000
June 23—A Sister's Devotion (Drama)..........1000
June 30—Our Future Heroes (Topical)..........1000

ECLAIR.

June 25—The Badge of Policeman O'Roon (2 parts—Drama) ....
June 29—He Was Not Ill, Only Unhappy (Comedy)..........................
June 29—Torpedo Fish (Zoology).............
July 2—The Witch (3 parts Drama)..........
July 6—In the Night (Comedy)..............
July 6—How Diamonds Are Made (Industrial)
July 9—The Trail of the Hanging Rock (2 parts—Drama) ....
July 13—It is Hard to Please Him (Comedy)..
July 13—The Catholic Mission (Educational)...

FRONTIER.

June 12—The Call of the Angelus (Drama)..
June 14—The Twins of "Double X" Ranch (Comedy) ....
June 19—A Story of the Mexican Border (Drama)
June 21—When Lena Struck New Mexico (Comedy) ....
June 26—The Squaw Man's Reward (Drama)..
June 28—An Eastern Cyclone at Bluff Ranch (Comedy)..........................
July 3—The Secret of Padre Antonio (Drama)
July 5—A Rose at Sixteen (Drama)..........
July 5—A Cactus at Forty-five (Comedy).....
July 10—The Frontier Twins Start Something (Comedy)..........................
July 12—The Line Rider's Sister (Drama).....

GAUMONT.

June 12—Men Were Deceivers Ever (Com.)....
June 17—Mixed Pickles (Comedy).............
June 17—By the Sad Sea Waves..............
June 18—Gaumont's Weekly No. 67 (News)...
June 19—The Great Unwashed (Comedy).....
June 24—The Demon of Destruction (Drama)....
June 25—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 68 (News)...
June 26—When the Cat's Away (Comedy).....
June 26—Kings of the Kennels..............

GEM.

June 9—Hearts and Flowers (Drama).......
June 23—Every Inch a Hero (Drama).........
June 30—Mistaken Intentions (Comedy).......
June 30—Teak Wood (Scenic)................
July 7—Billy, the Wise Guy (Comedy)........

GREAT NORTHERN.

May 31—The Suffragettes (Comedy)...........
June 7—Where is Doggie? (Comedy).........
June 7—Lock Lomond (Scenic)...............
June 14—An Unwelcome Wedding Gift (Comedy-Drama)........................
June 21—Shanghaied (Drama) ....
June 28—Cupid's Score (Comedy).............

GREAT NORTHERN—Universal.

June 28—The Flying Circus (3 parts, Drama)..

IMP.

June 28—Fun In Film By Hy Mayer (Novelty)....
June 28—Leo's Great Cure (Comedy)..........
June 30—The Old Melody (2 parts Drama).....
July 3—Jane Marries (Drama)...............
July 5—Leo, the Indian (Comedy)...........
July 5—Lightning Sketches by Hy Mayer (Novelty) ....
July 7—His Mother's Birthday (Drama).......
July 10—The Wop (Drama)...................
July 12—Oh! You Flirt (Comedy).............
July 12—Lightning Sketches by Hy Mayer (Novelty)..........................

KAY-BEE.

June 20—The Failure of Success (2 parts—Drama) ....
June 27—The Seal of Silence (Drama)........
July 4—The Crimson Stain (3 parts, Drama)..
July 11—The Banshee (2 parts—Drama).......

KEYSTONE.

June 16—The Waiters' Picnic (Comedy).....
June 19—The Tale of a Black Eye (Comedy)..
June 19—Out and In (Comedy)..............
June 23—A Bandit (Comedy).................
June 23—Peeping Pete (Comedy).............
June 26—His Crooked Career (Comedy).......
June 26—The Largest Boat Ever Launched Sideways ....
June 30—For Love of Mabel (Comedy).........
July 3—Rastus and the Game-Cock (Comedy)..
July 7—Safe In Jail (Comedy)...............
July 10—The Telltale Light (Comedy).........

LUX.

June 20—Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters (Drama).......................... 940
June 27—Sammy, the Scorcher (Comedy)...... 455
June 27—Oh! You Unbreakable Doll (Comedy).. 495
July 4—Pat Gets On the Trail (Comedy)...... 410
July 4—An Easy Day (Comedy).............. 537

MAJESTIC.

June 17—Beautiful Bismark (Drama).........
June 20—The Banker's Sons (Drama)..........
June 22—Side Tracked By Sister (Drama)....
June 24—The Politician (Drama)..............
June 28—Dora (Drama) ....
June 29—One Round O'Brien Comes Back (Com.)
July 1—The Golden Jubilee (Topical).........
July 5—Gaffney's Gladiator (Comedy).........

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

May 21—Mutual Weekly, No. 21 (News)......
May 28—Mutual Weekly, No. 22 (News)......
June 4—Mutual Weekly, No. 23 (News).....
June 11—Mutual Weekly, No. 24 (News).....
June 18—Mutual Weekly, No. 25 (News).....

MUTUAL EDUCATIONAL.

June 5—Willy and the Captain's Horse (Comedy) ....
June 5—A Child's Day (Child Science).....
June 12—Gontran, a Snake Charmer (Comedy)
June 12—Gathering and Preparation of Tea in Indo-China (Agriculture)........
June 19—Willy Wants to Ride a Horse (Com.)
June 19—Through Greece (Travel)............
June 26—Funnicus Tries His Luck at Love (Comedy)..........................
June 26—Through the Land of Sugar Cane (Travel)..........................

NESTOR.

June 30—An Indian Nemesis (Drama).........
July 2—The Range Dead Line (Drama)......
July 4—He and Himself (Comedy)..........
July 4—To the Brave Belong the Fair (Comedy) ....
July 7—The Proof of the Man (Drama)......
July 9—John, the Wagoner (Drama)..........
July 11—Four Queens and a Jack (Comedy)....
July 11—When He Wore the Blue (Comedy)....

POWERS.

June 27—The Spell (2 parts—Drama)..........
July 2—The Quarter Meter (Comedy).........
July 2—British American Polo Match (Topical)
July 4—The Heart of Hermanda (Drama)....
July 9—Elsie's Aunt (Comedy)...............
July 11—Morgan's Treasure (2 parts—Drama)..

PILOT.

May 22—School Days (Comedy)...............
May 29—The Governor's Romance (Drama)....
June 5—For Old Time's Sake (Drama)......
June 12—When a Girl Loves (Drama)..........
June 16—A Child of the Hills (Drama)......
June 26—An Innocent Conspiracy (Com.-Dr.)..1000
July 3—The Code of the U. S. A. (Drama)....1000

RAMO.

June 11—The Helping Hand (Drama).........
June 18—The Call of the Road (Drama)......
June 25—The Worth of Man (Drama)........
July 2—I'm No Counterfeiter (Drama).......
July 9—Man and Woman (2 parts Drama)....
July 16—A Dog-Gone Baron (Drama).........
July 23—The Silent House (Drama)..........

RELIANCE.

June 21—Wallingford's Wallet (3 parts—Dr.).
June 23—The House of Pretense (Drama)......
June 28—The Tangled Web (3 parts Drama)...
June 30—Her Final Choice (Drama)..........
July 2—Dick's Turning (Drama).............
July 5—Death's Short Cut (Drama)..........

REX.

June 22—The Stolen Idol (Drama)...........
June 26—The Burden Bearer (Drama).........
June 29—Draga, the Gypsy (Drama)..........
July 3—A Woman's Folly (Drama)..........
July 6—Suspense (Drama)...................
July 10—Beauty and the Beast (3 parts—Dr.)..
July 13—Through Strife (Drama)..............

SOLAX.

June 27—The Message to Heaven (Drama)....
July 2—An Unexpected Meeting (Comedy)....
July 4—True Hearts (Drama)...............
July 9—The Flea Circus (Scientific & Comedy)
July 11—As the Bell Rings (Drama)..........

THANHOUSER.

June 17—The Snare of Fate (2 parts—Drama)
June 20—No Release this date................
June 22—The Eye of Krishla (Drama)........
June 24—Forgive Us Our Trespasses (Drama)..
June 27—The Lost Combination (Drama)......
June 29—A Modern Lochinvar (Comedy)........
July 1—King Rene's Daughter (Drama).......
July 4—Her Two Jewels (Drama)..............

VICTOR.

June 20—His Daughter (Drama)...............
June 27—Brother and Sister (Drama)........
July 4—A Shifting Fortune (Drama).........
July 11—A Modern Witness (Drama)..........

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand	- -	$1.25
Ten Thousand	- -	$2.50
Twenty Thousand	- -	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand	-	$5.50
Fifty Thousand	- -	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand	-	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

WARNER'S FEATURES

Take Warning!

Act immediately. As the largest renters of feature films in America, we present to you—

THEODORA

—The Finest Attraction Ever Offered to Exhibitors

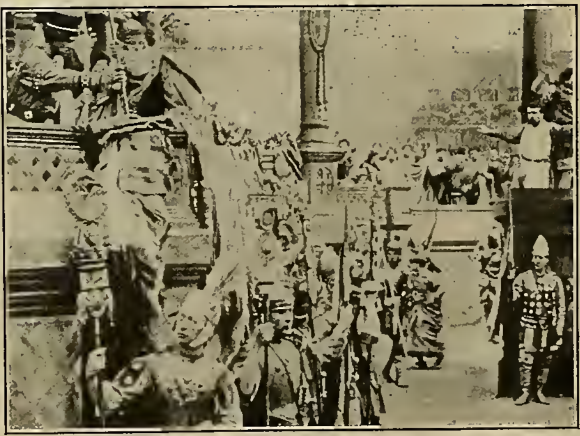
A Massive $100,000.00 Production

From the Famous Novel by VICTORIEN SARDOU

A MAGNIFICENT LOBBY DISPLAY, INCLUDING SPECIAL ONE-SHEETS

OFFICES

CHICAGO
304 Dapples Bldg.
PHILADELPHIA
1202 Race St.
ST. LOUIS
303 Benoist Bldg.
BOSTON
665 Washington St.
ATLANTA
421 Rhodes Bldg.
INDIANAPOLIS
536 Lemcke Bldg.
NEW ORLEANS
725 Maison Blanche Bldg.
SAN FRANCISCO
311 Grant Bldg.
DENVER
1229 16th St.
PITTSBURGH
125 4th Ave.



HOME OFFICE: 145 West 45th St., New York City

OFFICES

CLEVELAND
212 Columbia Bldg.
WASHINGTON, D. C.
420 9th St., N. W.
KANSAS CITY
413 Gloyd Bldg.
DALLAS
1519½ Main St.
BUFFALO
45 Erie St.
MINNEAPOLIS
354 Temple Court
SEATTLE
1320 5th Ave.
LOS ANGELES
59 Canadian Bldg.
SPOKANE
521 Realty Bldg.
NEW YORK CITY
808 45th St.
Exchange Bldg.

LICENSED
RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph (Special).

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Patheplay, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Vitagraph (Special).

Thursday — Biograph, Essanay; Lubin, Melies, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Lubin, Vitagraph (Special).

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Vitagraph (Special).

BIOGRAPH.

June 9—Red Hicks Defies the World (Comedy)
June 12—The Well (Drama)
June 14—Death's Marathon (Drama)
June 16—The Switch-Tower (Drama)
June 19—The Rise and Fall of McDoo (Comedy)
June 19—Almost a Wild Man (Comedy)
June 21—The Mothering Heart (2 parts—Drama)
June 23—A Compromising Complication (Com.)
June 23—Mister Jefferson Green (Comedy)
June 26—In Diplomatic Circles (Drama)
June 28—Her Mother's Oath (Drama)
June 30—A Gamble With Death (Drama)
July 3—Faust and the Lily (Comedy)
July 3—An Old Maid's Deception (Comedy)
July 5—The Sorrowful Shore (Drama)

CINES.

(G. Kleine.)

May 20—Red Wine (Drama)	1000
May 24—Exceeding the Time Limit (Comedy)	200
May 24—The Maid and the Yarn (Comedy)	300
May 24—Curing a Would-Be Aviator (Comedy)	400
May 27—Borrowed Plumage (Comedy)
May 27—The Champion Fixer (Comedy)
May 27—In Somaliland (Scenic)
May 31—Interesting Scenes Abroad (Travel)	1000
June 2—When A Woman Loves (Special—3 parts—Drama)	2500
June 5—The Irony of Fate (Drama)	1000
June 7—Orbetelo and Environs (Travel)	250
June 7—The Ring (Drama)	750

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

May 21—In the Tyrolese Alps (Travel)	175
May 21—The Chicken Industry (Industrial)	400
May 21—Big Game (Zoological)	425
May 28—The Indelible Stain (Drama)	1000
June 4—The Armadillo (Zoological)	500
June 4—Delivering the Goods (Comedy)	500
June 11—Behind a Mask (Drama)	1000

EDISON.

June 11—Beau Brummel and His Bride (Comedy)	1000
June 13—Along the Nile (Scenic)	1000
June 14—Apples of Sodom (Drama)	1000
June 16—Her Royal Highness (Comedy-Drama)	1000
June 17—The Twin Brothers (Drama)	1000
June 18—Civic Parade, New York City (Topical)	350
June 18—He Would Fix Things (Comedy)	650
June 20—The Evil Thereof (Drama)	1000
June 21—Mary Stuart (Special—3 parts—Drama)	3000
June 21—Love's Old Sweet Song (Drama)	1000
June 23—The Pyramids and the Sphinx, Egypt (Architecture)	300
June 23—A Taste of His Own Medicine (Com.)	700
June 24—Where Shore and Water Meet (Dr.)	980
June 25—How Did It Finish? (Comedy)	980
June 27—Fortune Smiles—Being the Twelfth Story of What Happened to Mary (Drama)	1000
June 28—The Fly (Hygiene)	400
June 28—Circumstances Make Heroes (Comedy)	600
June 30—The Story of the Bell (Drama)	1000
July 1—The Patchwork Quilt (Drama)	980
July 2—All On Account of a Portrait (Comedy)	1000
July 4—A Gentleman's Gentleman (Drama)	1000
July 5—The Signal (Drama)	1000
July 7—Over the Great Divide in Colorado (Sc.)
July 7—Winsome Winnie's Way (Comedy)
July 8—Scenes of Other Days (Scenic)	1000
July 9—His Mother's-in-law Visit (Comedy)	1000
July 11—In the Old Dutch Times (Drama)	1000
July 12—The Diamond Crown (Being the first of the series of "Kate Kirby's Cases") (Drama)	1000

ESSANAY.

June 17—Anonymous Love (Comedy)	1000
June 18—Hilda Wakes (Comedy)	1000
June 19—The Rustler's Spur (Drama)	1000
June 20—A Brother's Loyalty (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
June 20—Fear (Drama)	1000
June 21—Alkali Ike and the Hypnotist (Comedy)	1000
June 24—Across the Rio Grande (Drama)	1000
June 25—Easy Payments (Drama)	1000
June 26—The Divided House (Comedy)	1000
June 27—Witness "A-3 Center" (Drama)	1000
June 28—Broncho Billy's Strategy (Drama)	1000
July 1—Retagged (Comedy)
July 1—The Drummer's Umbrella (Comedy)
July 2—The Strongest Link (Drama)	1000
July 3—The Life We Live (Drama)	1000
July 4—What's the Matter With Father (Com.)	1000
July 5—At the Lariat's End (Drama)	1000
July 7—The Forbidden Way (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
July 8—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Drama)	1000
July 9—The Outer Shell (Drama)	1000
July 10—A Flurry In Diamonds (Comedy)	1000
July 11—The Sign (Drama)	1000
July 12—Broncho Billy and the Western Girls (Drama)	1000

KALEM.

June 14—The Gypsy's Brand (Drama)	1000
June 16—The Wheel of Death (Drama)
June 16—Governor Johnson of California (Topical)
June 18—The Attorney for the Defense (Drama)	1000
June 20—Cupid's Lariat (Comedy)
June 20—Smoked to a Finish (Comedy)
June 21—On the Brink of Ruin (Drama)	1000
June 23—The Detective's Trap (Drama)	1000
June 25—The Knight of Cyclone Gulch (Com)
June 25—Curing Her Extravagance (Comedy)
June 25—The Struggle (Special—2 parts—Dr.)	2000
June 27—The Cloak of Guilt (Drama)	1000
June 28—Out of the Jaws of Death (Drama)	1000
June 30—A Fight to a Finish (Drama)	1000
July 1—The Raiders from Double L Ranch (Drama)
July 2—Historic New York (Scenic)
July 4—A Victim of Deceit (Drama)	1000
July 4—Shenandoah (Special, 3 parts, Drama)	3000
July 5—The Hidden Witness (Drama)	1000
July 7—A Stolen Identity (Drama)	1000
July 9—The Treachery of a Scar (Drama)	1000
July 11—Entertaining Uncle (Comedy)
July 11—Cosmopolitan New York (Typical)
July 12—Rounding Up the Counterfeiters (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN.

June 17—Out of the Beast a Man Was Born (Drama)	1000
June 18—The Weaker Mind (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
June 19—A Father's Love (Drama)	1000
June 20—His Redemption (Drama)	1000
June 21—From Ignorance to Light (Drama)	1000
June 23—Rustic Hearts (Drama)	1000
June 24—At the Telephone (Comedy)	400
June 24—The Zulu King (Comedy)	600
June 26—The Other Woman (Drama)	1000
June 27—Bob Buys An Auto (Comedy)	400
June 27—The Beaut from Butte (Comedy)	600
June 28—The Love Test (Drama)	1000
June 30—The Penalty of Crime (Special, 2 parts, Drama)	2000
June 30—Her Atonement (Drama)	1000
July 1—Her Husband's Picture (Drama)	1000
July 3—The Angel of the Slums (Drama)	1000
July 4—The Waiter's Strategy (Comedy)	400
July 4—The Wrong Hand Bag (Comedy)	600
July 5—His Niece from Ireland (Drama)	1000
July 7—The Mysterious Hand (Drama)	1000
July 8—The Profits of the Business (Drama)	1000
July 9—A Hero Among Men (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
July 10—When Love Loses Out (Comedy)	400
July 10—Building a Trust (Comedy)	600
July 11—On Her Wedding Day (Drama)	1000
July 12—Her Only Boy (Drama)	1000

MELIES.

June 12—The Stolen Claim (Drama)
June 12—Views of Samarang (Scenic)
June 19—The Lure of the Sacred Pearl (Drama)
June 19—Diving for Pearl Oysters at Thursday Island (Educational)
June 26—The Sultan's Dagger (Drama)	1000
July 3—The Rice Industry in Japan (Industrial)	1000
July 10—His Chinese Friend (Drama)	1000

PATHEPLAY.

June 14—For Mayor—Bess Smith (Comedy)
June 16—Pathe's Weekly, No. 25 (News)
June 17—A Tour Through Touraine (Travel)
June 17—Rhodes (Asiatic Turkey)
June 18—The Sacrifice (Drama)
June 19—The Outlaw's Love (Drama)
June 20—The Burial of a Rich Chinaman (Manners and Customs)
June 20—Antibes, France and Its Environs (Scenic)
June 20—Monuments and Cascades of Rome (Travel)
June 21—The Jury's Verdict (Drama)
June 23—Pathe's Weekly, No. 26 (News)
June 24—The Carrier Pigeons (Zoology)
June 24—How a Blossom Opens (Horticulture)
June 25—The Hunger of the Heart (Drama)
June 26—Pathe's Weekly No. 27 (News)
June 26—Clarence the Cowboy (Comedy)
June 27—The Spotted Elephant Hawk Moth (Zoology)
June 27—Athens (Scenic)
June 28—The Second Shot (Drama)
June 28—The Trapper's Mistake (Special—2 parts—Drama)
June 30—Pathe's Weekly, No. 28 (News)
July 1—The Miracle of the Roses (Drama)
July 2—The Missionary's Triumph (Drama)
July 3—The Joy Ride (Comedy)
July 3—Pathe's Weekly, No. 29 (News)
July 4—Consecration of a Buddhist Priest (Manners and Customs)
July 4—Pisa (Italy) and Its Curious Monuments (Travel)
July 5—A Modern Garrick (Drama)
July 5—The Miner's Destiny (Special, 2 parts, Drama)
July 7—Pathe's Weekly, No. 30 (News)
July 8—The Airman's Bride (Drama)
July 9—The School Ma'am (Drama)
July 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 31 (News)
July 10—Hannigan's Harem (Comedy)
July 11—Porcelain (Industrial)
July 12—Dynamite, the New Farm Hand (Ind.)
July 12—A Little Trip Along the Hudson (Sc.)

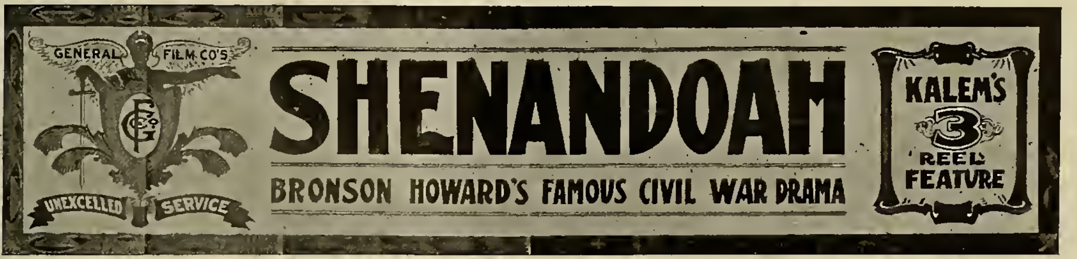
SELIG.

June 16—When Lillian Was Little Red Riding Hood (Fairy Story)
June 16—Shooting the Rapids of the Pagsanjan River in Philippine Islands (Sports)
June 17—Taming a Tenderfoot (Comedy)	1000
June 18—Mrs. Hilton's Jewels (Drama)	1000
June 19—The Gold Brick (Comedy)	1000
June 20—The Fighting Lieutenant (Drama)
June 20—Fancy Poultry (Zoology)
June 23—The Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs (Sports)	1000
June 24—The Marshal's Capture (Drama)	1000
June 25—Papa's Dream (Comedy)
June 25—The City of Gold (Travel)
June 26—When Men Forget (Drama)	1000
June 27—A Western Romance (Drama)	1000
June 30—The Beaded Buckskin Bag (Drama)	1000
July 1—Songs of Truce (Drama)	1000
July 2—Arabia and the Baby (Drama)
July 2—The Sultan of Sulu (Educational)
July 3—In God We Trust (Drama)	1000
July 4—Sallie's Sure Shot (Drama)	1000
July 7—The Trail of Cards (Drama)	1000
July 8—Old Doc Yak (First of the Seligettes Series—Comedy)
July 8—A Jolt for the Janitor (Comedy)
July 9—The Reformation of Dad (Com.-Dr.)	1000
July 10—Made a Coward (Drama)	1000
July 11—Budd Doble Comes Back (Drama)	1000
July 12—A Wild Ride (Special—2 parts—Dr.)	2000

VITAGRAPH.

June 14—Does Advertising Pay? (Comedy)	1000
June 16—The Silver Cigarette Case (Drama)	1000
June 17—The Coming of Gretchen (Comedy-Drama)	1000
June 18—The Drop of Blood (Drama)	1000
June 19—Bunny's Dilemma (Comedy)	1000
June 20—Delayed Proposals (Comedy)	650
June 20—Yokohama Fire Dept. (Public Safety)	350
June 21—Arriet's Baby (Drama)	1000
June 23—The Lion's Bride (Drama)	1000
June 23—The Snare of Fate (3 parts—Special—Drama)	3000
June 24—No Sweets (Comedy)	1000
June 25—Jack's Chrysanthemum (Com.-Dr.)	1000
June 26—Her Sweetest Memory (Drama)	1000
June 27—One Good Joke Deserves Another (Comedy)
June 27—Field Sports, Hong Kong, China, (Sporting)
June 28—One Over on Cutey (Comedy)	870
June 28—Cloisonne Ware (Educational)	130
June 30—Roughing the Cub (Comedy)	1000
July 1—Bingles and the Cabaret (Comedy)	700
July 1—Sight-Seeing in Japan (Scenic)	300
July 2—The Song Bird of the North (Drama)	1000
July 2—The Tiger Lily (Special, 3 parts, Drama)	3000
July 3—Sweet Deception (Drama)	1000
July 4—An Unwritten Chapter (Drama)	1000
July 5—Love's Quarantine (Comedy)	1000
July 7—The Glove (Drama)	1000
July 8—Count Barber (Comedy)	1000
July 9—Solitaires (Comedy)	500
July 9—A Millinery Bomb (Comedy)	500
July 10—The Carpenter (Drama)	1000
July 11—A Spirit of the Orient (Drama)	1000
July 12—The Moulding (Drama)	1000

Wonderfully Attractive Announcement Slides
of all descriptions. Send for illustrations of our one and three sheet poster frames. They are beautiful, durable, practical and a great attraction for your lobby.
MERICAN SLIDE AND POSTER CO. 1st National Bank Building CHICAGO



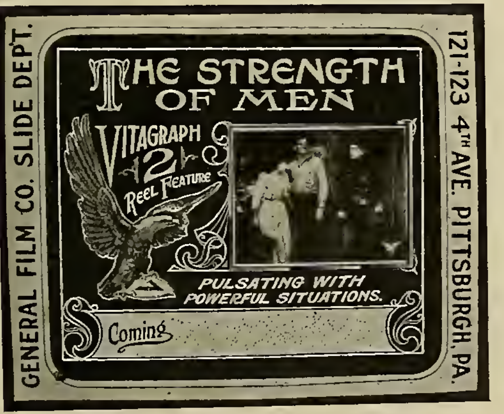
GENERAL FILM CO'S
GFCo
UNEXCELLED SERVICE
SHENANDOAH
BRONSON HOWARD'S FAMOUS CIVIL WAR DRAMA
KALEM'S 3 REEL FEATURE

Here's the biggest dollar's worth of advertising you ever saw!

A strong, muslin banner, 3 feet high and 12 feet long, in several bright colors, eyeleted, securely stitched—in fact all ready to hang in front of your theatre and coax the people in. Do you want one? A dollar bill (parcels postage extra) will bring it.

The Quality of Films in General Film Service is Reflected in the Offerings of Our Advertising Service

Our posters, lantern slides, banners, photographs, and all the rest of our advertising helps are just as good as our films. We have a reputation to live up to, and we do it.



GENERAL FILM CO. SLIDE DEPT.
121-123 4TH AVE. PITTSBURGH, PA.
THE STRENGTH OF MEN
VITAGRAPH 2 REEL FEATURE
PULSATING WITH POWERFUL SITUATIONS.
Coming

Once more we ask—can you beat this lantern slide at 35c?

You've paid more plenty of times for slides not nearly so good. Ours are made by people who know how. Every one is beautifully colored and carefully finished. We have them for all multiple-reel features. Which one shall we send as a trial?

"WE HAVE WHAT YOU WANT WHEN YOU WANT IT"

General Film Company, POSTER DEPARTMENT

(Formerly Photoplay Advertising & Specialty Co.)

71 W. 23rd Street, 440 Fourth Ave., New York; 121 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.; 1022 Superior Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.;
7th and Walnut Sts., Cincinnati, Ohio; Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.; 218 Commercial St., Boston, Mass.;
122 Pearl St., Buffalo, N. Y.; 737 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.

THE CATTLEMAN'S DAUGHTER

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

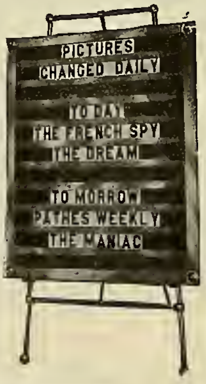
We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

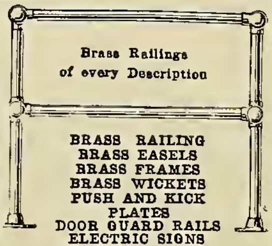
Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101-103 FOURTH AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y.

Write for Catalog

Established 1882.

The Newman Mfg. Co.
715-721 Sycamore St.
CINCINNATI, OHIO





Brass Railings of every Description

BRASS RAILING
BRASS EASELS
BRASS FRAMES
BRASS WICKETS
PUSH AND KICK PLATES DOOR GUARD RAILS
ELECTRIC SIGNS
ELECTRIC LAMPS
BRASS LETTERS
BRASS SIGNS
DISPLAY FIXTURES
PLATING OF ALL KINDS
BRASS GRILLES
BRASS CASTINGS
BRASS FITTINGS
SPECIAL BRASS WORK
TILE LETTER SIGNS

SPECIAL TO-DAY
MONEY TO BURN
EDISON

Look Up "Mere and Mirror"

Webster's Dictionary defines the two words this way:

Mere—such and no more—simple—as mere rubbish—a mere actor.

Mirror — Substance that forms images by the reflection of rays of light; that which gives a true representation, or in which a true image may be seen.

"O! goddess, heavenly bright, Mirror of grace and majesty divine."
—Spencer.

"Mere Screens and Mirror Screens"

A Mere Screen—is one of either and all of the "painted with some kind of metal" screen, so-called gold, silver, and (some copy our name and add a tail), the same kind which you can duplicate with fifty cents' worth of dope. The kind that will almost cause the eyes to bulge out of their sockets because of the "shine" that makes the haze on the picture, especially if you use enough light. The kind that runs people away from your theater because they hurt the eyes, hurt your pictures and hurt your box-office receipts.

A Mirror Screen—"thou roling star." Webster had the right idea because it is a real mirror, made of the finest, white, clear silvering quality of polished plate glass, and it is a "goddess of heavenly light" to the motion picture exhibitor.

It gives your patrons $1.00 worth of "Picture Light" where any other screen gives two bits' worth.

It lightens your house; it lightens your pictures; it lightens your worry about a clear picture; it lightens, and will remove, the debt on your theater, because every picture is of "grace and majesty divine."

It has no shine, but catches the image of your film on a SNOW-WHITE surface that is soft and agreeable to the eyes as an opalescent shade on your reading lamp.

It is brilliant, beautiful and makes a friend of your patrons.

It is like looking out of your window into the open sunshine and meadow.

It makes your patrons happy and welcome and that is why they come often.

REMEMBER—many imitate, but there is only one Screen, the "MIRROR SCREEN."

All other screens are "mere" screens.

Get right with your patrons and show them a picture on a "Mirror Screen." It makes an ordinary film look like a feature reel.

Place your order today for a new SNOW-WHITE "MIRROR SCREEN." F. J. Rembusch, Pres.

MIRROR SCREEN CO., SHELBYVILLE, IND.

EXHIBITORS

Do you realize that you can double your earnings by using ordinary intelligence? Over 4,500 exhibitors today are using

MIRROROIDE

Ask them—their endorsements prove MIRROROIDE to be the world's best projection surface. It can't crack, peel or turn black.

MIRROROIDE is a glass composition containing metallic elements. It's the only matte or rough surfaced metallic screen in the world.

We are simply swamped with orders. Send for our large free samples. Test any way you desire, you will easily see there's a reason. It's water and salt air proof.

It has the world beat. MIRROROIDE produces the brightest, and clearest picture you ever saw. No haze, glare or eye-strain. Still you can keep your theater brightly illuminated during projection and save one-third in your juice bill. MIRROROIDE is sold under a positive five-year guarantee.

YOU NEED IT

MIRROROIDE patents pending. Ask about our Announceoscope. MIRROROIDE metallic paints stand 2,206 degrees of heat. Used by all auto manufacturers on cylinders, etc. It's it.

READ THIS:

Rochester, N. Y., June 24, 1913.

J. H. Genter Co., Newburgh, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—Many times I have wanted to sit down and write you a good, strong letter of gratitude, and the satisfaction I have had since I installed your Mirroroide in the Colonial Theater, but I have been very busy with other matters, but as you see, I have not forgotten.

I have tried all kinds of makes of screens, and patent paints looking for that something that will give the best of results in projection, and I found it in your Mirroroide, and I consider it (and I am speaking from experience), the best screen on the market, and the best screen that was ever made. It's a winner.

With best wishes, I remain, Yours truly,
A. N. WOLFF.

GET OUR SAMPLES.

THE J. H. GENTER COMPANY, Newburgh, N.Y., U.S.A.

WIRE NOW! ONLY A LITTLE TERRITORY LEFT! WIRE NOW!

The Indian Passion Play HIAWATHA In Four Parts
4000 Feet

Remaining territory will be sold regardless of value so that my exclusive attention may be devoted to the out-of-door production now playing in New York

A COMPLETE LINE OF ADVERTISING AND ACCESSORIES

F. E. MOORE, Times Bldg., New York

ASK FOR 16 PAGE BOOKLET OF VIEWS AND REVIEWS

WE'LL GET YOU YET!

HAVE YOU SEEN "MOTORCYCLE MAC"? Read about him in this issue.

DID YOU EVER BUY A DOLLAR'S WORTH FROM US? IF YOU HAD you would know that for every dollar you spend you would have received a whole dollar's worth of real value.

DON'T INSTALL THAT NEW MACHINE UNTIL YOU WRITE US? We are headquarters for all standard makes of machines; for GENUINE Repair parts and for accessories and supplies of every description.

WE SPECIALIZE IN ALL MAKES OF SECOND-HAND MACHINES—WE BUY—WE SELL—WE TRADE—WE RENT any kind of a Moving Picture Machine.

ARE YOU USING OUR TICKET DISPENSER? DO YOU NEED ELECTRIC FANS?

OUR SLOGAN IS

EVERYTHING FROM SCREEN TO BOOTH

THE AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY, 160-A North Fifth Avenue, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY

(Incorporated)

50 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines Repaired by Expert Mechanics. Genuine Parts Only Used

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens
Chairs
Tickets
Pianos
Bio & Electra Carbons
Special Gundlach
Leases

Condensers
Edison Transformers
Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Asbestos Stets Booths
Asbestos Wire
Switches
Plugs
Spotlights

Gas Making Outfits
Limes
Film-Cement
Branch General Disinfectant Co.
Scenery, Stage Effects
Theaters Bought, Sold, Rented

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

LUMIERE

MOTION PICTURE FILM

THE

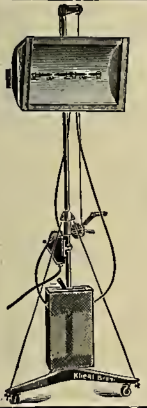
RIGHT KIND—RIGHT PRICE

LUMIERE JOUGLA CO.

75 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

Chicago Branch, 946 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

ADDRESS DEPT. F, No. 18



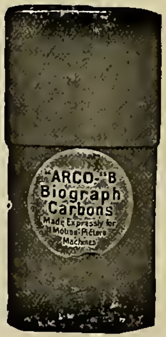
KLIEGLIGHT ARC LAMP

Universally recognized as the best light producing apparatus for taking motion pictures.

UNIVERSAL ELECTRIC STAGE LIGHTING CO.

Kliegl Bros, Props.

240 W. 50th St. New York



SIEMENS & CO. manufacture but One Grade of Picture Carbons.

These are Imported and sold under our mark as

"Biograph Brand"

All 12" Carbons are double-pointed.

Packed only in Cartons, as shown.

L. E. FRORUP & CO.

232 GREENWICH ST. NEW YORK

EXHIBITORS

FOR NEW YORK STATE AND GREATER NEW YORK

JAMES K. HACKETT

in

"THE PRISONER OF ZENDA"

In Four Parts

LICENSED BY MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

Pronounced by all exhibitors who have had the good fortune to book it as the most wonderful feature ever produced, both from an artistic as well as from a financial standpoint.

AND

We are Now Booking the following Features

For New York and New Jersey

The Famous

CAPT. CHERRY KEARTON'S

Thrilling Motion Pictures of

Wild Animal Life and Big Game in the Jungles of INDIA AND AFRICA

Featuring Native Lion Hunt in the African Jungle.

PRONOUNCED BY THE HON. THEO. ROOSEVELT AND OTHERS TO BE THE GREATEST ANIMAL PICTURES EVER TAKEN

We have a full line of advertising matter in keeping with the character of these magnificent features.

For Bookings Address WM. L. SHERRY FEATURE FILM CO., Inc. Suite 301 Times Bldg., New York Ci
Phone 5576 Bryant

Big Bargains in Features

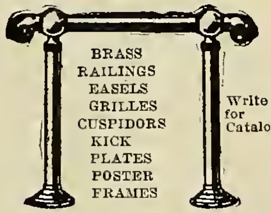
In first class condition, with lots of advertising matter free.

SECRET SOCIETY	3 reels	$90.00
MAN'S DOWNFALL	2 "	60.00
ADVENTURES OF LIEUT. ROSE	3 "	90.00
RINGS OF THE FOREST	2 "	75.00
OTHERS' SINS	4 "	125.00
BLACK CAT	3 "	90.00
NATURE'S DREADFUL POWER (LIKE NEW)	2 "	120.00
RACETRACK CATASTROPHE	3 "	90.00
SHATTERED HOPES	3 "	90.00
DECAMERONE	3 "	110.00
VEILED PROPHET	3 "	125.00
TWICE STRUCK IN THE HEART	2 "	85.00
SIEGE OF PETERSBURG	2 "	90.00
CRIME OF THE LAW	3 "	85.00
GAMBLER'S CHANCE	3 "	100.00
MADELINE	4 "	100.00
PAST THAT RETURNS	3 "	100.00
SICILIAN LOVE	3 "	100.00
NOBLE LIE	3 "	100.00
ZIGOMAR vs. NICK CARTER	3 "	100.00
UNKNOWN MOTHER	3 "	100.00
TRAGEDY OF THE DESERT	2 "	75.00
LIFE IN GAY PARIS	2 "	50.00
SECRET OF MONTE CARLO	3 "	100.00
HELPER OF HUMANITY	2 "	50.00
GROTTO OF TORTURE	2 "	40.00
MOTHER'S TRIAL	2 "	65.00
DEAD ARE SILENT	2 "	65.00
TORMENTED EXISTENCE	2 "	60.00
RED INN	2 "	40.00
RLIGHTED SON	3 "	60.00

ABOVE FILMS WILL BE SHIPPED WITH THE PRIVILEGE OF EXAMINATION, IF EXPRESS CHARGES ARE GUARANTEED.

International Film Traders
5 West 14th Street, New York

McKENNA



BRASS
RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS
KICK
PLATES
POSTER
FRAMES

Write for Catalog.

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH

ELECTRIC EXHAUST FANS

Twenty-four-inch $80. Thirty-inch, $110. Also some oscillating twelve-inch fans, $13.75 each. All General Electric make and for alternating current, 1 phase, 60 cycle, 110 volt.

GEORGE BENDER
82 Centre Street New York Cit

FULTON'S A-to-Z LIST

Pocket Edition 120 Pages

Illustrates, describes and prices everything used in or about the Motion Picture Theatre and in the allied industries. Costs you nothing. Worth its weight in gold.

E. E. FULTON —152— W. LAKE STREET CHICAGO

HOW ABOUT VENTILATING Your Theatre?

Our system of single heat transmission, the most economical in first cost and operation. We manufacture and install complete heating and ventilating equipments in accordance with the most rigid ventilating laws.

B. F. REYNOLDS & CO., 412-14 Dearborn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

As the Operator Looks at it

As the Operator Looks at It

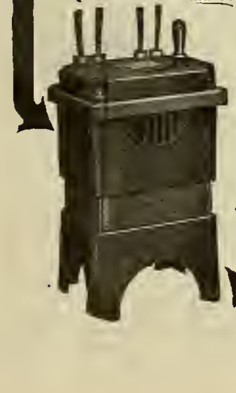
Just notice how easy this operator takes it. He doesn't have to work over a dangerous juice consuming rheostat at furnace heat anymore since the

Fort Wayne Compensarc

was installed.

He can control the machine perfectly now with one hand--gets a clearer, whiter, steadier light and can adjust it to any of the three intensities without even the faintest flicker.

When we sold this machine we guaranteed it would absolutely



Cut 2-3 from the Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounded almost too good to be true, but they put one in on our 30 day free trial plan.

Did the machine "make good?" Well, the first month it reduced the bill from $22.70 to $9.24 and they operated more hours and got better light than ever before.

We can do just as well for you regardless of what voltage you are using and if you will send for our little free booklet, we'll explain how we do it.

Remember you are paying the Lighting Company 66 2-3 per cent more than you need to every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of General Electric Company
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

WE TRUST YOU

Will Visit the

MOVING PICTURE WORLD BOOTH

During the
International Convention
July 5th to July 12th

Orchestra Music

FOR

MOVING PICTURES

Violin, Cornet and Drum parts have been added to the popular "Orpheum Collection" of piano music (dramatic and descriptive) for Moving Pictures. Practical for piano alone or any number of above instruments. Issued in two parts: No. 1 and No. 2.

Piano, 58 cents each;	both No.'s	$1.15
Violin, 40 cents each;	both "	75c
Cornet, 35 cents each;	both "	65c
Drums, 30 cents each;	both "	55c

Send for free sample pages.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St., Chicago, Ill.

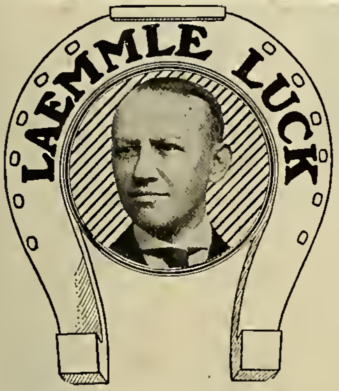
SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made salable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism for a fee of $2.

Exhibitors!

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
Box 70, Madison Square Station
New York City



I WIN

every battle I ever fight. And the people who stick to me win whenever I win. Every exhibitor who wants to be dead sure of a successful future will do mighty well to hook up with that Universal program and with Laemmle and with "Laemmle Luck." My offices are buying the whole Universal program and extra copies of the best films to boot. When are YOU going to WAKE UP?

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

Changeable Illuminated

PROGRAM SIGN

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

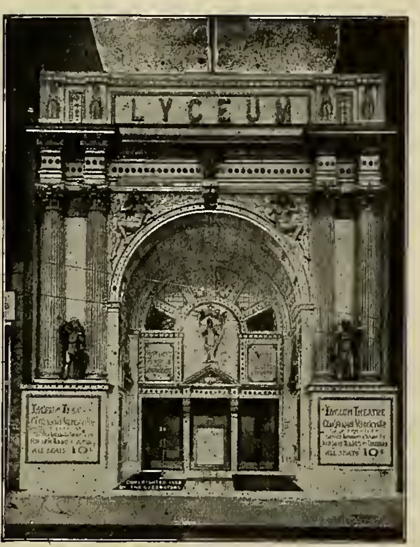
ZENITH MFG. CO.

Box 252 Cincinnati, Ohio

SOUTHERN FILM SERVICE

Every Motion Picture Accessory.
Distributors Nicholas Power Products.
Phone, Preston 3162.

Southern Pacific Building :: HOUSTON, TEXAS



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

Our Central Location Means Quick Service

Slides and Motion Picture Supplies

We carry a large stock of Bausch & Lomb and Gundlach projection lenses of any focal length. We will allow you something on your old lense. Picture Frames. Ticket Selling Machines, Simplex, Power's, Edison and Motiograph Machines. Tickets, Carbons, Calcium Goods, Spot Lamps, Etc. Slides Made to Order. Send for Catalogue.

ERKER'S, 608 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

Pardon The Delay
Well Not String You
Any Longer
Than Can Be Avoided.

ASK US ABOUT OUR PLAN

of selling the admission tickets to your theatre

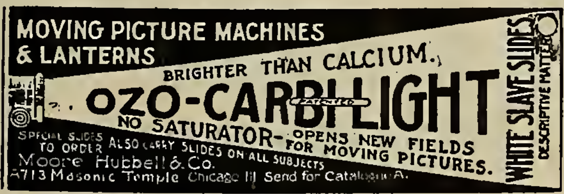
TICKET PREMIUM COMPANY, Inc.
Fort Wayne, Ind., U. S. A.

We Can Get You $1,000 to $2,000 in Four Weeks in Addition to Your Regular Receipts During the Dull Summer Months

Our plan has been a big success on hundreds of theatres in the past six months. No special features: you use your regular program.

You wonder how it can be done. Only one theatre in your city can have the plan. You will want it. So write today, now.

THE C. G. SPRATT SYNDICATE, Cedar Rapids, Iowa



MOVING PICTURE MACHINES & LANTERNS

BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM.

OZO-CARBI-LIGHT

PATENTED

NO SATURATOR—OPENS NEW FIELDS FOR MOVING PICTURES.

SPECIAL SLIDES TO ORDER ALSO CARRY SLIDES ON ALL SUBJECTS

WHITE SLAVE SLIDES DESCRIPTIVE MATTER

Moore Hubbell & Co.
A713 Masonic Temple Chicago Ill Send for Catalogue A.

For the Best Feature Attraction

With the greatest lobby display, write, phone or wire

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405 Schiller Bldg. Chicago

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theaters and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use. Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich. New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissel Blk. Philadelphia: 1943 Market St. Nashville, Tenn.: 315 No. 4th Ave.

Steel or Cast Iron Standards in many styles

Southern California representative, California Seating Co., 1109 Van Nuys Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.
N. W. representative, H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave., Seattle, Wash.

The Wisconsin Seating Company
NEW LONDON
WISCONSIN, U. S. A.

Steel standards will not break

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

Think of the motherless, the fatherless, and the childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI-PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 29 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iroquois Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible. Our chair is a friend to the Public.

It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.

It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

It will make your theater all aisles. It is the only sanitary chair. It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree. Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

Send for our prices before buying

OPERA CHAIRS

Latest in Seats

Best in Seats

BENNETT SEATING CO.
36 EAST 3rd ST. CINCINNATI, O.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. The A. H. Andrews Co. Branches in all Leading Cities.
New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 728 Mission St.

It pays to discriminate when you buy

THEATRE SEATING

WRITE TODAY for Cat. V2 (Moving Picture Chairs) and Cat. V3 (Upholstered Chairs)
Send Floor Sketch for Free Seating Plan.

Widest range of styles and prices. Large stocks.

American Seating Company
218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO. 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA GUIDE

Published by E. W. Lavezzi, cameraman, inventor, manufacturer and originator of the make your own of knock down Moving Picture Camera.

Tells what uses you can make of the camera, where you can sell your negative and positive films, and ways to get the highest prices and method of putting it on the market, where you can obtain film, have it developed, etc. The only work of its kind in print.

Get this information before you buy a camera—price $1.50.

The only way to get a high-priced camera for little money—make it yourself,

Credit for guide on purchasing a camera outfit,

Knock down camera Box and Machined Parts $35.00. Lens $25.00 up.

Plain tripod $10.00 Panoramic and tilting, $10.00 extra.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS, Advertising Bldg., Chicago

ITALA BIG FILMS

THE WORLD'S MASTER PRODUCTIONS

FAMOUS FOR
"THE FALL OF TROY"-"PALACE OF FLAMES"-"TIGRIS"
AND OTHER SUCCESSES

2 ACTUAL FEATURES EVERY MONTH 2

COPYRIGHTED

COMING

EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY AVAILABLE NOW

THE DEATH KNELL
THREE REELS

WRITE FOR DETAILED PROPOSITION TODAY

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA
805 COLUMBIA THEATRE, NEW YORK
HARRY R. RAVER DIRECTOR GENERAL

EASTMAN

motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

"Imitation is the Sincerest Flattery"

THE RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

Better today than ever; very naturally we should have imitators. It's the law of human nature to follow where other shoes have trod. If you will profit by the experience of others, don't permit yourself to be deceived with "something just as good."

We sell you not only a RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN, but give you a service that will make you thank yourself for all time that you enlisted under us. It's that feeling of friendship and our aim to treat our purchasers as we ourselves would want to be treated, that counts a great deal. But it is only one of the many reasons why you should do business with us. WE HAVE THE GOODS.

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Company,
105 N. Main St., St. Louis,
Sole Manufacturers.

G. H. Callaghan, Sixth Floor, Booth No. 3, Heidelberg Bldg., New York City.

George Breck, 70 Turk Street, San Francisco, Cal., Distributors.

CONFIDENCE

IN HALLBERG GAINING DAILY

IS AGAIN EVIDENCED BY THE FACT THAT THE United Electric Light & Power Co., of New York

Have Retained Me to Furnish Their Complete Equipment for the Exposition at Grand Central Palace. This will consist of Operating Booth, Motion Picture Machines, Hallberg A. C. to D. C. Economizer, Hallberg Standard A. C. Economizer, and Other Apparatus, Making the Most Complete and Modern Motion Picture Exhibit at the Exposition.

I want to help you, Mr. Exhibitor, to improve your picture or to equip your new theatre. My price is no more than that of any other reliable distributor, and I am sure that my experience and advice which is free to my customers, is worth many dollars and is of more value than confidential, special, would-be discounts, cut prices, etc., used by some of my competitors in pulling unwary exhibitors into their fold.

Everybody Is Putting in the

"HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER

It gives the best light in the world for picture projection. Is made in all sizes for all conditions—ASK ABOUT IT.

Factory Selling Headquarters for

POWERS, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES

"HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS

"HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS

MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

HALLBERG
ECONOMIZER

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 Pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd Street New York

1 ROUND O'BRIEN

NEW MAJESTIC Is Getting "Mutual Service" More New Business Than Any Other Brand—Can It Get Yours?

Fred Mace, Billy Garwood, Francelia Billington, Marguerite Loveridge and the other Majestic wonders ought to be able to pull your business to a "Mutual Service" exchange easily. The public certainly likes their films! Make your house THE popular house of your neighborhood by showing Mace-Garwood-Billington-Loveridge right along. The New Majestics have simply proven the surprise of the year and you ought to hand the surprise along to your patrons.

"One Round O'Brien Comes Back"

Is one of the Marvelous NEW MAJESTICS for the New Week

This second "O'Brien" film, which is ever so much funnier than the first, is certain to be the laughing riot of the year at your theater. If you didn't take our tip of last week and get quick booking, you'll likely have your troubles getting it NOW. But go to all the trouble in the world to secure such a box-office magnet. Take it at any "age," BUT GET IT, SURE. Released Sunday, June 29.

You Never Saw Such Intimate Close-Up Views of Cardinal Farley as "The Golden Jubilee" Shows

It's exactly like being right alongside him, we vow! All through the wonderful, educating services at the Golden Jubilee of the New York Catholic Protectory we keep you CLOSE to the great dignitary of the church. You follow his every reverent move. Besides, in the intelligent drills and exercises of the boys and girls at the Protectory, you see the value of this famous institution thoroughly demonstrated. Released Tuesday, July 1. The THIRD MAJESTIC of the week is "GAFFNEY'S GLADIATOR," a real rip-roaring comedy, released Saturday, July 5.

"NEW MAJESTIC" Business Offices, New Rochelle, N. Y.

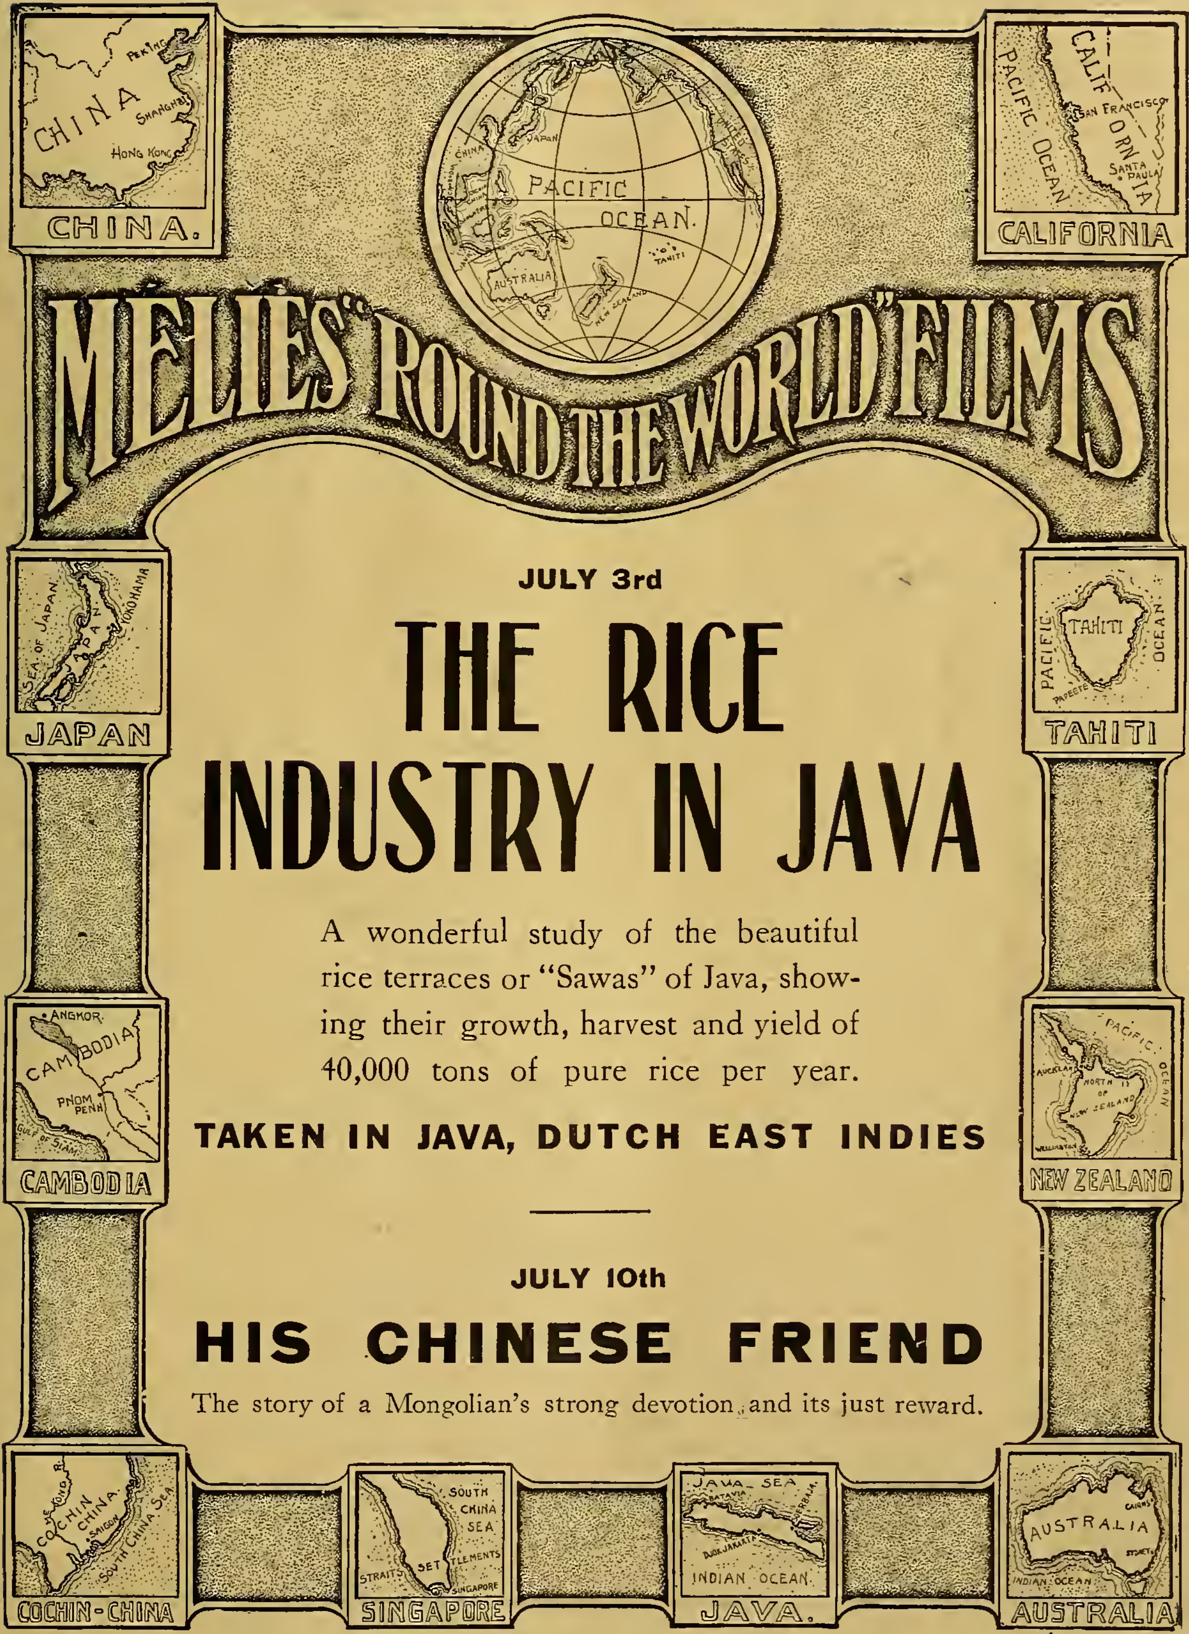
All-Year-Round Studios, Brooklyn Heights, Los Angeles, Cal.

COMES BACK.

F.C.



MÉLIÈS' "ROUND THE WORLD" FILMS
CHINA.
CHINA
PEKING
SHANGHAI
HONG KONG
PACIFIC OCEAN.
JAPAN
AUSTRALIA
TAHITI
NEW ZEALAND
CALIFORNIA
PACIFIC OCEAN
CALIFORNIA
SAN FRANCISCO
SANTA PAULA
JAPAN
SEA OF JAPAN
YOKOHAMA
TAHITI
PACIFIC OCEAN
PAPEETE
CAMBODIA
ANGKOR
PNOM PENH
GULF OF SIAM
NEW ZEALAND
PACIFIC OCEAN
AUCKLAND
NORTH IS. OF NEW ZEALAND
WELLINGTON
COCHIN-CHINA
SAIGON
SOUTH CHINA SEA
SINGAPORE
SOUTH CHINA SEA
STRAITS SETTLEMENTS
JAVA.
JAVA SEA
BATAVIA
INDIAN OCEAN
AUSTRALIA
INDIAN OCEAN
SYDNEY
CAIRNS

JULY 3rd

THE RICE INDUSTRY IN JAVA

A wonderful study of the beautiful rice terraces or "Sawas" of Java, showing their growth, harvest and yield of 40,000 tons of pure rice per year.

TAKEN IN JAVA, DUTCH EAST INDIES

JULY 10th

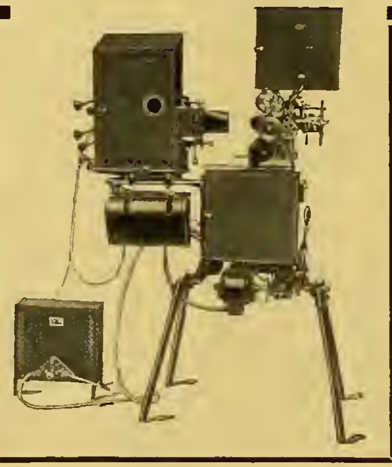
HIS CHINESE FRIEND

The story of a Mongolian's strong devotion and its just reward.

Greatest Definition, Clearest Pictures

OBTAINED WITH EXCLUSIVE PATENTED INTERMITTENT MOVEMENT OF

Power's Cameragraph, No. 6A



This movement is many times stronger than that of any other made.

It accomplishes a longer period of picture on the screen, with quicker motion of film.

This is but one of our many exclusive features. It is because of such original and advanced ideas that the supremacy of POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH has been maintained and recognized for nearly 16 years. The best proof of this is

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH SALES REPRESENT OVER 65 PER CENT. OF THE ENTIRE MOVING PICTURE MACHINE OUTPUT OF AMERICA

If motor drive is desired, we have IT. No more trouble with variable speed motors. Our motors are constant speed; control is mechanical and of wide range; operation is simple, effective. THIS DESERVES SPECIAL ATTENTION. Catalogue G gives full details.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

88-90 GOLD STREET NEW YORK

The Leading Makers of Motion Picture Machines

Vol. 17, No. 2 July 12, 1913 Price, 10 Cents

H. E. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Yellow Slave" (Melies).

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

NEW YORK

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

CONVENTION NUMBER

CONVENTIONITES: Ask for the Thanhouser canes and chain-fans at the Grand Central Palace. Ask for

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

when you get back home.

Next July Three-Reelers

LITTLE DORRIT

After Dickens
With Maude Fealy

TANNHAUSER

After the Opera
With Marguerite Snow and James Cruze

Of Course, You Have Shown "KING RENE'S DAUGHTER"—Miss Fealy's First Photoplay

For the Week of Sunday, July 6

SUNDAY, July 6—No release, because of three reel release of preceding Tuesday.

TUESDAY, July 8—"FOR THE MAN SHE LOVED," telling of the thrilling courting of a ranchman's daughter by rival cowboys.

FRIDAY, July 11—"AN ERRAND OF MERCY," which is accomplished by a famous physician, who receives unexpectedly a greater fee than gold.

Thanhouser Film Corporation, New Rochelle, N.Y.

COMING! Sunday, July 13—"A Crepe Bonnet," a wonderful picture for the kids and containing hundreds of 'em.

COMING! All the time—to your lobby: THE THANHOUSER PLAYERPOSTER. It solves the posterless-reel problem. Ask your exchange man the cost.

COMING! A staggering list of THANHOUSER CLASSICS, in two and three reels and featuring such stars as Maude Fealy, Marguerite Snow, James Cruze, Flo LaBadie, Mignon Anderson, William Russell, Harry Benham, the Kid and the Kidlet.

ERRAND OF MERCY

FIVE-A-WEEK
Essanay
W.M.YOUNG

EXHIBITORS WELCOME!

WIRE YOUR WIFE TO BOOK THE FEATURES

Released Tuesday, July 8th.

"The Daughter of the Sheriff"

A meritorious Western drama in which a girl outwits a bandit.

Released Wednesday, July 9th.

"The Outer Shell"

A startling drama that holds the interest, seasoned with romance.

Released Thursday, July 10th.

"A Flurry in Diamonds"

Another uproariously funny comedy. Your audiences will like it.

Released Friday, July 11th.

"The Sign"

An excellent dramatic feature of merit. Book this for first run.

Released Saturday, July 12th.

"Broncho Billy and the Western Girls"

An exceedingly clever Western drama with the World's most popular photoplayer, G. M. Anderson.

TWO EXCELLENT DRAMATIC FEATURES

Released Monday, July 7th Released Monday, July 7th

"THE FORBIDDEN WAY"

In TWO PARTS

A THRILLING DRAMA OF THE UNDERWORLD. ITS POWERFUL PORTRAYAL OF CHARACTER AND ITS MASTERLY PRESENTATION OF SCENES FROM THE CRIMINAL HAUNTS OF A GREAT CITY, PLAY UPON THE HEARTSTRINGS OF HUMAN EMOTIONS WITH AN ELOQUENCE OF APPEAL THAT RENDS THE VERY SOUL. IT'S MARVELOUS. BE SURE AND BOOK THIS.

Released Monday, July 21st Released Monday, July 21st

"TAPPED WIRES"

In TWO PARTS

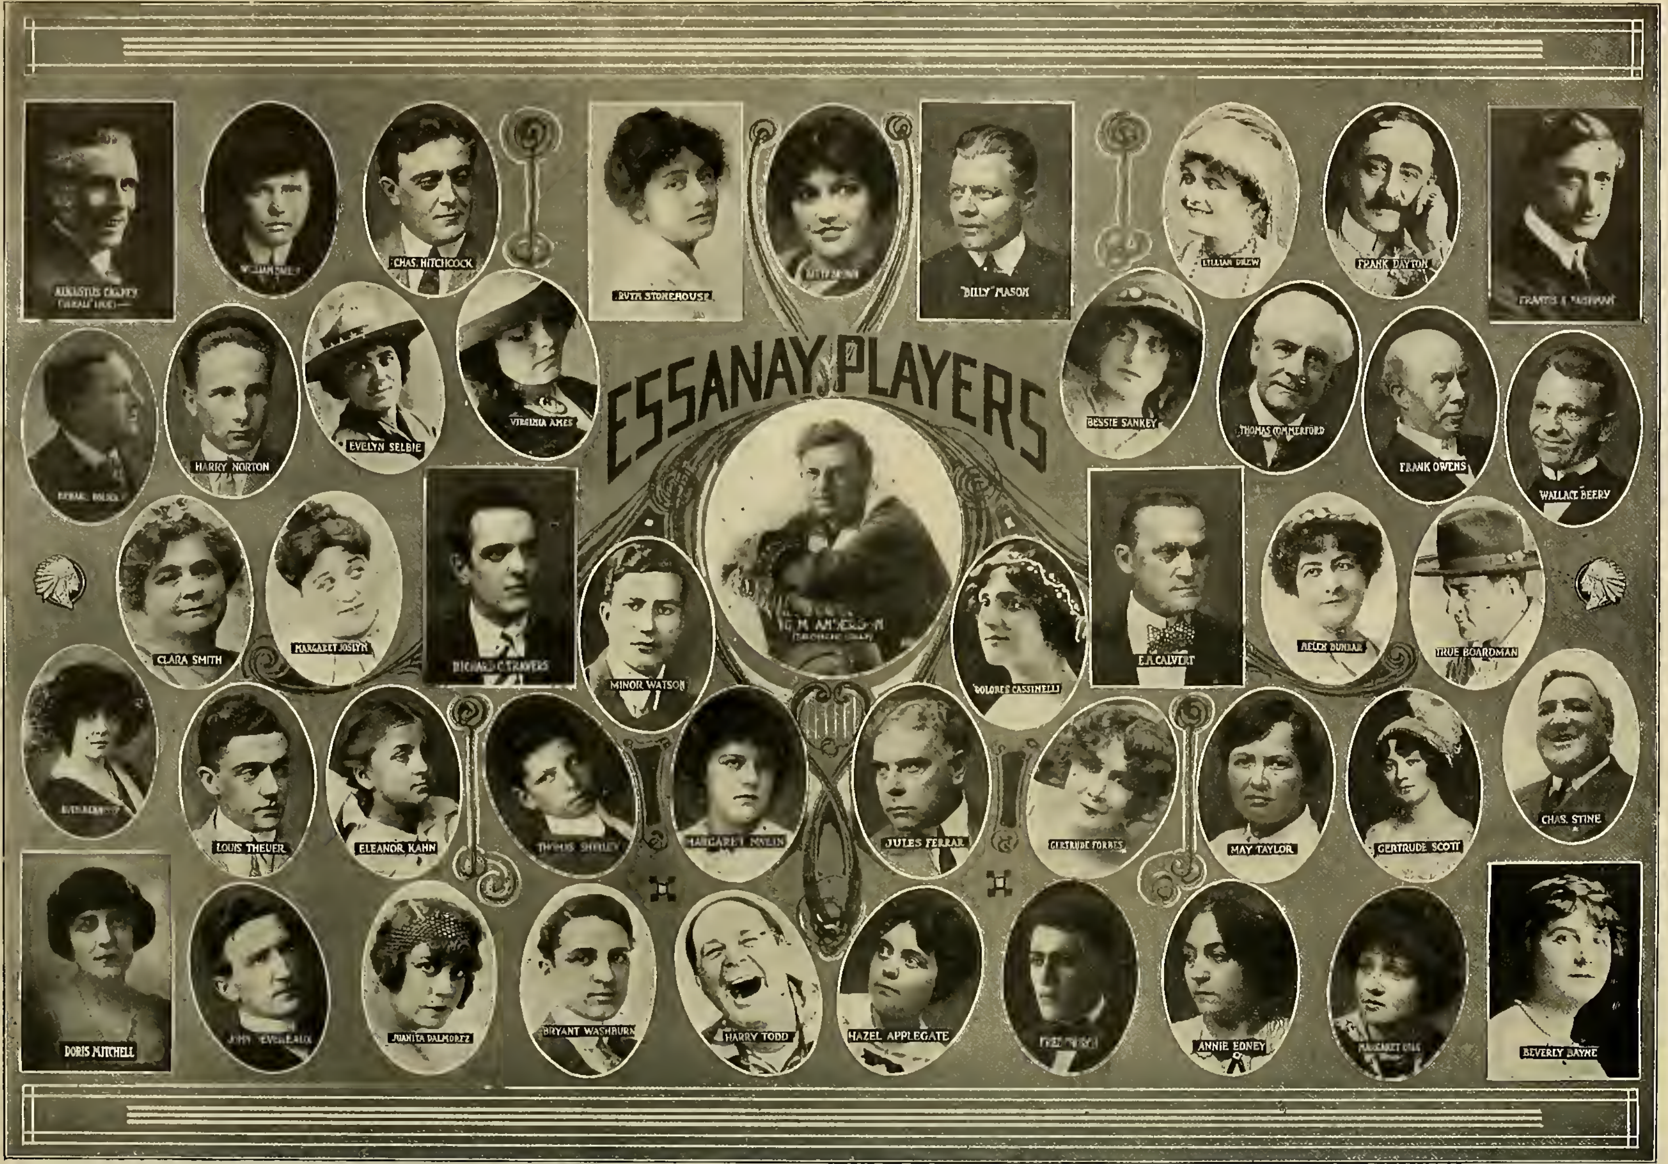
A WONDERFUL HEART INTEREST DRAMATIC STORY IN TWO PARTS, OVERFLOWING WITH PATHOS, HUMOR AND EXCITING SITUATIONS. A STORY THAT WILL EVER BE REMEMBERED AS ONE THAT RINGS TRUE OF HUMAN NATURE. SPECIAL HERALDS FOR BOTH FEATURES ARE NOW BEING PREPARED. ORDER YOUR ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR DIRECT FROM US.

THE PUBLIC ARE WISE—DEMAND NEW, CLEAN POSTERS. Three sheet posters of all Saturday releases will boom your business. Posters are lithographed in full four colors, 35c. each. You can order these from your exchange or direct from Essanay Film Mfg. Co., 521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of Essanay players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the Players' Photo Co., 177 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

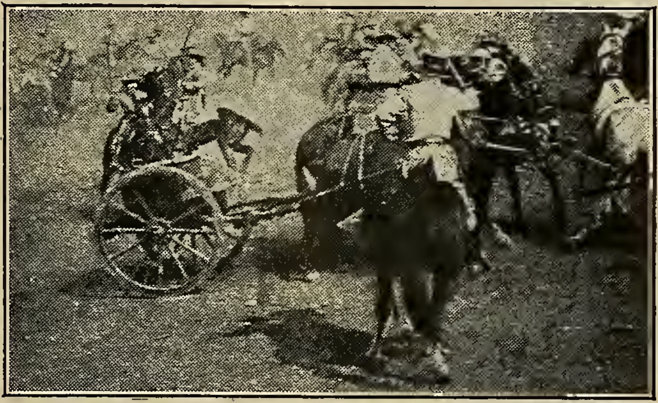
Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill.
Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona



ESSANAY PLAYERS
AUGUSTUS CARNEY (ALKALI IKE)
WILLIAM BAILEY
CHAS. HITCHCOCK
RUTH STONEHOUSE
"BILLY" MASON
LILLIAN DREW
FRANK DAYTON
FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN
HARRY NORTON
EVELYN SELBIE
VIRGINIA AMES
BESSIE SANKEY
THOMAS COMMERFORD
FRANK OWENS
WALLACE BEERY
CLARA SMITH
MARGARET JOSLYN
RICHARD C. TRAVERS
MINOR WATSON
G. M. ANDERSON (BRONCHO BILLY)
DOLORES CASSINELLI
E. H. CALVERT
HELEN DUNBAR
TRUE BOARDMAN
RUTH HENNESSY
LOUIS THEUER
ELEANOR KAHN
THOMAS SHIRLEY
MARGARET NYLIN
JULES FERRAR
GERTRUDE FORBES
MAY TAYLOR
GERTRUDE SCOTT
CHAS. STINE
DORIS MITCHELL
JOHN EVEREAUX
JUANITA DALMOREZ
BRYANT WASHBURN
HARRY TODD
HAZEL APPLEGATE
FRED CHURCH
ANNIE EDNEY
BEVERLY BAYNE

"THE BATTLE of GETTYSBURG"

Special
Release
In Five
Reels



Produced by
Thos. H.
Ince
Managing Director of
Kay-Bee
and Broncho
Films

The Greatest Motion Picture In The World

Successfully playing the big theaters of the country

BOOKED INDEFINITELY AT RIVERVIEW PARK, CHICAGO

PLAYING THE JAKE WELLS CIRCUIT

Now being exhibited as the sole attraction at the Keith houses—the Crescent Theatre, Brooklyn, and the Bronx Theater, New York City. The first time in the history of these houses that a photodrama has been shown exclusively.

Special Terms and Bookings Can Be Had Exclusively Through the Offices of

THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION

New York Motion Picture Corporation

Long Acre Bldg. 42nd St. and Broadway New York City

As Solid

Be Sure to Get Your Booking

FOR

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST

(Released Thursday, July 10th)

That Wonderfully Artistic Three-Reel Rex—A Gorgeous Visualization of the Famous Fairy Tale

Start Right Now to Demand

"WHEN SHERMAN MARCHED TO THE SEA"

A Three-Reel 101 Bison Military Masterpiece

(Released Saturday, July 19th)

150 Scenes Full of Nerve-Tingling, Thrilling Sensations
In this Massive Production. All the Military Evolutions Conform to the Actual History of Sherman's World-Famous, Record-Breaking March

Coming—Watch for It

"THE DEATH STONE OF INDIA"

Three-Reel 101 Bison

Every Foot of it Bristles with Excitement

The Settings Defy Description—A Production that Will Eclipse Any Spectacle Ever Conceived Of

Universal Film Manufacturing Company

Demand That

As A Rock

UNIVERSAL FILMS
TRADE MARK

"UNITED AT GETTYSBURG"

A Romance Produced at the Gettysburg Reunion

in which every important event of the most memorable celebration of "The Boys in Blue" and "The Sons in Gray" will be interwoven.

Every man, woman and child will want to see this most thrillingly patriotic picture.

Get Busy and Arrange Your Booking

It will be released shortly after the celebration is over.

A GETTYSBURG SPECIAL

that will contain all the important happenings of the celebration.

WILL BE SHIPPED JULY 5th

Go after your Booking this very minute. Everyone will want to see it.

Mecca Bldg., 1600 Broadway, New York City

Universal Program

MISS MARION LEONARD
AS A
MODERN "MAGDALENE"
IN

"Those Who Live In Glass Houses"

Based on the quotation from St. John 8: 7:—

"He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her."

It strikes a "chord" which, alas, is too often lost in the rush and turmoil of everyday life

MONOPOL
FILM CO.
145 W. 45TH ST.
N.Y.

It instructs, entertains and gives food for thought. It leaves an everlasting but very pleasant impression

The Story of a "Lost Sheep" who finds her way to "The Fold" through the kindness, sympathy and love of a "Shepherd in the Master's Service"

"The Seed of the Fathers"

AMERICA'S FOREMOST FEATURE PRODUCTION

Is the Greatest Drawing Power
in Picturedom

Get in Touch With Us About This

MONOPOL
FILM CO.
145 W. 45TH ST.
N.Y.

Broncho Headliners

HEART THROBS

2 Reels, July 9

A touching dramatic story so compellingly acted that the hearts of the most calloused audience will be stirred.

Mary Bates, a Vermont girl, rebels against her mother's choice of an elderly, rich man, and marries her handsome Southern lover, and goes to live with his folks. During the war a terrible battle takes place, just as Mary is about to become a mother. The disappointed suitor, at the head of the Union forces, takes possession of the home, and the husband, with his soldiers, fighting with furious desperation, retakes the place. The husband is mortally wounded, however, and expires as he kisses the new-born babe. After the war Mary goes back to Vermont, but her stern old mother refuses to forgive her. Mary is forced to work hard for her maintenance and that of her child, and finally collapses and is on the verge of death. The child accidentally meets its grandmother, and the old lady, after a mental battle with herself, goes to her child and prays for forgiveness, which is freely granted.

COMING! COMING!

Old Mammy's Secret Code

In Three Wonderful Reels
Released July 16

Broncho Motion Picture Co.
Long Acre Bldg., 42d St. and Bdwy.
NEW YORK CITY
MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

Keystone Comedies

SAFE IN JAIL

1 Reel, July 7

The Sheriff captures a couple of desperate characters, and places them in jail. During the night they escape and burglarize the Sheriff's home, and then return to the lockup. In the morning the Sheriff, having no evidence against the prisoners, releases them. The Sheriff's wife discovers the loss of her jewelry, and the Deputy Sheriff goes in quest of the unknown thieves. He finds the erstwhile guests of the jail dividing the "swag" and captures them, and again, they are landed safe in jail.

THE TELLTALE LIGHT

1 Reel, July 10

The Anti-Spooning League captures Mabel and her sweetheart, Tom. Mabel and Tom discover that the Leaguers are not averse to flirting themselves, and they decide to expose them. Securing a big electric searchlight, they explore the dark recesses of the park at night, and turn the light upon numerous spoony couples, who prove to be Leaguers who are practicing what they preach—against.

LOVE and RUBBISH

1 Reel, July 14

Two park cleaners try to flirt with pretty girls, but are repulsed. They secure fine clothes and get back on the job—of flirting—again. They make the mistake of picking out the sweetheart of the park superintendent, and a battle royal ensues. This lady is a widow, with a little child. The child is seen to hide in an empty barrel, but gets out again and wanders away. One of the park cleaners, running from the wrath of the superintendent, hides in the barrel, which is carried away, pursued by those who think the child is in it. The barrel has a rough time, but the park cleaner is finally rescued.

KEYSTONE FILM CO.
Long Acre Bldg., 42d St. and Bdwy.
NEW YORK CITY
MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

Kay-Bee Features

THE RED MASK

1 Reel, July 18

A Big Two-Reel Feature Made into One Reel.

John Ruskin, of the U. S. Secret Service, is sent to Bald Eagle, Ariz., to assist in the capture of Red Mask, a notorious bandit, whose face has never been recognized. Ruskin is killed by Red Mask, who removes the letter of introduction from the detective's pocket and boldly presents it to the Sheriff, by whom he is given a warm welcome. Red Mask falls in love with Molly, the Sheriff's daughter. He is surprised while holding up the paymaster's coach, and a running duel ensues between him and the Sheriff. Mortally wounded, Red Mask gets the drop on the Sheriff, but fails to shoot owing to his love for Molly.

N. Y. Motion Picture Corp.
Long Acre Bldg., 42d St. and Bdwy.
NEW YORK CITY
MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

THE PICTURES OF EXCEPTIONAL MERIT!

AMBROSIO FILMS

A Two Reel Release EVERY SATURDAY

REMEMBER, THERE'S SOMETHING COMING!

A Feature That Is a Feature EVERY MONTH

AMBROSIO

SATURDAY TWO REELERS

July 12th

IN THE HANDS OF CONSPIRATORS

Mysterious enough to keep you guessing; Sensational enough to hold you to the end.

July 19th

THE TRIUMPH OF STRENGTH

Strong not only in title, but from beginning to end; Something extra. Don't miss it.

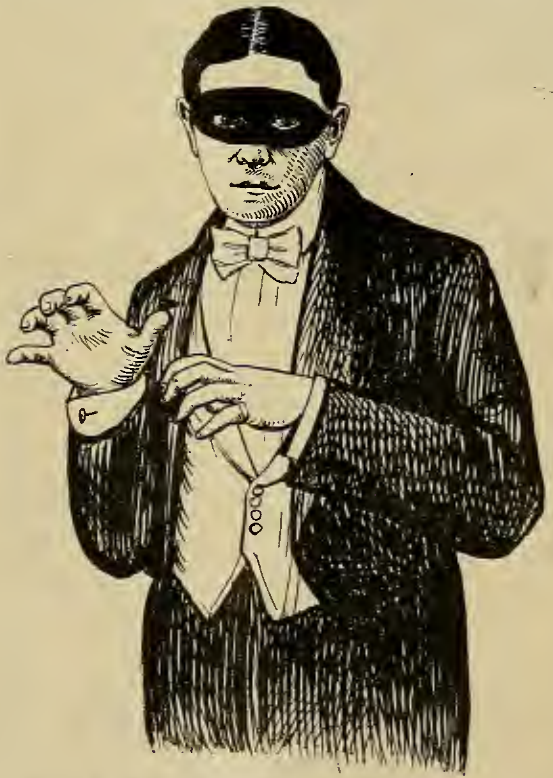
REMEMBER, THERE'S SOMETHING COMING

AMBROSIO AMERICAN COMPANY
15 East 26th St., New York

GAUMONT'S GREATEST DETECTIVE DRAMAS

OF ALL CRACKSMAN vs. DETECTIVE SERIES, THE GREATEST

FANTOMAS



No. 1
"FANTOMAS
UNDER
THE SHADOW
OF THE GUILLOTINE"

ORDER NOW

No. 1
"FANTOMAS
UNDER THE SHADOW
OF THE GUILLOTINE"

ORDER NOW

THE PHANTOM CROOK

Statesrights Buyers and Exhibitors:

Gaumont

Get in first on this great new series. Fantomas film is crammed full of novelty and excitement. The name of Gaumont is sufficient guarantee of excellence in production and photography. ORDER NOW.

GAUMONT CO. FLUSHING
NEW YORK

TRUTH IN THE WILDERNESS
In Two Reels

Featuring America's Most Popular Photoplay Star

J. Warren Kerrigan

An inspiring production of adventure and romance

One-Three-Six Sheet Posters — Monday, July 14, 1913

To Err is Human

A tale of bitter struggle that almost terminates in a miscarriage of justice

One and Three Sheet Posters. — Thursday, July 17, 1913

At the Half-Breed's Mercy

A most remarkable series of thrilling adventures, beautifully blended in a convincing tale of the Plains

One and Three Sheet Posters. — Saturday, July 19, 1913

American Film Manufacturing Company

6227 Evanston Avenue
Chicago, Ill.

¶ Between ourselves and the lamp-post, there have been mighty few good animal features ever released. Most of the wild animals we hear about in films are tame! We don't want to cast any aspersions, but the truth is stubborn! Cherry Kearton jeopardized his life to obtain the series talked about on this page, and this fact is more obvious than imaginative!

M. WEINBERG—'13

THE greatest test of a film's merits is enduring popularity. There is no question that as long as the jungle possesses its untrodden paths, men will take an absorbing interest IN ADOLPH ZUKOR'S SENSATIONAL ANIMAL SERIES, "Capt. Cherry Kearton's Wild Life and Big Game in the Jungles of India and Africa."

FEATURING

Native Lion Hunt in the Heart of the African Jungle

There is an awesome note in these pictures. The unparalleled daring of Capt. Kearton, visible throughout the film; the astounding reproductions of Nature in its wildest state; the mesmeric thrill of the hunt; the savage customs of the natives; and the fascinating strength and fortitude of the wild animals invest the series with an interest almost startling, and with stirring climaxes far beyond the power of a dramatist.

Col. Roosevelt, America's most distinguished hunter of big game, awarded these films enthusiastic endorsement; the newspapers have devoted much space and many adjectives to a description of their wonders; those who have already purchased state rights are congratulating themselves; why don't you make yourself happy?

STATE RIGHTS (a few yet) STILL SELLING

Complete and effective variety of lithographs, heralds, lobby photos that look real enough to bite, and detailed authoritative lecture.

WIRE! It really is worth a WIRE!

ARAB AMUSEMENT COMPANY
TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY

HELEN G

I

THE WIFE

An Original Romance of

Written and Directed by

Copyrighted, 1913, by HELEN

NOW

State right buyers advance to the point of civilization, and realize the most wonderful production is now ready, the biggest box-office money getter since the inception of motion pictures.

* * *

A picture of surpassing beauty and interest, gorgeously tinted, dealing in masterful style with the universally interesting story of Cain and his crime, and the final regeneration of the man through the philosophy of a wonderful and charming woman.

CHARLES L. FULLER

Sole Selling

Helen Gardner

Phone 758 Main

ARDNER

N

OF CAIN

the Primal in Three Parts

CHARLES L. GASKILL

GARDNER. All rights reserved.

READY

The everlasting remembrance of CLEOPATRA cannot be forgotten. Miss Gardner saved the situation once, and is now prepared to do so again.

* * *

The greatest line of paper ever made, in five colors, one, three, six, twelve and twenty-four sheets, streamers, press matter, cuts, photographic displays, etc.

DISTRIBUTING CO., Inc.
Agents for the Picture Players
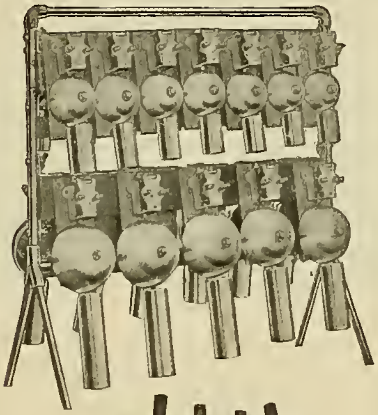
472 Fulton St., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

THROUGH THE COLUMNS OF

WE EXTEND TO THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION AND INTER

A ROYAL

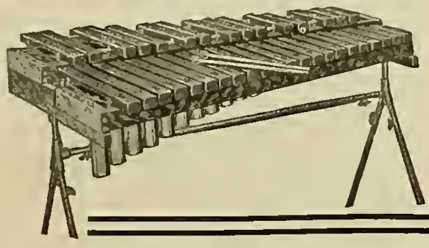


Deagan Class "A"
MUSICAL ELECTRICAL BELLS

play single stroke or vibrating from a keyboard like a piano; greatly improved over the old style bells. Particularly suitable for motion picture theatres. Price, $48 per set and up. Old style bells, $42 per set and up.

Deagan
SWISS ELECTRIC BELLS

played from keyboard. These bells are extra loud and suitable for big music halls and outdoors. Price, $70 per set and up.



Deagan
PROFESSIONAL XYOLPHONES

a very effective instrument in the moving picture orchestra. Price, $50 and up.

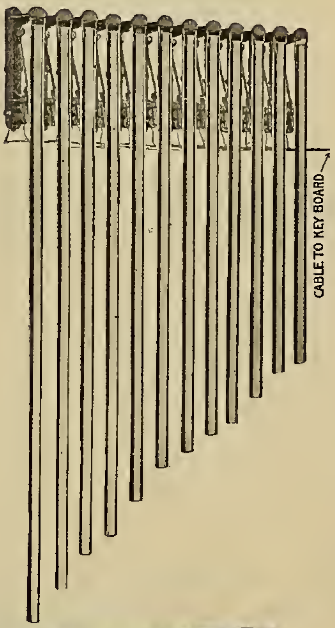
We are the largest manufacturers in the world of musical novelty instruments. We supply instruments to the biggest theatres and grand opera orchestras in America, Europe and Australia. Artists of greatest distinction perform on Deagan novelty instruments exclusively in their vaudeville and music hall specialties. It used to take unusual musical talent and years of training to be able to perform on these instruments. Then came the motion pictures, and we began to realize the possibilities for our instruments in the motion picture theatre. But in order to make our instruments popular in this particular field of amusement, they had to be simplified so anybody could play them. This was quite a problem, and

J. C. Deagan

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
FROM EVERY PART OF THE WORLD, ATTENDING NATIONAL EXPOSITION IN NEW YORK CITY

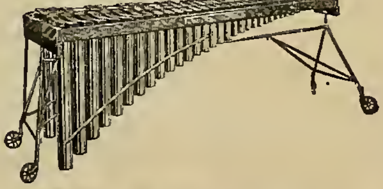
WELCOME

we devoted many years of experimenting and spent a great deal of money in order to accomplish these results. Our work has been most successful, and we are now in position to offer to the moving picture trade several hundred different beautiful solo instruments, particularly suited for motion picture theatres. These instruments are now provided with an electric striking attachment, connected by cable with an ordinary piano keyboard. Any piano player or drummer can play the most beautiful solos on these marvelous instruments. They are easy to operate and easy to install. They are moderate in cost, and no moving picture theatre is nowadays complete without a set of the Deagan musical novelty instruments.



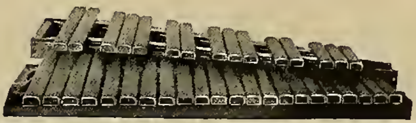
Deagan
ELECTRICAL CATHEDRAL CHIMES

played from keyboard are universally conceded to be the best imitation of church chimes ever produced. A beautiful and effective instrument for your orchestra or lobby. Price, $48 per set and up.



Deagan
MARIMBAS

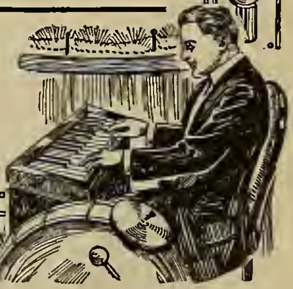
played from keyboard; a resonating xylophone instrument of unusual musical possibilities; sweet and full in tone. Price, $100 and up.



Deagan
STANDARD XYLOPHONES

are not played from keyboard, but most drummers know how to play them. Price, $12.50 and up.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE "F"



1770 BERTEAU AVENUE
CHICAGO, U. S. A.

AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION

1018 LONG ACRE BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY

OUR FIRST RELEASE

"FROM OUT THE DEPTHS"

DOMESTIC DRAMA IN TWO PARTS

PEERLESS

BOOSTING MATERIAL:— 1's, 3's, 6's, Photos, Heralds, Slides, Cuts, &c.

WATCH FOR OUR NEXT RELEASE

WIRE GET IN FIRST ORDER QUICK
TODAY, NOT TOMORROW

AKC HAS THE GOODS
WORKS QUICKLY
HAS REAL METHOD

AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION

1018 LONG ACRE BDG., B'WAY AT 42ND ST.
NEW YORK CITY

TELEPHONE, 4276 BRYANT

Coming! Two Three Reel Features a Month

Japan and China

Still Open Territory for All

SOLAX FEATURES

Beasts of the Jungle
Dick Whittington and His Cat
Kelly from the Emerald Isle
and Others

EVERY OTHER PART OF THE WORLD

SOLD

THREE REELS OF THRILL AND SENSATION COMING

WATCH ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Pit and the Pendulum

Adapted from the Great Edgar Allen Poe's Graphic, Lurid, and Blood-Curdling Description of the Inquisition. Very Elaborately Produced with an All Star Stock Company Headed by Darwin Karr. Situations Permeate with Genuine Thrills

Advertising Matter Includes Three Kinds of One Sheets, Two Kinds of Three Sheets, One Six Sheet, Lobby Displays, Heralds and Slides

Exclusive Supply Company Program of Features

Solax Company
FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY

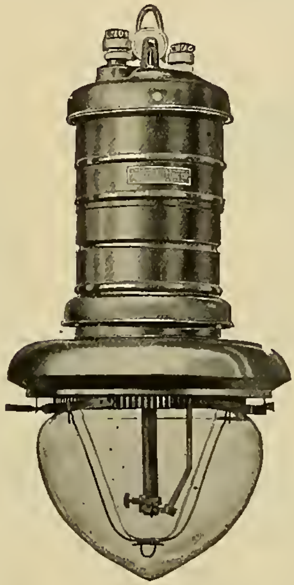
Coming! Two Three Reel Features a Month

Coming! Two Three Reel Features a Month

Coming! Two Three Reel Features a Month

The Trade Mark of the Largest Electrical Manufacturer in The World.

The Attraction of Good Light



Good brilliant illumination has an immense "pulling" power. To have two or three flaming arcs outside your theatre attracts the crowd.

Good light also shows up the signs and gives your place a cheery, inviting appearance.

A well lighted exterior is one of your most telling advertisements.

The Long Life Flame Arc Lamp Type W is one of the most powerful lighting units known. It is especially adapted to illuminating the exteriors of theatres. This efficient lamp is economical to install and maintain—one set of carbons burns for 100-120 hours without attention: and only one of these carbons needs renewing at each trim.

The lamp is thoroughly reliable and substantially constructed.

Write to our local office nearest you for further information.

General Electric Company

LARGEST ELECTRICAL MANUFACTURER IN THE WORLD

General Office: Schenectady, N. Y.

ADDRESS NEAREST OFFICE

Atlanta, Ga.
Baltimore Md.
Birmingham, Ala.
Boise, Idaho.
Boston, Mass.
Buffalo, N. Y.
Butte, Mont.
Charleston, W. Va.
Charlotte, N. C.
Chattanooga, Tenn.
Chicago, Ill.
Cincinnati, Ohio
Cleveland, Ohio
Columbus, Ohio
Davenport, Iowa
Dayton, Ohio
Denver, Colo.
Detroit, Mich.
(Office of Agent)
Elmira, N. Y.
Erie, Pa.
Indianapolis, Ind.
Jacksonville, Fla.
Joplin, Mo.
Kansas City, Mo.
Keokuk, Iowa
Knoxville, Tenn.
Los Angeles, Cal.
Louisville, Ky.
Mattoon, Ill.
Memphis, Tenn.
Milwaukee, Wis.
Minneapolis, Minn.
Nashville, Tenn.
New Haven, Conn.
New Orleans, La.
New York, N. Y.
Omaha, Neb.
Philadelphia, Pa.
Pittsburg, Pa.
Portland, Ore.
Providence, R. I.
Richmond, Va.
Rochester, N. Y.
Salt Lake City, Utah
San Francisco, Cal.
St. Louis, Mo.
Schenectady, N. Y.
Seattle, Wash.
Spokane, Wash.
Springfield, Mass.
Syracuse, N. Y.
Toledo, Ohio
Washington, D. C.
Youngstown, Ohio

For Texas and Oklahoma business refer to Southwest General Electric Co., (formerly Hobson Electric Co.)—Dallas, El Paso, Houston and Oklahoma City.

For Canadian business refer to Canadian General Electric Company, Lt'd, Toronto, Ont.

4217

This Trade Mark The Guarantee of Excellence on Goods Electrical.

RELIANCE

THE MOST REMARKABLE FEAT OF CHARACTER ACTING
EVER ATTEMPTED IN THE HISTORY OF THE STAGE.

RELEASED
SATURDAY
JULY 12TH

IRVING CUMMINGS
IN

"ASHES"

SPECIAL
ONE THREE & EIGHT SHEET
POSTERS

AN UNUSUAL DRAMA OF ROMANCE, INFATUATION, JEALOUSY.
INTRIGUE AND SACRIFICE BY MARION BROOKS
STAGED BY OSCAR C. APFEL
WITH

IN 2
REELS

IN 2
REELS

EDGENA DE LESPINE

BOBBIE ROBBINS

NORMA PHILLIPS

IRENE HOWLEY

AND ROSEMARY THEBY

THREE ARTISTIC DRAMAS A WEEK

MONDAY, JULY 7th

"A Rural Romance"

Almost Bordering on Tragedy, This Pretty Love-Drama is Delightfully New in Conception and Forceful in Treatment.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th

"The Wager"

"Any Child of the Slums Raised With Your Child Will Turn Out as Well!" is the Keynote of this Absorbingly Interesting Drama Beautifully Presented.

MANAGER'S NOTE:—High-Class Broadway Production. ONE and THREE Sheet Posters with Every Release. Photos by the Kraus Mfg. Co., 14 East 17th St., N. Y. Slides by Scott & Van Altena, 59 Pearl St., N. Y.

Beautiful Player Posters of Edgena De Lespine and Irving Cummings at Your Exchange.

RELIANCE

RELIANCE

MUTUAL SERVICE

Have your mail addressed in care of

General Film

He invites you to make your headquarters with him at the Exposition in the Grand Central Palace. You will find him on the main floor in spaces and also in Number Four Theatre on the mezzanine floor where representative films of the single and multiple reels produced by his manufacturers will be exhibited.

106—107—108

In this theatre, too, will be shown banners, posters, lantern slides and the other aids that General Film gives you to attract patrons to your house.

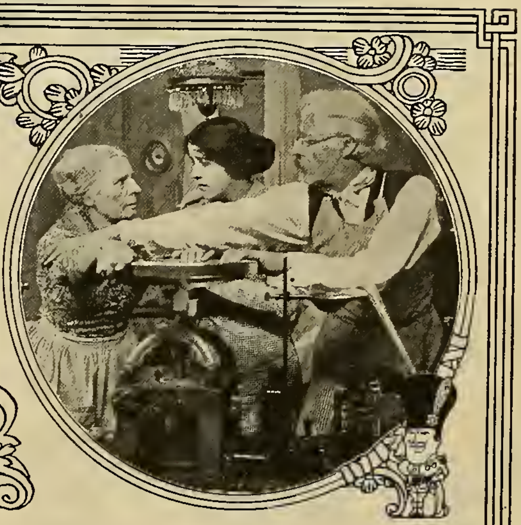
A Unique Feature

will be the attendance of the players whom you have seen so often in the pictures. The most prominent ones will be there to shake your hand at the booth. Incidentally, the design of that booth itself will make you sit up. Here's the program showing when the manufacturers will occupy the booth:

Monday - Biograph Day
Tuesday - Kalem Day
Wednesday - Vitagraph Day
Thursday - Lubin and Pathe Day
Friday - Edison Day
Saturday - Chicago Day—Essanay, Kleine and Selig

If you don't know him, now is the time to meet General Film. If you're an old friend, he wants to renew the cordial acquaintance.

General Film Company
200 Fifth Avenue New York



Released Saturday, July 12th

"A Wild Ride"

A brave girl escapes from a South African ostrich farm, besieged by Zulus, and on the back of an ostrich dashes over the desert to a military post to get help. Fire, battle and plunder mark this exciting picture staged at the Selig Wild Animal Farm. It's in two reels.

Released Monday, July 14th

"The Diamond Mystery"

The Contest Story of the Motion Picture Story Magazine.

Plot and counter-plot revolve about the invention of a machine for making diamonds—a mad inventor, a band of counterfeiters and members of the International Diamond Syndicate are the chief figures in this remarkable picture. Staged by the Vitagraph Co. in two reels.

GENERAL FILM RELEASES

Four multiple features of absorbing interest, staged with the reel quality that spells success.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

200 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

Distributing offices in the principal cities

Now in preparation are these multiple features:

July 19th "The Ne'er to Return Road". Selig—2 reels
July 21st "Tapped Wires"........Essanay—2 reels
July 23rd "Home, Sweet Home"......Lubin—2 reels
July 25th "Honor Thy Father". Cines-Kleine—2 reels

Released Wednesday, July 16th

"The Fight at Grizzly Gulch"

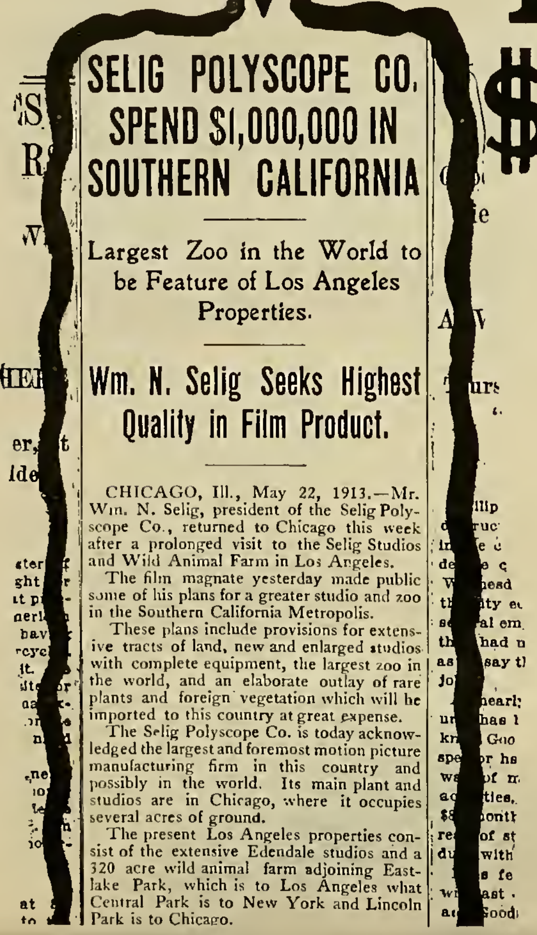
Indians and United States Troops in a desperate encounter brought on by a white trader who interfered with a Medicine Man's cure. The daughter of the tribe guides the trader's wife through danger and the waste places to safety. It's a Western of the first rank by Kalem in two reels.

Released Friday, July 18th

"The Secret Formula"

Brimful of action is this fast-flowing story built up around a secret process to revolutionize the cement industry. An exciting fox-hunt and a leap from a horse to a flying express train are just two incidents in the struggle for the formula. This is a Patheplay in two reels.

WHY SELIG IS SPENDING $1,000,000.00



SELIG POLYSCOPE CO. SPEND $1,000,000 IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Largest Zoo in the World to be Feature of Los Angeles Properties.

Wm. N. Selig Seeks Highest Quality in Film Product.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 22, 1913.—Mr. Wm. N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Co., returned to Chicago this week after a prolonged visit to the Selig Studios and Wild Animal Farm in Los Angeles.

The film magnate yesterday made public some of his plans for a greater studio and zoo in the Southern California Metropolis.

These plans include provisions for extensive tracts of land, new and enlarged studios with complete equipment, the largest zoo in the world, and an elaborate outlay of rare plants and foreign vegetation which will be imported to this country at great expense.

The Selig Polyscope Co. is today acknowledged the largest and foremost motion picture manufacturing firm in this country and possibly in the world. Its main plant and studios are in Chicago, where it occupies several acres of ground.

The present Los Angeles properties consist of the extensive Edendale studios and a 320 acre wild animal farm adjoining Eastlake Park, which is to Los Angeles what Central Park is to New York and Lincoln Park is to Chicago.

To the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America

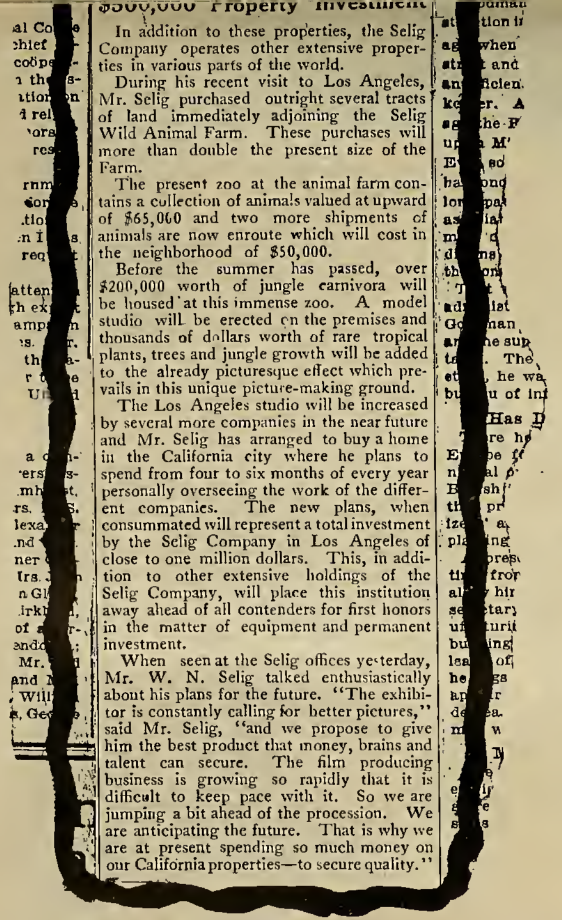
¶ The House of Selig, recognized as the champion of of all progressive exhibitors, takes this occasion to extend to you its earnest congratulations and sincere best wishes.

¶ The fame of the name Selig has reached the utmost corners of the earth.

¶ Selig success is at once admired and envied by rival picture makers the world over.

¶ The uniform standard of excellence which mark Selig Nature Reproduction is universally recognized.

¶ The aim and ambition of Selig is to please the discriminating exhibitors.



$500,000 Property Investment

In addition to these properties, the Selig Company operates other extensive properties in various parts of the world.

During his recent visit to Los Angeles, Mr. Selig purchased outright several tracts of land immediately adjoining the Selig Wild Animal Farm. These purchases will more than double the present size of the Farm.

The present zoo at the animal farm contains a collection of animals valued at upward of $65,000 and two more shipments of animals are now enroute which will cost in the neighborhood of $50,000.

Before the summer has passed, over $200,000 worth of jungle carnivora will be housed at this immense zoo. A model studio will be erected on the premises and thousands of dollars worth of rare tropical plants, trees and jungle growth will be added to the already picturesque effect which prevails in this unique picture-making ground.

The Los Angeles studio will be increased by several more companies in the near future and Mr. Selig has arranged to buy a home in the California city where he plans to spend from four to six months of every year personally overseeing the work of the different companies. The new plans, when consummated will represent a total investment by the Selig Company in Los Angeles of close to one million dollars. This, in addition to other extensive holdings of the Selig Company, will place this institution away ahead of all contenders for first honors in the matter of equipment and permanent investment.

When seen at the Selig offices yesterday, Mr. W. N. Selig talked enthusiastically about his plans for the future. "The exhibitor is constantly calling for better pictures," said Mr. Selig, "and we propose to give him the best product that money, brains and talent can secure. The film producing business is growing so rapidly that it is difficult to keep pace with it. So we are jumping a bit ahead of the procession. We are anticipating the future. That is why we are at present spending so much money on our California properties—to secure quality."

¶ Selig success is due largely to perfection of production facilities.

¶ No manufacturer in the world at the present time, has more extensive properties or better equipped organization than that owned by Selig—the maker extraordinary.

¶ Notwithstanding this fact, The Selig Polyscope Co. will spend, during the next two years, close to $1,000,000 in further equipment, properties and studios.

¶ This gigantic investment is being made for your benefit, Mr. Exhibitor.

¶ In the future the name of Selig will represent, as it has in the past, the very highest quality obtainable in Film product.

¶ So, Mr. Exhibitor, if you are constantly striving to improve the artistic side of your program—if you desire to give your program a distinctiveness—an individuality that will attract attention, cause comment, and increase business,

FOLLOW THE SELIG FLAG.

SELIG

POLYSCOPE COMPANY

CHICAGO

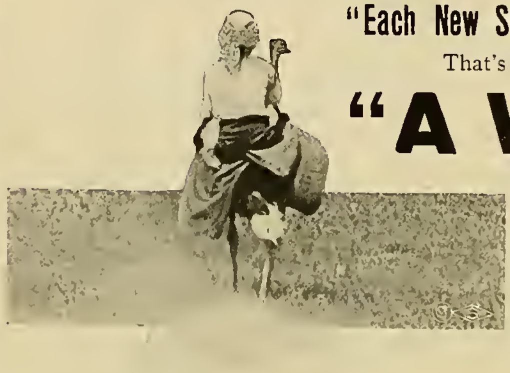
TRADE S MARK

THE HOUSE OF SELIG

SELIG LEADS OTHERS FOLLOW

SELIG CREATES OTHERS IMITATE

ONE OF SELIG'S SUMMARIES



"Each New Selig Feature Outclasses Its Predecessors"

That's what the critics say—And it's the truth

"A WILD RIDE"

Released as a Two Reel Special on July 12th

IS ANOTHER STARTLING NOVELTY

A thrilling drama of frontier life on an ostrich farm in South Africa. See Bessie Eyton accomplish the all-but-impossible feat of riding for miles on the back of a swiftly running ostrich. Excitement every second.

Watch the trade paper reviews

Book it today Remember It's a Selig

Book These Hot Weather Business Getters

July 12th—"A WILD RIDE." The summer solstice has a Selig two-reel release worthy the name in "The Wild Ride." Can you imagine anything more speedy, spirited or interesting, for a real good run than a lovely lady racing over the South African veldt on the back of an ostrich—to arouse the military and thwart the hideous designs of murderous Zulus? "The Wild Ride" is a South African heroic—interesting, picturesque and potential.

July 14th—"THE ONLY CHANCE." A railway drama of speed and thrill, in which a lineman overtakes the Limited in his electric car and averts a collision.

July 15th—"THE TREE AND THE CHAFF." A playlet of lovely symbolism—in which the example of a pure woman regenerates a young man who drifts with the wind.

July 16th—"SWEENY'S DREAM." Another rip-roaring comedy of the Sweeny series in which the hod-carrier dreams he has been glided to the highest office in the gift of the nation. On the same reel is "Fancy Fowls," that has more class.

July 17th—"PUT TO THE TEST." A pathetic drama of an ambitious young singer who loses her voice, but finds it restored in the joy of motherhood—is an interesting theme charmingly handled.

July 18th—"GRANNY'S OLD ARM-CHAIR." A simple, telling play with big humanities to touch the heart and win the approval of all who see it. On the same reel with a Selig Educational from our island possessions.

On the Way: Mrs. Otis Skinner's "The Ne'er to Return Road"

SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

BRANCH OFFICES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
EXECUTIVE OFFICES: 20 E. RANDOLPH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL., U.S.A.

THE WORLDS FOREMOST PRODUCER

LUBIN · FILMS

FIVE RELEASES EACH WEEK

"THE PROFITS OF THE BUSINESS"

1000 Feet

RELEASED TUESDAY, JULY 8th

John Regan, head of a department store, has become rich by depressing wages. Some years ago he had turned his daughter from home because she marries against his wishes. The girl and her husband died and Alice's child being left in poverty gets employment in Regan's store, but he, Regan, does not know it. Her wages is $5.00, but falling sick it is cut to $2.50. This means starvation, but Avis Lusk, a roue, comes to her aid. Regan finds the girl and when Lusk declares he loves her, Regan gives his consent to the union.

"WHEN LOVE LOSES OUT" 400 feet Thursday, July 10th

The humor of the sanitarium.

"BUILDING A TRUST" 600 feet Thursday, July 10th

An Irish lady and a Chink build a laundry trust.

"ON HER WEDDING DAY" 1000 feet Friday, July 11th

A very intense and high-class melodrama.

"HER ONLY BOY" 1000 feet Saturday, July 12th

A pathetic tale of mother and son.

"THE APACHE KIND" 1000 feet Monday, July 14th

A bandit story replete with adventure.

LUBIN TWO-REEL PICTURES ARE FEATURES

"HOME, SWEET HOME" SPECIAL TWO-REEL Wednesday, July 23rd

John Barbour and his wife, Nell, had become well to do and conceived the idea of taking Ma and Pa Barbour to live with them. So they sold out the old home and took the dear old couple to the city. Everything was done to make them comfortable, but the new atmosphere did not fit, and presently John found out that Ma and Pa were buying the old sticks back. "John," said Nell, "we tried to make them happy and are just killing them." John bought the old traps back again, opened the cottage and hustled Ma and Pa back to the home they loved.

LUBIN 5 COLOR POSTERS—One, Three and Six Sheets
From Your Exchange or A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, O.

LUBIN

LUBIN MANUFACTURING CO. PHILADELPHIA U.S.A

LUBIN

EVERYTHING THAT HAPPENS EVERYWHERE IS COVERED BY

PATHÉ'S
WEEKLY

TWICE A WEEK

BOOK IT!

EVERY MONDAY!
EVERY THURSDAY!
EVERY WEEK!

EDISON FILMS

offer a variety and interest that every exhibitor should take into account when making up his program. It makes no difference what kind of films your audience favors, you will find its best type among Edison films

Scene from

A Proposal from the Duke

Being the first of the "Who Will Marry Mary?" series, produced in collaboration with The Ladies' World.

Released Saturday, July 26th. Length, 1025 feet.

Scene from

On the Broad Stairway

Being the second of "Kate Kirby's Cases," a series of detective stories.

Released Saturday, July 19th. Length, 1025 feet.

Do not miss the new "Mary" stories. They will be better than the first series—and they were the sensation of the year. "Who Will Marry Mary?" is the interesting title of the new series. "A Proposal from the Duke," the first story, is released July 26th. Kate Kirby is the heroine of a series of interesting and original detective stories, the second of which is "On the Broad Stairway," released July 19th.

If you ran the "What Happened to Mary" series we need not tell you that the public is crazy for these serial stories. If you did not, then profit by the experience of others, and run these two series.

OTHER EDISON FILMS

* The Diamond Crown

(Being one of "Kate Kirby's Cases," a series of detective stories.)

Drama (1,000). Released Saturday, July 12th.

The clever young daughter of a police officer is sent out on a robbery case. Careful investigation of the house shows a secret panel in the walls of the mistress' room. Preparations for a house party confirm the girl's suspicion and she makes a startling revelation.

* A Pair of Foils

Comedy (1,000). Released Monday, July 14th.

An actor, dozing over a romantic part, dreams that he is in the palace of a remarkable queen who, after rejecting three suitors, determines to marry him. After slaying the three rejected ones he is warmly embraced by the queen, whose head proves to be his fencing mask.

* In the Garden

Drama (1,000). Released Tuesday, July 15th.

An old man, observing the jealousy of a young lover, tells him how he, too, was jealous and went away to the war leaving his beloved to worry herself into an illness which proved fatal and ruined his whole life. The warning has its effect.

* The Dream Fairy

Drama (1,025). Released Wednesday, July 16th.

The lame newsboy did not believe in fairies until a little cripple, the daughter of a wealthy man, converted him. For was it not through a fairy that he was cured and his wretched family made comfortable? If you do not believe in fairies, see this photoplay.

* To Abbeville Court-House

Taken in Georgia.

Drama (900). Released Friday. July 18th.

On the death of his mistress, an old darkey starts off to deliver her young son to a relative who is an army officer. Food is scarce and the faithful old fellow is caught stealing potatoes for the boy, but is released when the boy's identity is discovered.

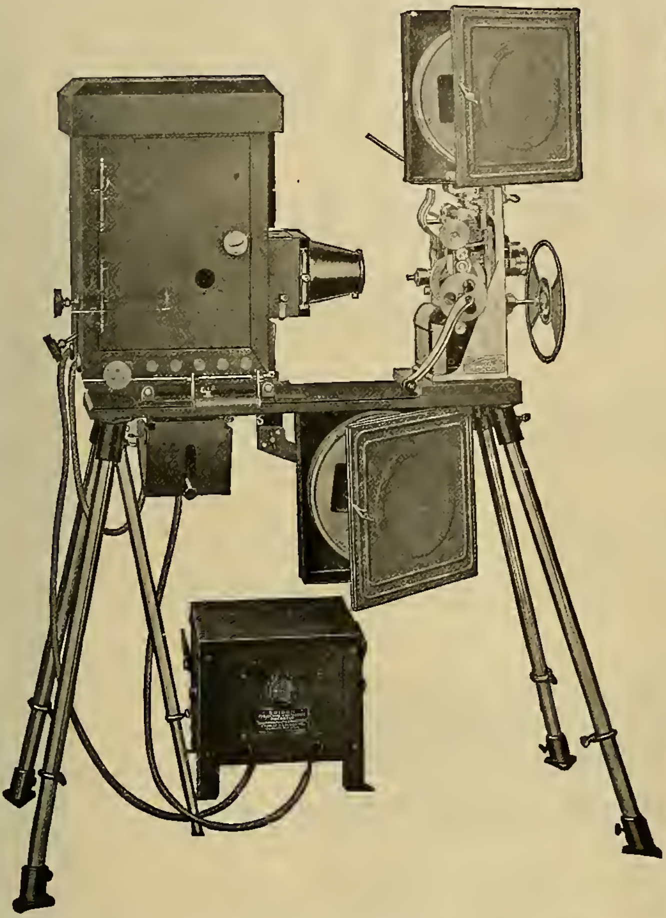
* A Tardy Recognition

Drama (1,000). Released Monday, July 21st.

Having disinherited one daughter for marrying against his will, Aldrich finds himself neglected by the other as he grows old. Seeking a rest in the park, he meets the child of his disinherited daughter unknowingly, and she becomes the means of a happy reconciliation.

*One sheet posters.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc., 239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.



EDISON KINETOSCOPE

1913 MODEL

The machine that will outwear any other projector on the market

THE Underwriters' Type "B" has become famous for its wonderful lasting qualities. The use of hardened and tempered tool steel in its construction enabled it to stand up under hard usage.

THE 1913 MODEL

with its Extra Large Mitre Gears on the cam, automatic and revolving shutter shafts, Extra Heavy Take-up Sprocket, Steel Runners on the film gate and aperture plate, and its All Metal Baseboards, is still stronger and more durable.

Every experienced exhibitor and operator will appreciate the economy and convenience offered by:

The Extra Large Lamp House which permits the use of 12" upper and 6" lower carbons, and the Heavy Arc Lamp with holders large enough for carbon ¾" in diameter. Floor Sockets and five heavy legs make the Edison steady as a rock.

The installation of Edison 1913 Model Kinetoscopes for the Brooklyn production of George Kleine's famous "Quo Vadis" and for the New York production of "The Battle of Gettysburg" is significant of the place which it holds in the judgment of men who know.

We want you to get acquainted with this 1913 Model because it is the only machine that you can depend upon for steady projection and high efficiency every day. It is a profit builder.

Price with 25-40 Ampere Grid Type Rheostat — $250

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc. 239 Lakeside Avenue
ORANGE, N. J.

WHY—

VITAGRAPH

SPECIAL FEATURES

ALWAYS DRAW AN AUDIENCE

VITAGRAPH SPECIALS
BRING THE MULTITUDES

REMEMBER

"THE VENGEANCE OF DURAND"
"THE STILL VOICE"
"A REGIMENT OF TWO"
"THE SNARE OF FATE"
"THE TIGER LILY"
"THE LITTLE MINISTER"
"HEARTS OF THE FIRST EMPIRE"
"THE MILLS OF THE GODS"
"A TALE OF TWO CITIES"
"VANITY FAIR," and many others

THE ANSWER IS IN THE BOX OFFICE

CAUSE

VITAGRAPH

"THE GLOVE" Drama Monday, July 7th

Through jealousy a man mistrusts his wife. The innocent cause of his misgivings is the evidence of her innocence. He shamefacedly begs her pardon.

"COUNT BARBER" Comedy Tuesday, July 8th

He poses as a Count with the help of his sister. He fails to deceive Belinda and Ophelia, who treat him accordingly. His sister does the rest.

"SOLITAIRES"
"A MILLINERY BOMB" Comedies Wednesday, July 9th

1. Gossip runs amuck and brings about a surprise. 2. It isn't at all dangerous and it all ends in an explosion of laughter.

"THE CARPENTER" Drama Thursday, July 10th

His gentle influence and cheerful presence allays discord and establishes peace where enmity prevailed. This picture is full of thought matter.

"THE SPIRIT OF THE ORIENT" Drama Friday, July 11th

What is born in the marrow comes out in the flesh. An Oriental girl turns from her husband to a man of her own race. They both meet an untimely end.

"THE MOULDING" Drama Saturday, July 12th

An unsophisticated girl marries a man of society. He is ashamed of her simplicity. She teaches him a lesson and he begs her forgiveness.

SIX-A-WEEK

"O'HARA AS A GUARDIAN ANGEL"
DRAMA—MONDAY, JULY 14th.

"MY LADY OF IDLENESS"
COMEDY-DRAMA—TUESDAY, JULY 15th.

"THE MASTER PAINTER"
ARTISTIC DRAMA—WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th.

"HUBBY'S TOOTHACHE"
"SANDY AND SHORTY WORK TOGETHER"
COMEDIES—THURSDAY, JULY 17th.

"THE YELLOW STREAK"
WESTERN DRAMA—FRIDAY, JULY 18th.

"THE TAMING OF BETTY"
COMEDY—SATURDAY, JULY 19th.

SPECIAL FEATURE, "THE DIAMOND MYSTERY," THE CONTEST STORY OF THE MOTION PICTURE STORY MAGAZINE, IN TWO PARTS; RELEASED MONDAY, JULY 14th.

SPECIAL FEATURE, "A PRINCE OF EVIL," IN TWO PARTS; RELEASED SATURDAY, JULY 26th. SPECIAL MUSIC FOR THESE SPECIAL FEATURES

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS OF ALL VITAGRAPH SPECIAL FEATURE RELEASES.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA,
East 15th Street and Locust Avenue, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
NEW YORK, LONDON and PARIS

EFFECT

FULL HOUSES AND FULL POCKETS

A Bolt from the Sky

Peculiar circumstances lead to the accusation of an innocent man when the old scientist is found dead. The explanation is found in an extraordinary phenomenon.

Released Monday, July 21st Special 1 and 3-Sheet Posters

The Tenderfoot's Luck

In a riot of fun he turns the tables on his persecutor.

(On the same reel)

Historic Savannah, Georgia

An interesting visit to the famous southern city.

Released Wednesday, July 23d

Baffled, Not Beaten

A young attorney is obliged to prosecute a case in which his sweetheart's father is defendant. Unexpected complications lead to a series of thrilling adventures.

Released Friday, July 25th

The Moonshiner's Mistake

Produced in the Picturesque Mountains of Virginia

A sensational experience causes the moonshiner to abandon his illicit still.

Released Saturday, July 26th Special 1, 3 and 6 Sheet Posters

The Fight at Grizzly Gulch

Spectacular Drama of Frontier Life in Two Parts

Special Release Wednesday, July 16th Special 1, 3 and 6 Sheet Posters

TRADE KALEM MARK

Kalem Company

235-239 W. 23rd Street New York

CONVENTION NUMBER OF THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE

Review of the Year's Work of Organization — National Body Now Includes Thirty-Eight States and Is Growing Rapidly—Success Crowns Efforts of the Orginators of the Movement

WHEN the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America met in convention in Chicago a year ago, seventeen States were represented on the convention floor. Of those seventeen States but few were fully organized; the other State organizations were embryonic in character and their representatives were admitted as a matter of courtesy to encourage more thorough work in the future. But it was a good beginning, for the Chicago convention was really the first meeting of exhibitors that was national in its character, although there had been two previous conventions of the National League. There it was that the officers of the organization began to realize that their efforts had borne fruit. Interest in the work of the league and a realization that greater things might be accomplished through a general organization was manifest in many ways. There was a large attendance of visiting exhibitors and enthusiasm ran high, so that when the organizing forces of the league took the field exhibitors throughout the country were ready and prepared to meet them.

C.M. CHRISTENSON NAT'L SECY.
M.A. NEFF PRES.
J.J. RIEDER TREAS.

Officers of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

That the hopes born at Chicago were not in vain the events of the past year have amply proved. Many States, but imperfectly organized then, have since been canvassed and have live, energetic branches of the league today. Other States have swung into line until the roster now numbers thirty-eight and is increasing.

Following the formation of State organizations has come the organization of city and district locals without number, which proves that the germ of organization has thoroughly infected the great body of motion picture exhibitors of the United States and the hope of the little band of workers who conceived the big idea of a National League of Exhibitors is now fully realized.

It is an interesting story that President Neff, of the National League, and his associates tell of their early struggles and the obstacles they overcame before their plans secured recognition from any considerable number of exhibitors. That story was told by the Moving Picture World a year ago (Issue of August 17, 1912). We will not repeat it here, but it was the enthusiasm that carried them through those difficulties and discouragments that has enabled them to achieve the present result—one of the largest and most effective trade organizations that exists in America today.

That the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America has been of real practical value to its members is not to be questioned. That it will continue to increase in point of influence for the good of the trade is equally true. During the year past it has been possible for exhibitors, through their organization, to combat legislation that was prejudicial to their interests. In almost every State in the Union attempts have been made to impose unnecessary and irksome regulations upon the trade by act of legislature, but through the united effort of local, State and National organizations, those efforts have been, almost without an exception, defeated. A deterrent force has also been exerted by the existence of exhibitors' organizations upon the activities of civic reform organizations which have advocated extreme measures with regard to pictures and picture theaters. Altogether the league has given full justification for its existence and its future, under the guidance of capable and energetic officers, is assured.

At the present writing the officers of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America are:

President—M. A. Neff, of Cincinnati, Ohio.
Treasurer—J. J. Rieder, of Jackson, Mich.
Secretary—C. M. Christenson, of Cleveland, Ohio.
National Vice-Presidents:
  California—Charles Rothschild, San Francisco, Cal.
  Arkansas—S. A. Arnold, Mena, Ark.
  Alabama—A. A. Wall, Birmingham.
  Delaware—James N. Ginns, Wilmington.
  Illinois—W. J. Sweeney, Chicago.
  Indiana—F. J. Rembush, Shelbyville.
  Iowa—Thomas A. Brown, Iowa City.
  Kansas—E. Wayne Martin, Hutchinson.
  Kentucky—Orene Parker, Covington.
  Louisiana—John Depinet, New Orleans.
  Massachusetts—George F. Washburn, Boston.
  Michigan—J. M. Neal, Saginaw.
  Maine—Hiram Abrams, Portland.
  Minnesota—Thomas Furniss, Duluth.
  Missouri—G. H. Wiley, Kansas City.
  Mississippi—Fred Abbley, Gulfport.
  New York—
  Nebraska—J. E. Schlank, Omaba.
  New Jersey—L. F. Blumenthal, Jersey City.
  Ohio—W. A. Pittis, Conneaut.
  Oklahoma—Carl Gregg, Tulsa.
  South Dakota—J. E. Hipple, Pierre.
  West Virginia—A. L. Cottril, Point Pleasant.
  Wisconsin—Charles Phillips, Milwaukee.
  Texas—T. P. Finnegan, Dallas.
  Washington—John Rantz, Bremerton.
  Pennsylvania—Walter Steumpfig, Philadelphia.
  Virginia—H. C. Stradford, Richmond.
  Maryland—J. Howard Bennett, Baltimore.
  District of Columbia—F. Brylawski, Washington.
  Canada—Paul LeMarquand, Winnipeg.
  Colorado—O. T. Curtis, Pueblo.
  Connecticut—P. S. McMahon, New Britain.
  Florida—E. F. Tarbell, Tampa.
  Rhode Island—S. Y. Merchant, Providence.
  Nevada—Glenn D. Hurst, Reno.
  Tennessee—W. H. Wasserman, Nashville.
  South Carolina—Julius Myers, Charleston.

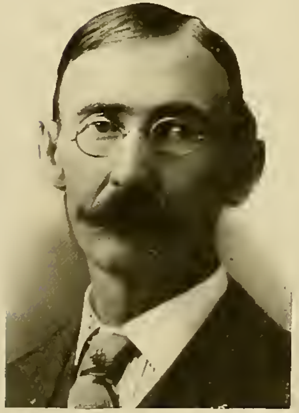
At the time the National Convention met in Chicago there were effective organizations in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Kentucky, West Virginia, Minnesota, Missouri and Iowa. A form of organization existed in Illinois, Pennsylvania and several other States. Since that time the work of forming State organizations has progressed rapidly and good working forces have been established in Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, California, Kansas, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Nebraska. An organization was formed in Massachusetts, but interest has waned there to a point that requires immediate and heroic measures if the present organization is to be continued. In Maine the exhibitors have suddenly "come to life" and will be represented at the National Convention. Florida has a tentative organization and several Western States are showing some interest in the movement. Canada is also getting into line.

The sum total of the year's work must be exceedingly gratifying to President Neff and his co-workers. Secretary Christenson estimates that the total membership of the league has reached the 10,000 mark.

During the past year President Neff has been exceedingly active. He has attended exhibitors' meetings and State conventions in twenty-four States, visiting some States several times and traveling many thousands of miles. He has lost none of his enthusiasm and it is to his energy and persistence that the great progress made during the year is chiefly due.

Washington State Exhibitors.

A Live Wire Organization that Has Successfully Combatted Injurious Legislation.



A. B. Campbell,

President of the Washington State Association.

President Campbell is the proprietor of the Princess Theater at Sedro Wooley, Washington, and is one of the enterprising exhibitors of the Northwest.

REALIZING that concerted action alone could save the motion picture exhibitors from the evil effects of a flood of laws calculated to injure their business a few exhibitors of the State of Washington got together in Seattle last fall and decided to call a meeting for the purpose of forming a State Association. At that meeting were Messrs. A. B. Campbell, John Rantz, E. M. Rall, and W. I. Quinby.

A call was sent out to all exhibitors in the state to meet in Seattle on Nov. 26, 1912, and forty responded. A constitution was adopted at this meeting. The title of the organization accepted was The Washington State Association of Moving Picture Exhibitors and it was decided to hold a convention of exhibitors at Seattle on Feb. 19, 1913.

After due notice to exhibitors of the state this meeting was held and the following officers were chosen:

President, A. B. Campbell, Sedro-Wooley; National Vice-President, John Rantz, Bremerton; First Vice-President, J. Q. Clemmer; Second Vice-President, Fred Mercy; Secretary, W. L. Shanks, Seattle; Trustee, H. O. Allen.

Steps were taken to affiliate with the National League.

In the matter of legislation W. L. Shanks was appointed to act as representative of the association at the state legislature in Olympia. By hard work with the legislators he was able to secure the defeat of a number of proposed laws. Mr. Shanks' efforts proved the necessity of an organization and it is expected that the Washington Association will soon include every wide awake exhibitor in that state.

W. L. Shanks,

Secretary of the Washington League.

Mr. Shanks, secretary of the Washington State Exhibitors' League, has owned and operated the Crown Theater at Seattle, Wash., for the past two years.

John Rantz,

National Vice-President for Washington.

Mr. Rantz is one of the live wires of the business and owns a fine theater at Bremerton, Wash.

Tampa, Fla., Exhibitors.

A meeting of exhibitors of Tampa, Fla., was held on Nov. 25, 1912, and an organization was formed in that city with Edward Tarbel as president; Scott Leslie, secretary; and William Sipe, treasurer.

ILLINOIS EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.

Chicago Local in Good Condition, But No Gains Have Been Made in the State at Large During the Past Year.

By James S. McQuade.

IN reviewing the history of Illinois State Branch No. 2, since the national convention in Chicago, August, 1912, there is much that will encourage all sincere supporters of the league and also a great deal that will tend to discourage them. In the main, the members have stood loyally by the principles of the organization; some of them have not. It is most discouraging that so little interest has been taken throughout the State in the formation of local branches. With the solitary exception of Sparta Local No. 1, which was organized in December, 1912, no steps have been taken to build up Illinois State Branch No. 2 of the national organization. And the members of the Sparta local, although receiving due notification of the second State convention held in Royal League Hall, Masonic Temple, Chicago, June 12, for the election of delegates and alternates to the National Convention, New York, failed to send a single representative. Paxton, Springfield, La Salle, Kankakee, Streator, Danville, Peoria, Bloomington, Freeport, Champaign, Jacksonville, Woodstock, Pekin, Quincy, Dalton Station, Herrin, Blue Island, Aurora, Belvidere, Lockport, Waukegan, Mt. Carmel and Princeton, cities and towns outside of Cook County, in each of which there are members of the Illinois State Branch, also failed to send representatives. Joliet was the only outside city in the State represented at the convention.

There must be a reason for this apparent lukewarmness. Is it because Illinois State Branch No. 2 has not appointed one or two State organizers; or is it because the members of the State branch in the cities and towns mentioned have lacked enthusiasm, and have themseleves lost interest in the objects of the organization? It requires only five members in any town or city to obtain a charter from the State branch. Is it possible that exhibitors in the State of Illinois, outside of Cook County, fail to perceive the benefits that must come to their calling by a State-wide organization, founded on mutual good will, good fellowship and fraternal co-operation? These are questions that can be answered best by the exhibitors of Illinois—members and non-members of the league alike.

It will be seen from the foregoing that the mainstay of Illinois State Branch No. 2 is in the Chicago members of the league. During the past year the organization has done much to correct abuses among exhibitors and to secure the modification, or overthrow, of ordinances and legislative acts that threatened to hamper the future of the exhibiting business. Among these was a contemplated ordinance which aimed at the exclusion of children and minors, under sixteen years of age, from moving picture theaters, unless accompanied by their parents or guardians. This was an evident attempt to injure exhibitors, as censorship in Chicago is rigorous and is conducted from the viewpoint of the minor. Another was the killing of a State censorship bill, introduced at Springfield during the spring session, this year. This bill was introduced secretly, and would have subjected moving pictures to all the evils of political graft.

The members of the league in Chicago have been engaged, for nearly nine months, in an attempt to check the crying evil of surplus reels on a five cent program. At the present time the business, in this respect, is in a deplorable condition. As many as four, five, and even six reels of pictures are being offered at five cents. The competition has become so ferocious that the maxim "Kill or die" might well be substituted for "Live and let live." "Three reels for five cents" is the slogan of all the intelligent members of the league in Chicago, who foresee nothing but disaster unless a halt is made.

Sidney Smith, recording secretary of Illinois State Branch

OFFICERS OF ILLINOIS STATE BRANCH NO. 2

Front Row, Left to Right:—Sidney Smith, Recording Secretary; Miss Sarah Colson, Financial Secretary; Julius A. Alcock, President; Robert R. Levy, Vice-President; Wm. J. Sweeney, Treasurer and National Vice-President; Andrew B. Boughan, Counsel. Back Row, Left to Right:—C. C. Whelan, Chairman Executive Committee, I. Natkin, M. A. Choynski, J. D. Rose, H. A. [illegible]

No. 2, states that over $1,000 has been spent within the last nine months, in the effort to remedy the evil. He attributes the difficulty of adjusting matters chiefly to the flooding of the market with feature films, by people outside the licensed and independent exchanges. These people will furnish an inconsiderate, or avaricious exhibitor with as many reels as he calls for, thus compelling his competitor, who may be using either licensed or independent service, to increase the number of reels on his program, so as to hold his patrons.

Blame in the matter is to be placed also on licensed and independent exchanges. Competition is again the cause. An extra commercial reel is furnished the asker for a paltry dollar!

The following condensed report, made Illinois Branch No. 2, on December 2, 1912, by I. Natkin, secretary of the Special Three-Reel Committee, appointed to correct the evil, will show some of the difficulties encountered:

"When the president appointed the special three-reel committee, you undoubtedly were aware of the great importance and necessity for this committee, and have realized the many obstacles it will have to surmount in order to uproot this destructive evil of our business. It is now ready to report on some of the progress which it has made. The committee has a verbal agreement with the independent exchanges, and, in many instances, through the aid of our Mr. Anderson, it has cured many single cases in certain localities. However, with the General Film Company it has a harder road to travel, not on account of an unwillingness to support this proposition; but, being a large corporate body, it fears certain entanglements, which may result disastrously to the company. We, therefore, after having had a meeting with the local managers, have decided to send a committee of three to interview Mr. Berst, the head of the General Film Company in New York. The three members of that committee—Messrs. Sweeney, Frank and Choynski—have reported favorably on their return from New York. However, the local managers waited for confirmation from Mr. Berst, which was rather slow in coming. When it did come, it was in such a shape that it left us somewhat at sea how to proceed further, as it would not improve the general condition, in the opinion held by the local managers prior to the committee's leaving for New York.

"A member of this committee received on Thursday last a telegram from Mr. Berst that he will be here personally on December 9th, and we may then be able to take this matter up further.

"From the above report you will note that, while this committee has worked hard to attain the desired end, it has not as yet been able to accomplish the results necessary to cure this evil."

Nothing was accomplished by Mr. Berst's visit, and conditions have been gradually growing worse. At the second State convention, already referred to, the delegates to the New York convention were instructed to use every legitimate effort to bring the three-reel proposition before the national convention in assembly, in as forcible a manner as possible, in the hope of uprooting the evil.

At the State Convention of June 12th, the following delegates were elected to attend the National Convention in New York City: Wm. J. Sweeney, Robert R. Levy, Julius A. Alcock, C. C. Whelan, A. Balaban, M. A. Choynski, John Miller, H. A. Rubens (Joliet), F. W. Hartman, R. O. Proctor, S. Katz, I. Gelder, George Henry, A. Zahler and I. Natkin. Aaron J. Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, was elected to represent the State at large.

The following alternates were also elected: Max Hyman, Sam Levine, Frank Thielen (Aurora), Miss Ida Mertsky, A. Powell, Mrs. E. Fitch, R. Navigata, R. C. McMullen (Joliet), Louis Frank, Chas. Abrams, F. O. Nielsen, W. Cadoret (Kankakee), Jas. J. McNarney, C. H. Foster and H. A. Hill.

The delegates were instructed to give their hearty and unanimous support to Wm. J. Sweeney as candidate for president of the National League.

In the historical review of Illinois State Branch No. 2 in the Convention Number of the Moving Picture World, 1912, it was shown that the Illinois membership was 360. The membership at the time of writing is 340. It might appear from this showing that the Illinois State Branch has gone

DELEGATES AND ALTERNATES OF ILLINOIS STATE BRANCH NO. 2
to the National Convention, New York, July, 1913

Front Row, Left to Right:—I Gelder (D), Mrs. E. Fitch (A), John Miller (D), George Henry (D), Julius A. Alcock (D), Robert R. Levy (D), Wm. J. Sweeney (D), Miss Ida Mertsky (A), A Balaban (D). Center Row, Left to Right:—C. H. Foster (A), R. Navigata (A), A. Zahler (A), Samuel Katz (D), I. Natkin (D), M. A. Choynski (D), F. W. Hartman (D), C. C. Whelan (D), H. A. Rubes (D). R. O. Proctor (D). Back Row, Left to Right:—Geo. Moore (A), A. Powell (A), Jas. J. McNarney (A), Louis Frank (A), Chas. Abrams (A), H. A. Hill (A), Andrew B. Boughan (Counsel), R. C. McMullen (A). Note:—W. Cadoret (A), Kankakee; S. Levine (A), Chicago, and Frank Thielen A), Aurora, were not present when the photograph was taken.

W. J. Sweeney,
of Chicago.
National Vice-President Illinois League.

but this is not so. Quite a number of members have gone out of business since last year, and, besides, more businesslike methods have been followed in retaining members who failed to pay their dues promptly. Secretary Smith believes that it is better to have 100 true and stanch supporters of the league, than 150, where 50 of them are negligent of their duties and obligations.

Following is the list of officers of Illinois State Branch No. 2, elected in February, 1913, for one year: President, Julius A. Alcock; vice-president, C. A. Anderson, treasurer, Wm. J. Sweeney; financial secretary; Miss Sarah Colson; recording secretary, Sidney Smith; sergeant-at-arms, R. C. Valentine; treasurer, Wm. J. Sweeney, and Andrew B. Boughan, counsel. Robert R. Levy was elected vice-president at a regular meeting held Monday, June 2nd, to fill the unexpired term of C. A. Anderson.

Following are members of the executive committee: C. C. Whelan, chairman; J. D. Rose, I. Natkin, F. O. Nielsen, M. A. Choynski, H. A. Hubens and Jno. A. Duffin.

On May 1, 1913, Illinois State Branch No. 2 rented the Royal League Hall (Room 412), Masonic Temple Building, for the regular meetings of its members. This hall accommodates 400 persons. The regular meetings are held on the first and third Monday of each month, as formerly. A suite of rooms, in 1422 Masonic Temple Building, was also rented as headquarters for members. This suite consists of an ante-room, a room for the executive committee and a private room for the secretary and other officials. The suite is handsomely furnished and is quite a credit to the Illinois State Branch. Visitors from all parts of the State are welcomed at the headquarters at any time. Secretary Smith makes it a point to spend part of his time in the office every day, notwithstanding that he is taxed to the utmost by attending to his duties as manager of the Kedzie Annex, one of the finest moving picture theaters in the city.

During the year ending May 1st, two deaths were recorded in the membership, namely: H. E. Smith, owner of the Palmer Theater, 11,115 Michigan Avenue, and Thomas Petrulos, owner of the Stadium Theater, 1803 Blue Island Avenue. Mrs. Smith retains the membership in the organization of her deceased husband, and William Petrulos retains the membership of his deceased brother.

On May 1st, the secretary notified the city electrician that Illinois State Branch No. 2 had declared at a special meeting, that the members were in favor of any film box or rewind for booths, when approved by the City Electrical Department and the Board of Fire Underwriters. The members at a recent meeting took up the new ordinance on ventilation, which is likely to work hardship on many deserving exhibitors. The members of the league will exert their utmost endeavors for the just and equitable treatment of such members as cannot rigidly comply with the terms of the ordinance.

Robert R. Levy,
of Chicago.
Vice-President Illinois League.

Sparta Local No. 1, of Illinois State Branch No. 2, M. P. E. L. of America, had the following officers when last heard from: President, Thomas Leonard, Johnston City; first vice-president, Al. Loy, Murphysboro; second vice-president, F. D. Whittington, Benton; secretary, W. P. Phelps, Sparta; treasurer, E. W. Atkins, Carbondale.

It is highly due Secretary Smith and Illinois State Branch No. 2, that the following letter, of June 4th, this year, from C. M. Christenson, National secretary, should close this article:

"I have your letter of the 26th ult., and I wish to congratulate you and the other members of the Illinois League on their thrift and energy, which has resulted in such fine headquarters for your branch, and the businesslike method on which you propose to conduct the business. I wish, Mr. Smith, some of your energy could be infused into other State organizations, and that they would take the interest you take. If even a few other secretaries would keep me as well posted as you do, the National secretaryship would be a pleasure, but I regret to say that I usually have to drum on most of the other secretaries to get even necessary information."

Kansas Exhibitors' State League

Organization of Motion Picture Exhibitors Formed at Kansas City—Rapid Growth in the Year

A PRELIMINARY meeting of motion picture exhibitors of the state of Kansas was held at Kansas City, Mo., on November 7, 1912, and the following temporary officers were elected: President, E. Wayne Martin; secretary, George McCrum, Kansas City, Kas. It was decided to engage George H. Wiley, president of the Missouri League, as organizer and to hold a convention in Kansas City, Kas., on December 9 and 10, 1912.

On the date named a representative gathering of exhibitors assembled at the Electric Theater, Kansas City, Kas. President Neff, of the National League and George H. Wiley, of the Missouri League, were present to assist in the work. After all constitutional requirements had been complied with those present signed the charter and elected these officers:

President, N. H. Spitzer, Wichita; National vice-president, E. Wayne Martin, Hutchinson; Vice-president, Carl Mensing, Leavenworth; Treasurer, Jack Brainard; Secretary, George McCrum, Kansas City; Sergeant-at-arms, Karl Bornschein, Ellsworth.

After completing the organization the exhibitors adjourned for luncheon at the Grand Hotel. The next meeting was held in the Maze Theater where the general welfare of the League was discussed. Later there was a joint meeting of exhibitors of Kansas and Missouri. 150 exhibitors were present at this meeting. The convention closed with an elaborate banquet at the Sexton Hotel, Kansas City, Mo., at which Mr. Wiley acted as toastmaster. It was a splendid success.

Wichita was selected as the place for the next convention to be held on January 13 and 14, 1913.

There was a large attendance of exhibitors at the Wichita meeting of the Kansas League on January 13. Among those present were President George H. Wiley of the Missouri League, Carl Gregg, National Vice-president of the Oklahoma League, and the representatives of several picture manufacturers and exchanges.

Matters pertaining to the conduct of the League were discussed at some length and many encouraging reports were made. A legislative committee was appointed consisting of C. E. Glamann, of Wellington; Carl Mensing, of Leavenworth; J. C. Elliott of Topeka; E. J. Grubel, Kansas City; and F. L. Wright of Wichita. This committee was instructed to take up the question of Sunday opening with the legislature and the proposed bill creating a new building code for picture theaters. The censorship question also came up for discussion.

President Spitzer resigned his office and C. E. Glamann, of Wellington, was elected to complete the unexpired term.

President Wiley, of Missouri, was appointed organizer for the state and guaranteed every assistance.

The total membership at this meeting was reported as 70 members. As there are estimated to be 450 picture theaters in the state it was believed that the next convention would be able to show a large increase.

On June 2 and 3, 1913, a third convention of the Kansas Exhibitors' League was held at Topeka for the purpose of electing delegates to the New York National convention and to dispose of other matters of importance to the organization. The reports of the president and secretary showed that there had been a satisfactory increase in the membership of the State League.

PROGRESS MADE IN NEW YORK STATE

Several Local Leagues Organized in the Principal Cities — Exhibitors Throughout the State Are Enthusiastic.

Samuel H. Trigger, of New York City.
President of the New York League.

SINCE the Chicago convention of a year ago there has been a lot of effective work done throughout the state of New York toward extending the influence of the Exhibitors' League. An extensive campaign of organization was planned by President Samuel H. Trigger, which included the principal cities outside of Greater New York. Several trips were made by President Trigger covering Albany, Troy, Schenectady, Cohoes, Watervliet, Saratoga, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Binghamton and Elmira and results were speedily forthcoming. All that was needed, it seemed, was for some one to start the ball a-rolling and the exhibitors, in the several localities visited, did the rest..

The first local was formed at Albany where representatives of the adjacent towns of Troy, Schenectady, Cohoes, Watervliet and Saratoga united in organizing Local No. 2. Several meetings were held resulting in the election of the following officers: President, George F. Wright: First Vice-President, E. O. Weinberg: Second Vice-President, L. C. Smith: Treasurer, J. C. Rosenthal: Secretary, J. E. Weidman, 515 Broadway, Albany, N. Y. Energetic work throughout the district has resulted in enrolling nearly every exhibitor within its bounds and Local No. 2, is in first class condition.

Utica, N. Y., secured the charter for Local No. 3, and a strong organization has been built up with the following officers: President, William Donque; Vice-President, Joseph Karl; Treasurer, H. J. Lux; Secretary, J. E. Reardon, Utica, N. Y.

At Syracuse B. E. Cornell, first vice-president of the state league, assisted by President Trigger, succeeded in forming Local No. 4, which includes about all the progressive exhibitors of Syracuse and vicinity. The officers are: President, J. H. Morgan; Vice-President, M. Reise; Treasurer, William J. Lowery; Secretary, P. W. Hanlon, Syracuse.

Rochester holds the charter for Local No. 5, with President, A. N. Wolff; Vice-President, W. C. Hubbard; Treasurer, F. C. Gerling; Secretary, W. G. McGreal, Rochester, N. Y.

Local No. 6 is at Buffalo, where the membership includes all of the leading picture exhibitors. The officers are: President, R. Gettel; Vice-President, Charles Bowe; Treasurer, J. A. Pferd; Secretary, P. Hofmeister, 150 East Ferry Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

B. E. Cornell, of Syracuse.
First Vice-President of the New York League.

Local No. 7 is at Elmira and its president is M. D. Gibson.

Binghamton holds the charter for Local No. 8. Its president is H. L. Fox and R. M. Davidson is secretary.

The latest local to be organized is No. 9 at Oswego. The officers are President, J. E. Coadingly; Vice-President, Charles A. Donnelly; Treasurer, C. P. Gilmore; Secretary, P. G. Campbell.

Affairs in the city of Greater New York are not as encouraging as they ought to be. Notwithstanding the efforts of the officers, exhibitors in the greater city have not yet come to realize the importance of the organization. Though there are nearly 800 theaters in the several boroughs not more than 250 exhibitors are in good standing in the New York City Local. President Trigger has spent most of his time and large sums of his own funds in behalf of the organization, but the effort has not yet had the desired result.

John C. Davis, of Saugerties.
Treasurer of the New York League.

One great obstacle to the growth of the New York local is the unsettled status of the picture theater in Greater New York. With a limit of seating capacity placed by ordinance at 299, there is little incentive for the owners of theaters to improve their houses. Many owners of "store shows," which form the great majority of picture houses in New York, are not certain how long they will be permitted to continue business. During the past year Mayor Gaynor has endeavored to obtain the passage of a more liberal ordinance and one that will more effectually safeguard the public, but certain interests have thus far succeeded in blocking the mayor's efforts in this direction. Should the measure proposed by the mayor become a law a boom in the exhibition of pictures may be expected. It is believed that a more substantial class of exhibitors will result and that the organization will profit accordingly.

Notwithstanding the discouraging state of affairs that exist in New York the local organization has shown that it possesses great strength in being able to promote the Motion Picture Exposition which will be held in the Grand Central Palace co-incident with the National Convention. For the past eight months committees have been at work on that project and the result is apparent. It was no small undertaking, for little encouragement was given the exposition by the manufacturing interests when it was first proposed and it was only within the past two months, after the success of the venture seemed assured, that the reservations of space became liberal. But all factions in the trade finally recognized that America's first kinematograph exposition would be of great benefit to them, individually and collectively, and have come to the front in a most gratifying manner.

If nothing else had been accomplished during the year than to promote successfully this great project, the New York local would have laurels enough to its credit.

Undoubtedly, when the convention is over, a new impetus will be given the work of organization and that a greater number of exhibitors of the Empire State will be enrolled among the members of the New York State League.

The officers of the New York Local No. 1 are: President, Samuel H. Trigger; Vice-President, F. E. Samuels; Treasurer, Grant W. Anson; Secretary, Adolph Baurenfreund; Sergeant-at-arms, Robert C. Whitten.

The officers of the New York State League for the past year are: President, Samuel H. Trigger, New York; First Vice-President, B. E. Cornell, Syracuse; Second Vice-President, R. M. Davidson, Binghamton; Treasurer, John C. Davis, Saugerties; Secretary, H. W. Rosenthal, New York.

The annual convention held at the Hotel Imperial, New York City, on Saturday, July 5, will probably make some changes in the officers for the coming year.

R. M. Davidson, of Binghamton.
Second Vice-President of the New York League.

Benefit for Flood Sufferers.

One of the achievements of the year recorded to the credit of the New York City local is the holding of a very successful benefit to raise relief funds for those who suffered loss on account of the floods in Ohio and Indiana. An entertainment was held in the 69th Regiment Armory, New York City, on the evening of April 12, 1913, and a sum amounting to $2,600 was realized. This was turned over to Mayor Gaynor, who transmitted it to Governor Cox, of Ohio, for distribution.

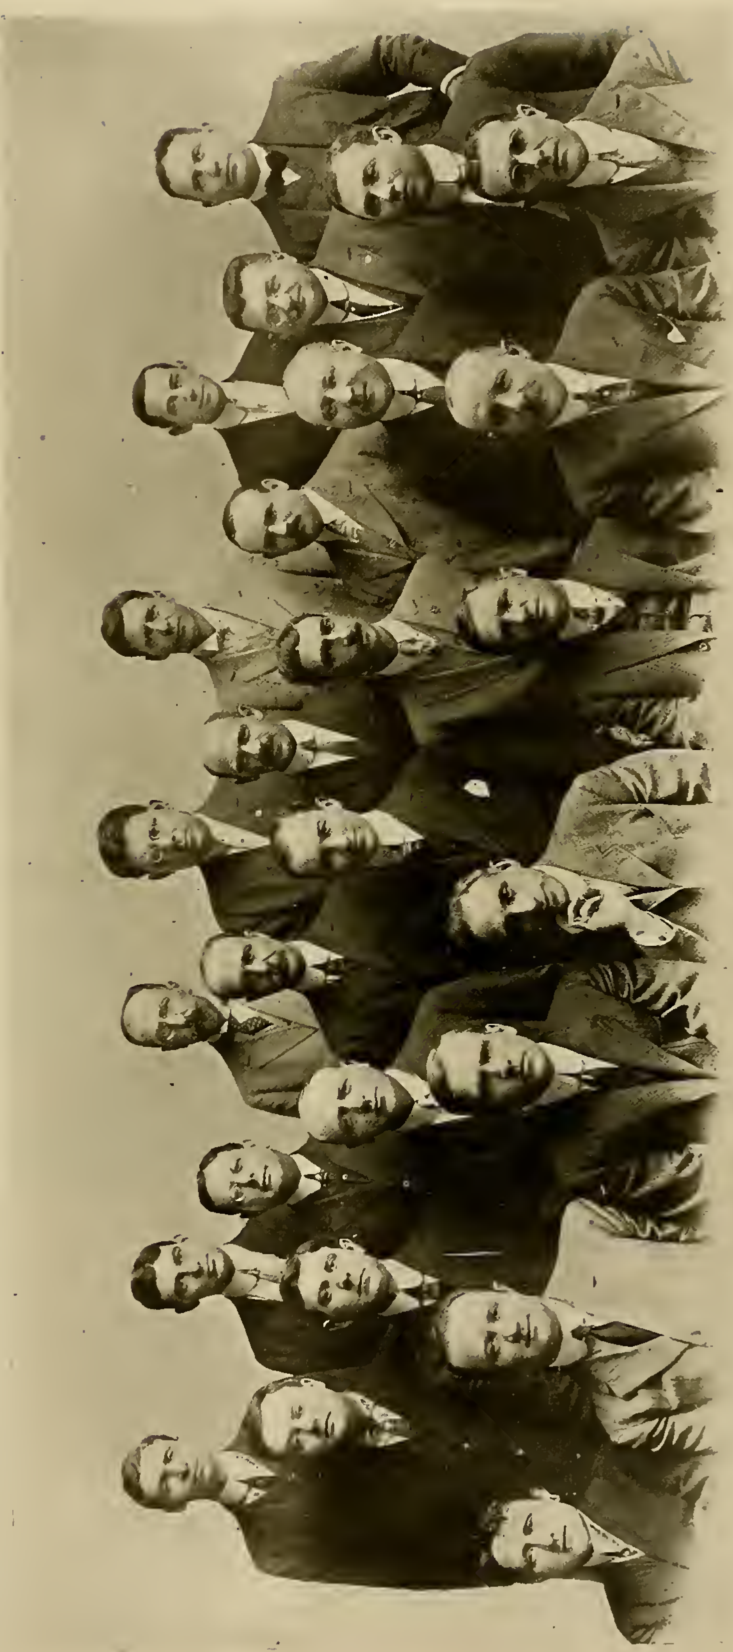
New York Exhibitors' Ball.

One of the most successful social events held under the auspices of the New York Exhibitors' League was the exhibitors' ball at Palm Garden, New York City, on Nov. 14, 1912. More than 4,000 persons crowded into the ball room and hundreds were unable to gain admittance. The event was a huge financial, as well as social, success. Many of the leading photoplayers were present and President Neff, of the National League, attended and addressed the assemblage.

The Exposition.

The largest undertaking ever attempted by a body of exhibitors is that of promoting and financing the Kinematograph Exposition—the first of the kind in America. About eight months ago a meeting of the leading exhibitors in New York City was held for the purpose of canvassing the situation and appointing committees. Offices were secured in the German Savings Bank Building, Fourth Avenue and 14th Street, New York City, and work on the project was commenced. A lease of the Grand Central Palace for the event was made, and plans formulated for the disposition of space were made.

The committees got to work at once and a careful canvass of the motion picture trade was made, with the result that may be seen when the exposition opens. It was no small matter that the exhibitors undertook. Few of the men in charge had any previous experience in exposition work, but what they lacked in knowledge of the business they made up in persistence. The entire country was circularized, and a representative was sent to attend a similar exposition in London. For the first few months the task was the hardest kind of up-hill work, but as the time for the exposition approached the trade suddenly awakened to the fact that there would be an exposition on scheduled time and there was a rush for space.



CONVENTION AND ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE OF THIRD NATIONAL CONVENTION AND FIRST INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION OF THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA, AT THE NEW GRAND CENTRAL PALACE, NEW YORK CITY, JULY 7 TO 12, 1913.

Top Row, Standing: Right to Left:—Louis Rosenthal, M. Blumenthal, A. Landau, M. Needles, Robert Whilten, A. Coleman, J. King. Second Row:—G. W. Anderson, A. A. Corn, William Allen, J. Washoner, P. Wiseman, Adolph Baurenfreund. Third Row:—H. E. Fleischman, M. Goldfarb, William Brandt, Eugene Elmore, B. Hirsch, Rudolph Sanders. Sitting:—R. L. McNabb, J. E. Koerpel, Frank Tichenor, S. H. Trigger, William Hilkemeier, Frank E. Samuels, H. A. Rosenthal.

OHIO THE PIONEER OF THE LEAGUE

Great Showing Made by the Buckeye State Branch—Sets Splendid Example for Exhibitors of Other States

W. A. Pittis,

National Vice-President of the Ohio League.

Mr. Pittis operates two picture theaters in Conneaut, Ohio, his home town, and has several houses in Pennsylvania. He is an enthusiastic League man and has been connected with the work since it was first started.

O. B. Weaver,

First Vice-President Ohio League.

Mr. Weaver is a resident of Dayton, Ohio, and one of the leading exhibitors of the State. He has been in the exhibition business for the past four years and is the owner of one of the high-class houses in Dayton.

MOTION Picture theater men all over the country must take their hats off to exhibitors of the state of Ohio. For genuine interest in the league there is nothing that surpasses the enthusiasm shown by the members of the trade in the Buckeye state. Ohio may justly claim to be the pioneer state when the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is under discussion, for it was there that the first effective organization was formed and it was Ohio exhibitors who gave impetus to the national organization. The story is familiar to almost every exhibitor. But Ohio exhibitors have never been satisfied to sit back and enjoy the glory that is justly theirs; having set the pace they have continued to be the shining example for all other state organizations in the point of thoroughness of their work until they now stand in the forefront, several lengths ahead of all competitors.

It is not that there are more picture theaters in Ohio than in any other state, or that the business is better there than elsewhere, but it seems to be a fact that the Ohio exhibitors have a stronger realization of the value of organization and what can be accomplished by concerted action. As they have put intelligent business methods into the conduct of their respective businesses, so have they carried those same methods into the conduct of the state league. The result is the largest organization and the most thoroughly organized state. Here are the figures:

Picture theaters in Ohio	1,022
Theaters controlled by league members	872
Number of league members	500
Increase during past year	200
Managers not in league, less than	100

There is a record to be proud of.

But it was not accomplished without hard work. It has taken considerable persuasion to induce 500 exhibitors to fall into line and work for the common interest of all; yet the thing has been accomplished in Ohio, by which sign it can be accomplished in every other state.

Ohio is well organized locally. There are but two large cities in the state—Cleveland and Cincinnati—but where there have not been enough exhibitors in a town to form a local, district locals, including the exhibitors from a number of small towns, have been formed. This has been found to be a very satisfactory method of organizing. The local organizations are:

Cleveland No. 1, with headquarters in the Columbia Building, which meets every Wednesday; Cincinnati No. 2; Toledo Local No. 3; Columbus Local No. 4; Dayton Local No. 5; Troy-Piqua Local No. 6; Sandusky Local No. 7.

Every one of these organizations is in good financial condition, and includes the great majority of exhibitors in its jurisdiction.

The present officers of the state league were elected at a convention held in Columbus, Ohio, January 21 and 22, and are: President, M. A. Neff, Cincinnati; first vice-president, O. B. Weaver, Dayton; second vice-president, Walter Prentice, Toledo; secretary, John H. Bromhall, Hamilton; treasurer, W. R. Wilson, Columbus; National vice-president, W. A. Pittis, Conneaut.

Max Stearns,

Delegate from Ohio League.

Max Stearns is one of the oldest of Ohio picture men in point of time served in the business. He has operated the Exhibit Theater in Columbus, Ohio, ever since we can remember and is now building a new house to cost $100,000. He has been one of the most active workers in the cause of the Exhibitors' League.

A. C. Dingelstedt,

President of the Cincinnati Local.

Mr. Dingelstedt, president of the Cincinnati Local Exhibitors' has been in the exhibition business for several years and has a fine theater, the Plaza, at Norwood, Ohio, together with a delightful airdome in the same town. He has always been active in league affairs, having served as secretary of the Cincinnati local for some time.

Otto Ludeking,

Delegate from the Ohio League.

Mr. Ludeking is one of the delegates from the Ohio Exhibitors' League and a prominent member of the Cincinnati local. He is president of the Waldorf Amusement Company, which operates three fine picture theaters in Cincinnati. Mr. Ludeking is a business man of large interests and has been connected with the picture business for the past three years.

Aside from building up the biggest and strongest organization in the national league, Ohio exhibitors have a faculty of starting things. The censorship of pictures by legislative enactment was conceived in that state and, notwithstanding the fact that the idea of censoring pictures by law is distasteful to the majority of American citizens, the Ohio exhibitors have succeeded in putting such a law upon the statute books of their state, which proves that they have influence in politics. There is no doubt that a political pull is a good thing to have if it is properly exercised, but sometimes it may be used to the detriment of the possessor of the "pull."

During the year many exhibitors were seriously damaged by wind and floods. In Dayton, Columbus, Hamilton and a score of smaller towns the picture theaters were almost totally destroyed at great loss to their owners, but there has been a quick

W. R. Wilson,

Treasurer of the Ohio League.

Mr. Wilson, the treasurer of the Ohio League, owns the Schiller Theater, Columbus, Ohio, which he secured in 1911—the beginning of his connection with the business. It is a suburban house seating 500 persons and has never been used for anything else but pictures. Mr. Wilson has always been a believer in the League and has worked hard for its success. He has been a member of the Local No. 4 at Columbus since it was organized, serving as secretary for a year. He was elected treasurer of the State League last January and will be present at the New York Convention.

recovery from that disaster, and nearly every house affected has been restored.

Again, we say: We must take off our hats to Ohio exhibitors; they have a great organization.

The delegates to attend the national convention in New York are: J. M. Kaufman, Galipolis; H. E. Vestal, Ada; G. D. Sprague, Bellaire; George Schenker, Lorain; F. M. Kenney, Cleveland; S. E. Morris, Cleveland; Mrs. Louise Schmitz, Cleveland; Lem S. Miller, Otto Ludeking, Cincinnati; J. A. Maddox, Max Stearn, Columbus; Clem Kerr, Dayton; L. W. Bettis, Toledo, and F. R. Reichert, Port Clinton.

Alternates: John J. Huss, Fred Botts, W. C. Kitt, Cincinnati; W. J. Slimm, Ed. Kohl, Cleveland; W. Raynor, Dayton; J. C. Johnson, Troy; W. D. Clark, Marion; F. H. Stoup, Delphos; F. H. Tynes, Portsmouth; H. B. Locks, Springfield; W. D. Gandy, Lima; A. C. Cook, Steubenville; John Gallagher, Newark.

John H. Bromhall,

Secretary of the Ohio League.

Secretary Bromhall, of the Ohio Exhibitors' League, is one of the oldtimers in the organization. He is owner of the Jewel Theater at Hamilton, Ohio, which suffered considerable in the recent floods. Mr. Bromhall is a gentleman of the old school and his house is run on the best lines.

Cincinnati Local No. 2

One of the most energetic local organizations in the league is Cincinnati No. 2, of the Ohio league. Not a half-dozen exhibitors in the city are outside the organization, and the influence it wields in affairs concerning the exhibitor in that city is almost absolute.

The last annual meeting of Local No. 2 was held last February, at which time the following officers were elected: President, A. C. Dingelstedt; first vice-president, G. W. Hill; second vice-president, Charles Sternberger; secretary, Harry Heimerdinger; treasurer, Otto Ludeking.

Louisa Schmitz,

Delegate from the Ohio League.

Mrs. Schmitz is the first woman delegate to a motion picture convention. She will represent the Ohio Exhibitors' League in the meetings at the Grand Central Palace, New York. Mrs. Schmitz owns the Fulton Theater in Cleveland, Ohio.

Good for Business.

Ohio has always been a good state for pictures from a business point of view. Its picture theaters are attractive, the majority being built for the purpose, and some of the best examples of picture theater architecture are to be found in that state. In Cleveland there are a number of especially fine houses where nothing but motion pictures are shown. In Cincinnati many picture theaters have been built within the past two years. Some of them are of large capacity and beautifully planned and decorated. In the smaller towns many of the theaters formerly used for legitimate dramatic attractions have been turned into picture houses with profit to the owners.

Clem Kerr,

Mr. Kerr is a resident of Dayton, Ohio, where he first engaged in the picture theater business, but he showed pictures under a "black-top" as far back as 1896. He is at present engaged as Deputy Organizer for the National League, and makes a specialty of organizing State and Local branches of the National League and handling conventions.

Fortunate in Legislation.

There have been few efforts to impose burdensome laws upon the picture theater in Ohio. This is mainly due to the strong influence of the league in that state, and to the character of the men who own the theaters. The Ohio exhibitor recognizes the responsibility of his position in the community and seldom offends his clientele by running objectionable subjects. As a result, the Ohio picture man enjoys the greatest freedom from censorship. The houses are well built and cared for and every precaution to secure the safety and comfort of the patrons is taken. The result is few complaints coming from the public and almost no attempt to regulate the business has been made by either city or state legislative bodies. Just now there is some agitation for regulative measures in Cleveland, but adverse reports have been made against the proposals by the committee in the city council to which the matter was referred and it is believed that nothing will happen. Altogether Ohio exhibitors enjoy as great freedom of action as is granted to the trade in the most liberal community.

Julius M. Kaufman,

Delegate from the Ohio League.

Mr. Kaufman, one of the delegates of the Ohio League who will be at the National Convention in New York, owns the Galipolis Theater of Galipolis, Ohio. He has been in the theatrical business for the past 22 years, and one of the original Exhibitors' League organizers. Mr. Kaufman is also a member of the Billposters' Association, an Elk and a state officer of the Odd Fellows of Ohio. Finally, he says, he is a bachelor, but is "not without hope."

Outlook Good.

The future of the business in Ohio is very flattering. There are a number of projects for new theaters under consideration. Old houses will give way to new structures and the business will be gradually placed upon the highest plane throughout the state.

The Ohio League is in a most prosperous condition and its members are determined to have the best that the business affords. They are, for the most part, energetic business men with a good standing in their respective communities and men who will not jeopardize their businesses.

J. A. Maddox,

Delegate from the Ohio League.

Mr. Maddox has long been active in the work of the League and has held several offices in both state and local organizations. He operates the Colonial Theater, a high-class house in Columbus, Ohio.

CALIFORNIA EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE

Organization Now Includes All Principal Cities in the State—A Good Record for the Past Year—Trade Conditions Well in Hand

By W. A. Cory.

Charles Rothschild,

President of the California League.

President Rothschild of the California Exhibitors' League is one of the pioneers in the work of organization. He was elected president of the San Francisco Exhibitors' Association when that body was formed in 1911 and has been working hard for the exhibitors ever since. When the California Exhibitors' League was formed he was chosen to be its president, which office he has since held. He is also national vice-president of that organization. Mr. Rothschild operates a fine picture theater in San Francisco.

THE first organization of moving picture men in California was formed some time in 1906, and known as the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of San Francisco. The association met with indifferent success in securing members and never had more than a membership of about twenty-five at any time, until 1911, when there was some proposed adverse legislation in Sacramento, the State Capital. The association at that time was reorganized, with a membership of about forty exhibitors in San Francisco, and the following officers were elected: Charles Rothschild, president; A. R. Oberle, vice-president; W. A. Cory, recording secretary; N. K. Herzog, financial secretary, and Max L. Shirpser, treasurer.

We sent a committee to Sacramento and defeated a proposed sixteen-year-old law—no cowboy pictures, shooting pictures, etc. After the excitement was all over, things naturally died down, and the association went along meeting once a month, with a small membership and attendance.

In January, 1912, new by-laws were drafted, and the same officers were re-elected for the ensuing year. About that time the recording secretary received a letter from Mr. Neff, the national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, asking what the chances were of organizing a state league in California. At a called meeting, the letter was read and the proposition thoroughly discussed, and it was decided to appoint a committee of three to devise ways and means of sending out an organizer to cover the state of California, to secure a membership for a state league, and to hold a state convention in San Francisco the following September.

W. A. Cory,

Secretary of the California League.

Secretary Cory has been connected with the California Exhibitors' League since it was organized. In his capacity as secretary he has done much good work. As an organizer he has been successful in establishing several locals.

Committee appointed was W. A. Cory, B. F. Michaels, and Max L. Shirpser. The committee hit upon a scheme of going to a large musical house, Kohler & Chase, and giving them exclusive privilege of demonstrating musical instruments at this convention for a sum of money which would enable us to defray the expenses of an organizer to cover the state and secure membership. This was done, and, through the assistance of Mr. George Chase, of the firm of Kohler & Chase, and by hard work upon the part of a few members of the San Francisco Association, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of California was organized.

The first convention was held in the Kohler & Chase building in San Francisco, Sept. 17, 18, and 19, 1912, with an attendance of over five hundred moving picture men in the state of California, and the state league was duly organized and officers elected for the ensuing year, as follows: Charles Rothschild, president, and national vice-president; W. A. Cory, secretary, and W. H. Hiltz, of San Diego, treasurer. There were no vice-presidents elected at that time, it being our idea to make the president of each local organization formed in the state a state vice-president.

Immediately after the adjournment of the convention, the San Francisco local organization, having turned the books of their association over to the state league, elected the following officers, who are still in office: M. E. Cory, president; F. R. Macauley, vice-president; H. A. Cannar, secretary; Charles Maio, treasurer, and Henry Slater, sergeant-at-arms. The organization is to be known as San Francisco Local No. 1, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of California.

OFFICERS OF SAN FRANCISCO LOCAL NO. 1

Front Row, Sitting; Left to Right:—M. E. Cory, Pres.; F. R. McCauley, Vice-Pres.; Chas Maio, Treasurer; H. A. Canar, Secy.
Back Row, Standing; Left to Right:—L. R. Greenfield, Director; Chas. Rothschild, Director; Henry Slater, Sergt.-At-Arms; B. F. Michaels, Director.

C. W. Goddard,

President of the Sacramento Valley Local No. 3.

President Goddard of the Sacramento Valley Exhibitors' Local No. 3, has been in the picture business for some time. He owns the Liberty Theater in Sacramento, a house that is a model in every respect. When the Sacramento local was organized he was elected its first president.

On September 24th, the state president and secretary went to Oakland and organized Alameda County Local No. 2, taking in the towns of Alameda County, which include Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda and several smaller towns. The officers of Alameda County Local No. 2 are: President, H. L. Beach; vice-president, W. Culligan; secretary, Will F. Krahn, and treasurer, H. Muhr.

On October 30th, the state president and secretary went to Sacramento to organize the Sacramento Valley Local No. 3, of the M. P. E. L., of California. The officers elected were: President, C. W. Goddard; vice-president, I. H. Morris; secretary, J. Ray Williams; treasurer, J. W. DeStasico.

At the time of our convention, there was in existence an association called the Southern California Motion Picture Men's Association, with headquarters in Los Angeles. We sent them an invitation to attend our convention and to join us as a local organization. They sent a delegation of eight men, but as some of the officers of their association as well as the members were in the exchange business, we refused to admit them as a local until the exchange men had withdrawn. This the Los Angeles delegation refused to comply with. We, therefore, refused them admittance and they returned to Los Angeles. The state association was very sorry indeed to lose Los Angeles and the southern portion of the state at that time, but as the by-laws declare that this league is formed for motion picture exhibitors only, we could not make a special ruling to admit Los Angeles. However, we did not give up hopes of having Los Angeles coming into the state league, as a local, and on February, 1913, after communicating with the president of the Los Angeles Association, the state secretary, William Cory, went to Los Angeles and extended them an invitation to join the state league, as the members who were formerly in the exchange business had "reformed" and were at this time exhibitors only. The secretary was unable at that time to get Los Angeles to join the state league, so continued on to San Diego, and formed San Diego Local No. 4, with the following officers elected: W. H. Hiltz, president; W. Christensen, vice-president; H. Williams, secretary; W. H. Sorrille, treasurer.

After returning to San Francisco in about a week, the secretary was in receipt of another letter from Los Angeles about the proposed adverse legislation in Sacramento, and as one of the proponents was in Los Angeles, the secretary returned to that city and interviewed him, and, while there, through the efforts of Mr. A. P. Tugwell, who was the president of the Los Angeles Association at that time, was successful in forming Los Angeles Local No. 5, of the M. P. E. L. of California. The following officers were elected: President, A. P. Tugwell; vice-president, G. H. McLain; secretary, O. B. Traggard, and treasurer, E. J. Tally, so that there are now five local organizations in California.

The state officers now read: Charles Rothschild, president; M. E. Cory, first vice-president; H. L. Beach, second vice-president; C. W. Goddard, third vice-president; W. H. Hiltz, fourth vice-president; A. P. Tugwell, fifth vice-president; W. A. Cory, secretary, and H. L. Hiltz, treasurer.

In January of this year, at the convening of the state legislature, there were some very drastic bills introduced against the motion picture theater. One was a censorship bill, providing for a state board of censors, with headquarters in Sacramento. This bill provided that pictures should not be shown in gruesome detail, etc., and leaving it in the hands of three people to be appointed by the Governor, to say whether or not they were in gruesome detail.

Another bill was introduced similar to the one introduced two years ago, by the same man, providing that no child under sixteen years of age could enter or remain in a theater after 8 o'clock in the evening; no shooting, clubbing, stabbing, prize-fighting scenes, boxing exhibitions. In other words, we could not run any picture except an educational or a scenic, if these two bills passed the legislature. The officers of the state league immediately got busy and a committee composed of Charles Rothschild, A. P. Tugwell and W. A. Cory, went to Sacramento, and after seven trips from San Francisco to the capital, were successful in defeating both bills, and there is not a bill to become a law in this state that will in any way affect the moving picture business in this year. This could not possibly have happened had it not been for the state league.

About a year and one-half ago San Francisco decided that three reels of pictures should constitute a program for an admission price of five cents. After numerous meetings with the exchanges, this agreement was put into effect, and for a year and one-half there have not been more than three reels of pictures shown in the city and county of San Francisco for five cents.

We are also looking out for unfair competition for country exhibitors, and whatever has been the established number of reels and the established price of admission charged in any town in the state of California, any one opening up another house there cannot run a greater number of reels or for a smaller admission price.

The enclosed agreement is now in effect between the state league and the exchanges doing business in California. However, this does not have any bearing upon the towns where there are local organizations, as they can vote for anything they desire and the state league will back them up.

There are many other things that I would like to put into this write-up of the M. P. E. L. history in California, but as I know there will be many things to put into the convention number, I will close and let you and the moving picture men of the United States decide whether or not the M. P. E. L. of California has been a benefit to the moving picture business in this state, and whether or not the members should be thankful for having joined the state league.

The delegates to the convention will be Charles Rothschild, W. A. Cory and B. F. Michaels.

AGREEMENT.

Not more than four (4) reels of pictures to be run by any Exhibitor for an admission price of Five (5) Cents. Where there are two Exhibitors, one running three, and one running four, reels, they must mutually agree between themselves as to which they shall continue to run. The Exchanges will furnish either quantity. Where there are three or more Exhibitors in a town, an agreement reached by the majority of Exhibitors, as to admission price and number of reels to be run, shall govern the service to be furnished to each and every Exhibitor in said town, or the Exchanges and the League will have to regulate the conditions in each individual case.

Where the straight picture show price is Five (5) Cents, any house showing pictures and vaudeville must charge at least Ten (10) Cents for adults, and Five (5) Cents for children. Where the straight picture show price is Ten (10) Cents, any house showing pictures and vaudeville must charge at least Fifteen (15) Cents for adults, and Ten (10) Cents for children.

The Exchanges and the League will not tolerate the giving away of prizes or premiums of any kind.

This does not affect San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Sacramento or Oakland, as these five places have local organizations to govern their own affairs, but is intended for Exhibitors in places where there are no local organizations.

Sacramento Valley Exhibitors' Local No. 3.

On November 1, 1912, the Sacramento Valley Local No. 3 was organized in the city of Sacramento, Cal., largely through the efforts of President Rothschild and Secretary Cory, of the California State League. On the date named a temporary organization was effected and, on Nov. 14, a meeting was held at the Hotel Sacramento, at which a permanent organization was formed and these officers elected: President, C. W. Goddard, Liberty Theater, Sacramento; vice-president, I. F. Morris; secretary, J. Ray Williams, Ray's Photoplays, Sacramento; treasurer, J. W. De Stasico, Actograph, Sacramento, and sergeant-at-arms, William Chaplin.

Since that meeting the local has accomplished a great amount of good for the exhibitors of the Sacramento Valley and all are enthusiastic. Headquarters are in Sacramento. The membership includes these exhibitors. J. A. Irving, and O. Christenson, Suburn; H. P. Walls, Corning; J. J. Woods, and N. O. Turner, Chico; William Gardner, Marysville; William Howard, Oraville; J. B. Travelle, Placerville; William Hemming, Red Bluff; J. F. Hayes, and William Hunt, Woodland; W. A. Chaplin, J. W. De Stasico, C. W. Goddard, L. H. Marks, I. F. Morris, and J. Ray Williams, Sacramento.

NEWARK, N. J., EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE.

An organization of the motion picture exhibitors of Newark, N. J., was effected on October 3, 1912, under the direction of the State Organizer, W. S. Martin. Thirty exhibitors were present at the meeting called for that purpose. Officers were elected as follows: President, F. C. Young; vice-president, Joseph Stern; treasurer, W. H. Meier, secretary, C. J. Hausenauer.

California's greatest product is motion pictures.

IOWA PICTUREMEN ACTIVE

Their First Convention Held Last December and Another in May, 1913—A Steady Increase in Membership Shown.

E. G. Fargo,

President of the Iowa State League.

Mr. Fargo, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Iowa, bought the Broadway Theater at Algona, Iowa, on February 7, 1910. He didn't like the name so changed it to "Magic," under which title it has been very successful ever since. The Magic seats but 250 people, but it has all the latest improvements to produce comfort for its patrons. Simplex machine, Mercury Arc Rectifier, exhaust fan, etc. Mr. Fargo believes that the public should be the censors of the pictures just as they are of the legitimate drama. He expects to attend the convention.

Thomas A. Brown,

National Vice-President of the Iowa League.

Mr. Brown is one of the leading citizens and exhibitors of Iowa City, Ia. He has always taken a deep interest in League business and was elected national vice-president at the last meeting of the State organization.

AFTER some good preliminary work following the big national convention at Chicago, the Iowa exhibitors assembled at Des Moines for their first annual convention on December 3 and 4, 1912. The meetings were held in the Savery Hotel and fully a hundred exhibitors from all parts of the state were present. President Neff was there and the first day was taken up with speechmaking and entertainment.

On the second day an executive session was held and an election of officers resulted in the choice of the following:

President: J. L. O'Brien, Orpheum theater, Oelwein.

First Vice-President: J. S. Bassett, Gem Theater, Independence.

National Vice-President: Thomas A. Brown, American Theater, Iowa City.

Secretary: Fred Young, Cedar Rapids.

Treasurer: J. E. Tierney, Scenic Theater, Sioux City.

J. S. Bassett,

First Vice-President of the Iowa League.

"Dad" Bassett, of Independence, Iowa, is one of the live exhibitors of that state. He owns a fine picture theater in his home town and takes a great interest in the affairs of the League.

H. E. Baumgartner,

Delegate from the Iowa League.

Mr. Baumgartner, a delegate elected to represent the Iowa Exhibitors' League in the National Convention at New York, is proprietor of the Lyric Theater at Osage, Iowa. He is an enthusiastic member of the League and a representative theater manager.

After the convention had completed its business a banquet was spread in the dining room of the Savery Hotel and the meeting closed very happily and successfully.

Convention of May 13 and 14, 1913.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, May 13 and 14, the second annual convention of the Iowa Exhibitors' League was held in Des Moines. During the six months which intervened since the first convention, there had been done some effective work by the board of officers and thirty-five new members was the result, bringing the total membership up to 150, which is a good record for a six-month old organization.

Deputy National Organizer George W. Wylie, of Kansas City, Mo., represented the national organization and addressed the members present upon matters of importance relating to the league. President O'Brien presided at the opening meetings.

There was the usual program of jollification during which the visitors were given a good time and shown the sights of the city. There was also a good representation of manufacturers' agents who helped to make the convention an enjoyable one. There was also a banquet at the windup, and a number of distinguished visitors were present.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President: E. G. Fargo, Algona.

First Vice-President: J. S. Bassett, of Independence.

Second Vice-President: W. H. Dewey, of Chariton.

Secretary: W. G. Eddy, of Marengo.

Treasurer: J. E. Tierney, Sioux City.

National Vice-President: Thomas A. Brown, of Iowa City.

Delegates to the National convention in New York were elected as follows: W. G. Ingeldue, of Marshalltown; A. J. Diebold, of Cedar Rapids; E. G. Fargo, of Algona; H. E. Baumgartner, of Osage; A. W. McIntosh, of Waterloo; J. S. Shortley, of Sioux City; and J. M. Heffner, of Mason City. Alternates: F. P. Lemen, of Colfax; H. E. Wolfgram, of Decorah; T. A. Bryan, of Oelwein; W. G. Eddy, of Marengo; M. Lince, of Des Moines; and L. J. Tower, of

J. E. Tierney,

Treasurer of the Iowa League.

Mr. J. E. Tierney, treasurer of the Iowa Exhibitors' League, is proprietor of the Scenic Theater, Sioux City, Iowa. Mr. Tierney opened the first picture theater in that city in 1905; the Scenic was opened a few years later. He says that he has found his twelve years' experience as a teacher in the public schools of Minnesota to be a great help to him in the picture business. There are a great number of high-class men in the picture exhibition business and Mr. Tierney is one of them.

A. W. McIntosh,

Delegate from the Iowa League.

Mr. McIntosh, who was elected a delegate at the last convention of the Iowa Exhibitors' League, is one of the pioneers of the business, having commenced his picture exhibiting career eight years ago in the Dreamland Theater, Oelwein, Iowa. Three years later he moved to Waterloo, where he has since formed the Princess Amusement Company, which operates the Crystal and Princess Theaters. The Crystal is one of the de luxe picture theaters of the West and enjoys a remarkable patronage among people of the best class.

WELCOME
MUTUAL

Group of Iowa Exhibitors and Their Friends Taken at the Des Moines Convention, May 13 and 14, 1913

Cedar Rapids. The Iowa Exhibitors' League has been successful in holding up all legislation that was calculated to be harmful to the proper development of the business in that state. Among the proposed laws was a very stringent censorship measure, but the vigilance and good work of the league prevented it from becoming a law.

Iowa exhibitors may well feel proud of their organization and by the time the next convention occurs they should all be found enrolled as members. The next meeting of this organization will be held at Marshalltown on a date to be selected.

Arizona Exhibitors In Line.

The news was received from Arizona last week to the effect that the exhibitors of Arizona had got together and selected Fred F. Green of Miami, as National vice-president for their state. Mr. Green is manager of the Unique theater in Miami and a progressive exhibitor. The report does not state that he will attend the New York convention.

R. H. Redus,

Secretary of the Mississippi League.

Mr. Redus, secretary of the Mississippi Exhibitors' League, is the owner of the Elite Theater in West Point, Miss., which he says is "one of the brightest spots on earth." He entered the exhibition business three years ago and has been successful from the start, and his theater has a very high endorsement from the New Century Ladies' Club of his town.

J. L. O'Brien,

Mr. O'Brien is one of the leading exhibitors of Oelwein, Iowa, and was president of the Iowa Exhibitors' League up to the convention held recently, when he was succeeded by E. G. Fargo, the present incumbent.

S. L. Taylor,

Sergeant-at-Arms of the Mississippi League.

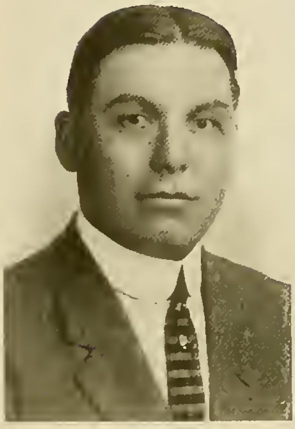
Mr. Taylor, owner and manager of the Pastime Theater and Airdome at Pass Christian, Miss., was elected sergeant-at-arms of the Mississippi League at the last convention. He has been in the motion picture theater business for the past three years and likes it.

UNIVERSAL
Pho. D. . Hepshir
D. Moines

Group of Iowa Exhibitors and Their Friends Taken at the Des Moines Convention, May 13 and 14, 1913

MINNESOTA EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE

Got Its Start at the Chicago Convention of 1912—Remarkable Progress Made Since That Date Through the Enthusiasm of a Few Hustlers.



Otto N. Raths,

President of the Minnesota League.

President Raths of the Minnesota Exhibitors' League is one of the hustlers in League work. He has been connected with the organization from the start and is always on the job. He is connected with the Gaiety Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

Thomas Furniss,

National Vice-President of the Minnesota League.

Mr. Furniss got into the picture business about eight years ago. In his younger days he was a minstrel man and has had an interesting theatrical career. He might easily claim the title of "Daddy of the Minnesota League." Duluth is his home town, where he operates the Lyric and Odeon theaters, and is building another at a cost of $100,000.

IT WAS at the Chicago convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League that the movement which has resulted in a strong branch in the state of Minnesota got its first impetus. Thomas Furniss of the Odeon and Lyric theaters, Duluth; J. G. Roesner of the Princess and Colonial theaters, Winona, and Otto N. Raths of the Gaiety Theater, St. Paul, were present at the big Chicago meeting and got acquainted with each other. As five members were required to secure a charter from the National League so the names of W. M. Abrahamson of the Empress and Savoy theaters, Duluth, and George Osborn of the Palm Theater, St. Paul, were secured and the application for the charter filed and granted.

H. A. Sherman,

Treasurer of the Minnesota League.

Treasurer Sherman is one of the leading exhibitors of Minneapolis. He is said to be a fine fellow, an enterprising exhibitor and an enthusiastic League man.

George T. Sharp,

Secretary of the Minnesota League.

Secretary Sharp is manager of one of the leading theaters of Minneapolis and a very clever young man. He will fill the office of secretary with credit.

With this authority a temporary organization was formed and the following officers elected: President, Otto N. Raths; Vice-President, Thomas Furniss; Secretary and treasurer, J. G. Roesner. A convention was called to meet in St. Paul on September 4 and 5, 1912, and about sixty exhibitors responded. Forty of this number became charter members of the Minnesota League and the organization was officially launched.

The first convention was somewhat of an event. Governor A. O. Eberhardt, of Minnesota, was present; Mayor H. P. Keller of St. Paul, opened the convention with an address of welcome. W. J. Sweeney of the Chicago league and Secretary C. M. Christenson, of the National were present and assisted in the work of organization.

The initiation fee for entrance into the league was placed at $5.00, and yearly dues at $10.00. It was decided to form an executive committee of five members, and the following men were elected to act: A. B. Robbins of Duluth; John Wentworth of Spring Valley; George Osborne of St. Paul; M. E. Guthmann of St. Cloud, and J. Christopherson of Benson.

The following officers were elected: President, Otto N. Raths of St. Paul; vice-President, Thomas Furniss of Duluth; national vice-president, George Osborne of St. Paul; secretary, E. F. Purdy of Minneapolis, and treasurer, H. A. Sherman of Minneapolis.

The league went forcibly on record as favoring strict censorship of all pictures exhibited in the state, not already censored by the National Board of Censors, through a resolution offered by Mr. Cubberly, and seconded by M. E. Guthmann of St. Cloud, to the effect that the president be empowered to appoint a Board of Censors of three members to pass upon films offered by other than regular film exchanges, and not heretofore censored. This resolution was adopted as a means of avoiding the appearance of pictures that might, in the slightest degree, offend the tastes of patrons and lower the status of the motion picture business.

It was decided that all the motion picture exhibitors in Minnesota and adjoining states may become members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Minnesota by making application for membership, accompanied by the necessary fee, dues and other requisites, and provided that the applicants are not connected in any way with the manufacture of films or the film-rental business.

So much adverse legislation pertaining to the motion picture business was introduced into the Minnesota Legislature at its 1913 session that President Raths deemed it advisable to call a second convention of the league to be held at the St. Paul hotel, St. Paul, Tuesday and Wednesday, January 28 and 29, to review this legislation and protect the interests of the exhibitors.

About eighty-five exhibitors

D. W. Chamberlain,

Delegate from Minnesota League.

Mr. Chamberlain is from Minneapolis where he operates a fine modern picture theater. He is one of the progressive men in the exhibiting business.

E. A. Nelson,

Delegate from Minnesota League.

Mr. Nelson is the manager of the Star Theater, Duluth, and one of the enterprising picture theater men of the West.

A. Alexander Wall,
National Vice-President of the Alabama League.

Mr. Wall, national vice-president of the Alabama Exhibitors' League, is connected with the Odeon Theater of Birmingham, Ala., and owns and operates five theaters in other towns. He is a business man of unusual capacity, though but 27 years of age, being connected with several other enterprises. He is one of the progressive picture men of the South and takes great interest in the Exhibitors' League.

responded, and were on hand from points in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas. At the opening session it was announced that thirty-five members had been added to the league.

The censorship problem, with which the proposed legislation was connected, was the leading subject of discussion at the second convention.

Mayor H. P. Keller of St. Paul, was present personally at the opening session, and, in a well chosen address, emphasized the necessity of co-operation in the motion picture business to give good amusement and eliminate bad features.

President Raths appointed the following men as members of the committee upon legislation: D. W. Chamberlain, of Minneapolis; R. E. Willis, of St. Paul, L. E. Lund, of Minneapolis, and Gus Greening, of St. Paul.

This committee reported in favor of censorship by the National Board of Censorship only and against local censorship advocated in the legislature. It was the opinion of the committee that the national board was adequately handling the censorship problem. It was recommended that the league appoint a local censorship committee to be added to the membership of the national board.

Through the efforts of the legislative committee the legislature was induced to drop its consideration of all measures affecting motion pictures and serious disturbance in the business was thus averted in that state.

The second annual convention of the Minnesota league was held at Minneapolis on June 10 and 11, 1913. There was a large attendance of exhibitors and a very successful meeting was the result. Officers were elected as follows:

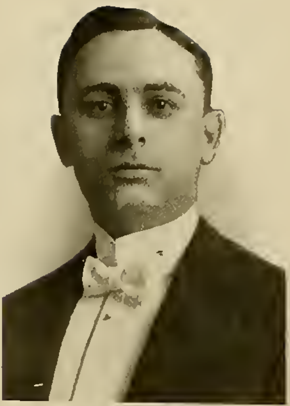
President, Otto N. Raths, St. Paul; Vice-President, L. Robbins, Winona; Secretary, G. T. Sharp, Minneapolis; Treasurer, H. A. Sherman, Minneapolis; National Vice-President, Thomas Furniss, Duluth; Sergeant-at-Arms, F. W. Boll, Northfield.

Executive Committee—C. E. Van Duzee, chairman, Milwaukee; John Christopherson, Benson; John Wentworth, Spring Valley; R. A. McLean, Virginia, and James Gilowsky, St. Paul.

Delegates to the National Convention—E. A. Nelson, Duluth; S. L. Rothapel, Minneapolis; and D. W. Chamberlain, Minneapolis.

There was a sumptuous banquet at the conclusion of the convention, which marked the conclusion of the most successful meeting of exhibitors the state of Minnesota has yet held.

Great outlook for the league in Minnesota.



E. H. Colley,
President of the Alabama League.

Mr. Colley, president of the Alabama Exhibitors' League, is vice-president and manager of the Lyric Theater Company of Birmingham, which operates the Vaudette Theater of Birmingham, and other theaters in Alabama. He entered the picture theater business about four years ago and was very successful in building up the business of the different houses in which he was interested. He disposed of all his theaters recently except two in Birmingham.

Alabama Exhibitors' League

One of the Newer State Branches That is Growing Rapidly—Organizing Staff at Work

THE Alabama Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is one of the younger members of the National Association. It was formally organized on March 24th of this year at a convention held in Birmingham. Prior to that meeting there was considerable preliminary work done by A. A. Wall, who had been appointed National Vice-President by President Neff of the National League. Through the efforts of Mr. Wall a preliminary meeting was held in Birmingham a few weeks before the formal convention and a campaign of promotion was started that brought out a good representation at the regular meeting.

T. S. Abernathy,
First Vice-President Alabama League.

Mr. Abernathy, first vice-president of the Alabama League, opened the Southern Film Exchange in Birmingham in 1906. This was the first buying exchange in the South. Some time later he consolidated his business with the Theater Film Supply Company, which he continued to operate till it was bought by the General Film Company. After selling out he organized the Southern Amusement and Supply Company and opened a large number of picture theaters in the Southeastern States. At the present time Mr. Abernathy is devoting all his time to his two theaters in Birmingham,

On the date named the exhibitors met in the convention hall of the Hillman Hotel, Birmingham. President Neff was present and gave impetus to the movement by his advice and assistance with the result that the Alabama State League started out with a strong membership. The convention closed with a banquet at which nearly 100 exhibitors and their friends were present. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows:

President, E. H. Colley, Birmingham; National Vice-President, A. A. Wall, Birmingham; First Vice-President, T. S. Abernathy, Birmingham; Second Vice-President, R. B. Wilby, Selma; Secretary, J. G. Wells, Anniston; Treasurer, John A. Snider, Bessemer; Sergeant-at-Arms, E. L. Lenhart, Birmingham.

A staff of organizers was appointed to canvass the state and bring all exhibitors into the league. Reports have been made to the effect that the organizers are meeting with unusual success in their work and that the membership of the new organization has been greatly increased.

Organizing Georgia.

A. A. Wall, National Vice-President of the Alabama League, attended a convention of Georgia exhibitors at the Kimball House, Atlanta, Ga., on June 30, for the purpose of forming an Exhibitors' League in that state. According to last reports he was confident of success. There are a number of active and up-to-the-minute exhibitors in Georgia—men who have been identified with the business for some years, and who realize the value of organization. Legislative matters have brought them together temporarily at times, but they have never attempted a permanent organization before.

J. G. Wells,
Secretary of the Alabama League.

Mr. Wells embarked in the motion picture exhibition business as proprietor of the Alamo Theater, an exclusive picture theater in Gadsden, Ala., Jan. 1, 1910. He managed this theater with some success until Feb. 9, 1912, when he sold it and retired temporarily. But the charm of the pictures had secured so firm a hold upon Mr. Wells that he decided to build a theater that would conform to some of his ideas of what such a place of amusement should be and the Alamo at Anniston, Ala., opened in July, 1912, is the result. Mr. Wells has taken a lively interest in the Alabama League and was elected second vice-president at the State Convention at Birmingham, March 24, 1913.

BIG CONVENTION IN WISCONSIN

Exhibitors Turn Out from All Parts of the State—Many Interesting Subjects Discussed — Much Entertaining

WISCONSIN is one of the few states that were represented at the first National Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League at Cleveland, Ohio, three years ago. The organization was not very strong at that time, but it has grown steadily since and now counts nearly all the exhibitors of the state among its members.

Charles Phillips,

President of the Wisconsin League.

Mr. Phillips is a prominent lawyer in Milwaukee as well as an enthusiastic picture exhibitor. He is interested in some good houses in his home town and has devoted considerable time to the betterment of the business. He is also the national vice-president for Wisconsin.

The last annual convention, which was held at Milwaukee, April 8 and 9, was the best meeting of exhibitors ever held in Wisconsin. It is estimated that not less than 250 exhibitors were present, which is a pretty good showing for Wisconsin.

W. E. McCanna,

Fourth Vice-President Wisconsin League.

Mr. McCanna, fourth vice-president of the Wisconsin Exhibitors' League, is a resident of Appleton, Wis., and manager of the Mer-Mac Theater, an up-to-date house seating 500 persons.

Considerable interest centered in this last convention. There were officers to elect for the ensuing year; delegates to be chosen to attend the New York convention and several legislative matters to be considered. Secretary Christenson, of the National League, and W. J. Sweeney, National vice-president of the Illinois League, were scheduled to be present and assist in the proceedings. All these added attractions served to coax out the members in large numbers.

Joseph G. Rhode,

Third Vice-President of the Wisconsin League.

Mr. Rhode, third vice-president of the Wisconsin Exhibitors' League, dates his first acquaintance with the picture business back to the days of short length pictures. That is some years ago. He recalls the time when George K. Spoor, of the Essanay Company, then running the Kinedrome Circuit, would warn the boys of the coming of anything over 200 feet by saying "Stick around, Joe, and see the big one." Joe has watched the development of the picture theater and is in on the ground floor with his theater at Kenosha, which town is also responsible for Carl Laemmle.

The sessions of the convention were held in the Plankington Hotel and the convention opened promptly at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning with President Charles Phillips in the chair, who welcomed the visitors to the city and assured them that a good time awaited.

National Secretary Christenson addressed the convention at some length, telling the exhibitors of the progress made by the league in other states and announcing the organization of several new branches. W. J. Sweeney, of the Illinois League, told of the harmonious conditions which existed in his state and how prosperous its members were.

Thomas Saxe,

Treasurer of the Wisconsin League.

Mr. Saxe is treasurer of the Saxe Amusement Company, of Milwaukee, which owns several high-class theaters in various parts of the Middle West. A great deal could be written about his connection with the business, but there isn't room for it here. Probably no picture concern displays pictures to better advantage than the one with which he is connected.

The question of legislation affecting the picture theater was the subject of considerable discussion.

An automobile tour of the city concluded the first day's proceedings. It was a regular "joy" ride and wound up with a halt for refreshments at one of the popular resorts.

On Wednesday the proceedings opened with a report from the Milwaukee Local that $2,100 had been raised for the benefit of the Ohio flood sufferers and turned over to the mayor. Secretary Christenson thanked the donors in behalf of the Ohio League.

After the business of the convention had been disposed of on Wednesday the entire assemblage donned night robes and goblin caps and paraded the streets of Milwaukee bringing up at Eagles Hall, where a fine Dutch lunch had been spread for the benefit of the hungry visitors. This affair was hugely enjoyed by all and the party of picture men did not break up till long after midnight.

Henry Goldman,

Fifth Vice-President Wisconsin League.

Mr. Goldman, of Green Bay, Wis., fifth vice-president of the Wisconsin League, is manager of the Goldman Circuit operating in Wisconsin.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected at this meeting as follows:

President and National vice-president: Charles Phillips, Milwaukee.

First vice-president: M. Prince, Milwaukee.

Second vice-president: F. H. Smith, Menominee.

Third vice-president: Joseph G. Rhode, Kenosha.

Fourth vice-president: William McCanna, Appleton.

Fifth vice-president: Henry Goldman, Green Bay.

Treasurer: Tom Saxe, Milwaukee.

Secretary: B. K. Fischer, Milwaukee.

Sergeant-at-arms: Frank

Fred H. Smith,

Second Vice-President of the Wisconsin League.

Mr. Smith, who was recently elected to the office of second vice-president of the Wisconsin Exhibitors' League, is a member of the firm of Smith Brothers, amusement promoters, of Menominee, Wis. He has been in the theatrical business since 1894, but became a picture theater owner about four years ago. His house is called the Grand and seats 500 persons. Mr. Smith and his brother own the bill posting plant in Menominee and make liberal use of the boards to advertise their picture programs.

B. K. Fischer,

Secretary of the Wisconsin State League.

Mr. Fischer, secretary of the Wisconsin Exhibitors' League, has been engaged in the moving picture exhibition business for the past eight years as owner and manager of the Mozart Theater, Milwaukee, a high-class house seating 600 people. He helped organize the Wisconsin League and is president of the Milwaukee Local, which he was instrumental in organizing.

Bruemmer, Milwaukee.

Delegates to the National Convention at New York: Gustav Frellson, Waukesha; Roy Cummins, Madison; Frank Breummer, Milwaukee; H. H. Burford, La Crosse; Henry Trinz, Milwaukee. Alternates: Henry Klein, Milwaukee; M. B. Hackett, Stevens Point; A. V. Johnson, Milwaukee; James Cochrane, Milwaukee; Albert Schoenleber, Milwaukee.

Wisconsin is one of the most progressive states in its attitude toward the motion picture. Some of the largest and finest houses in the United States are to be found in Milwaukee. It was in that city the Saxe Amusement Company inaugurated its policy of big houses for exclusive picture shows and that company now operates a number of the best houses to be found anywhere. The state authorities have adapted the picture to educational purposes to a large extent, so that picture theaters and picture shows are in high favor in Wisconsin.

The growth of the league has been very satisfactory during the past year. While there has been no unusual effort to increase the memship, there has been a steady accession of new members. Thus far Wisconsin picture men have escaped the annoyance of reform legislation. During the last session of the state legislature an attempt was made to pass a censorship bill, but a strong opposition was put up against the measure and it was held up for the time being. There is no doubt that another attempt will be made along that line at the next session.

Gustav Frellson,

Delegate from the Wisconsin League.

Mr. Frellson, one of the delegates of the Wisconsin Exhibitors' League to the New York Convention, has been in the picture theater business for the past two years, owning the Park and Unique Theaters of Waukesha in connection with his sons, George and Charles Frellson. Prior to that he was superintendent of the Charity Organization Society of Milwaukee for 27 years. The Pulaski Theater in Milwaukee is also one of his successful ventures. The best and highest class in the picture line is the only kind that appeals to Mr. Frellson.

H. Trinz,

Mr. Trinz is one of the delegates from the Wisconsin Exhibitors' League. He is proprietor of a picture theater in Milwaukee, where they have the best theaters in the country, and an active member of the organization.

H. H. Burford,

Delegate from the Wisconsin League.

Mr. Burford, one of the delegates elected to represent the Wisconsin Exhibitors' League at the National Convention in New York, is owner of the Bijou Theater at La Crosse, Wis. He has been in the exhibition business for a number of years and is now a stockholder and manager of two picture theater corporations, the Lyric Theater Company and the Bijou Theater Company. His houses are the best in every point of service. Mr. Burford is deeply interested in the League and is one of the hard workers in its behalf.

Louisiana League

Permanent Organization Effected

LOUISIANA exhibitors got together at the Greunwald Hotel, New Orleans, on Thursday, March 27, 1913, for the first time and succeeded in perfecting a permanent organization of the motion picture exhibitors of that state, which was affiliated with the National Exhibitors' League. Through the efforts of the national vice-president, John Depinet, of New Orleans, a large number of exhibitors were present and an interesting convention was the result.

There was an interesting discussion of the various problems which have confronted the picture men of that state. Ways and means of building up the organization were also the topics of careful consideration. That the exhibitors present took a lively interest in the craft generally was shown in a liberal contribution to the flood sufferers of Ohio and Indiana.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President: A. G. Gugel, Gretna.
National vice-president: John Depinet, New Orleans.
First vice-president: A. G. Shear, New Orleans.
Second vice-president: H. C. Van Cott, Alexandria.
Treasurer: Sidney Levy, New Orleans.
Secretary: F. H. Maybury, New Orleans.
Sergeant-at-arms: J. W. Russ, New Orleans.

Delegates to the National Convention at New York: Abraham Seligman, W. H. Gueringer, Theo. Recknagel, Albert Durning, Solomon Loeb, W. L. Jennings. Alternates: F. R. Frederich, Jr., A. W. Waisdorf, H. Freidenberg, V. C. Howard, S. L. Bourke, M. B. Gill.

Plans were perfected for a state wide canvas of the motion picture exhibitors for new members and it is expected that there will be a large membership to report at the next convention.

John Depinet,

National Vice-President for the Louisiana League.

Mr. Depinet, national vice-president of the Louisiana Exhibitors' League, embarked in the picture exhibiting business in 1907. Realizing that the business was destined to grow to large proportions if properly conducted, he made it a point to give as much attention to his patrons as though they paid three dollars for a seat in his house instead of five cents. A clean house, fine pictures and good projection with close attention to business has solved the problem for him. His Wonderland Theater in New Orleans is one of the best in the country. When it comes to matters affecting the League, Mr. Depinet is a great hustler. Hence his commanding position as national vice-president.

H. C. Van Cott,

Second Vice-President of the Louisiana League.

Mr. Van Cott, second vice-president of the Louisiana Exhibitors' League, is owner of the Rex Theater of Alexandria, La. He has been in the exhibition business for the past two years, and is one of the first boosters for the organization and is still at it. "Quality and Quantity" is his motto and, being an eye specialist, as well as a picture exhibitor, Dr. Van Cott has found nothing in the business to injure the eyes of his patrons.

PENNSYLVANIA LEAGUE GETS IN LINE

After Several Attempts Exhibitors of the Keystone State Form Good Working Organization at Convention in Philadelphia

Edward A. Jeffries,

President of the Pennsylvania League.

President Jeffries of the Pennsylvania Exhibitors' League has been an earnest worker in the organization ever since it was organized. He is manager of Fairyland Theater of Philadelphia. His efficient work during the recent convention, at which he was chosen president, was commendable.

Walter Steumpfig,

National Vice-President of the Pennsylvania League.

Mr. Steumpfig, elected National Vice-President of the Pennsylvania Exhibitors' League, has been closely identified with the state and local organizations for several years. He was elected president of the State League a year ago and this year he was chosen for the position of National Vice-President. Mr. Steumpfig is manager of the Germantown Theater, Philadelphia.

SEVERAL attempts have been made to form a state organization of exhibitors in Pennsylvania. In 1910, under the leadership of George Bennethum of Reading, a fair start was made, but enthusiasm was lacking and the organization did not last for long. Then the exhibitors of Pittsburgh organized and attempted to form a state organization. About the same time the Philadelphia exhibitors got together and they, too, claimed a state organization. Through the rivalry of the exhibitors of these two cities little was accomplished until just before the national convention in Chicago, when President Neff succeeded in getting a fair representation at a convention in Pittsburgh and a state organization was formed in which the exhibitors of the rival cities got together. At this time Walter Steumpfig, of Philadelphia, was elected president and a strong delegation was sent to the Chicago convention.

Harry E. Reiff,

Secretary of the Pennsylvania League.

Secretary Reiff is manager of the Lyric Theater, 21 Boggs Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., and an active worker in both state and local organizations of the Exhibitors' League. He was elected at the Philadelphia Convention.

Gilbert C. Miller,

Second Vice-President of the Pennsylvania League.

Mr. Miller is described as the "live wire exhibitor of Northeastern Pennsylvania." His home town is Plymouth, where he is a citizen of some consequence. His house is the best in the town.

It was hoped that something would be accomplished after the national convention, but the old rivalry broke out afresh and, though attempts were made to get the exhibitors of the state together, nothing happened. In the meantime laws, antagonistic to the interests of the exhibitor, were being passed by the Pennsylvania legislature, meeting only such opposition as could be brought to bear upon them by individual exhibitors. In that way a very obnoxious censorship bill was passed and is in a fair way to be enforced unless sufficient pressure is brought to bear upon the executive.

Whether it was this emergency or a real desire to take the situation seriously and place Pennsylvania in its rightful position in the league movement, we will not attempt to say, but something aroused Pennsylvania to the necessity of getting busy, and the recent Philadelphia convention was the result. It was some convention, too. Exhibitors from all over the state were present and, probably for the first time, the aims and ambitions of the promoters of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League were fully stated and appreciated.

Ben H. Zerr,

Treasurer of the Pennsylvania League.

Mr. Zerr is one of the leading picture theater managers of Reading, Pa., and was elected to the office of treasurer of the Pennsylvania Exhibitors' League at the state convention held in Philadelphia May 27 and 28. His theater is called the Schuylkill Avenue Picture House and is noted for the fine quality of pictures shown. Mr. Zerr is also president of the Reading local.

For some weeks before the convention date preparations for the big meeting were under way. Clem Kerr, of Dayton, Ohio, who has been very successful in paving the way for conventions, was engaged and a whirlwind campaign was inaugurated. As a result there was a fine gathering of exhibitors at the convention hall of the Continental Hotel on Tuesday, May 27, when the meeting was called to order by President Walter Steumpfig.

There were a number of matters to be discussed and settled for all time if the Pennsylvania league was to come into its own. No hesitancy in tackling those matters was shown and the convention got right down to business in real earnest. President Neff, of the National league was present and helped the work along with his advice, so that when it was all over everybody came out of the meeting hall satisfied and happy.

There was the usual program of entertainment and during the spare hours the exhibitors and their wives and sweethearts enjoyed themselves thoroughly seeing the sights of the City of Brotherly Love. One of the places visited was the new building erected by the Curtis Publishing Company for its various publications.

H. C. Kliehm,

First Vice-President Pennsylvania League.

Mr. Kliehm was elected first vice-president of the Pennsylvania Exhibitors' League at the recent Philadelphia Convention. He is proprietor of the Lawrence Theater, Butler Street, Pittsburgh, Pa., and an enthusiastic League worker.

A large number of manu-

J. G. Hansen,

Delegate from the Pennsylvania League.

Mr. Hansen, who was elected to represent Pennsylvania at the New York Convention, is also secretary of the Reading local. He is proprietor of the Gem Theater, Reading, Pa.

facturers' agents and representatives of the different exchanges and supply houses attended the meeting and added materially to its success. The trade exhibit of machines and sundries was large and interesting.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Edward A. Jeffries, Philadelphia; first vice-president, Harry C. Kliehm, Pittsburgh; second vice-president, Gilbert C. Miller, Plymouth; treasurer, Ben H. Zerr, Reading; secretary, Harry E. Reiff, Pittsburgh; national vice-president, Walter Steumpfig, Philadelphia; sergeant-at-arms, Albert J. Fischer, Philadelphia; publicity agent, Frank A. Gould, Reading.

Delegates to the national convention in New York are: H. A. Victor, F. J. Herrington and Harry Poke, Pittsburgh; J. Weinreich, George H. Roth, Morris Spiers and Charles Segall, Philadelphia; and J. G. Hansen, Reading. Alternates: E. J. Kuhn, Lancaster; J. Hesser Walraven and M. A. Benn, Philadelphia.

It was decided to leave the selection of the place and time for the next state convention to the discretion of the state officers, after which the convention adjourned.

During the year there has been quite a revival of interest in the Philadelphia local. A local has been formed at Reading, Pa., and the exhibitors of the Pittsburgh local have not been asleep. But there is a large section of the state that has not been canvassed, so there is plenty of work for the officers of the Pennsylvania league to do before that state is properly organized.

With President Jeffries at the helm it is almost certain that the campaign for new members will start at once. He is something of a hustler and will keep everybody busy.

Charles Segall,

Delegate from Pennsylvania League.

Mr. Segall belongs to the magnate class of picture theater managers, owning six houses in Philadelphia. He has been very active in League matters in Philadelphia.

MARYLAND EXHIBITORS MAKE BIG START

League Organized in Jig Time and Everybody Working to Increase Membership—Much Enthusiasm

MARYLAND exhibitors got together on June 3 and 4, 1913, and succeeded in forming one of the livest and most energetic state organizations that has been promoted this year. There had never been an effort made to organize the exhibitors of Maryland before and correspondence with the national president developed the fact that they were ready and waiting for the word. A committee was formed, consisting of J. Howard Bennett, Marion S. Pearce, W. C. Bohannan, Alexander Anderson, G. S. Benjamin, Jr., and G. C. Parsons. Arrangements were made with the Emerson Hotel for a meeting-room and rooms for the accommodation of manufacturers who wished to exhibit their wares. A careful canvas of the state soon developed the fact that the trade would attend in large numbers, and the success of the convention was assured.

Just before the date of meeting, Mr. Clem Kerr, of the organization staff of the national league, visited Baltimore and assisted the committee in completing its final arrangements. Mr. Kerr secured a few special attractions for the convention, including arrangements for a special motion picture of the exhibitors in attendance, together with the city officials who took part in the opening sessions and the historical points of the city.

George Roth,

Delegate from the Pennsylvania League.

Mr. Roth is one of the leading League men of Pennsylvania, and was the first secretary of the State League. He owns three high-class houses in Philadelphia.

On the day set for the convention fully 150 exhibitors, many of whom were accompanied by their wives, and friends were present at the opening meeting. President Neff, of the national league, was on hand, and the first Maryland convention started off with a boom.

No time was lost in getting down to business. A constitution and by-laws was quickly adopted and officers elected as follows: President, Marion S. Pearce, Baltimore; national vice-president, J. Howard Bennett, Baltimore; first vice-president, O. J. Allenbaugh, Baltimore; second vice-president, S. I. Rosenberg, Annapolis; treasurer, Harry Morehead, Baltimore; secretary, Frank H. Durkee, Baltimore; sergeant-at-arms, J. Rosenburg, Annapolis.

Delegates to the national convention at New York: I. Wertheimer, Cumberland; George List, Frederick; Isaac Ulman, Salisbury; A. Anderson, Baltimore; M. S. Pearce, Baltimore; William Fait, Baltimore. Alternates: T. J. Bohannan, Baltimore; William Kalb, Baltimore; Bernard Depkin, Jr., Baltimore; J. Brodie, Baltimore; H. Lewy, Baltimore; G. Benjamin, Jr., Baltimore.

There is a fine chance for a strong organization in Baltimore. New members are coming in rapidly. Each member has taken it upon himself to secure as many members as possible, and if this plan does not work out an organizer will be engaged.

It is likely that another convention will be held soon after the close of the national convention in New York.

Frank A. Gould,

Publicity Man for the Pennsylvania League.

Mr. Gould is proprietor of the Rex Theater, Reading, Pa., and is the first man to be officially elected to take charge of the publicity of an Exhibitors' League, that being his office in the Pennsylvania organization.

President Pearce.

Marion S. Pearce, the first president of the Maryland Exhibitors League, is one of the old-timers in the film business. He began almost at the beginning and has been running exchanges and theaters ever since. He sold his exchange business to the General Film Co., soon after that company was organized and has been devoting his time to the exhibition business. He owns a number of fine houses and is considered to be the motion picture magnate of Maryland. Mr. Pearce ought to command the respect of the entire trade in his state.

KENTUCKY EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE

Membership Small, but Active and Influential—Strong Campaign to Increase the Number is Now On—Hope to Make Big Showing

By G. D. Crain, Jr.

L. J. Dittmar,

President of the Kentucky League.

President Dittmar is owner of the Majestic Theater of Louisville, Ky., and one of the hustlers of the League. He was elected president of the State League at the last convention and is also president of the Louisville local. He has always been a hustler for the organization.

Orene Parker,

National Vice-President Kentucky League.

Mr. Parker is one of the leading citizens of Covington, Ky., and is owner of its biggest theaters—two of them. He also owns another big house in Newport, Ky., an adjoining town. He has been interested in picture theaters for the past four years and is one of the big men in the game.

THOUGH the Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League at present ranks low in the list in point of membership, this standing is likely to see a marked change before the passing of another year, according to members and officers of the organization. With little else to occupy their attention, officers of the Kentucky league will shortly inaugurate a brisk membership campaign which is expected to double or triple the size of the roster. Louis J. Dittmar, of Louisville, and Fred Dolle, of the same city, are the men who will do most of the work toward a stronger organization. Mr. Dittmar was elected president and Mr. Dolle secretary, at the recent annual convention held in the Kentucky metropolis.

Joseph J. Ciarlo,

Delegate from the Kentucky League.

Mr. Ciarlo is sole owner of the Ciarlo Theater at Newport, Kentucky. He has been an active member of the Kentucky League since it was organized and is a member of the legislative committee of that organization. He was elected at the last convention to represent the Kentucky League at the New York Convention.

Louis H. Ramsey,

Delegate from the Kentucky League.

One of the enterprising picture men of Kentucky is Louis H. Ramsey of Lexington. He is at present operating the Hippodrome Theater in that city, but has built and operated theaters in a number of cities. He is one of the charter members.

The Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League now has only thirty-seven members. While these thirty-seven men control probably between 75 and 100 theaters in the Bluegrass State, there is much to be desired in the membership line. There are about 100 companies in Kentucky, operating, according to estimates, about 250 motion picture houses. This means that about sixty companies operating theaters are not yet affiliated with the exhibitors' league. It may be deduced, therefore, that President Dittmar and Secretary Dolle have their work cut out.

The two officers, while now engaged in lining up new members by correspondence, will go a step further during the coming summer. Realizing that personal solicitation is always better than a letter, the two officers of the league now are planning an extended trip through Kentucky, to take place some time in July or August. Proprietors of theaters will be interviewed, and it is hoped that this trip will have splendid results in augmenting the membership list of the organization.

A substantial increase in membership for the Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League already is assured by reason of the promise of members of the Louisville and Covington locals to connect with the state club in the near future. The Louisville Photo-Play Association is composed of eighteen members controlling thirty theaters. While several are already members of the state body, as many more have yet to join. These have decided to do so in the near future, and the parent organization will, therefore, be materially strengthened. The same is true of the Covington exhibitors, who have banded together for mutual protection. Fifteen exhibitors in the Covington local will shortly enter the state association.

While the membership work will constitute the feature of the coming year with the Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, the organization will be far from lethargic. While conditions in the Bluegrass State are at present entirely satisfactory, it is a matter of conjecture whether this state of affairs will continue to prevail. The calamity howlers who have occasionally risen up in other sections of the country are not totally absent in Kentucky, even though they represent a small and inconspicuous minority. With the General Assembly of the

Max L. Simons,

Treasurer of the Kentucky League.

Mr. Simons, who was elected treasurer of the Kentucky State League at the Louisville Convention in May, has been in the picture theater business in Louisville since 1911, now treasurer and manager of the Hippodrome. He is also treasurer of the Photoplay Association, which is the title of the Louisville exhibitors' local organization. He has been very active in the work of the League ever since he entered the picture business and is one of the best examples of the progressive pictureman of the day.

Fred J. Dolle,

Secretary of the Kentucky League.

Mr. Dolle, the secretary of the Kentucky Exhibitors' League, was a drygoods expert before he got into the picture game in 1910, when he joined forces with the Broadway Amusement Company of Louisville, Ky. It is said that Mr. Dolle is still able to tell the texture of Alice Joyce's costume the moment that young lady flashes across the screen. Mr. Dolle gives his personal attention to the West Broadway Theater.

A. Z. Arnett,

Delegate from the Kentucky League.

Mr. Arnett, one of the delegates who will represent the Kentucky Exhibitors' League in the National Convention at New York, is manager of the Majestic Theater at Midway, Ky.

state scheduled to meet at Frankfort in January, 1914, it would surprise no one who has watched the growth of the moving picture business to see one or two bills aimed at the industry presented for the consideration of the solons. In such a case, the value of organization would be most evident. The Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League will, therefore, keep an eye on legislative developments, even though ostensibly it is doing comparatively little work.

The Kentucky league has perhaps made an innovation in selecting the two most active officers from the same city. Last year, J. H. Stamper, Jr., of Lexington, Ky., was president of the association, while L. H. Ramsey, of the same city, was secretary. At the recent annual election, two Louisville men were elected to the presidency and secretaryship. This plan already has shown good results, and will probably continue to do so. With the president and secretary within a few blocks of each other all the time, executive conferences are an easy matter and tend to put the organization on a much more efficient basis than would be possible where the chief executive officers were widely separated.

While President Dittmar and Secretary Dolle already have taken hold of their work in masterly fashion and shown signs of making the coming year a notable one for the Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, other officers will probably be of first aid in accomplishing this end. George A. Bleich, of Owensboro, is first vice-president; J. J. Ciarlo, Newport, second vice-president, and Max L. Simons, of Louisville, treasurer.

H. B. Strube,

Delegate from the Kentucky League.

Mr. Strube, one of the delegates from the Blue Grass State, is president of the Pastime Amusement Company of Louisville, and a regular hustler in the ranks of the Kentucky Exhibitors' Association.

Texas Exhibitors Round-Up

Hold First Convention at Dallas and Effect a Permanent Organization—Rapid Growth During the Year

J. S. Phillips,

President of the Texas League.

President Phillips was elected to his present office at the recent convention of the Texas Exhibitors' League at Dallas. He is manager of the Odeon Theater of Fort Worth, Texas.

THE first big meeting of motion picture exhibitors of the state of Texas was held at Dallas, October 15 and 16, 1912. With T. P. Finnegan, of the Hippodrome Amusement Company as the leading spirit, the Texas exhibitors were thoroughly aroused to the necessity of organization and the response to an energetic campaign of promotion was very satisfactory. President Neff, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was there and greeted the assembled exhibitors at the opening session of the convention in the hall of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce. The work of the national league was outlined by President Neff and the exhibitors were told what had been accomplished in other states.

On the evening of the first day a banquet was given at the Oriental Hotel which was well attended.

The second day's proceedings developed considerable enthusiasm among the exhibitors present. In selecting a place for the next meeting there was great rivalry between the delegates from Houston and Fort Worth. Houston won the prize after a spirited contest. The election of officers followed with this result:

President: Morris Wolf, Houston.

First vice-president: Clyde M. Blanchard, Beaumont.

Second vice-president: L. J. Locke, El Paso.

Treasurer: John C. Penn, McKinney.

Secretary: Moye Wicks, Houston.

National vice-president: T. P. Finnegan, Dallas.

There was a good representation of manufacturers' agents and exchange men at the meeting and motion pictures were taken of the delegates by Gaumont and Universal cameramen. James B. Kelly, of the Consolidated Film & Supply Company, added to the interest of the convention by issuing a "convention daily" which made a hit with the exhibitors.

Second Annual Convention.

Texas exhibitors held their second annual convention at Dallas, May 28 and 29, 1913. Houston had been selected for this convention at the previous meeting, but something happened to make the change advisable. National Vice-President T. P. Finnegan was again on the job as promoter of the event and he succeeded in getting out a large attendance, fully a hundred exhibitors being present.

The sessions of the convention were held in the Oriental Hotel and Deputy National Organizer George H. Wiley, of Kansas City, Mo., was present to represent the National organization. An open meeting was held on the first day and was attended by exhibitors and manufacturers' agents. The good of the organization was discussed at length.

On the second day the election of officers was held with the following result:

President: J. S. Phillips, Fort Worth.

First vice-president: Thomas Clemmons, Beaumont.

Second vice-president: John C. Penn, McKinney.

Treasurer: P. G. Cameron, Dallas.

Secretary: Harry J. Gould, Dallas.

National vice-president: T. P. Finnegan, Dallas.

Delegates to the National Convention in New York: Moye Wicks, Houston; W. C. Witchie, Dublin; E. J. Lampkin, Greenville; P. G. Cameron, Dallas; A. J. Xydias, Houston; J. S. Phillips, Fort Worth; W. E. Crow, Electra. Alternates: J. C. Penn, McKinney; Joseph Clemmons, Beaumont; L. M. Ridout, Denison; M. L. Levine, Corsicana; N. Lewis, Tyler; Thomas D. Gardner, Corsicana; H. Mulkey, Clarendon.

By a unanimous vote it was decided that the next convention should be held at Fort Worth.

The records of the Texas league showed that the organization had nearly doubled its membership in the past six months, which is a very creditable showing. It is expected that the new board of officers will make a complete canvass of the state and that there will be an equally encouraging report. Texas is a large state and the distances to be covered by an organizer are great, but it is expected that this disadvantage will be overcome and that all exhibitors of the "Lone Star" state will come into the organization.

The "turkey-trot" originated in Texas. Ask any Texas exhibitor.

NEBRASKA STATE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE

Good Representation of Picture Men at the First Convention—Excellent Record Made During the Year

William F. Stoecker,

President of the Nebraska League.

Mr. Stoecker, president of the Nebraska Exhibitors' League, has been in the picture business for eight years and is owner of the first picture theater opened in Omaha. He is a man of affairs in his state, He has been a State legislator, is a member of the military staff of the Governor with the rank of Colonel, and hopes to be elected to Congress next term. He has been president of the Nebraska League since it started and was re-elected at the last convention. Mr. Stoecker heads the delegation that will represent Nebraska in the New York Convention.

P. L. McCarthy,

First Vice-President Nebraska League.

Mr. McCarthy, of Grand Island, Neb., entered the motion picture exhibition business a little more than two years ago when he bought his brother's half interest in the firm of McCarthy & Hayman of Grand Island, owners of the Lyda Theater. He is a charter member. of the Nebraska League and was elected first vice-president at the first convention a year ago and again at the convention in Omaha May 8 and 9, 1913. Mr. McCarthy says he has been through the ups and downs of the picture business, but still thinks it is the great business of the future.

MOTION picture men of the state of Nebraska have not been behind in the work or organization. After some preliminary work a convention was called to be held at the Rome Hotel, Omaha, on Dec. 5 and 6, 1912, and a good number of exhibitors were present, notwithstanding the fact that one of the worst blizzards in years hit that section of the country at the same time. To make things a bit lively a number of Iowa exhibitors, whose state convention had just adjourned at Des Moines the day before, came over to Omaha and joined in the festivities. President Neff of the National League was present, which added to the interest of the convention.

Great enthusiasm prevailed throughout the convention. More than fifty exhibitors were present and took unusual interest in the proceedings. After the preliminary work of organization had been completed officers were elected as follows:

President: Walter F. Stoecker, Omaha.

First vice-president: P. L. McCarthy, Grand Island.

Second vice-president: J. W. Ballinger, York.

J. W. Ballinger,

Secretary of the Nebraska League.

E. E. DeLong,

State Organizer for Nebraska League.

Treasurer: W. A. Alden, Hastings.

Secretary: E. C. Preston, Superior.

National vice-president: J. E. Schlank, Omaha.

The convention closed with a banquet at the Hotel Rome on the evening of Dec. 6.

Since the first convention the Nebraska exhibitors have been doing a lot of hard work in an effort to include all exhibitors in the state in the list of members of the League and their efforts have been fairly well rewarded.

A second convention of Nebraska Exhibitors was held at Omaha on May 8 and 9, for the purpose of electing delegates to the National convention in New York. An interesting meeting was had.

Nebraska exhibitors have a number of good hustlers among their members. President Stoecker is a man of considerable importance in that state. He is a member of the Governor's military staff with the rank of colonel and enjoys an influence in politics that amounts to more than a good "pull." It was through his work that the Nebraska exhibitors escaped the regulating effects of several bills that were introduced in the last session of the state legislature, among them a bill to establish a state censorship which was especially obnoxious. President Stoecker has served a term in the state legislature and has been a candidate for congress. He was not successful at the polls the first time, but expects to get the nomination and election next trip. He heads the delegation that will represent Nebraska at the National Convention in New York.

Much might be said regarding the ability and character of the other members of the Nebraska League that would reflect credit upon the trade. Generally speaking they are progressive and their houses are models of excellence. It should be mentioned that there are no complaints regarding the pictures coming from Nebraska, which is a good sign that only the best subjects are shown in Nebraska houses.

Business in that state has been reported generally good. Aside from the severe storms that put several houses out of commission last winter nothing has happened to disturb the usual good conditions. An encouraging report is expected from that state.

We point to the portraits of the officers of the Nebraska League as evidence that there are a classy lot of exhibitors in that state. There is nothing slow about them, either, and we expect to hear of a big stir in Nebraska after the National Convention. There are still a number of exhibitors in Nebraska who have not yet joined the organization.

J. E. Schlank,

National Vice-President of the Nebraska League.

E. C. Preston,

First Vice-President of the Nebraska League.

SOME PROGRESS IN WEST VIRGINIA

Second Year of State League Shows an Increase in Membership—Everybody Working

A. G. Frohme,

President of the West Virginia League.

Mr. Frohme, president of the West Virginia Exhibitors' League, owns the Home Theater in Wheeling, W. Va., where he has been in business for the past two years. He was unanimously elected president of the League at the last convention on April 29 and 30, held at Wheeling.

A. L. Cottrill,

National Vice-President for West Virginia.

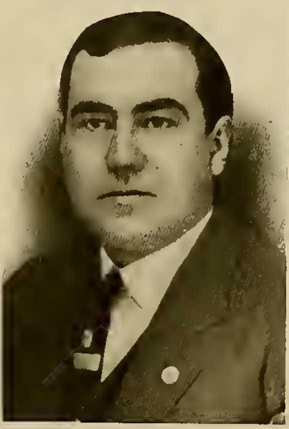
Mr. Cottrill, who was elected national vice-president to represent the West Virginia Exhibitors' League at the convention held in Wheeling on April 29 and 30, 1913, has been in the picture exhibition business for the past five years. His Wonderland Fotoplay House at Point Pleasant, W. Va., is one of the neatest and best equipped little picture theaters in the state. Projection is his hobby; says he gives the best picture in the United States and can prove it.

ENTERING upon the second year of its existence as a branch of the National League the West Virginia exhibitors' organization presents an especially solid front in the ranks of the motion picture men of the country. It had a very good start before the Chicago convention and has been growing steadily ever since. There are a number of good hustlers in the organization and special efforts have been made from time to time to induce non-members to affiliate. Good results have been gained by this persistent campaign and there are few picture theater managers of note in that state who are not in the league.

R. Robinson,

Delegate from the West Virginia League.

Mr. Robinson was elected to represent the West Virginia Exhibitors' League at the National Convention in New York. He is a partner with Charles Smoot in the Camden Theater at Parkersburg, W. Va.



P. W. Barrett,

Delegate from West Virginia League.

Mr. Barrett is proprietor of the Star Theater, Parkersburg, West Va., and the Colonial, Marietta, Ohio. He entered the business in 1909, was one of the organizers of the West Virginia League in 1912, and served as its treasurer until 1913.

The last convention of the West Virginia Exhibitors' League was held at Wheeling on April 29 and 30, 1913. This was just after the period of high water that struck the towns along the Ohio river, and a number of West Virginia exhibitors were seriously affected. It was difficult for many and impossible for some to get to Wheeling on account of the interruption of railway communications at that time, but there was a good attendance when the convention was called to order. To make the proceedings more interesting a number of exhibitors from nearby Ohio towns came over and joined in the festivities. President Neff of the National League was in attendance and the Mayors of Wheeling, W. Va., and Bellaire, Ohio, united to add dignity to the occasion.

There was considerable business transacted, a number of important matters coming up for disposal at that meeting. After all business had been disposed of on the second day, a banquet was announced to take place. There was an elaborate menu to which was added a large portion of eloquence from the members and invited guests. The merrymaking lasted until the small hours and the exhibitors returned to their homes greatly edified and happy.

To further add to the importance of the convention there was a large delegation of manufacturers' agents and supply men in attendance who contributed to the entertainment of the exhibitors and to the general success of the meeting.

The following officers were elected to serve during the coming year:

President, A. G. Frohme, Home Theater, Wheeling; National Vice-President, A. L. Cottrill, Wonderland Theater, Point Pleasant; First Vice-President, Russell Lynn, Dixie Theater, Fairmount; Second Vice-President, Patrick McGovern, Odeon Theater, Clarksburg; Treasurer, D. B. Fagan, Amusu Theater, Ronceverte; Secretary, M. A. Sybert, Park Theater, Moundsville.

Delegates to the National Convention in New York are: L. R. Thomas, R. Robinson, U. P. Kemper, P. W. Barrett, D. B. Eagan, R. E. Mc Cray. Alternates: C. W. Perrine, Frank McCray, J. B. Cotts, James Vilas, John Papaulias, O. F. Langworthy.

Looking forward, the West Virginia exhibitors hope to bring about conditions, through close co-operation, that will make the motion picture business in this particular state a calling that will command respect.

L. R. Thomas,

Delegate from West Virginia League.

Mr. Thomas, one of the delegates from West Virginia, has been connected with the picture business for the past four years. He formerly managed the Orpheum Theater at Moundsville and still retains an interest in that house. When the first convention of motion picture men was held in West Virginia he was elected secretary of the State League. This year he has been giving his time to the work of organizing and did much to make the Virginia State Convention a success. He did some preliminary work for the Pennsylvania State Convention and helped perfect the arrangements for the National Convention at New York.

B. D. Eagan,

Treasurer of the West Virginia League.

Mr. Eagan, the treasurer of the West Virginia Exhibitors' League, started his picture exhibiting career about seven years ago, building and selling picture theaters. He was an exchange manager for a time and now represents the General Film Company in the southeastern part of West Virginia. He is owner and manager of the Amusu Theater in Ronceverte. At the last convention of the West Virginia Exhibitors in Wheeling Mr. Eagan was elected to the office of treasurer and will be a delegate to the National Convention in New York.

ARKANSAS EXHIBITORS GET TOGETHER

Enthusiastic Meeting Held at Little Rock Results in Formation of State League.

O. A. Bandy,

President of the Arkansas League.

Mr. Bandy, president of the Arkansas Exhibitors' League, dates his entrance into the picture business back in 1899, when he gave magic lantern shows. Later he was connected with the Crystal Theater Company of Little Rock, Ark. as secretary and manager for a number of years. He is now proprietor and manager of the Colonial Theater of Argentina. He is a close observer of the rapid advance and a firm believer in the "World's Greatest Common Educator," the motion picture.

Dave A. Hutchinson,

Secretary of the Arkansas League.

Mr. Hutchinson, secretary of the Arkansas Exhibitors' League, began business as an exhibitor in Lonoke, Ark., in 1909, where he has since continued. His house is known as the Magnate Theater, and under his management has succeeded in drawing nearly everyone in that town to see the pictures. Mr. Hutchinson claims to be the personal friend of all his patrons. He is a native of Arkansas and is but thirty-two years old.

THROUGH the efforts of National Vice-President S. A. Arnold, assisted by President Neff, of the National League, a gathering of Arkansas exhibitors was secured at Little Rock on February 14, 1913. Deputy Organizer George H. Wiley was present and assisted in the work. The attendance was large and deep interest was shown in the object of the meeting. Mr. Wiley explained the purposes of the league and told what had been accomplished in other states through the organization.

E. H. Butler,

Treasurer of the Arkansas League.

Mr. Butler, who was elected to the office of treasurer of the Arkansas Exhibitors' League at the last state convention, Feb. 14, 1913, is owner of the Electric and Crescent theaters of Russellville, Ark. He made his first start in the year 1909, at Russellville, and has been very successful ever since. The Electric is an indoor theater and the Crescent an airdome. Both houses are splendidly equipped and run in the best manner. Mr. Butler has taken considerable interest in the work of the League and is a strong advocate of its principles.

Hoyt Kirkpatrick,

Second Vice-President of the Arkansas League.

Mr. Kirkpatrick, second vice-president of the Arkansas Exhibitors' League, is proprietor and manager of the Joie and Princess theaters of Fort Smith, Ark. He first engaged in the business ten years ago in Cleburne, Texas, as proprietor of the Mystic Theater. From there he went to Gainesville, Texas, where he formed the firm of Bertram & Kirkpatrick. The venture in Fort Smith came later. His houses are considered beautiful examples of the picture theater of the day. Enthusiastic in the work of the League, Mr. Kirkpatrick was elected to the board of officers of the Arkansas League when it was formed.

A committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws and the work of organizing was pushed to a successful finish. All the exhibitors present who were qualified signed the roll of members and an application was made for a charter from the National League.

Officers were elected as follows:

President: O. A. Bandy, Little Rock.

National vice-president: S. A. Arnold, Mena.

First vice-president: S. H. White, England.

Second vice-president: Hoyt Kirkpatrick, Fort Smith.

Treasurer: E. H. Butler, Russellville.

Secretary: D. A. Hutchinson, Lonoke.

A board of directors was elected consisting of L. W. Lippencott, Little Rock; E. H. Bellingsley, Helena; W. G. Mitchell, Altus; F. E. Wright, Gurdon; and C. C. Williams, Stuttgart.

June 19, 1913 was named as the date for the next convention to be held at Little Rock.

There was an expressed determination on the part of the organizers of the Arkansas League to make a strong effort to bring all picture exhibitors in the state into the organization. There are quite a number of enterprising exhibitors in Arkansas, which has some of the best picture theaters in the country and a good showing will undoubtedly be made at the National convention.

The board of officers of the new organization are men who have had considerable experience in the picture business. President Bandy dates his connection back to the days of the magic lantern entertainment. He entertains a high estimate of the motion picture as an educational force. S. A. Arnold, the National vice-president, has been in the picture business for the past five years and has been connected with several theaters. Hoyt Kirkpatrick, the second vice-president, claims ten years service in the theater business. His houses are models of their kind. Secretary Hutchinson entered the business in 1909 and owns a fine house at Lonoke. Treasurer Butler began business the same year. All are competent men of affairs and will do their utmost to make the new organization a success.

It is expected that the Arkansas exhibitors will select a strong delegation to attend the national convention in New York. Possibly, some of the board of officers, whose pictures are shown herewith, will be among that delegation. If they do come you will hear from Arkansas.

S. A. Arnold,

National Vice-President of the Arkansas League.

Mr. Arnold, national vice-president of the Arkansas Exhibitors' League, is manager of the Lyric Theater of Mena, Ark. He got into the business five years ago and has owned and developed several different picture theaters. He is one of the live wires of the exhibition business.

H. S. White,

First Vice-President of the Arkansas League.

Mr. White, first vice-president of the Arkansas Exhibitors' League, is engaged in the motion picture theater business at England, Ark., where he owns and manages a first-class house.

Officers and Members of the Virginia Exhibitors' League, Taken at Richmond Convention, May 23, 1913.

VIRGINIA EXHIBITORS GOING STRONG

Convention Held at the Psychological Moment—New Organization Working for a Record

Abe Seligman,

Delegate from the Louisiana League.

Mr. Seligman, of New Orleans, one of the delegates to the New York convention for Louisiana, is manager of the Lafayette Theater, New Orleans, and a live wire. He built up a fine patronage for his theater by the application of real showman's tactics. It had been one of New Orleans' best dramatic houses but was badly run down when Seligman got control. It is now doing a turn-away business. Mr. Seligman is one of the first members of the Louisiana League. He started in the theatrical business as an usher in the old Academy of Music

VIRGINIA exhibitors never attempted to form a state organization until this year, when L. R. Thomas, of Wheeling, W. Va., visited Richmond about May 10th and opened a campaign. The psychological moment had arrived. The exhibitors of the capital city were anxious to do something, but did not know just how to start the ball a-rolling. Mr. Thomas had had some experience in the work of getting exhibitors together and his services were welcome. After an extensive correspondence with the exhibitors in the various cities, Mr. Thomas began a personal canvass visiting most of the important towns within reach of Richmond. The date for the meeting was named and acknowledgments began to come in with gratifying response.

The convention was held in the Jefferson Hotel, Richmond, on May 23rd, and about thirty exhibitors attended. President Neff, of the national league, was present and explained the objects of the league, after which the organization was formed by the adoption of a constitution and by-laws and the election of officers.

After the meeting there was a banquet, at which the members and their wives were present. There was a fine entertainment and many good speeches. Mr. Thomas acted as toastmaster on this occasion.

The officers elected are: President, C. E. Tandy, Richmond; national vice-president, H. C. Stradford, Richmond; first vice-president, C. A. Turner, Portsmouth; second vice-president, A. H. Campbell, Newport; treasurer, D. P. Wine, Harrisonburg; secretary, E. J. Sparks, Petersburg; sergeant-at-arms, A. F. Parish, Richmond.

Delegates to the national convention in New York are: Mrs. A. E. Thorp, Richmond; C. E. Tandy, Richmond; J. W. Myrtle, Staunton; J. C. Boss, Norfolk; W. T. Crall, Norfolk. Alternates: M. L. Hofheimer, Richmond; J. Weinberg, Lexington; D. P. Wine, Harrisonburg; J. T. Hill, Petersburg; R. B. Holstein, Petersburg.

The outlook for a flourishing state organization is good. Both the president and secretary are live wires and are already on the job. Recent reports are flattering.

W. L. Jennings,

Delegate from the Louisiana League.

Mr. Jennings, one of the delegates from the Louisiana Exhibitors' League, is proprietor of the Lyceum Theater at Monroe, La. He got into the motion picture business about three years ago in New Orleans and two years ago he bought the Lyceum Theater at Monroe, La., and made it one of the biggest successes in the South. It has a seating capacity of 500 and is modern in every point. Mr. Jennings is but 31 years old and has been identified with the amusement business for the past ten years in different capacities. He is a great League booster.

"GUM SHOE" CAMPAIGN IN MISSOURI

Exhibitors of the "Show Me" State Keep Mighty Quiet, but They Deliver the Goods—Large Membership Said to Exist in the Missouri League

George D. Spragg,

Delegate from the Ohio League.

Mr. Spragg, a delegate from the Ohio Exhibitors' League, is one of the pioneer picture men of Eastern Ohio. He was in business fifteen years ago when the pictures came in fifty-foot lengths and has been the manager and founder of several houses. Three years ago he organized the Spragg Amusement Company of Bellaire, Ohio, of which he is president and manager, and controls the Elk, Grand and Olympic Theaters in that city, with an interest in houses at Salem, Ohio, Woodsfield, Wheeling, Fairmount, McKeesport and other points in West Virginia and Pennsylvania. He is one of the strongest of League members and is active in all its work. He stands for clean pictures and the general uplift.

OUT in the state of Missouri it is reported that they are doing things. Now and then one gets evidence that this is a fact, but the lines of communication have been almost entirely cut off during the past year, so that little news of the work of the Missouri League has come through. George H. Wiley of Kansas City is president of the state organization and National vice-president as well. It is suspected that he is a disciple of the famous "Gum Shoe" Stone, so quietly has he gone about his task of getting exhibitors into the League. But we have it from good authority that he has been doing great work in his state and that Missouri will come down to the Bronx River with a large majority.

According to the records the first convention of exhibitors in Missouri was held in February, 1912. Since that time several meetings have been held in that state and one was scheduled for June 23 and 24 of this year, for the election of officers and delegates to the New York convention. It is almost certain that President Wiley will be in New York and will bring several progressive Missouri exhibitors with him.

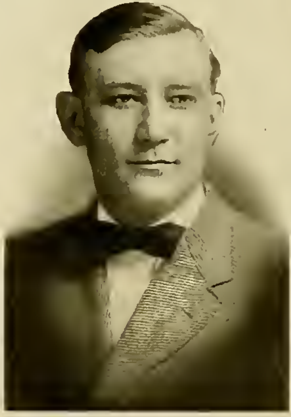
Harry Heimerdinger,

Secretary of the Cincinnati Local.

Mr. Heimerdinger, secretary of the Cincinnati Local Exhibitors' League, is owner and manager of the Mermaid Theater, Cincinnati, Ohio, and has had considerable experience in the exhibition business. He was elected secretary of the Cincinnati Local in February, 1913, and reports that organization going along finely. It is the largest local in the state, having more than 70 members. Mr. Heimerdinger expects to attend the National Convention in New York.

That President Wiley and his associates have been busy is proved by the fact that there are eleven local organizations in his state. These are the cities organized: Slater, Kirksville, Kansas City, St. Louis, Springfield, Webb City, Nevada, Brookfield and St. Joe—a pretty fair showing.

The present officers, that is prior to the convention of June 23, are President, G. H. Wiley, Kansas City; Secretary, F. L. Welsh, Kansas City; Treasurer, J. S. Tillman, St. Louis.



Fred P. Reichert,

Delegate from the Ohio League.

Mr. Reichert owns the Lion Theater at Port Clinton, Ohio. He has been in the business in that town for the past five years, erecting his own house in 1908. It is considered one of the finest picture theaters in Northern Ohio and is getting the business. Mr. Reichert was one of the original organizers of the Ohio League and was elected second vice-president at the meeting in Columbus in 1910. He is at present the president of the Sandusky Local No. 7. At the last State Convention in Columbus he was elected to represent the Ohio League at the National Convention in New York.

H. E. Vestal,

Delegate from Ohio League.

Mr. Vestal entered the motion picture exhibition business in 1907, for the purpose of regaining his health, which had been undermined by too close application to the profession of pharmacist and chemist. He was born in Marion, Ohio, and is a graduate of the Ohio Northern University. In 1907 he built the Lyric Theater at Ada, Ohio. It has a seating capacity of 250, and is one of the best little houses in that state. He ran vaudeville for a time, but finds greater profit by leaving it alone. Mr. Vestal runs only the best pictures, eliminating the sensational. He has owned three other houses in other Ohio towns and is an enthusiastic picture theater man. He is also a firm believer in the principles advocated by the Moving Picture World as the best to elevate the business.

Aside from his duties as president of the Missouri League Mr. Wiley has been acting as deputy organizer for the National League and has been working in Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska. He has attended conventions in several western states and is a hustler when it comes to organizing.

President Wiley is expected to take quite a prominent part during the convention in New York. If you want to know, it is quite likely that he will make a strong bid for the next convention to be held in St. Louis. If he wants it he will come pretty near getting it. You can back Wiley to win.

Sam E. Morris,

Delegate from the Ohio League.

Sam Morris is one of the leading exhibitors in Cleveland and a worker for the organization. He has filled several offices in the Cleveland Local, and is president of the Cleveland Local.

Lem. S. Miller,

Delegate from the Ohio League.

Mr. Miller is a lawyer who has drawn many of the measures which have been offered in the Ohio General Assembly and the Cincinnati Board of Aldermen for some time past. He is general counsel of the Cincinnati Local. One of his works of art was the Ohio Censor Law, which was passed at the last session of the General Assembly of that state.

Exhibitors Organize at New Haven, Conn.

A meeting of the motion picture exhibitors of New Haven, Conn., was held on October 3, 1912, and an organization to be known as the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New Haven was formed. These officers were elected: President, John Gentile; secretary, James J. Cannon; treasurer, Mr. Fahy. Later: Samuel Eskin was elected president on account of the resignation of Mr. Gentile.

EXHIBITORS STRONG IN INDIANA

Hoosier State League Well Organized and Influential—Has Held Much Harmful Legislation During the Year

J. M. Rhodes,

President of the Indiana League.

President Rhodes is one of the leading picture men of Indianapolis and has been particularly active in the work of the League.

Ed J. Addy,

Secretary of the Indiana League.

Secretary Addy is one of the hustling picture men of Indianapolis. His work for the League has been very efficient.

Fred Abbley,

Biloxi, Miss.

National Vice-President of the Mississippi League.

EVER since the movement to organize the motion picture theater managers was started there has been something doing in League affairs in the state of Indiana. The present state organization dates back to December, 1911, entitling it to second place in the line, but in point of interest it is in the front rank. Of course it has had the benefit of the presence among its members of such men as F. J. Rembusch, J. M. Rhodes, W. R. Deaton and others who who are in the habit of doing things when they get started. These men have left no stones unturned in their efforts to create a strong and influential league in their state.

Naturally, being next door to Ohio, they would get the benefit of the spirit of organization which pervades that state; it has helped some, but it is still the enthusiasm that is characteristic of nearly every exhibitor in the state of Indiana that is most responsible for the rapid growth of the league in that state. There are many high-class picture theaters in Indiana, owned and operated by high-class men, which accounts in a measure for the readiness of Indiana exhibitors to see the value of organization.

Although the Indiana League reported a large membership at the last convention in Chicago, its numbers have been steadily increased since that date. The last annual meeting and election of officers was held in Indianapolis on Dec. 10 and 11, 1912. At this meeting an advanced position was taken on the question of tobacco coupons and "wild west" pictures, resolutions being adopted condemning both propositions in no uncertain terms.

The question of meeting adverse legislation was also taken up and a special defense fund was raised to maintain a strong committee to look after all proposed laws. The wisdom of this step was amply proved before the last session of the Indiana legislature closed, for several bills, calculated to regulate the motion picture business in a manner that would have caused great loss to the picture men of the state were subsequently killed. Among these was one to prevent picture shows opening on Sunday and another was to establish a censor board. A strong fight was made on the latter measure before it was put to sleep. The picture men had several measures of their own intended to safeguard the business, but all their energies were required to combat other injurious measures. As a result no laws affecting the picture business were passed in Indiana by the last legislature, which is considered somewhat of a victory by the Indiana League.

In these fights President Rhodes, National Vice-President Rembusch and Secretary Addy were the leading spirits and are entitled to considerable praise.

At the convention held last December these officers were elected:

President: Dr. J. M. Rhodes, Indianapolis.
First vice-president: Sprague Green, Fort Wayne.
Second vice-president: Phillip Skora, Evansville.
Third vice-president: John Truelock, Indianapolis.
Fourth vice-president: H. L. St. Claire, Gary.
Fifth vice-president: Clifford Cole, Elkhart.
Treasurer: A. C. Zaring, Indianapolis.
Secretary: Ed J. Addy, Indianapolis.
National vice-president: F. J. Rembusch, Shelbyville.

This board of officers have made a reputation for themselves in Indiana because of the forceful campaign they have waged in behalf of the organization. It is believed that the Indiana report will show a condition in that state fully as good as will be shown by the banner state—Ohio.

F. J. Rembusch,

National Vice-President of the Indiana League.

Few exhibitors need an introduction to Mr. Rembusch: he is the "Mirror Screen" man of Shelbyville. Ind. His picture theater interests include three big houses in Shelbyville, and two in Indianapolis, with another big one on the way. He has been engaged in the picture business for several years and is one of the leading men in both State and National Leagues.

A. C. Zaring,

Treasurer of the Indiana League.

Treasurer Zaring is another popular Indianapolis exhibitor whose labors in behalf of the Exhibitors' League, state and local, has been important

---

Exhibitors Organize at Danville, Ill.

Moving picture exhibitors in the territory for fifty miles around Danville, Ill., gathered at the Exhibit Theater, of that city, on the evening of June 17 and formed the Danville District League. About twenty exhibitors were present. W. J. Sweeney, National Vice-President of the National League for Illinois, attended and assisted in the work of organizing. Officers were elected as follows:

President, J. S. Quirk, Arcola.
Vice-President, Dr. C. H. Evans, Danville.
Secretary and Treasurer, J. W. Dillon, Danville.

It is reported that there are about seventy-five picture theaters in the territory included in the Danville District, and that a campaign will be started at once to induce these to join the new organization.

Massachusetts Exhibitors Organize

Assisted by President Neff of the National League and Samuel H. Trigger, president of the New York State League, the exhibitors of Massachusetts held a convention in Commercial Hall, Boston, on Nov. 19, 1912, and successfully organized a branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League for that state. The objects of the league were explained by Messrs. Neff and Trigger and the work of organization was taken up. Forty-five exhibitors signed the charter roll and officers were elected as follows:

President: Joseph Mack, Boston.
First vice-president: Charles Hodden, Wakefield.
Second vice-president: C. W. Buckley.
Treasurer: S. H. Bunce, Boston.
Secretary: Alden H. Washburn, Boston.
National vice-president: George F. Washburn, Boston.

A good start was made by the new league, but interest has waned during the past few months. President Mack has resigned and his successor has not yet been elected, but it is believed that a little agitation will result in bringing the organization to life.

District of Columbia Exhibitors

There is a very healthy little organization of exhibitors in the District of Columbia, affiliated with the National League. William P. Herbst is its president, and Fulton Brylawski, secretary and National vice-president. This organization has been in existence about two years, during which time its fortunes have varied. At the present writing it is in fine shape and has a membership of at least forty-five. There are some very fine picture theaters in Washington and Georgetown and good business is reported.

Delaware Exhibitors Organize

A convention of motion picture exhibitors was held in Wilmington, Delaware, on May 26. The sessions were held in the Du Pont Hotel and resulted in the permanent organization of the Delaware Exhibitors' League with the following offices:

National vice-president: James N. Ginns, Wilmington.
President: Charles I. Beckett.
Vice-president: David R. Sablaski.
Treasurer: Nicholas A. Jones.
Secretary: Harry E. Klume.

It was decided to hold another meeting on June 20, at the Dupont Hotel, Wilmington. President Neff attended the first meeting and reports that Delaware will have a strong organization within a few months.

Michigan Elects Officers

There is not much information from Michigan, but the state organization is busy in that state and has been successful in side-tracking some detrimental legislation during the past year. A state convention of the Michigan Exhibitors' League was held at Saginaw on June 10 and 11, at which the following state officers were elected:

President: Peter J. Juep, Detroit.
National vice-president: J. M. Neal, Saginaw.
First vice-president: J. J. Rieder, Jackson.
Second vice-president: Fred Richter, Muskegon.
Treasurer: Herbert Fowser, Lansing.
Secretary: J. B. Caldwell, Battle Creek.
Delegates elected to represent the Michigan League at the National convention in New York are, E. M. Smith, Grand Rapids; August Kliest, Pontiac; Peter J. Juep, Detroit.

The next state convention will be held at Battle Creek.

ORGANIZATION OF MISSISSIPPI EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE—Group of Picture Men Who Attended the Convention at Jackson, May 8, 1913.

THE formal organization of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Mississippi was accomplished at Gulfport, Miss., on March 28, 1913. President Neff attended the meeting and assisted in the work. The officers elected are: President, H. A. Carleton, Jackson; first vice-president, B. A. Mulligan, Vicksburg; second vice-president, C. H. Howell, Okolona; secretary, R. H. Redus, West Point; treasurer, G. W. Wilkes, Biloxi; national vice-president, Fred Abbley, Gulfport; sergeant-at-arms, S. L. Taylor, Pass Christian.

An interesting and profitable business session was held and the task of organization carefully laid out for a State-wide canvass. An adjournment was taken to meet at an early date at the call of the president.

On May 8 a second convention was held at Jackson. The meetings were held in the Board of Trade Assembly Hall and the league headquarters were at the Noble Hotel. There was a good attendance of members and twenty more were added to the rolls.

After the business meetings the members of the league enjoyed an automobile tour of the city, and the day was concluded with a Dutch lunch at the Bon Ton cafe, and they say it was some lunch.

Representatives of several exchanges were present.

The accompanying group does not include all those present, but only those who could be rounded up at the time. According to last reports the Mississippi League is growing rapidly and in fine condition.

LEAGUE BOOMING IN OKLAHOMA

Organization Starts Off with a Strong List of Members and They Have Been Hustling Ever Since

Carl Gregg,

National Vice-President of the Oklahoma League.

Mr. Gregg, national vice-president of the Oklahoma Exhibitors' League, began business in a small show in Enid, Okla., in 1907, building two new houses there later, both of which he sold. From Enid he moved to Tulsa in 1909, where he has since been connected with a number of theater ventures and now owns and manages the Lyric No. 1 and the Grand Opera House and is building a new vaudeville theater. At one time Mr. Gregg traveled for the old Mitchell Film Exchange of Memphis, Tenn., and for J. W. Morgan Film Exchange of St. Louis, Mo. He is one of the best League boosters in the West.

WHEN it comes to booming things you have to go to Oklahoma to see how that job is really done. Ever since the Chicago convention last year there has been something stirring down in Oklahoma. A lot of preliminary work was mapped out and the state was carefully canvassed for members to the new league. The date for the first meeting was set for Feb. 11 and 12, and there was a general exodus of exhibitors from all over the state toward Oklahoma City where the convention was to be held. The headquarters of the "boomers" was at the Skirvine Hotel which had arranged to accommodate the picture men.

Deputy Organizer George H. Wiley was detailed to attend the meeting and help the work along. The exhibitors got down to business in earnest and soon had their meeting in order and officers elected. These are the men who were chosen:

President: R. W. Wirt, Enid.

National vice-president: Carl Gregg, Tulsa.

First vice-president: J. H. Steinson, McAlester.

Second vice-president: O. McLane, Oklahoma City.

Treasurer: W. M. Smith, Tulsa.

Secretary: R. DeBruler, Oklahoma City.

A board of directors was elected consisting of the following members: L. W. Brophy, Muskogee; S. H. Jones, Altus; H. T. Gardner, Holdenville; Leroy Beckel, Ardmore; A. R. Zimmer, Blackwell.

After all the work of the meeting had been disposed of the members, to the number of sixty, partook of an excellent banquet in the Skirvine Hotel. An entertainment was provided by the orchestra of the Lyric Theater, Tulsa, owned by the national vice-president, Carl Gregg. Later the orchestra from the Empress Theater, Oklahoma City, appeared and added to the pleasure of the diners. Mr. Wiley was master of ceremonies and kept things moving, so that everybody went home happy and glad that they were members of the Oklahoma League. Delegates to the New York convention: Carl Gregg, Tulsa; William Smith, Tulsa; L. W. Brophy, Muskogee; T. H. Boland, Oklahoma City; Miss Amelia Hunter, Ardmore; W. L. Bumpas, Duncan. Another convention has been called for October 29 and 30, 1913.

John A. Steinson,

First Vice-President of the Oklahoma League.

Mr. Steinson, first vice-president of the Oklahoma Exhibitors' League, is proprietor of the Liberty and Forum theaters of McAlester, Okla. He has been in business for some years, and is an enthusiastic supporter of the League.

South Dakota League Organized

Good Start Made by the Exhibitors of S. D. at Huron on February 7, 1913

J. E. Hipple,

National Vice-President of the South Dakota League.

Mr. Hipple, national vice-president of the South Dakota Exhibitors' League, owns the Bijou Theater, the most popular picture theater in Pierre, S. D. He has held office in that state and is a man of large affairs. His activity in the interest of the picture theater managers of his state won deserved recogniton at the State Convention in January, 1913, when he was elected to his present office in the State organization.

ONE of this year's batch of new state organizations is the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of South Dakota, which was organized at Huron on February 7. After a little preliminary work about a dozen of the leading exhibitors of the state got together. A number signified their intention to join the new organization, but were prevented from attending the first meeting.

At the Huron meeting a constitution and by-laws were prepared and officers were elected as follows:

President: L. D. Milne, Maynard theater, Mitchell.

First vice-president: Dr. E. C. Smith, Crystal theater, Geddes.

Second vice-president: J. A. Dundas, Julian theater, Chamberlain.

Secretary and treasurer: M. B. Balsiger, Bijou theater, Huron.

National vice-president: J. E. Hipple, Bijou theater, Pierre.

A legislative committee was appointed consisting of L. D. Milne, M. B. Balsiger. Dr. E. C. Smith, J. E. Hipple, and J. A. Dundas, with instructions to prepare a bill to govern the motion picture business for introduction in the legislature. The bill was presented and endorsed by the members of the league before adjournment.

A second convention was held on April 9, at Huron. C. C. Baker, of New Britton, was elected treasurer and a number of new members were reported.

The South Dakota exhibitors were fortunate in escaping annoying legislation, though the last session of the legislature of that state passed more reform laws than at any former session. Nothing was done with the bill previously prepared by the league and it was decided to have a general law prepared to present to the next session.

A general shake-up of exhibitors in South Dakota is looked for after the New York convention. The territory has not all been covered, and there is considerable league timber in that state yet to be worked into the shape of new members.

J. A. Dundas,

Second Vice-President of the South Dakota League.

Mr. Dundas, who is second vice-president of the South Dakota Exhibitors' League, is proprietor of the Julian Theater at Chamberlain, S. D. He started in the business in 1908, after a long career as a traveling salesman. His business has developed with the general growth of the trade so that his present theater is something to be proud of. Projection is his hobby and his picture is as fine as can be found in the West. Advocating a clean show always, Mr. Dundas is particularly fitted for the prominent position he holds in the League work in his state, to which he has given much time and support.

STARTING THINGS DOWN IN MAINE

Interest Is Aroused and a Permanent Organization is Formed at Portland—Delegation Coming to New York

Hiram Abrams,
Portland, Me.
National Vice-President of the Maine League.

IT HAS taken a long time to get the down-east exhibitors interested in the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. A showing was made in Massachusetts a few months ago, but no great interest has been aroused. Recently an effort was made in Maine to get the exhibitors together. At the instance of one of the leading exchange managers a meeting was called at Waterville, Maine, on June 4, and quite a number of exhibitors responded. The meeting resulted in a request to President Neff, of the national league, to be present at a meeting to be held later for the purpose of forming a permanent organization.

Arrangements were made later for a meeting at Portland on June 23. Being unable to attend, President Neff delegated L. R. Thomas as deputy organizer, to meet the Maine exhibitors and perfect the organization. In response to the call, some twenty-five exhibitors met at the Falmouth Hotel, Portland, on the date set, and, under the direction of Mr. Thomas, succeeded in forming the Maine Exhibitors' League.

A committee consisting of Hiram Abrams, Moxley Blumenberg and J. W. Greeley were appointed to frame a constitution and by-laws. The next meeting will be held at Bangor at the call of the secretary.

Much credit is accorded Fred V. Murphy, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation exchange at Waterville, for inaugurating the movement that resulted in the formation of the Maine league.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Moxley Blumenberg, Portland; national vice-president, Hiram Abrams, Portland; first vice-president, F. J. Fortin, Lisbon Falls; second vice-president, J. A. McConville, Portland; treasurer, J. W. Greeley, Portland; secretary J. A. Emery, Bar Harbor; sergeant-at-arms, A. P. Bibber, Lewiston.

Delegates to the national convention at New York: Arthur A. Allen, A. B. Rosenberg, J. W. Greeley, F. E. Mortimer, J. E. Ledger, M. St. Ledger and I. M. Mosher.

The Maine delegation will make the trip to New York by automobile.

J. W. Greeley,
Portland, Me.
Treasurer of the Maine League.

EXHIBITORS ORGANIZED AT PASSAIC, N. J.

At a meeting of exhibitors of Passaic, N. J., held on Nov. 12, a permanent organization to be known as the Passaic County Exhibitors' League, was formed. The officers elected were: President, William Daly; vice-president, Max Gold; treasurer, Adam Adams; secretary, Samuel Stretton; state vice-president, W. J. Montgomery.

JEFFERSON COUNTY, TEXAS, EXHIBITORS.

The exhibitors of Jefferson County, Texas, representing theaters at Port Arthur and Beaumont, have an organization known as the Jefferson County Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, which is affiliated with the Texas league. The officers are: President, John I. Pittman; vice-president, Pat Lenox; secretary and treasurer, J. C. Clemmons.

ST. LOUIS LOCAL ORGANIZED.

Motion picture exhibitors of St. Louis, Mo., held a meeting at the Planters Hotel on September 19, 1912, and organized the St. Louis Local No. 3 of the Missouri League. Officers were elected as follows: President, William J. Flynn; vice-president, E. H. Pipe; secretary, James Tillman; treasurer, William Seevers; sergeant-at-arms, Otto Lauman. Offices were opened and meetings are being held every week.

NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION.

A convention of the New York State League was held at the Imperial Hotel, New York, Saturday, July 5, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year and delegates to the National Convention in New York. There was a large attendance and the proceedings were interesting. President Samuel Trigger presided and President Neff, of th National League, was in attendance.

GROUP OF OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF THE MAINE LEAGUE—TAKEN AT THE PORTLAND CONVENTION, JUNE 23, 1913

Front row—left to right—J. A. Emery, secretary; L. R. Thomas, National organizer; F. J. Fortin, first vice-president; Moxley Blumenberg, president; Hiram Abrams, National vice-president; J. A. McConville, second vice-president; J. W. Greeley, treasurer.

AMONG THE PICTURE THEATERS

News and Views of Houses Here and There

NEW PARK THEATER, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The accompanying cut illustrates the front elevation of the New Park Theater, Minneapolis, Minn. It is situated at 823-825 Tenth Street, South, and is thoroughly fireproof in construction, brick and concrete being used. The indirect lighting system is installed. The seating capacity is 500. T. C. Sharp is the manager.

SHOW
KING BAGGOTT
THE LEADER OF HIS FLOCK

New Park Theater.

COLONIAL THEATER, SARANAC LAKE, N. Y.

We give representation herewith to the Colonial theater, 55 Broadway, Saranac Lake, N. Y. The house was opened on April 10, 1912, by Mr. J. H. Farrington as a moving picture and vaudeville house, but has played road attractions occasionally. It is the only theater in Saranac Lake, which town has a population of 5,000. The structure is built of brick and is thoroughly fireproof. It has a seating capacity of five hundred, three hundred and fifty is on the parquet floor, and the remaining one hundred and fifty in the balcony. An unobstructed view of the stage and screen can be had from any chair in the house and one can sit in comfort in the seats, which are veneered and handsome. The interior decorations are in red, green and gold. Every aisle in the house is covered with rubber matting which deadens the sound of incoming and outgoing patrons. Rubber matting in many respects is better than carpet. It can be easily cleaned and scrubbed and does not let dust penetrate through, as does carpet.

Colonial Theater.

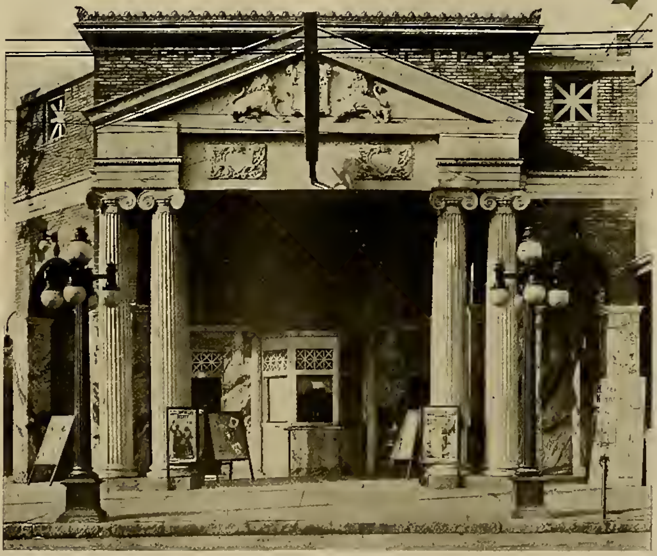
The place is lighted by electricity, but gas has been installed in case the "juice" fails to come. Of course the gas would in that emergency be used solely for the purpose of lighting as it would be of no benefit to the projection machine. In the operator's booth, which is constructed of fireproof material, there are all the latest improvements and equipments, including a Power's machine. Should a fire break out in the operating room, the automatic drop shutters would close, thereby keeping the audience in ignorance of any trouble.

The theater is heated throughout by a hot water heating system, and is equipped with chemical fire extinguishers, stand pipes and hose. The height of the main auditorium is thirty-two feet. The dimensions of the stage are 22 feet deep by 27 feet wide. The ventilation of the house is perfect, and all the requirements called for by law are strictly complied with. Music is furnished by an orchestra consisting of a piano, a violin and drums. Moving pictures and vaudeville form the entertainments, except when a road show is booked.

GRECIAN THEATER, EL PASO, TEXAS.

There are not many moving picture theaters either in this country or abroad that can be compared with the Grecian theater of El Paso, Texas, in point of beauty. The house has the best front for a city the size of El Paso that we have ever seen, and we believe that many of our readers will bear us out in this assertion after a careful look at the accompanying photograph of the Grecian. The four big Grecian columns and the plain architectural designs above the entrance give the place an imposing appearance, and there are no ugly posters vitiating the entrance. Some managers of picture houses would have us believe that an entrance littered with alluring posters of all descriptions is a pulling power and draws the crowd. If those managers would try to have their entrances as plain and neat as the entrance of the Grecian theater, they would soon notice that their patronage would increase and that the better class of people would patronize their houses. Attention should be directed to the clusters of ornamental electric lights on the columns in front of this theater. These give the house a refined and inviting appearance, and illuminate the place brilliantly by night.

The Grecian is owned by Messrs. Lewis and Andreas, of El Paso, who are also the owners of the Princess in the same city. The auditorium of the Grecian is 80 by 100 feet and has a seating capacity of 600. The curtain is placed just inside the front entrance of the house; the operating room is at the rear, entirely separate from the main building. This is considered a strong feature by the owners, as it protects the audience thoroughly in case of fire in the operating room. J. M. Lewis is the manager.



Grecian Theater.

DIXIE THEATER, TEXARKANA, ARK.

The Dixie Theater, Texarkana, Ark., is owned and controlled by J. R. Bradly. He opened the house on February 17, 1910, and has been doing very satisfactory business since that time. The house has a seating capacity of 300. Moving pictures comprise the entertainment. In the operating room is a Standard machine, projecting a picture 9 by 11 feet. The theater is well ventilated.

DIXIE THEATRE
FORTY FIVE MINUTES FROM WORRY
INAUGURATION
To Day
To Day

Dixie Theater.

ALAMEDA THEATER, ALAMEDA, CAL.

A few months ago another theater was added to the string of handsome moving picture and vaudeville theaters under the direction of Messrs. Turner & Dahnken. The new house is known as the Alameda theater, Alameda, Cal. At the opening ceremonies many of Alameda's city officials were present, including Mayor Noy, who spoke very highly of the new theater. The house is making a great hit with the people of Alameda, and is enjoying the same large patronage with which other Turner & Dahnken moving picture and vaudeville houses are meeting.

ALAMEDA THEATRE

Alameda Theater.

REX THEATER, OLYMPIA, WASHINGTON.

The Rex theater of Olympia, Washington, is known as "Olympia's Leading Motion Picture House." As will be seen by the photograph published herewith it is a very pretty place of amusement, and we have no doubt, judging by its exterior appearance, it is the leading picture house in that city. In other words it is a capital house in the Capitol of the State of Washington. It was erected two years ago by Messrs. J. K. and L. B. Nave at the corner of Fourth and Washington streets. The building is built entirely of cement and its dimensions are 35 feet by 80 feet. Its seating capacity is around 400 persons. The house is fitted with opera chairs, a Weber baby grand piano, a stage and scenery. Vaudeville is very seldom used, the house being a strictly picture theater. There are two aisles, each two feet ten inches in width. The operating room is of fireproof construction with motor-driven Power's No. 6 machine in almost constant operation. The size of the picture is 11 feet by 14 feet from a sixty-five foot throw. Among the many up-to-the-minute apparatus in the operating room there is a dissolving stereopticon, a spot light and a mercury arc rectifier. The theater represents an investment of $6,000. Business is very good. Mr. Nave sold the theater on April 1, to Messrs. Allen & Morris.

Rex Theater.

[As the above description was published on page 1017 of the issue dated June 7, with a photograph of the Rex theater in Spokane, Wash., we are republishing it with a view of the right Rex theater.]

COLISEUM THEATER, NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.

John E. Roth, of Buffalo, has opened the Coliseum moving picture theater on Riverway, opposite the New York State park, Niagara Falls. The house has a capacity of 1,400. The location is ideal, only a short distance from the famous cataract. The front of the house resembles the Garden theater, Buffalo. Mr. Roth uses the Mutual, the Sherry Feature Film Company's and other pictures.

The house has a lower floor, balcony, a large lobby and a small stage. There are four exits, through which the theater can be speedily emptied in case of emergency. The decorations are in stucco work and the draperies used in the house cost $5,000. There are regulation opera chairs bought from the Garden theater, Buffalo. Five hundred electric bulbs keep the house perfectly lighted inside and out. There is an electric sign bearing the word "Coliseum" in the front of the theater.

Coliseum, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Coliseum Theater.

"We have the coolest place in town. We use a fan and air shaft to good advantage," said Mr. Roth, to a representative of the Moving Picture World. "We change our bills every day and our prices of admission are 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children."

Mr. Charles Hawtrey has finally arranged to play "The Message From Mars," before the camera for an English producing house.

GROWTH OF THE NEW JERSEY LEAGUE

An Association with a History That Goes Back Five Years

G. A. Robinson,
President of the New Jersey League.

L. F. Blumenthal,
National Vice-President, New Jersey League.

THE present New Jersey State League is a year old, but as far back as 1908 there was an organization that was known as the Exhibitors' League of New Jersey. It was originally named the "Amusement Managers' Association of Hudson County" and included a good number of motion picture exhibitors from Jersey City, Hoboken, West Hoboken and Union Hill. At this same time the Newark boys formed a local and soon afterward affiliated with the Hudson County Association. It was then deemed wise to have a name that included more territory than just one county. Therefore, with an eye to greater dignity and with a view to getting more members, the name was changed to "Exhibitors' League of New Jersey."

There was not much response from other parts of the State and Newark and Hudson County men were obliged to go it alone. They could go some, too, that old crowd. Under the leadership of Dr. H. Charles Hespe, president of the State League and the Hudson County Association, with plenty of grit, they headed off fool laws and killed other bad ones in a most decisive way. The present-day exhibitors of New Jersey owe a debt of thanks to the old association for having settled a number of knotty points at law. It was the old association that established the ten cent Saturday night and holiday admission price for the five cent theaters. One of the members, Mr. Wm. H. Van Horne, of Jersey City, spent three days in prison on a test case of the children's age limit law that involved habeas corpus proceedings. There are not many exhibitors who would sleep three nights in a cell in the hot summertime for the benefit of others. Mr. Van Horne did this and the bill was beaten and declared unconstitutional.

Paul M. Kirchner,
Secretary of the New Jersey League.

C. Fred Ruhlman,
Treasurer of the New Jersey League.

New Jersey is a state that is being governed by men who have been dead a hundred years. On the statute books are blue laws enough to put the whole state in prison for violations of the Sabbath. They were written by men who spent their Sundays with a Bible in one hand and a bottle of whiskey in the other. One of these laws actually reads that there shall be no promenading on the Sabbath except to walk decorously to and from church. Only to and from church, mind you, and decorously at that. To follow the Sabbath law strictly in New Jersey, not a wheel may turn, nor can medical aid be rendered except to the dying. Everyone knows it would be foolish to enforce these laws and they have fallen into disuse.

Once in a while they are dragged out when nothing else will serve, and that is how the New Jersey exhibitors come to be at this time fighting an old blue law that has been invoked against them. It is called the "Disorderly House" law and defines as a disorderly house any building where enjoyment may be had on the Sabbath. Ball games are exempt because they do not take place in a building. And this fact brings a curious point of difference between New York City and its near neighbor Jersey City, across the river. In Jersey, professional ball games may be played on Sundays, but motion pictures are not allowed. In New York, motion pictures are allowed and baseball games are barred.

The old association in New Jersey failed because there was no national organization of exhibitors. It seemed like an endless fight with nothing to look forward to. Furthermore the business was in a transitory state. Theaters were constantly changing hands and nothing was settled as it now is, and the New Jersey organization gradually died away. The field was left open to motion picture witch finders and they made things very hard for exhibitors.

When this state of affairs became unbearable, Mr. G. A. Robinson, proprietor of the Colonial Theater, West Hoboken, let his voice be heard in an appeal to the exhibitors of New Jersey to get together for their mutual benefit. In May of 1912, he called a meeting of exhibitors at Heflich's Hall, Jersey City, to form a state organization. Mr. M. A. Neff was in New York at the time and with Samuel H. Trigger, president of the New York State League, he made a trip to West Hoboken and organized the Exhibitors League of New Jersey.

There were not many exhibitors present that day, but those that were there

M. A. Sybert,
Moundsville, W. Va.
Secretary of the West Virginia League.

William M. Smith,
Tulsa, Okla.
Treasurer of the Oklahoma League.

Fred C. Young,
First Vice-President New Jersey League.

came from many directions and there were more different sections of the state represented than at any meeting that ever was held. This in itself was encouraging. Mr. Robinson was elected president as a reward for his energetic work. Wm. A. Daly, of Paterson, was elected vice-president; Frank P. Daley, of Hoboken, second vice-president; Paul M. Kirchner, of West Hoboken, secretary; C. Fred Ruhlman, of Trenton, treasurer, and Louis F. Blumenthal, national vice-president. Messrs. Robinson, Ruhlman and Blumenthal went to Chicago in July to represent the league at the national convention.

A year has passed away since then and the New Jersey league has been active. It has maintained a special Legislative Committee at Trenton and has opposed all injurious legislation with complete success. Mr. Robinson has suffered himself to be arrested several times as a violator of the Sunday blue laws and is at the present time a prisoner of the law, temporarily paroled in the hands of his friends. Mr. Robinson is leading the fight for Sunday opening. He is willing to be a prisoner if it will help the cause, but the New Jersey exhibitors should rally around him and fight with him, for the struggle is well on its way to success.

On the occasion of one of Mr. Robinson's trials before the Court, Judge Carey delivered a scornful opinion of the New Jersey blue laws and said that while he was obliged to interpret the law as he found it, the people should wipe some off the books and substitute more modern statutes. With this encouragement the league went down to Trenton and began to work for the repeal of blue laws and for the enactment of white ones. Altogether it has been an active and progressive year in New Jersey for the exhibitor, but there still remains much to be done. Every exhibitor in the state should join the league and pull for the final victory. It can surely be brought about this year if everyone helps.

Frank P. Daley, William A. Daly,
Retiring Vice-Presidents of New Jersey League.

The second annual meeting of the New Jersey State League was held Monday, June 30, at Achtel Stetter's hall, Newark. As a meeting place for exhibitors it is ideal; whoever discovered it had an inspiration, for it is the handsomest, cosiest, cleanest and handiest meeting room that the New Jersey exhibitors have ever had. At this meeting the attendance was double that of the one a year before and many parts of the state were represented. President Neff, of the national organization, and President Trigger, of the New York league, were again on hand to lend their help and influence. The members were well acquainted and acted in harmony. President Robinson shows a great improvement in his ability to conduct meetings, and the work he has done during the past year was sincerely appreciated. When the election was held the exhibitors showed their appreciation of the first year's officers by reelecting all but two of them, and all by unanimous vote. The result of the election is as follows:

H. F. Fowser,
Lansing, Mich.
Treasurer of the Michigan League.

President, Greenwood A. Robinson, Colonial Theater, West Hoboken; First Vice-President, Frederick C. Young, Clintonia Theater, Newark; Second Vice-President, Samuel Stratton, Royal Theater, Paterson; Secretary, Paul M. Kirchner, Bijou Theater, Union Hill; Treasurer, C. Fred Ruhlman, 500 Liberty Street Trenton; National Vice-President, Louis F. Blumenthal, Jersey City, 30 Union Square, New York City.

Samuel Stratton,
Second Vice-President New Jersey League.

Delegates to National Convention; G. A. Robinson, West Hoboken; James Epstein, Union Hill; C. Fred Ruhlman, Trenton; Joseph Stern, Newark; W. Clarke, Jersey City; P. M. Kirchner, Union Hill.

Alternates: W. H. Meier, Isaac C. Boylan, Henry Rohrecht and Martin Singer of Newark; Samuel Stratton, Paterson; George Corlies, Jersey City.

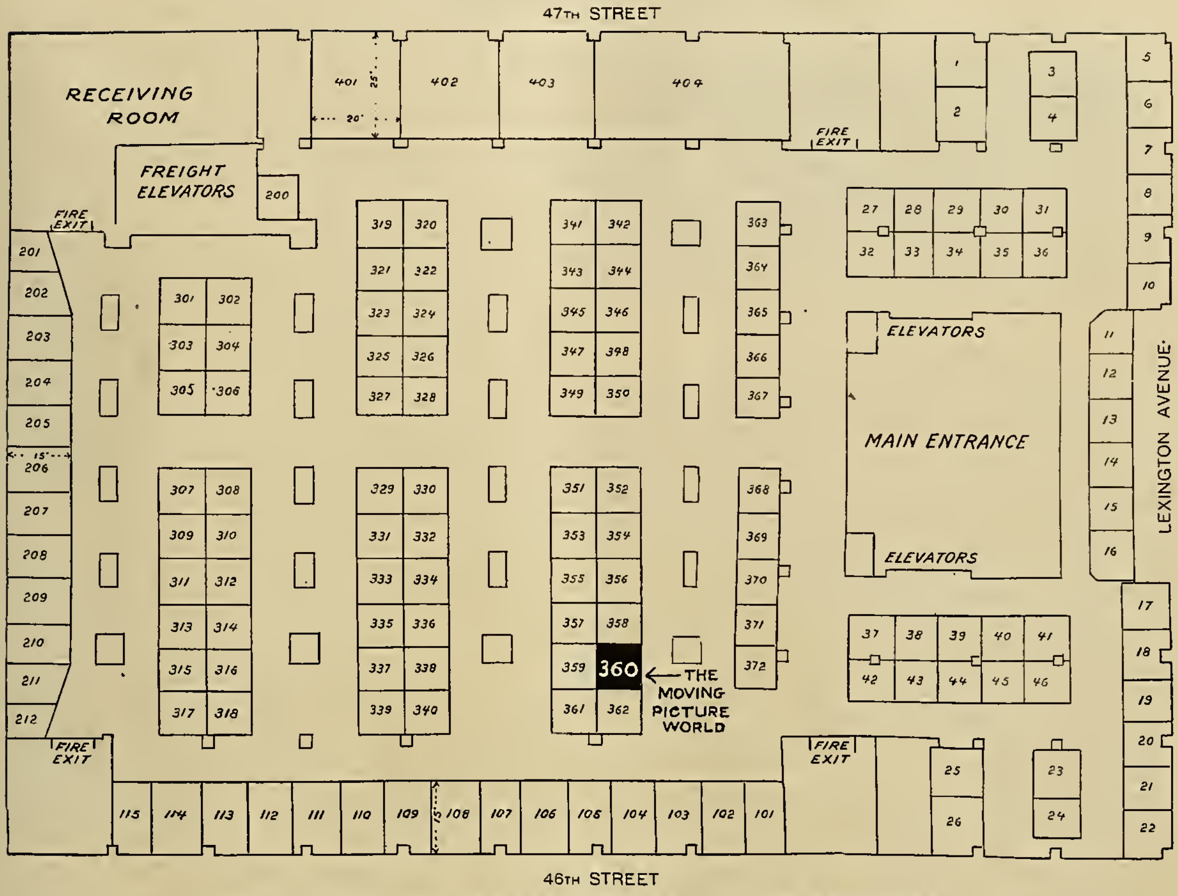
The election was followed by a substantial banquet that was marked by the rarest goodfellowship and enthusiasm.

At the afternoon session it was decided to dispense with the services of the State Organizer, Mr. Wm. S. Martin.

President Trigger extended an invitation to the New Jersey exhibitors to make their headquarters at the exposition within the space reserved for the headquarters of the New York league. This offer was accepted by the Jersey men with sincerest thanks, and it is thereby understood that that is to be the gathering place of the New Jersey league.

The most important matter taken up at the annual meeting was a consideration of the recently formed Motion Picture Commission of New Jersey. This is a large civic body formed of representatives of many other civic societies, with the object of accomplishing some definite motion picture legislation. As a representative of the exhitors' league, Mr. Louis F. Blumenthal was authorized by the league to take his place as one of the members of the commission. It was decided that inasmuch as the invitation had been extended to the league to be represented on the committee, a voice for the picture men could do no harm, and perhaps will do some good, because it is certain that this committee is going to be very active at Trenton this winter and exhibitors will have to put their best foot forward.

To give an idea of the strength of this commission it may be well to state that it is formed of one representative each from the following civic organizations: State Federation of Churches; State Federation of Women's Clubs; Holy Name Society; State Probation Officers Ass'n; State Charities Aid Ass'n; State Settlement Ass'n; State Teachers Ass'n; State Medical Ass'n; M. P. Exhibitors' League; Jr. O. U. A. M.; Labor Unions; Social Service Committee of the Diocese of N. J.; State Service Committee of the Diocese of Newark; Y. M. C. A.; Y. W. C A.; N. J. Sabbath School Ass'n; Jewish Community; Public Welfare Committee; Rural Committees; Public Officials; Educational Experts; Citizens' League of Hudson County; Charity Organizations, etc.



FLOOR PLAN OF THE GRAND CENTRAL PALACE, NEW YORK.

NUMERICAL INDEX OF EXHIBITS

13	Berry-Wood Piano Player Co	13, 14
17	Newman Mfg. Co
25	Arthur Brady	25-26
27	Scott & Van Altena
32	Novelty Slide Co
33	Moving Picture News
34	United Ticket Supply Co
87	G. H. Masten Realty Co	37, 42
38	Manhattan Slide Co
39	Ozone Pure Airifier Co
43	The Dramatic Mirror Co
101	American Seating Co
102	Mutual Film Corporation	102, 103
104	Ernest Boecker	104, 105
106	General Film Co	106, 107, 108
109	Famous Players Film Co
110	American Museum of Safety
111	Children's Motion Picture League
112	Williamson Submarine Photograph
115	H. C. Miner Lithograph Co
200	Hennegan & Co
201	Rudolph Wurlitzer Co	201-202
204	The N. Y. Edison Co	204 to 207
211	Oshkosh Metal Products Co	211, 212
301	Excelsior Drum Works
302	Wyanoak Publishing Co
303	Haywood Bros. & Wakefield
304	Photo Machine Co
305	Whyte Whitman Co	305-306
307	J. H. Genter Co
308	Lang Mfg. Co
310	Bell & Howell
311	Day & Night Screen Co
312	Electrene Co.
313	Menger & Ring
314	The Billboard
315	Automatic Coin Cashier Co
316	The New York Telegraph
317	Motion Picture Story Magazine
318	Koerting & Mathiesen
319	Precision Machine Co	319, 322
323	Automatic Cash Register & Ticket Co
324	National Educational Film Co
325	Thos. A. Edison Co	325, 326
327	Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co	327, 328
329	United Electric Light & Power Co	329 to 334
335	H. W. Johns-Manville
336	The Spray Ozone Co
337	Exclusive Supply Corp
339	Standard Machine Co	339, 340
341	Nicholas Power Machine Co	341 to 348
349	Eberhard Schneider	349, 350
351	Picture Theater Equipment Co
352	Kinemacolor Co. of America
353	Universal Film Co	353-355
354	Morgan Lithograph Co
354	Rice & Einstein
356	American Theater & Supply Co
358	American Slide Co
358	Rex Film Renovating Co
359	Box Office Ticket Machine Co
360	Moving Picture World
361	Essanay—Kleine—Selig
362	Bausch & Lomb
363	National Cash Register Co	363 to 366
367	Gaumont Co.
368	Eastman Kodak Co	368 to 372
401	Al. H. Woods, Life Target	401, 404

ALPHABETICAL INDEX OF EXHIBITS

American Museum of Safety	110
American Seating Co	101
American Slide Co	358
American Theater & Supply Co	356
Automatic Cash Register & Ticket Co	323
Automatic Coin Cashier Co	215
Bausch & Lomb	362
Bell & Howell	310
Berry Wood Piano Player Co	13, 14
Billboard, The	314
Boecker, Ernest	104, 105
Box Office Ticket Machine Co	359
Brady, Arthur	25-26
Children's Motion Picture League	111
Day & Night Screen Co	311
Dramatic Mirror Co., The	43
Eastman Kodak Co	368, 372
Edison, Thos. A., Co	325, 326
Electrene Co.	312
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co	327, 328
Essanay	361
Excelsior Drum Works	301
Exclusive Supply Corp	337
Famous Players Film Co	109
Gaumont Co.	367
General Film Co	106, 107, 108
Genter, J. H., Co	307
Haywood Bros. & Wakefield	303
Hennegan & Co	200
Johns-Manville, H. W	335
Kinemacolor Co. of America	352
Kleine, George	361
Koerting & Mathiesen	318
Lang Mfg. Co	308
Manhattan Slide Co	38
Masten, G. H., Realty Co	37, 42
Menger & Ring	313
Miner, H. C., Lithograph Co	115
Morgan Lithograph Co	354
Motion Picture Story Magazine	317
Moving Picture News	33
Moving Picture World	360
Mutual Film Corporation	102, 103
National Cash Register Co	363, 366
National Educational Film Co	324
Newman Mfg. Co	17
N. Y. Edison Co., The	204 to 207
New York Telegraph, The	316
Novelty Slide Co	82
Oshkosh Metal Products Co	211, 212
Ozone Pure Airifier Co	39
Photo Machine Co	304
Picture Theater Equipment Co	351
Power, Nicholas, Machine Co	341 to 348
Precision Machine Co	319, 322
Rex Film Renovating Co	358
Rice & Einstein	354
Schneider, Eberhard	349, 350
Scott & Van Altena	27
Selig Polyscope Co	361
Spray Ozone Co., The	336
Standard Machine Co	339, 340
Typhoon Fan Co	29
United Electric Light & Power Co	329 to 334
United Ticket Supply Co	34
Universal Film Co	353-355
Whyte Whitman Co	305-306
Williamson Submarine Photograph	112
Woods, Al. H., Life Target	401, 404
Wurlitzer Rudolph Co	201-202
Wyanoak Publishing Co	302

MEZZANINE FLOOR.

Convention Hall (Lexington Avenue Side).
Theater No. 1, Mutual Film Corp. (46th St. side).
Theater No. 2, Kinemacolor Co. of America, and Exclusive Supply Corp. (46th St. side).
Theater No. 3, National Cash Register Co., Hygiene & Educational Exhibit (Depew place end).
Theater No. 4, General Film Co. (47th St. side).

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr....President
E. J. Chalmers....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie....Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.
WESTERN OFFICE—169 West Washington Street (Post Building), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands	$3.00 per year
Canada	3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (postpaid)	4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING — no display — three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

NOTE. — Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

The index for this issue will be found on Page 250.

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, July 12, 1913

Facts and Comments

WE commend the Convention Number of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD to the kind attention of every delegate. It means a record of moving picture history in the making. The pages devoted to the personalities and the biographies deserve especial mention. The Third National Convention will date an epoch in the annals of American kinematography, and the record of it all accurately and fully made by THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD is well worth preserving.

* * *

WE hasten to assuage the grief of an esteemed British contemporary, which bemoans the introduction of horrid American "slang" into the wells of English undefiled by means of that characteristic Yankee notion, the motion picture. The editor's soul writhes in agony over such monstrosities as "depot" for "railway station," and other equally heinous perversions of the English tongue. The editor is mistaken about some of the alleged "Americanisms," the word "thug," for instance, being of other origin than American. Without, however, going into details, we want to assure the editor that much of what is today accounted mere slang is on the morrow incorporated into the speech of the correct and polite people, and is sure to find its way into the next edition of the dictionary. The fact of the matter is that most Americanisms are a distinct enrichment of the language. There is wit and meaning in most of them, the result of quick thinking and an American habit of hitting the nail on the head with a simple and expressive word. The editor has evidently never read many descriptions of our national game; if the moving picture screen shocks him with its mild Americanisms we fear that a technical description of an exciting inning will unhinge his reason.

* * *

THERE is little fear in the immediate future of an European invasion in the producing field. Time and again we have been asked what the chances of a foreign producer and importer might be in this country. There is but one answer to the question. While we do not believe that there are any film produced by "right divine," and that the race for the goal of high quality is always open to all on the ancient principle of a "fair field and favors to none," any competing European producer must expect to meet and contend with the best manufacturers in the world. He must, above all things, be prepared to spend money, and plenty of it, and then wait somewhat patiently for returns.

*

Now the great difference between the European and the American producer consists in the latter's willingness to spend money. When we speak of American producers we of course include all those who have plants and studios in this country. The European producer is cautious to the degree of timidity, and he is satisfied with small profits. There is little ambition to grow and expand. His whole machinery and tradition of business are antiquated, and move with painful slowness. The growth of the moving picture theaters in every part of Europe has been phenomenal, and is still going on. The activity of the European producer has not kept pace with it, and for years to come the film of American origin will continue to be the mainstay of the foreign exhibitors' program.

* * *

GREAT is the power of a just cause supported by public sentiment. Even the Board of Aldermen of the City of New York have at last responded to the universal demand for a just and reasonable regulation of motion picture theaters by passing with but five dissenting votes the Folks ordinance, which this time came before them unincumbered by any idiotic proposition for municipal censorship. Just why this ordinance was not passed long ago it is hard to explain. Its provisions were just as good upon its first introduction in the Board as they are now. Mayor Gaynor, whose interest in a proper and helpful regulation of the moving picture theaters has never waned, will undoubtedly sign this ordinance as soon as it comes before him.

* * *

WE are never slow to chronicle and comment upon cheerful news. When very recently a well-known moving picture critic assured us that out of eighteen reels of pictures there was not one "Western" and not a single "pair of bewhiskered pants." We know of no surer proof of the progress of the picture. A short twelvemonth ago the "Western" was the most tenacious of barnacles on the good new ship Kinematography. Today we sail along quite happily without this stupid ballast. It was a purging devoutly to be wished, and next in line we do fervently hope will be the melodramania which is still haunting the moving picture studios. The film drama is a new art and must express itself in new ways. It will never come into its own proper sphere and motion until it has cast off the shackles of the conventional stage works.

THE FILM IN FRANCE

By W. Stephen Bush

Paris, June 11, 1913.

CONTENTMENT and prosperity are the dominant notes in the kinematographic world of France, though of course there is no millennium, and at least one great and just cause of complaint. It is an old story that the burdens of the industry fall most heavily upon the exhibitor, and France is no exception to the rule. The government of Paris and of most of the large cities of the country exact a toll of ten per cent. of the daily receipts of the exhibitor "on behalf of the poor." Every time an exhibitor opens his show the government is right there with its black-coated official, who in a booth of his own supervises the cash, counts off ten per cent. "for the poor" and takes the money with him every night. This method of collecting the taxes "for the poor" is not only somewhat despotic toward the exhibitor but likewise decidedly annoying to the public, for after you have bought your ticket at the box-office you have to appear before the seat of the official, generally situated in the centre of the lobby, and you cannot get in until he gives you his approval. The government also tells the exhibitor how many officers he needs for the purpose of keeping proper order, and these officers, absolutely useless in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the exhibitor has to pay out of his own pocket.

United Interests

In spite of these hampering conditions the exhibitor is prosperous because the popularity of the pictures is greater than ever, and the number of theaters is constantly increasing. The day before I left Paris the great organization, which in France embraces manufacturers, exchange men, scenario writers, operators and exhibitors, met at its annual banquet in the Salle des Fetes to discuss things and to celebrate and to be happy and brilliant in the accepted French way. Ah! but there was the eloquence and the great applause every time. Monsieur Millevoy, a member of the Chamber of Deputies and a politician of some note, wagged his silver tongue and said much of the educational value of the motion picture. All the moguls of the French trade were there. M. Charles Pathe, Lumiere Freres, Max Linder, Nadar, Provost, Landry and very many others. A most interesting speaker was M. Benoit-Levy, who regretted the absence of the Minister of Education or some equally prominent statesman, who had sent his secretary instead of attending himself. He said, amid great applause, that the time will come when every government of the world will be anxious to have the moving picture for a friend and an ally, and when an invitation to attend a banquet of the organized motion picture interests will be deemed an honor and a privilege. There is one pleasant feature well worth mentioning in connection with this banquet. For the first time in the history of the French kinematograph the daily press of Paris had seen fit to devote considerable attention to the event, giving it in most cases due prominence on the first page. This is belated recognition when one considers how many millions of francs are invested in this industry in France.

The Three Great Names

Three names dominate the field of kinematography here and I give them in their alphabetical order: Eclair, Gaumont and Pathe. Among them they divide the French and indeed a goodly portion of the Continental market. With the notable exception of the Vitagraph films, which seem to lead American films in Europe almost everywhere, there is comparatively little sale of American-made films in France. It looks as if the motto were: French films for French audiences. Today mighty few films are sold in France, for the simple reason that the biggest firms, Eclair, Gaumont and Pathe, do no longer dispose of their reels through middlemen but deal directly with the exhibitor, to whom the films are not sold but merely rented. Of the foreign films sold, the Americans are well in the lead, with Italy a good second, while Germany looms up as a distant third.

How They Show Their Pictures

As to the art of exhibiting motion pictures I cannot say very much for either Paris or France. There are, of course, some wonderfully fine show places, notably the Gaumont Palace and the Pathe Palace, where perfection is the order of the day. The Gaumont Palace, seating about 6,000 people, is probably the largest and most successful moving picture theater in the world, with a scale of prices soaring up to somewhere near the dollar mark. The theater was well filled on the warm night in June when I visited there. I have seen some exceptionally fine projection in my day and have known many operators who were past-masters in the science of giving good light and a steady picture, but I never saw anything to surpass the projection in the Gaumont palace. Even the most critical eye could not help being delighted by this picture—steady, always steady, without even the faintest trace of a tremble or a flicker. The most perfect order prevailed in the audience and what there was of vaudeville was tolerably good.

Outside of these show places, however, the projection in Paris was generally poor and the pauses between the reels about ten times longer than even the most patient of our audiences would endure without plenty of hostile demonstrations. The service of the attendants and the music fall below the English and German standards. An American manager would get nervous prostration over the frequent breaks in the film, but here it does not seem to make any great difference to the public. I am inclined to think that the French exhibitor often cares more about a fine display outside than the show on the inside. I went, for instance, to the "Colisee," on the Champs Elysees, one of the new and widely advertised theaters, in a very nice section of the city. For a fair seat I paid two francs. There is many a show on the lower East Side in New York with less pretense and far greater merit. The vaudeville shown was of the anthropoid variety which prevailed in many sections of our own country just about four years ago. The cheaper places are correspondingly worse.

Visit to Three Great Studios

Of the studios I visited in Paris and its vicinity, none is more charmingly situated and better adapted to every need of the kinematograph than the Eclair plant at Epinay sur Seine, just outside the city limits. The grounds and a lovely chateau were purchased from a famous French naturalist, M. Lacepedo, who spent many years there. He had selected the place with a view to a leisurely pursuit of his studies, and what was well chosen for this admirer of nature was not ill chosen for the kinematograph, which is one of the secretaries of nature. The grounds cover about forty acres, of which but a small portion is occupied by the studios and the mechanical departments, while the rest consists of splendid and happily varied natural scenery. The Eclair Company need never leave its own premises to produce films—water, fountains, terraces, groves, romantic bits of forest or meadow—in fact, all the charm of outdoor scenery is found at home. The Eclair Company is now working on a new sensational feature in which it used the facilities of its outdoor studio to the uttermost, and I was told it would be better than "Zigomar."

The Gaumont Company's studio, like the others, is out of the city, and it is indeed a little community in itself, with a name of its own—Elge City—in honor of the initials of its founder, M. Leon Gaumont. What is most striking about this establishment is the spirit of "camaraderie"—good-fellowship, which pervades every branch and characterizes every employee in every branch. This spirit, at once so agreeable and valuable, takes its source in a sense of deep and sincere loyalty to the chief of the great firm, M. Gaumont, who, at the time of my visit to his Parisian studio, was with characteristic energy demonstrating some of his new ideas to the public of New York. He has somehow imbued his staff with an ambition to do things well and to go forward without ceasing. The enormous plant of Gaumont's now employs on an average of a thousand people, and from the last to the first they are capable, alert and industrious. As in every other establishment, I was fortunate in my guide. Mr. L. R. Aylmer, an Irishman who speaks French like a Frenchman, conducted me through every part of the works. Mr. Aylmer, who is the "Chef du Service Cinematographique Societe des Establisments Gaumont," is an ardent admirer of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, and especially of the Projection Department. He told me that he has often acted as official government examiner of French applicants for operators' licenses, and he says he found Mr. Richardson's hints full of the most practical value. He wanted me to thank our apostle of projection on behalf of France. A glad hand is waiting for F. H. Richardson at 57 Rue St. Roch, Paris. The Gaumont plant has been described in THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD before, but as this happened some years ago it is necessary to add that it has expanded in every direction and that as quantity has steadily gone forward, quality has never lagged behind. As a piece of Gaumont enterprise I might mention that they had the picture of the banquet of the moving picture men ready for exhibition within a few hours of the event. Manufacturers had it projected for me on the screen, and there surely was enough motion in it to make it suitable for a kinematographic reproduction.

The Pathe studios, which are partly in the ancient town of Vincennes and partly in Joinville, are most difficult to describe. Everything has been planned and executed on a gigantic scale, and it would take a giant's pen to do the subject justice. Going through the various departments of the Pathe works is much like going through some great and world-famous gallery or museum—the human mind is limited in its ability to absorb impressions and properly digest them, and ordinary minds like my own begin to tire after four or five hours of steady exertion in watching and listening. Indeed, I should have given up the attempt of making a complete tour of Pathe works had it not been for the encouraging words and the ability to explain which is possessed in no small degree by M. Schoenbaum, a young Alsatian who had been in America and who is an accomplished linguist. In the office of the great establishment on the Rue de Vigneros, I had the pleasure of meeting M. Charles Pathe and Mr. J. A. Berst, who happened to be in conference. They expressed in terms of great sincerity their pleasure at the opportunity of giving the readers of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD some idea of their work here. Here indeed the workings of the kinematographic industry are displayed from Alpha to Omega. The Alpha is represented by huge quantities of sacks containing a white powder-like substance, which is the foundation of all film and which, according to my guide, is scientifically labeled "acetate de cellulose." This raw material is found in varying quantities in all organic matter, and is therefore obtained easily and cheaply. It is not often that Nature throws out any very distinct hints to our intelligence beyond those we need to exist, but right here it seems is an unmistakable sign of the enduring character of the film; it is as common almost as the air, and Nature locks it from none. I followed the white powder through the various stages of its chemical birth as a strip of film. I saw the powerful solvent kept in big iron casks. I saw the acetate and solvent mixed in numerous tanks and I saw the wheel upon which the mixture begins to take on the shape of film with which we are familiar. What infinite care was needed at every step, how difficult it seemed to guard the delicate embryonic substance against the rude intrusion of the light, of which even one strong ray or sudden glow would work decided havoc.

They have a system of tests which makes it, humanly speaking, impossible for one foot of defective film to leave the factory. The vast lengths are sent to every Pathe factory in the world, every inch is carefully marked and checked, and if any complaint comes home it is a matter of five minutes to trace every hand which had anything to do with that particular section of film. I remember that even years ago it used to be a common saying among exhibitors that a Pathe film gave most excellent wear and long service. I have ceased to speculate as to the reason for all this, for even half an hour's visit at Vincennes will make it clear. There is an educational and scientific department in the Pathe studio just as there is in the Eclair and Gaumont plants, and all three are intelligently active, though there seemed to be no effort to follow any definite system which might supply or at least supplement the textbook in the schools. Professor M. J. Comandon, a learned, capable and courteous gentleman, is engaged in interesting biological work in the Pathe kinematographic library. His work is almost entirely microscopic. As I will deal with the status of the educational pictures in Europe in the course of another article, I must for the present content myself with this passing reference to one of the most promising aspects of the educational kinematograph.

The whole plant at Vincennes, vast as it is, belongs entirely to the negative production, while all the positive work is done at Joinville. Both at Vincennes and at Joinville one is struck by two things—the exceeding cleanliness of every part of the plants and the fact that so many employees of the company have held their present positions for many years. It is quite common to meet employees who have been with the firm since its very start. A merit system of the fairest possible type is in use. As a result, there are no "clock watchers" in the Pathe employ. Ambition and talent are encouraged at every step. There is a special department of invention and research, and this department is always busy, and in the words of my guide, "it has its ear wide open all the time." Any workman who offers any practical suggestion for any kind of improvement will find his envelope somewhat bulkier than usual when Saturday comes around.

There is on the premises at Vincennes a large, well-lighted building which is labeled "Societe des Auteurs et Gens de Lettres," in our idiom a sort of meeting place, where the "littery fellows" assemble on occasion and talk over the question of dramatic kinematography in general and with reference to their scenarios in particular. Authors are present while scenes from their plays are being enacted, and there is no doubt many a friendly discussion which tends to make a better picture. Some of the choicest literary spirits of France belong to this society.

CENSORSHIP NO PROBLEM IN FRANCE

There is no censorship in France—voluntary or otherwise. The public censor the pictures, and manufacturers and exhibitors are pretty clever in anticipating the taste and judgment of the public. Of course, the French taste is wholly different from ours, but there are well-defined limits which are observed with commendable consistency. A well-known exhibitor told me that there had been no interference on the part of the police or the legislators except two years ago when some misguided person wanted to show the details of a public execution on the screen. He was quickly stopped, and a law was enacted forbidding the portrayal of public executions in moving pictures. Censorship presents no problem in France. The industry here is about to grow, the picture is immensely popular and new theaters are being built constantly. Conditions are likely to continue just as they are now.

The Convention

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, as the constant and loyal friend of the exhibitor, rejoices in the fact that the National League is about to hold its Third Convention. The two previous conventions were largely taken up with plans for extending the scope of the organization. Today the foundations are firmly laid, and we have now a truly representative body of men, sent here by their constituencies from almost every part of the United States. Not merely by virtue of their numbers, but by reason of their character and intelligence, the organized exhibitors of the country may well be called the House of Commons in the great parliament of kinematography.

We are glad to record the greater power and influence which have come to the exhibitors. The interests and the prosperity of the moving picture are best served by a strong and able organization of exhibitors. We believe that an active and powerful body of exhibitors will benefit the exhibiting business. It will mean higher standards and higher aims in the management of moving picture theaters. There will be a livelier sense of responsibility and a healthy rivalry in elevating the character of the moving picture entertainment. There will always be the inestimable advantage of presenting a united front to the enemy, whether the enemy seeks to create prejudice in the public prints or tries to place hostile legislation upon the statute books. On the other hand, every movement which promises to benefit the motion picture will receive added strength and impetus if the organized exhibitors give it their approval and support.

It is well to consider that with the added power there has come to the organized exhibitors added responsibility. We suggest as one way of meeting this responsibility the utmost freedom of discussion upon the floor of the convention. Unless such freedom is assured to every delegate, limited only by the old-established rules of parliamentary procedure, the convention will begin to lose its representative character. We earnestly hope that no resolution will be put to a vote until there has been a full, fair and free discussion of it. An excess of zeal on the part of any single leader or any set of leaders is often quite as harmful to the common cause as a deliberate and willful attempt to limit discussion and to choke off debate. Mutual toleration is the breath of life to every useful deliberative body of men. There will be honest differences of opinion between men to the end of time, and these opinions can be aired without restraint and at the same time with gentlemanly forbearance and the utmost good humor. It is essential that the majority of the convention should rule, and that its verdicts, when reached after full and free discussion, should be accepted as the will of the convention. At the same time it is good politics to treat the minority with becoming courtesy. Under every parliamentary procedure the minority has certain rights which the majority is bound to respect.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, which has to the fullest extent of its influence supported every movement for an efficient organization of exhibitors, has naturally become acquainted with the personnel of this present convention. We are speaking, then, from personal conviction when we say that we have the utmost confidence in the fairness and capability of the delegates. We believe that they will always act conscientiously with no other object in view than the common welfare. We have no fear of men who might want to use the convention for personal ends. We are thoroughly convinced that the convention will resist any influence which might be exerted for the attainment directly or indirectly of private and personal gain. The convention, from what we know of it, will not swerve from the common and general purpose to the building up of any clique or machine.

It is also well for the exhibitors to realize that their interests are not in any sense of the word antagonistic to the other branches of the industry. It would be idle to deny that the exhibitor has in the past suffered much hard usage at the hands of other branches. At present the manufacturers are still the dominant factors in the industry, and it is well known that they have often abused their power. We hope there will be an end of misunderstandings and that manufacturers and exhibitors, as well as exchange men, will realize that their interests are friendly and no one branch in the industry can thrive for any length of time at the expense of the other. There are even now signs of a better understanding, as evidenced, for instance, by the desire of the exchanges to show more consideration for the needs of the exhibitor. The day when the exhibitor had to await the convenience of some underling in the exchange and had to be glad to get any reels at all, has passed, never to return. The convention must and will defend the rights of the exhibitor whenever they are threatened or invaded. It is well, however, to remember that an ounce of diplomacy is often worth a ton of fight.

One thing we hope the convention will adopt immediately upon its organization: a resolution to admit the press to all its sittings except the really private business of the delegates. The convention is here to transact business of interest to every exhibitor, whether a member of the League or not. Its deliberations and its resolutions are of interest to the general public. The friendlier we are with the public, and the more we take the press into our confidence, the better for the growth and the popularity of the motion picture. Not only the representatives of moving picture papers, but every reporter of the daily press, ought to be admitted and welcomed. It would be a grave mistake at the very start of the convention to repeat the tactics that gave so much offense at Chicago and to shut out the members of the press.

At present there reigns in the ranks of the League the utmost harmony. We earnestly hope that this harmony will abide with the convention during its whole life, and that it will end as it has begun, in the greatest harmony. There is the guarantee of its present and its future strength and usefulness.

NO MORE WHITE FLAGS

By W. Stephen Bush

THE prosperity and future development of the motion picture art and industry depend in no small measure on a united and uncompromising opposition to every attempt at establishing official censorship. Official censorship of any kind is vicious in principle and disastrous in practice.

Why is it vicious in principle? Because it seeks to create a power absolutely unknown to the law of the land and repugnant to every American instinct and tradition. When the Board of Aldermen of New York planned to pass an ordinance providing official censorship for motion pictures, Mayor Gaynor, one of the ablest constitutional lawyers in this country, at a hearing on the ordinance remarked that "no attempt to censor the press has ever been made in this State before." He might have added that but one such attempt is known in the history of our Republic. When the ordinance, with the obnoxious clause for an official censorship of motion pictures, was finally passed the Mayor promptly vetoed it and took occasion to explain the law on the subject in clear and simple words. He made it very plain that the press and the picture shared equally in the constitutional freedom from censorship:

> It has hitherto been the understanding in this country that no censorship can be established by law to decide in advance what may or may not be lawfully printed or published. Ours is a government of free speech and a free press. That is the cornerstone of free government. The phrase "the press" includes all methods of expression by writing or pictures.

The Mayor quotes the constitutional guarantee to this effect:

> Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press.

He then sums the situation up in these singularly lucid sentences:

> So universal has been the opinion that these constitutional provisions abolished all censorship of the press, and forbade them in the future, that I have been able to find only one attempt in this country to set up such a censorship before this one of yours. Our constitutional provision plainly is that publications whether oral, or printed, or by writing, or by pictures, shall not be restrained in advance, but that every one shall be free to speak or publish what he sees fit, subject to being prosecuted afterward for libel, immorality, obscenity or indecency therefor. There seem to be a few among us who wish us to retrace our steps, and resort to censorships again in advance of publication, and make it a crime to publish anything not permitted in advance by the censor. Do they know what they are doing? Do they know anything of the history and literature of the subject? Do they know that the censorships of past ages did immeasurably more harm than good? Do they ever stop to think that such censorships now would do even more harm than they did in past ages, in comparison with what little good they might possibly do? I do not believe the people of this country are ready to permit any censor to decide in advance what may be published for them to read, or what pictures may be exhibited to them. Our laws forbid the publication of any libelous, obscene, indecent, immoral or impure literature or reading matter. Is not that enough? If anyone does this he commits a criminal offense and may be punished therefor.

Speaking of the proponents of censorship, he says:

> What they insist on is to have the pictures examined in advance, and allowed or prohibited. That is what they are still doing in Russia with pictures and with reading matter generally. Do they really want us to recur to that system?

Mayor Gaynor held no brief for the motion picture, nor did Ex-President Taft, when he advanced the same kind of reasons against a police censorship in the District of Columbia.

Need we not say much to support our contention that censorship is disastrous in practice? Even the warmest advocate of censorship now admits that there is no power in Congress to establish a National Board of Censorship. This means that at best there will be as many censorships as there are states in the Union. It means that the industry is to be handed over to forty-eight varieties of jurisdiction. Assuming that every censor is as honest and as conscientious as it is possible for a human being to be, there will always be conflicts or, at least, differences in adjudication, and chaos will reign supreme. Censorship of this mixed, varied and irresponsible sort will paralyze the ambition of the producer and hamper the exhibitor at every turn.

All this leads up to the question: why waste so much precious time on a discussion of censorship? The answer is simple enough. Censorship has been made an issue in the ranks of the industry through the action of the exhibitor or exhibitors who are responsible for the censorship law in Ohio and who now wish to have similar laws enacted in every other state of the Union. We have not the slightest doubt that the Ohio censorship law would be stricken off the statute books if a test were ever made as to its constitutionality, for Ohio enjoys the same constitutional guarantees of freedom which are in force in all the other states. We cannot regard the action of the Ohio exhibitor or exhibitors as merely the business of Ohio. The very fact that exhibitors in as progressive and enlightened a state as Ohio go to the Legislature and beg to have the pictures censored puts a weapon in the hands of the enemies of the picture in every part of the country. That their action sprang from good motives we have no reason to doubt, but will not the much-dreaded "longhaired men and shorthaired women" be able to point to Ohio as proof positive that pictures must be censored everywhere? It has seemed to us that the exhibitors there might have made a fight for the freedom of the screen in the courts such as the moving picture men are now making in Kansas. The white flag, it seems to us, was hoisted with remarkable speed and enthusiasm. Much is made of the fact that the censors in Ohio are "good men." This question is wholly irrelevant. The problem involves principles, not men. The motion picture industry is to be pitied indeed if it depends on the changing crops of politicians, which may be good today and bad tomorrow.

It is now proposed to establish a similar kind of censorship in the other states of the Union and to go on record in favor of the principle of state censorship. To this end a most remarkable plan is put forward known as the "Censor Congress." Every legislature is to be asked to insert a "Censor Congress Clause" in its law of censorship. It is to be provided that the censor boards of the various states are to meet and establish a sort of "National Censor Congress." The idea seems to be to have every state adopt the Ohio plan and thus make censorship as nearly a national institution as possible. The difficulty will be to induce the other states to abandon their sovereign rights to deal with this problem after their own fashion quite regardless of the Ohio plan. Assuming, for the sake of argument, that the Ohio plan is the best, will it be possible to make the obstinate forty-seven other states see it in the same light? From a somewhat long and ardent study of American history we are inclined to believe that every state is jealous of its own prerogatives. The original convention of the states was most niggardly in the bestowal of new powers, even on the Federal government. If there is any instance on record of one state ceding the right to regulate its own internal affairs to another state we have never heard of it. We will be sincerely thankful for any information on the subject.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD is, of course, wholly disinterested in the matter and speaks only on behalf of the general good of our great industry. For the reasons stated we believe that censorship ought to be fought in the courts and the freedom of the screen vindicated through an appeal to the constitution. It is possible, though by no means probable, that the great and distinguished jurists whom we have quoted are hopelessly mixed in their notions of the law and that the legal aids of our Ohio friends are right, but is it not worth while to test this question in the courts and carry it to the highest jurisdiction in the land before submitting to a complicated system of censorship harmful in every way? Let us submit to the inevitable, but let us not arbitrarily assume it. If a small part of the energy that was given to the elaboration and establishment of a scheme of official censorship had been devoted to a determined resistance to the principle of censorship, the counsel of the white flag might be treated with greater indulgence. The advice of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD to the exhibitors is to fight censorship to the last ditch and to stand on their constitutional rights. There will be plenty of time to surrender after we know that we are beaten. Up to the present writing we do not know that we have been "licked."

Who will say that there is any sound, widespread public sentiment for official censorship? The advocates and defenders of the scheme themselves claim that their efforts are directed against the pseudo social reformer, of whose meddling they seem to stand in constant dread. In plain English: The official censorship is to disarm the "cranks." That is a bad means to a good end. The means is not only bad, but absolutely ineffective. This country is a healthy democracy and has never been ruled by a set of fanatics. The activity of the "reformers" and all the longhaired men and shorthaired women is no excuse for the introduction of official censorship. Let us not make the remedy more deadly than the disease.

Before unfurling any more white flags let us all unite and in good faith and with no ulterior motive go into the courts and find out whether the great fundamental laws of the country have undergone any radical changes since the invention of the motion picture. It will be worth while finding out without more hesitation or delay.

"Theodora"

A Splendid Warner Three-Reel Feature.

A MASTERLY presentation of Victorien Sardou's drama of the same name and characterized by gorgeous settings and fine acting, this release is a compliment to Mr. Warner's sagacity and good taste. As the prophet of the feature play, it is quite natural for me to compliment a man who dared enter upon the distribution of some of the earliest forms of grand photodrama when men long established in the business were approaching big releases with exceeding caution. All that I did was to urge the production of screen stories large enough to permit suitable characterization and greater breadth of subject. What he did was more practical.

Scenes from "Theodora" (Warner's Features).

Starting with the idea firmly established in his mind that the public—it is no easy matter to accurately gauge the taste of that dear public—would liberally patronize bigger photoplays, he devoted his energies and capital to overcoming difficulties in the way. The greatest difficulty was a chronic inability of many exhibitors to grasp their larger opportunities. With a few rare exceptions, the demand did not come from them, nor even from their patrons. The early work done by Warner was, therefore, educational to an extensive degree, and that required the courage of conviction.

Warner had that conviction, saw far enough into the future to bank on his individual judgment, and he was big enough to stand the strain while little fellows were scrambling head over heels for quick returns. His main idea was to get his features before exhibitors in such a way that they would perceive and appreciate the benefits of having one or more drawing cards to lead on those whose support was extremely desirable though they seldom attended the shows. To-day it is generally known that the best feature plays are more responsible than regular thousand-foot releases for the occasional rush at the box office and bid fair to replace the smaller films except in farce-comedy.

Sardou has utilized a revolt of the people of Rome some fourteen hundred years ago against the oppressive measures of Justinian, Byzantine emperor and creator of a great legal code, and his actress wife, Theodora, who exercised tremendous influence during his reign. The motive is therefore modern—we are still in revolt against oppressive codes and those who frame them. The revolt is led by a handsome Greek name Andreas, with whom the empress is secretly in love. It is through her vagrant passion that she discovers a plot against her life and that of the emperor in which the friend and associate of Andreas, another Greek named Marcellus, is designated as the man to assassinate both rulers.

Theodora attempts to save her lover at the risk of her own life, but arouses the bitter antipathy of Andreas. She personally kills Marcellus for fear he will reveal the name of Andreas as his accomplice while under torture, but is unable to save her lover from the frightful ignominy and suffering of torture because of her folly in attempting to procure a love potion which shall transform his sentiments of hate to those of love. Even after the torture, the passion-crazed empress has Andreas brought to her chamber half dead and attempts to revive him by administering the potion. It has been changed to poison because it was supposed to be intended for the emperor, and it destroys Andreas before her eyes. She is then strangled to death by her outraged husband's order. There are some high scenes in the drama, and a vast amount of care has been taken to make them structurally correct. The play will win.

L. R. H.

The Snowy Egret.

A Beautiful Pathe Release With a Punch.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE scene is laid with exquisite taste, by an artist whose methods have never been successfully imitated, on Avery Island, down in the semi-tropical marshes and swamps of the rich alluvial bottoms of Southern Louisiana. Abundant sunlight and rain there grows grass taller than a man in a few months; the cypress and magnolia flourish; the warm air and sluggish waters are crowded with the natural food of the feathered tribes, and there these tribes made their last stand against human greed and ruthless destruction.

They found an ally in a Southern boy who was born and raised where they congregated in their final desperate struggle for existence, a boy with native capacity enough to rise above the routine of self-preservation and accomplish something worth while. The boy is now a man, Edward A. McIlhenny, and he has succeeded in preventing the annihilation of many of our most interesting native birds, notably the white heron being slaughtered at breeding time for some pretty white feathers to adorn fashionable millinery. He studied birds in actual daily contact with them and from a scientific point of view, and he made such a plucky stand for the beautiful creatures that he has created a bird city, now containing nearly all the white herons left in the United States.

Snowy Egret and young.

Here the Pathe drama takes place, one of the most artfully contrived and skilfully executed picture stories ever thrown on the screen, a long step towards the front in original conception and fascinating execution, and one that will be powerfully felt by all classes wherever it is shown. Great pains have been taken in the production—that is true—but the cunning shown in its design is largely responsible for the effect upon the spectator. I appreciate that it is no easy matter to so present the story that it will instantly grasp the interest of an audience and hold it until common sympathy is enlisted and then deliver the tragic blow so as to make a lasting impression—it requires brains to stir up an emotional strain with materials so simple—but that priceless and mysterious quality which makes a screen presentation talked about after it has been shown is present in the photodrama of "The Snowy Egret."

The subtitles are unusually eloquent and so essential that there could be no success without them. Right there is where most productions well intended fail miserably. I took a copy of these intelligent factors with an idea of printing them in full, but, on second thoughts, concluded that they must be read in connection with the pictures to give their subject matter appropriateness and force. The instinct of craftsmanship shown in all these essential details, the view given of wrongly directed human activities, the revelation of gross ignorance of people in one part of our country as to what is going on in another, the utilization of bright opportunity and the ethical purpose of dealing with interesting means to good ends, all these fill one with hope that the trend of moving pictures will be towards the betterment of themselves.

Flickers.

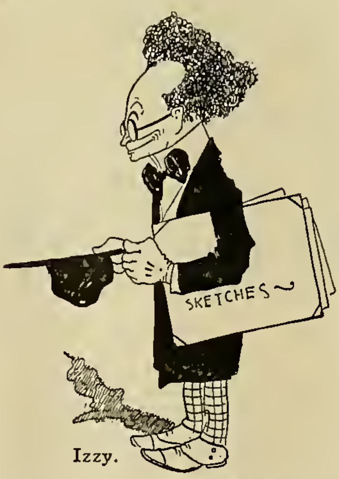
It will no doubt feel just like getting a remittance from home, when some of you folks who attended the Chicago convention last August learn that Vernon R. Day, general manager of the Essanay Company, of that city, will be "very much here" during convention week.

V. R. Day.

It will be remembered by those who sought a little refreshment now and again, that the Essanay quarters were very inviting at any and all times, and with friend Day as chief dispensor, with his usual smile and popular saying, "Oh, come on, have another. Just a little one," the place was doubly attractive. Well, the same thing is bound to occur again. Mr. Day wired me that he has made ample reservation at the Hotel Belmont, for all those who care to wet their whistle, and I wouldn't be at all surprised if he had to send out and buy more, if this warm weather continues. Don't miss a talk with Day, you'll know him the minute you see him. He's a little fat fellow, with a round, smiling face.

* * *

The accompanying is a very good likeness of our little friend, Izzy Bernstein, who was once, but has ceased since. He was the whole works with the Monopol Film Company, but quit to go out to the coast with the Universal. I am sorry that he won't be here for the big doings next week, and I guess there are others. Bernie sure is a good scout, and I hope he does well with his new friends. We stole the sketch, by the way.



Izzy.

* * *

A. G. Whyte, after spending the past four months in Europe with his bride, came back to look us over last week. Beside a ruddy complexion, and some extra avoirdupois that he didn't take with him, he has a whole armfull of ideas that he promises to spring on the quiet little burg very soon.

* * *

Charles "Feature" Abrams, the ever hustling manager of the Great Northern Special Feature Film Company (gee! what a long name), can be seen on the film promenade these warm days wearing a new mohair suit, with an almost invisible stripe. "Some class." I really don't see how you girls get away with it.

MAC.

Photographic College a Success

Professor Wall Reports Many Applications for Admission to the Course at Syracuse University—Plans for New Building Under Way.

PROF. E. J. WALL, special instructor in the course of photography, which was made a part of the curriculum of the University of Syracuse last January, told a representative of the Moving Picture World last week that the success of the plan was now assured; that it was no longer a question as to whether or not there would be sufficient demand for instruction in the photographic art, but whether the department would be able to take care of all the applicants for the special course. Commencing, as it did, at the second half of the college year, Professor Wall did not have a large class to begin with, but applications have been coming in from all parts of the world and the prospects for a large class at the beginning of the college year in September are gratifying.

Prof. E. J. Wall.

It is necessary to explain to many applicants that the course which has been planned is not calculated to turn out motion picture experts in six months. Persons who imagine that they will be able to learn how to operate a motion picture machine or camera in a few months at Syracuse University and then announce themselves as graduates of that institution will be disappointed. No such method of instruction can be obtained at Syracuse. The purpose of the course is to take the student through the entire field of photographic art. He will get two years of art work and then two years of specializing in some branch of photographic work. This will enable him to qualify as an expert with the camera, in the laboratory or in the studio.

The reason for this is plain. For example, few scenic painters, heretofore engaged in painting theatrical scenery, are qualified to paint scenery for motion picture work. There is a positive need for instruction in this branch of the art. It has also been discovered that few cameramen understand composition. Their knowledge of the art begins and ends with their ability to turn a crank; they are not certain of light values and they cannot see a picture with the naked eye. It is for the purpose of instructing students in such niceties that the course was planned. These observations apply equally to the man who desires to take up the production of pictures. A director is required to know how to pose his picture and where to pose it to secure the best backgrounds. He is better equipped to perform his duties if he possesses all the knowledge obtainable on the subject of photographic art. Knowledge of this character cannot be gained in a few months.

All these matters have been carefully considered in framing the course of study for this branch of learning and the student who contemplates pursuing that course will find it comprehensive enough for all requirements. That course, as outlined for the first year, was published in the Moving Picture World of January 4, 1913.

Standardization.

It is the great ambition of Professor Wall to make the new photographic college the technical center of the trade in America. "It is a singular fact," he said, "that there are no standards of value and efficiency of photographic appliances and materials here; everything is done by rule of thumb, so to speak. For example, when the Eastman Company produced a negative film that was faster than the usual product, it sent samples to the various manufacturers of pictures to be tested. The reports that were made varied in every instance and, consequently, nothing of value was learned from them. What is needed is a place where film, developer, lenses, etc., may be tested under proper conditions and by expert operators working along scientific lines. By such means it will be possible to establish a standard by which all devices and materials may be measured. Under such conditions a test will mean something; now no two persons, however competent, obtain the same results.

"My hope is to build up an efficient testing laboratory for that kind of scientific work," explained Professor Wall, "and we are now working on plans for a building in connection with the university that will be specially adapted and equipped for the purpose. It will be, in fact, a complete photographic studio and manufacturing establishment where all kinds of photographic work can be done."

Professor Wall's department is already in receipt of a large quantity of photographic material. The Eastman Company has donated a complete outfit of every device made by it. The Edison Company has donated projecting machines and the Ansco Company, of Binghamton, N. Y., has donated a complete equipment of printing machinery.

Arrangements have been made for motion picture cameras and it is hoped that some one will come forward with motion picture perforators and printers when needed. The value of such an establishment to the trade can hardly be estimated for which reason it deserves every encouragement that can be given, not by the motion picture men alone, but by photographers generally, since its work will be in the interest of every branch of photographic art.

Professor Wall is especially well equipped to conduct the work he plans to do. His long experience in photography covers every branch of the trade and extends back to the early days when the art was in its beginnings. He has seen every phase of its development for the past twenty-five years and has made a profound study of every method since the art was discovered. His work thus far has been given the fullest approval by the authorities of Syracuse University.

It is expected that the plans for the new building will soon be ready, and it is hoped that the work of construction may be commenced during the coming year.

"TRUTH IN THE WILDERNESS."

A two-reel "Flying A" subject under the above title is destined to be a remarkable feature. It is the first of the two-reel features by Lorimer Johnston in which J. Warren Kerrigan takes an especially strong part. The entire company supports Mr. Kerrigan and many scenes require a large number of supers. The play demonstrates the versatility of Santa Barbara settings as the scene shifts from Chicago to a Mexican mining district. A stirring scene is taken on the mountain drive, where an intense battle and fire take place.

William Farnum and his brother, Marshal Farnum, stalwart favorite actors associated with many dramatic successes, have been engaged by the Selig Company, for some special productions that will be made at the big Selig plant in Los Angeles, Cal. They will begin work there on the 8th of July in a new pictorial version of Winston Churchill's most famous American novel, "The Crisis."

At the present all the world is on wheels, consequently there is an almost universal interest in a railway drama. The Selig Company has a unique play of this class called "The Only Chance," that will be released July 14th. In this remarkable film, a lineman makes a thrilling run on an up-to-date electric handcar, catching an express train running sixty miles an hour and averting a terrible calamity.

"Tapped Wires" (Essanay)

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

PRODUCER WHARTON, of the Essanay Eastern stock company, is to be complimented on the skill and vim which he has displayed in the production of "Tapped Wires," a two-reel subject that will be released July 21. These films will have a wide appeal, because the story deals with incidents—humorous, sympathetic and strenuous—that occur in the lives of plain people, of the class that includes most of the world's population. There is no overstraining for effects in this story, just the holding of the mirror up to nature and the revealing of the good and the bad—if the results of boyish pranks can be called bad—in two boys, who work zealously for two rival news service corporations and thrash each other unmercifully at times, in token of extra loyalty to their employers.

Mike Taylor, office boy of the Affiliated Press, and Sam Burns, Coast Service office boy, form striking contrasts as they appear in the pictures, in the persons of little Tom Shirley and Harry Norton. Mike is a live wire, nervous, high strung and resourceful, and brave to recklessness; Sam is slow moving and prone to sleep on his job, with no desire to cause a brawl, but with grit and determination to hold his own when a fight is thrust upon him. The two rough-and-tumbles in which they engage have all appearance of the real thing, without the shedding of gore or any show of brutality. The sight of Harry Norton's face, when he makes a show of crying, after laying Tom out by a right clip to the point of the chin, is irresistibly comical—all the more so because Harry appears to be laughing when he intends to be grief stricken.

Tommy Shirley is as natural as two peas in his part of Mike Taylor. His gentle affection for his little sister and his grief at her supposed death have all the influence of genuine emotion on the spectator. That night scene, in which he smothers his grief over his little sister's loss, in order to protect the interests of his employers, is really realistic—just because everything is so simply and naturally done. Here's to more of you, Tommy! The two office boys are so prominent that one must not overlook the fine acting of E. H. Calvert, Miss Helen Dunbar, Jules Farrar, Frank Dayton and others in the cast.

Director Wharton has pressed lots of action into these films. There is not a slow moment throughout, and the interest is pleasantly eased at the close by the meeting and reconciliation of Mike and Sam. The pleasure created by the presentation is agreeably heightened by uniformly good photography and technique.

Mike Taylor had the ambition to become as good a telegraph operator as Red Keogh, the expert operator of the Affiliated Press. When the wires were not in use, Mike practiced on the keys while big Keogh gave him instructions and encouragement.

Across the hall, in the same building, a rival concern, the Coast Service, had its offices. Sammie Burns performed the duties of office boy there. Naturally, there was great rivalry between the two boys, and whenever they came in contact, there was usually a scrimmage.

The manager and staff of the Affiliated Press found that every important scoop they made was, somehow or other, received in the Coast Service office. They knew there was a leak somewhere, but were unable to discover it.

Scenes from "Tapped Wires" (Essanay).

While eating supper at home, one evening, his little sister, Mamie, showed Mike a letter from her aunt, inviting her to come to her home on a visit. Mike took due care of his part of the arrangements, and she left the following morning. The night following her departure, Mike renewed his practice on the keys at the office after all the other members of the force had gone home. Tired out, he left the office, and on his way through the corridor met Sam Burns. Sam retreated from the onslaught of Mike and the battle was renewed in the Coast Service office. In a course of several exchanges, Sam planted a knockout blow on Mike's chin and the latter stretched out on his back, on one of the office tables. Sam tried to arouse him without avail; then he became panic stricken and rushed from the office with the intention of jumping into the river.

Mike recovered consciousness in a short time and became aware of the fact that an Affiliated message was coming in over the Coast Service wires. Sitting down at the keyboard he learned that an Affiliated Press reporter was sending in the news of the wreck of the Waverly express, in which many people were killed and injured. Knowing that his sister was on this train, Mike immediately sent the question over the wire, "Anybody from Burlington hurt?" The reply, "One dead; Mamie Taylor, age 12," came in, and Mike swooned at the desk.

His sense of duty to the Affiliated roused him from his grief and as the news still came in, he took it as fast as possible. Hearing foot-steps approaching from the stairs, he jumped up and was about to rush from the room, when an afterthought seized him, and he destroyed the instrument in the Coast Service office. Then he escaped just as the manager and operator of the Coast Service were about to enter.

Mike made his way at breakneck speed to the office of the Affiliated, where he attempted to continue his story of the disaster from the Affiliated wires. He found, however, that by wrecking the Coast Service instrument, he had destroyed the connection in the Affiliated office. Then he seized the telephone and again made connection, continuing the story until warn out with fatigue and grief over his sister's death.

At this moment, Red Keogh and the manager of the Affiliated entered the office. They had heard of the Waverly express disaster, and Keogh rushed at once to the keyboard, but found that the connection was lost. Both men then angrily shook Mike, believing that he was responsible for the damage. The boy soon explained matters and showed many leaves of copy that he had taken over the Coast Service wires, and also showed them the message conveying the news of his sister's death. The men grasped him in their arms in sympathy, but he pointed to the telephone and connection was again made with the Affiliated Press representative. After a minute or two, the receiver was in Mike's hands and he learned with great joy that his sister was not killed and that she was actually talking to him over the wire.

Sam, in the meantime, had not taken the fatal plunge in the river. Stricken with remorse, he confessed his crime to a policeman, who at once conducted him to the office of the Affiliated Press. There he found Mike alive and well and the boys embrace each other heartily.

EDUCATIONAL EXPECTATIONS FROM THE EXPOSITION.

Expositions are always progressive, they give an impetus to every branch of industry connected with them. That they are also always educational is a foregone conclusion, they were established for that purpose. Apart from and in addition to their general educational purposes, there is the distinctive educational work which is always accomplished. In the motion picture exposition, education is going to have more than its usual proportionate part, at least these are the legitimate expections. The motion picture has grown in power and in popularity as it has grown in usefulness, it has grown in favor in high places as it has grown in educational strength and standards, it has developed most in those fields of amusement, where it has become most interesting; wherever it has failed to carry with it any of these characteristics, there it has also failed itself to continue. It is, therefore, only logical to expect that the exposition will mark great advances along these lines. Succeeding annual conventions have each been productive of much good; how much more so shall be the combination of conventional and expositional powers, especially when these are concentrated in the great metropolis of these great United States where the strength of the moving picture has developed more than in any other country.

It is to the credit of the management of the exposition that, conscious of the educational merits of the pictures, they are making special arrangements for showing what the educational pictures have done and consequently what they may still be expected to do; in addition to this we shall eagerly look for the promised suggestions which are coming from makers in different parts of the world, and which we do not hesitate to say have caused us to make large indeed our anticipations, equally confident that in no degree shall we be disappointed.

The most decisive step which is anticipated at this opportune moment is that at least a beginning will be made, to so arrange educational kinematography that it may be made adaptable to the educational curriculum of the day; this beginning done, great and immediate progress will follow.

That this great meeting will be a success is beyond question, not only the moving picture world at large will be benefited, from the smallest exhibitor to the largest maker; but also the whole world, from New York as a most fitting center, to largest possible circumference; the exposition of 1913 will mark an epoch in commercial, pleasure giving and educational kinematograph. W. H. J.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE EXPOSITION.

The heat wave that swept over New York this last week had no visible effect upon the little army of workmen who were busy building booths and theaters for the exhibitors who have taken space at the Kinematograph Exposition at Grand Central Palace. The workmen did not get started until last Monday, but by Tuesday the work was well under way and the big hall began to take on the aspect of a show place

The convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America which will be held co-incident and in the same building with the Exposition, will take place on the mezzanine floor, on the Lexington Avenue side. This space has been partitioned off and ample seating arrangements for several hundred persons has been provided. There will be plenty of light and air.

Down on the main floor will be located the greater part of the exhibits. Large space has been taken by the General Film Company and it will be artistically arranged and decorated. The Edison Electric Light Company and the United Electric Light and Power Company also have large spaces which will blaze with lights.

Eastman Kodak Company, the National Cash Register Company, the Nicholas Power Company and others will make large and interesting displays. There are many others whose names will be found on Page 177 with a diagram of the exposition floor. Look them over and see if it is not true that this is the biggest and finest display of the motion picture industry that was ever heard of.

The color scheme of the exposition is white and green which will give a very pretty effect under the myriad of electric lights which will blaze forth from every booth.

When a representative of the Moving Picture World visited the exposition hall Frank Samuels, under whose charge the work was being pushed to completion, was the busiest man in the place. The telephone fairly buzzed with requests for space from those who had left the important matter or reservation to the last minute and were begging for a chance to get on the floor. Mr. Samuels was making every effort to accommodate the late comers and it is possible all will be taken care of.

Put this down: the First Kinematograph Exposition in America will be some show.

ROBERT DRUET.

Popular star of the legitimate drama who has joined the Lubin players. Mr. Druet will be featured in big special dramatic productions.

CHICAGO LETTER

By JAS. S. McQUADE

C. A. ANDERSON, formerly vice-president of Illinois State Branch No. 2, M. P. E. L. of America, is on the warpath against his former associates, judging from the announcement, made by him a few days ago, that he had called a meeting of independent exhibitors at the Hotel Sherman, for July 1, to take up the question of starting a local organization for independent exhibitors exclusively. As this article must be forwarded to New York before the results of the meeting will be known, readers must await the succeeding issue for particulars.

Mr. Anderson ingeniously states that this action on his part is no revolt from Illinois State Branch No. 2, and that independent exhibitors feel that their interests can be better cared for by an organization of their own. I remember well, when preparatory steps were being taken for the organization of Illinois State Branch No. 2, that Mr. Anderson was one of the strongest advocates for the elimination of the qualifying terms "licensed" and "independent," as applied to any member of the organization which was about to be formed. Whether using independent or licensed service, it was the expressed will and wish of the initial members—Mr. Anderson prominent among them—that all should be considered as exhibitors, on the same plane, with common purposes—first the correction of existing evils among themselves, and next the protection of exhibitors from adverse ordinances and legislation, and the securing of equitable treatment from exchanges. The unification of interests among exhibitors, both licensed and independent, so far as the foregoing aims were concerned, was held to be imperative. And most assuredly this view was sound, both in theory and practice.

Now what has led to such a radical change in Mr. Anderson's views? I feel kindly disposed to Mr. Anderson, because he has been an ardent and persistent worker in the ranks of Illinois State Branch No. 2, notwithstanding the fact that he has made all such service nugatory by certain recent actions.

About eight months ago, he sold the Hermosa Theater and shortly afterward purchased the Crystal Palace Theater, at 3255 Ogden Avenue, this city. This house seats over 400 people, the competing house nearby being smaller in capacity and owned by a man who is not a member of the League.

Mr. Anderson was vice-president of Illinois State Branch No. 2 at the time. Complaints were made that the Crystal Palace Theater was giving away premiums to patrons, a practice which had been strongly condemned and then prohibited unanimously by a resolution, at one of the regular meetings of the members. Investigation was made and the charges were found to be true. Leading members pleaded with Mr. Anderson to cease violating the expressed will of Illinois State Branch No. 2, which was all the more flagrant in his case, because of his high official rank. But Mr. Anderson was a law unto himself and paid a deaf ear to their entreaties. He even offered as an excuse for his action that he was "trying to force his competitor into the League," a kill-and-then-cure policy that will not appeal to many!

One course only remained. At a regular meeting, he was deposed, and Robert R. Levy was elected to fill his unexpired term.

In the light of all this, has Mr. Anderson the right to claim, or expect, a following from independent exhibitors? How can he expect a following—if he has one—to observe strictly the rules and regulations that may be formulated for the general good of exhibitors, when he has furnished them, personally, a pernicious object lesson to the contrary?

This new movement can be appropriately dismissed by comparing it to a house built on the sand. Independent exhibitors who are not soreheads can see in the regularly constituted National League, with its State branches and State locals, the house that is founded on a rock. The structure has not yet reached the stage of uniform completion, but every indication points to its future magnificence. The foundation is secure.

Moving Pictures at Olympian Games, Chicago.

Quite a novel use has been made of moving pictures during the run of the Olympian Games in this city beginning June 28th, and lasting until July 6th. During that time six reels were run nightly, on each of six machines, installed on the stadium grounds at various points so as to front the people in the grandstand.

The machines were placed about 50 feet from the screen and the audience about 125 feet away; thus, with favorable light conditions, giving fairly well defined pictures. The pictures were shown concurrently by the six machines to an audience of 40,000 people, the grandstand seating that number. The 52 Macbeth lights used to illuminate the stadium ground, each with an illumination of 80,000 candle power, were extinguished during the presentation of the pictures, which were shown during the interim between the events on the Olympian program.

To Harry J. Cohen, manager of the General Film Company's branch, City Hall Square Building, is due the credit of the arrangements. Harold F. McCormick, the honorary president of the Olympian Games, signified his wish for moving picture presentations of a certain type, this type to include comedies, scenics, travelogues, industrial and scientific subjects.

Mr. Cohen personally supervised the presentations every evening while the Olympian Games lasted, and was highly complimented by the Olympian Games management on the great success of the pictures. The product of the General Film Company was used as equally as possible, the various makes being used when the subjects met the demand.

More About Inflated Five Cent Programs.

I have received a communication from a well-known exhibitor in Pittsburgh, who complains bitterly against existing conditions in that city owing to the ruinous five cent programs offered.

"I have just read your article in this week's World, about the big five cent shows," the letter reads. "I am very glad to see some one take this matter up. I think if this thing keeps up, the exhibitor is going to kill the goose that lays the golden egg—his own business.

"Here is a case in the Pittsburgh district. Think of it! The president of Pittsburgh Local No. 1 started in some time ago, running five reels for a nickel. Then he raised it to seven for a nickel, and to ten for ten cents. There are two independent film exchanges here. The president of the local takes the two services, in order to keep someone else out, and the exchanges stand for such a thing. I know that men here, good men, have refused to have anything to do with the league on account of this man. This is the rottenist case, I think, on record. He is no picture man. He came out of the grocery business. The exchanges giving him service are the Independent Film Company and the Photoplay Company."

The letter concludes with the postscript, "don't use my name, unless you have it. Yours for success."

This is surely a deplorable case. And the president of the local organization the offender! The National Convention assembled in New York should take up these abuses of inflated five cent programs with a will and dispose of them mercilessly. When an official, whether president or otherwise, of a local organization so far forgets the principles on which the organization has been founded as to attempt to destroy his brother competitors, he should be halted by a firm hand on the rein, and either forced to comply with the aims, objects and regulations of the League, or be expelled from the organization. Lip service is always easy, but whole-hearted service in any cause always places the cause before personal gain.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Lang Cobb, Jr., paid a pleasant visit to the World office, Monday, June 30th. They arrived from Detroit and Buffalo on Sunday, June 29th, and left for Kansas City, June 30th. Mrs. Cobb (known in business as Miss Agnes Eagan Cobb) is representing Union Features on her present trip, and is closing up contracts for the entire output, making a specialty of "Zukon," the latest feature subject. Mr. Cobb is paying special attention to the booking of "Man and Woman," a Ramo release of July 9th. Mr. and Mrs. Cobb will visit Indianapolis and Cincinnati on their way east.

* * *

Wm. N. Selig has purchased the animals owned by the Universal in Los Angeles, including three tigers, for his animal farm.

* * *

Harry Rose, owner of the Star Theater, 1516 West 63rd Street, this city, was a caller at the World office last week. Mr. Rose purchased the Star from Hill and Blanchard, on June 9th. The Star was built in 1912 and seats 298 people. Three reels of licensed service and spotlight songs are offered for five cents. Mr. Rose states that he does very well on cool evenings and that the Star is situated in a good neighborhood, with nice patronage. Special features are run on Mondays and Fridays. A modern ventilation plant has been installed in the Star, and a five horsepower motor to run it. The air is always cool in the Star, and during the hot weather many people avail themselves of the comfort, in addition to seeing the presentations.

* * *

A short time ago the 20th Century Theater, 47th and Prairie Avenue, a large house seating about 1,000 people, showed "The Snare of Fate" (Vitagraph, three reels) for 10 cents. On the same date, the Beverly Theater, 47th and Calumet Avenue, one and a half blocks away, showed the same picture, on the same date, for five cents. The result can be easily guessed, and it is pitiful, too. What are the managers of the General Film Company's branches doing, when they book such conflicting programs? Why sacrifice the man with a big house, who is charging 10 cents admission, by booking the same film, the same day, with an exhibitor, who charges 5 cents? I notice a great laxity in film bookings recently by independent and license exchanges.

* * *

Owing to the National Convention in New York, the regular meeting of Illinois State Branch No. 2, Monday, July 7th, has been dispensed with, and moved ahead to June 30th. Sidney Smith, secretary, has sent out a postal card requesting all members to attend, and bring fellow exhibitors to hear Dr. Hill, of the City Health Department, lecture on the new, improved ventilation for theaters. Illinois Branch No. 2 reminds members that a resolution is in effect prohibiting any member from making contracts for premium tickets.

EXCITING DERBY RACE FILM.

What is undoubtedly the most remarkable topical film ever brought to this country reached New York a few days ago from the Gaumont Company, Ltd., of London. This film covered the recent Derby Race at Epsom Downs, in which Emily Davison, a militant suffragette, threw King George's horse and sustained fatal injuries.

On the occasion of this year's Derby the Gaumont Company had fifteen cameramen stationed on the course, two being located at the famous Tattenham Corner. This is the most interesting spot in the whole Derby course, and here it was that Miss Davison chose to sacrifice her life in order to call attention to the cause she advocated.

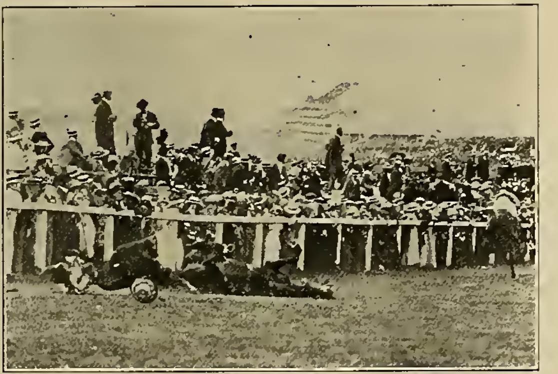


Photo by Underwood & Underwood.

Scene When Miss Davison Was Knocked Down.

As the horses rounded Tattenham Corner, two Gaumont men were busily grinding out film. In their pictures the first batch of horses goes thundering by; suddenly a woman in dark clothes springs from the rail and as the last three horses appear, quickly grabs the bridle of the King's entry, throwing the horse a complete somersault, precipitating the jockey headlong through the air, falling herself under the hoofs of the horses which follow. Every incident of the unfortunate affair is accurately recorded in the most remarkable series of motion pictures ever taken of a current event. Every London illustrated paper used clips from the Gaumont film in distributing the episode. The Gaumont Derby film has been exhibited at practically every first-class motion picture theater along Broadway, New York.

CONVENTION REPORTS BADLY HANDLED.

Apropos of the Minnesota Convention.

Sometimes it takes a live wire exchange man to do for exhibitors what they should do for themselves. For instance, it was Mr. Fred V. Murphy, manager of the Mutual Film Exchange at Waterville, Maine, who gathered a number of Maine exhibitors in his office at an informal meeting and induced them to call a regular meeting and organize in time to be represented at the New York Convention.

In our issue of June 28 a report of the Minnesota State Convention was given. This report was not furnished by anyone connected with the Minnesota League, but by an exchange man, Mr. Fred S. Meyer, assistant manager of the Laemmle Film Service of Minneapolis. Mr. Meyer was editing a "convention daily" at the time and had the perception to notice that nothing was being done about furnishing the news to the trade papers. Although having his hands full with his own work, he scraped together all the data he could lay his hands on and sent it on to the Moving Picture World, which copy, though not altogether complete, made a fairly good report of the convention, and was decidedly better than no report at all.

Now Mr. Meyer is being held responsible for certain omissions, etc., in his report, by some of the exhibitors who by right should have been attending to that particular job themselves. The Minnesota League is not the only one that is lax in preparing proper reports of meetings. The laxity is general among exhibitors' organizations, and, as it is customary for the secretaries to attend to such matters, the blame will have to be laid at the secretary's door. At the time of meeting it seems rather unnecessary to write everything down because everyone present knows all about it anyway and can see for themselves. But these doings are matters of record. There is occasion to refer back to them many times. If they are not prepared carefully and correctly there is always trouble and waste of time in looking up omissions that could easily have been put down at the time of meeting.

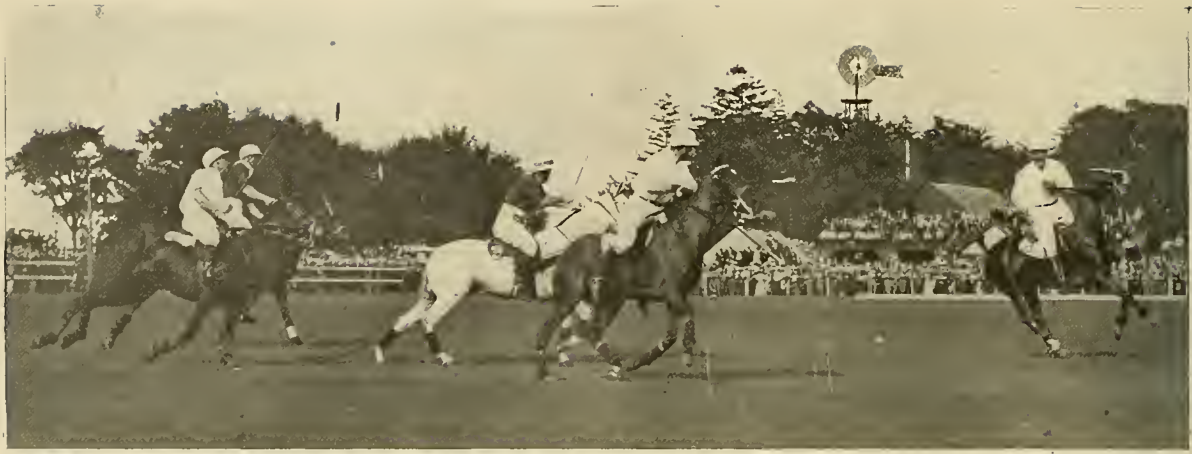
Often when the report is sent in it is found that names are spelled wrong; the initials of some officeholders are given and some are left off; the name of the office is in some cases spelled out and in some cases abbreviated. For instance—the word "President" will be spelled out and the vice-president will be designated as "V. Pres.", or the Second Vice-President as "2nd Vice-P.", and so on, when to be correct everything should be spelled out properly. The secretary's address is usually omitted and there is no official address given to which an outsider may wish to write. The date of the next meeting is another item that is frequently overlooked, to say nothing of the time and place. If these reports could be prepared just exactly as they should appear in print it would save a vast amount of trouble all along the line, but at present there are few league secretaries who prepare a report precisely as it should be. Some do not prepare any at all.

Mr. Meyer is not peeved because his report has been criticised, but inasmuch as he did not expect to be given credit for the report, which he perhaps knew was not complete, he has requested us by letter to mention certain facts which he omitted. He has asked us to mention the fact that L. E. Lund, general director of the Twin City Amusement Company, acted as toastmaster at the banquet. Also that excellent addresses were made at that time by S. L. Rothapfel, and G. D. Strong. Also that Mr. Hall, of Minneapolis, did not represent Mayor "Hyde," as stated, but Mayor Nye. Mr. Meyer also wishes us to state that as Mr. Jas. V. Bryson's lieutenant he edited and circulated daily for the two days 4,000 copies of the "Universal Daily" at the convention. He secured a beat on the Minneapolis press for publishing the first authentic list of the elections, and took the palm for getting out the largest convention paper ever published. We regret that he did not send us copies in time for them to be of some service.

ED COXEN AGAIN WITH "FLYING A."

Before assuming the work of director, Mr. Coxen was seen in parts that created much favorable comment and "Flying A" fans will be pleased to learn of his return to the work for which he is so eminently suited.

G. W. Armstrong, sponsor for the Theater Specialty Manufacturing Company, will be on hand all next week with a bundle of literature and a line of talk about lobby displays that will knock your eye out.



SCENE AT INTERNATIONAL POLO GAME—Larry Waterbury, of the American team, pulling his pony around for another swing at the ball after missing. (Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

INTERNATIONAL POLO GAMES.

An Important Edison Release.

FOR nearly a quarter of a century the International Challenge Cup for those contests was held by the English until it was brought to America in 1909 by a team consisting of Messrs. L. Waterbury, J. M. Waterbury, Devereaux Milburn and Harry Payne Whitney. The same team successfully defended the cup in 1911, but the extraordinary strength of the challenging British team this year led to some changes in the field lineup for defense. An unfortunate accident to Mr. Foxhall Keene made such a serious break in the new team that it was decided to depend upon the "Big Four" who had won the cup, for a determined effort to retain it. In the light of events this proved to be a piece of good judgment.

The two games played June 10th and 14th at the Westchester Polo Club brought out a strong challenging team, consisting of Captains Cheape, Edwards, Ritson and Lockett, of the Royal Army, but they were decisively defeated in the first and in the second by a narrow margin. It is said that 25,000 people attended the first contest and nearly 40,000 the second, closer one, these vast assemblages presenting interesting spectacles in themselves. The game was watched with keen interest, the spectators catching on to technical points with a facility little short of marvelous considering how few games have been played in public, and there was no exhibition of partiality until the final results were known. Enthusiasm was held well in check during most of the second close contest, but broke loose at odd moments and showed the intense interest felt when it was fully released at the end.

All this is delightfully pictured in the Edison release of exclusive privilege. A large proportion of the fifty or more scenes are those of spirited field action, hot scrimmages, breakneck races and brilliant strokes, but all other points of interest are admirably covered. Views are given of the cup, of the club member's stand, of the grand stand in both games, of England's ponies, including a special of their crack animal, "Energy," America's ponies on parade, the teams, the officers and people of social prominence. They constitute not only a record of an important international event, but they will afford our cousins across the water a chance to see what we look like when we are amusing ourselves. Our brothers and sisters throughout this happy land will also be interested in the social features, for the gathering was very representatively that of New York City, or, rather, of its inhabitants trying to behave themselves. We tried our best to be fair, but we could not help rejoicing in the end that the sharply contested games of skill and endurance were won by Americans. The release is not only important, but it is assured in advance of widespread popularity.

TOM RICKETTS BACK WITH AMERICAN.

The first producer of the "Flying A" company is again back on the staff. The present line of exquisite American photography should make the future productions of Mr. Ricketts stand out with telling effect. Mr. Ricketts came to the American with Jack Kerrigan in the fall of 1910 and his first production was "Romantic Redskins," the scenes of which were taken near St. Joseph, Mich.

ESSANAY EVENTS.

On Monday evening, June 2, 1913, the new Essanay studio at Niles, Cal., was informally opened. Mr. G. M. Anderson and all the members of the Western stock company received the invited guests, consisting of prominent business men of Niles and San Francisco. The speech by Mr. Anderson was enthusiastically received and gave the cue for the festivities to begin. Dancing, interspersed with gallons of refreshments (Grape Juice), comprised the evening's enjoyment.

Monday, June 9th, was moving day for the company, and everything from pins and needles to auto-trucks was moved into the new studio. On Wednesday, June 11th, Director Ingraham initiated the new plant with its first picture. The building is equipped with every improvement necessary to producing first-class pictures.

J. J. Robbins, general manager of the Essanay Western company, is on a short visit to the East, gathering information on all the latest improvements for the Western studio. This is Mr. Robbins' first visit to the East in three years.

A STUDY IN MAKE-UP.

As an example of realistic character make-up, the Edison Company sends the photograph reproduced herewith of William West, one of the members of the Edison acting company now in the South. Mr. West is made up for the part of an old darky in a forthcoming Edison release, entitled "To Abbeville Court House." The background in the illustration is a typical Georgia "shack" of which there are thousands in the "cracker" State. Just outside the range of the camera a group of old colored "uncles" sat and marveled at the realistic way in which Mr. West imitated them in prototype. One of them said to another, "I thought you said old Bill Odam was dead? Dah he."

"Law-me!" said the other, "I knew the devil would never cotch dat coon."

"King Rene's Daughter"

A Thanhouser Three-Reel Winner.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

ONE of the most beautiful photodramas ever exhibited on the screen, one of the kind to bring millions into the little theaters who do not attend them now because of a surfeit of weak sensationalism for unripe minds, yet the Thanhouser release will turn no one away. It provides an interesting story admirably told by capable actors that will hold any audience, however badly mixed. Even the small boys who applaud anything presenting fringed trousers in deadly combat with feathered war bonnets will sit up and take notice, and the quiet ones, those whose solid patronage keeps the entire machinery of moving pictures going, will be induced to come again for some other such visual delight.

Most remarkable are the fascinating and impressive scenic effects, notably the exquisitely-chosen exteriors. That feature alone, providing as it does a series of lovely pictures that hold attention, is enough to give the production high rank, but it is so well-balanced in other respects that its almost-bewildering beauty is not intrusive. Little or nothing mars the illusion that we are watching human nature and human action in an atmosphere of romance, where sentiments and adventures are unfolded to our vision on enchanted ground. Spectators who are mentally more than seven, who are daily and nightly jarred by characterization that is feeble and backgrounds unsuitable if they are not ghastly, will experience a sense of pleasure at watching a performance so artistically complete.

So composite, however, is any form of drama, so dependant upon many and divers elements of success, that this one might not have attained more than respectable mediocrity without a winning central figure. It is the story of a princess betrothed when a babe for political reasons and made totally blind by a fire which immediately followed the betrothal ceremonies. Recovery of her sight depends upon her complete isolation, where she will be unaware of her affliction and of the fact that she is a king's daughter. Her environment furnishes some of the most delightful of exterior settings, but she herself is in keeping with them.

The lead was assigned to a Miss Fealy, a newcomer in pictural drama, of charming personality, rare intelligence and keen appreciation of what is required of her in the part she plays. She is a perpetual delight to the eyes, moves with grace, and she seems imbued with the sweetness and purity of her role, one of the most fascinating characterizations I have seen in a long time. The prince to whom she is engaged comes upon her unawares by force of circumstances, and the scenes of their first meeting are the most beautiful in the entire production. They are works of art.

The romance of these two young people, who are unaware of each other's identity moves rapidly to a happy denouement by means of external forces with enough tension aroused by prospective changes in the relative positions of the dramatis personae to hold interest right up to the conclusion, though the latter is half-foreseen. Miss Fealy's fine analysis of the innocent character of the girl furnishes an intellectual delight for those who enjoy the more delicate phases of acting. She has flashed out like a star of the first magnitude, and it is to be hoped that she is a fixed one. All the other roles are admirably performed, and the director deserves high commendation for his unqualified success.

AN UNUSUAL FEATURE.

The Great Northern Special Feature Film Company has announced for its current release "The Grain Speculator," which is said to be a photoplay out of the ordinary. The consuming thirst for gold in the wheat pit is said to be portrayed in most convincing fashion and many of the scenes carry thrills that are sure to prove convincing. The speculator at the ticker, the fatal plunge of the hotel elevator, and the sensational fall of the speculator and the sham prince from the top of the wheat magazine into the bins below, are said to be exceptionally realistic. A more extended review of this feature will be given later.

Beautiful scene from "King Rene's Daughter," a three-part Thanhouser Feature.

Foreign Trade Notes

BRITISH NOTES.

By Our Own Correspondent.

Mr. H. A. Spoor, the British agent for the Essanay Company to mark the renewed productive activity of his company, is issuing a really bright review to exhibitors on this side. It is called "The Photoplay Review," and now that the Essanay Company has ceased to "do to death" the cowboy drama, there does not seem to be any reason why it should not become most popular among the host of similar publications periodically issued here to showmen.

* * *

The Edison agency has also taken a tip from one of the home firms and is distributing electros (or cuts) almost for the asking.

* * *

The head European office of the Lubin Company is now situated at 4 New Compton Street, London, W. C., from which address most of the announcements are now issued. The firm's releases will, however, continue to be handled by the Moving Picture Sales Agency of Wardour Street, London, which is also responsible in this country for the products of the Kalem, A. B., and Pilot concerns.

* * *

A new brand of films produced in the South of England, entitled "Searchlight" films, will experience its first release in August with a two-reel drama, "The Cloister and the Woman." An agency which handles mostly American films is to release "Searchlights," so they must bear comparison.

* * *

A West End manager has hit on a novel scheme of advertisement when he features any subject containing as its nucleus a particularly thrilling scene such as a railway collision, a boat accident or an exciting chase. The entrance to his hall breaks off at a right angle and at the corner he has suspended a huge plate glass mirror. When the curtains are hung back the mirror reflects the picture on the screen to the complete view of persons passing in the roadway or on the sidewalk.

* * *

A society writer here states that madmen are irresistibly attracted by pictures. He quotes the instance at one well-known London theater of a man who goes regularly every day to time the pictures on the screen.

* * *

The spectacle of other people's sufferings, especially if treated humorously, are always amusing. That is why the Vitagraph film, "The Hungry Mosquito," by Winsor McCay, is taking so furiously in London.

* * *

Mr. Charles Urban has secured world's rights to reproduce in Kinemacolor Maeterlinck's sacred drama, "Mary Magdelene," "The Blue Bird," and other of the famous author's works. Madame Leblanc will herself take the leading role and the exposures will be made in Paris. I am told that the finished films will be ready for the New York and London exchanges in the late autumn.

* * *

Someone has been suggesting to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Lloyd George, that moving picture theaters might, with advantage, be taxed. In close political circles there is some credit being given to the rumor that the suggestion will bear fruit, providing, of course, it survives the trade agitation which would be found to follow the announcement.

* * *

American releases which are most prominently exhibited in London and chief provincial cities during the week ending June 21st are: "The Actress," Rex drama; "Between Orton Junction and Fallonville," Edison drama; "Boobs and Bricks," Flying A drama; "Cymbeline," two-reel Thanhouser drama; "Canine Rivals," Solax comedy; "Doll and the Devil," Pilot drama; "Dancer's Redemption," Selig drama; "Exposure of the Land Swindlers," three-reel Kalem drama; "Her Great Chance," Melies drama; "Lady and the Mouse," Biograph drama; "Pekin," Selig scenic; "Suspicious Henry," Vitagraph comedy; "Sally in Our Alley," Selig drama; "That College Life," Vitagraph comedy; "Tramp Reporter," two-reel Powers drama; "Well Sick Man," Edison drama; "Wonderful Statue," Vitagraph comedy; "The Youthful Knight," Edison drama.

* * *

Two new British film producing firms have started operations during the past few days, both on the south coast and within a few miles of each other. Mr. M. Parry and Mr. F. Watson are together to produce comic and topical films in a small studio at Eastbourne, but later they will go in for serious dramatic subjects. So far the company has no cast of any pretensions. The other company is on a more ambitious scale and is known as the Brightonia Film Co., with studios at Brighton. They have just produced "East Lynne," bought by Barker and are now actively engaged on another big melodrama, "The Grip of Iron," which will present Mr. Fred Powell in the role of Jargon, the strangler, and also Miss Nell Emerald. In addition to these two talented artists the Brightonia stock company includes Miss Monnie Mine, the winner of the American Beauty Competition, Mr. Harry Lyons, Mr. Frank Petty, Miss Eily Adair, and the well known McConnell trio from the variety stage. Mr. W. H. Speer is the managing director and the producer is to be Miss Emerald. The M. P. Sales agency are to release the Brightonia productions.

* * *

The announcement of the invention by Prof. C. F. Jenkins of a means of transmitting moving pictures over telegraph wires has not caused the surprise here one might have expected, owing probably to the fact that Mr. T. Thorne Baker invented in 1908 a similar method of transmitting ordinary photographs by telegraph. If Mr. Jenkins' invention becomes commercially practicable we may be permitted to conjure up visions of the age when from a central installation the municipalities will supply all the latest pictures over the wires to householders at ordinary telephone rates.

* * *

Mr. Basil Vankeerjon, a New York man described as having some connections with the American moving picture industry, has been swindled in this country out of $1,150 in a bogus kinema enterprise. The swindlers are at large.

* * *

M. Gerald du Manvier will shortly appear before the camera in a series of his famous plays.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

JAMES K. HACKETT AGAIN FACES THE CAMERA.

In the powerful character of Jean Valjean, the convict in "The Bishop's Candlesticks," Mr. James K. Hackett will make his second flight into film-land, concluding a contract entered into between Ernest Shipman and his business associates in the Golden State Motion Picture Company of California which was made last October.

The pronounced success of "The Prisoner of Zenda" has decided the directors of the Golden State Company to release this subject at once, which duly protected by copyright, as the Hackett acting version, will be made under the personal direction of Mr. Hackett.

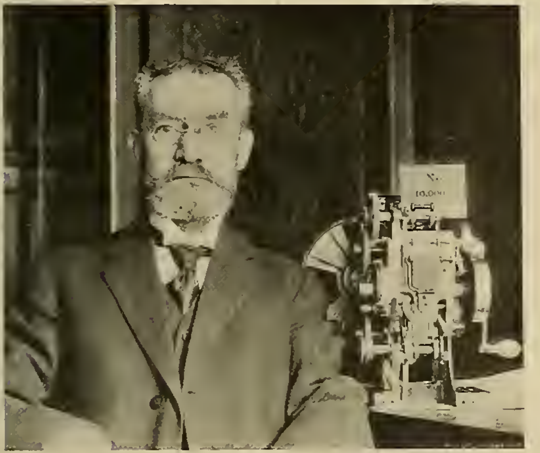
AMERICAN PRODUCES TWO-REEL "QUICKSANDS."

"Quicksands" is the title of a coming American two-reel in which Jack Kerrigan will have a unique part. A car-load of carefully collected quicksand was dumped at Shore Acres, a village adjoining Santa Barbara and there the scenes were made in which Kerrigan goes down in the sands. The schooner Santa Cruz was hired and a village of tropical thatched houses were made. It is a pirate story and those privileged to witness initial runs of the sample prints pronounce it the best multiple reel feature ever made by the American.

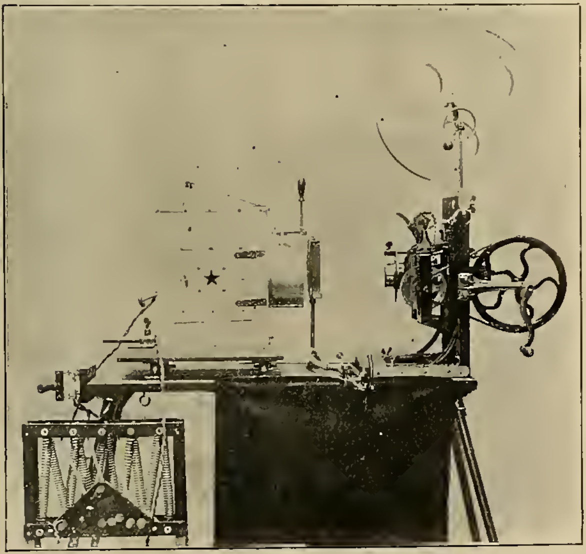
A REMARKABLE RECORD.

Ten Thousand Machines of the Latest Model Cameragraph Have Been Made and Sold.

On May 21st, the factory inspector of the Nicholas Power Company received from the machine assemblers, No. 6 mechanism, No. 10,000, which is the mechanism shown at the side of Mr. Nicholas Power, its inventor. This is indeed a phenomenal record when one comes to consider the short length of time the No. 6 machine has been on the market, and the further fact that the Power Company has been filling orders for No. 5 machines right along, having only stopped the manufacture of that type of mechanism on May 1, 1913.



Mr. Nicholas Power and Machine No. 10,000.



The First Power Machine.

The record, as regards the No. 6 machine, becomes still more remarkable when one considers the fact that the first year its sales were comparatively low, and for the first three or four months amounted to very little indeed. After the first year, however, the sales of the No. 6 machine increased rapidly and for a long time the factory was constantly behind with its orders, sometimes being back as much as 200 machines, notwithstanding the fact that the company has far more than doubled its factory capacity since the time the No. 6 was put out.

Merely as an item of interest, we reproduce herewith the first type of machine placed on the market by Mr. Nicholas Power—this being long before the time of the Nicholas Power "Company." Note the difference. Between that day and this there has been a vast improvement in projection machinery. Beside the old machine with its simple mechanism, tiny lamp house, and small, weak lamp, the modern machine looks, by comparison, very imposing indeed. Considering the number of machine manufacturers and the fact that the Power Company has itself marketed 10,000 machines of one model alone during a comparatively short period of time, one begins to wonder where they all go and what becomes of them. In this connection, however, it must be remembered that the field is not yet fully developed. Far from it. The United States Government and the various State and Municipal Governments are just beginning to buy projection machines, while schools, colleges, settlement houses, churches and civic societies are adding projection to their curriculums. Where and when the end of the demand for moving picture mechanisms, to be used in new fields, will come, no man can say, but most certainly it is not yet in sight, even of the man using a telescope.

It is but fair and just to say that at least a considerable portion of the success of the Power Company has been due to square dealing. Mr. Power himself is still active at the factory, though he now devotes most of his energy to the inventive end. He has recently devised some very remarkable attachments.

MUTUAL OPENS CALGARY, ALBERTA, OFFICE.

The Mutual Film Corporation of Canada has recently opened offices in Calgary, Alberta. The Mutual program will be handled exclusively through this office for the Province of Alberta and Eastern British Columbia.

Mr. E. R. Fauser, formerly manager of the Winnipeg office, is in charge. Exhibitors in this territory please note address, 408-409 Leeson-Lineham Block, Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

Miss Mayre Hall, with the Imp Company.

Moving Picture Educator

THE EDUCATIONAL PICTURE.

By the Rev. E. Boudinot Stockton, S. T. B.

From Ironton, Ohio.

MR. A. J. WELLMANN, manager of the Scenic Theater, Ironton, Ohio, sends us the following letter on his experience with educationals and some conclusions which he draws therefrom. He has certainly had his hands full this past spring with other troubles, as the opening of his letter shows, and we not only sympathize with him but believe that by this time he has turned success into defeat. He is apparently one of the men who believe with Charles Reade that "difficulties are things to be met with; and impossibilities are things to be overcome." He says:

> Thank you for your interest and kindly pardon this late reply. I had thirteen feet of Ohio River in this house. Owing to the excessive dampness, my house was dark for thirteen days. The flood was thirteen inches higher than the flood of 1884. And all this came to pass in the year 1913. This may be accounted for by that fact that "Scenic Theater" has thirteen letters and is located at 132 Center Street.

Mr. Wellmann is evidently not one of those who believes in unlucky numbers or perhaps he knows that in the Bible the number thirteen is always used with reference to Christ's death and atonement for sin and therefor is "lucky" for good people and "unlucky" only for the devil and bad people. Be that as it may, however, we know a number of exhibitors who could take the lesson from him that it is only the male animal that lies down when opposition comes and that it is the man who dies fighting. Mr. Wellmann continues:

> My experience leads me to believe that the educational value of motion pictures is the essence and foundation of the success and future growth of the business.
>
> I run a four reel, daily change program; admission: children up to twelve years, five cents; all over, ten cents. I have repeatedly requested the Cincinnati branch of the General Film Company to furnish one educational film each day, along with one comedy (American only), one drama and one "hardware" (i. e., Western, War or Indian). But the two reel five-cent show keeps the exchanges from buying enough educationals and so they cannot fill my program.

There is a good argument from the viewpoint of the exchange in what Mr. Wellmann says; but the two-reel show is doomed and there has already arisen an outside demand for educationals that is steadily growing and is even now sufficiently large to enable any live exchange to secure enough educational subjects to supply a demand like the above from an ordinary exhibitor. In his next paragraph Mr. Wellmann points out one of the ways in which the happy day may be hastened by that same regular showman.

> I frequently invite classes and sometimes whole schools to free exhibitions of educational pictures, much to the delight and satisfaction of the teachers, sisters, priests, etc., who are ever ready and in fact waiting for more invitations and always comment favorably upon the educational value of some pictures. Unfortunately I cannot afford to pay very much for film service and therefore cannot get certain releases when they would do the most good.

Free exhibitions once in a while as an advertisement are excellent things, but it is easy to overdo them. A much better plan would be to put the money that the free exhibitions cost into a big educational feature night, properly advertised especially among the classes whom Mr. Wellmann invites to his free shows. Even a higher admission fee than usual is sometimes an attraction to this class of persons who are apt to look at it as a compliment to their refinement and education, and if this is coupled with an occasional, not indiscriminate, free invitation to see something in the ordinary show that you think they will particularly appreciate, the results will be much better in every way.

> When I get my advance program on Friday or Saturday, for the coming week, the first thing I do is to check it for repeaters; then I next look up the criticisms under "Comment on the Films," so that I can advertise them faithfully. On several occasions I have asked the exchange to substitute, but pshaw, it is a waste of time and expense. This is the most discouraging feature of the business. They call me a "crank"; but it takes "cranking" in this and other businesses to get balky machines agoing right.

Quite true, Mr. Wellmann. Keep on "cranking" and let us know every time we can help you make a few more effectual turns to the crank.

The Exhibitors' Convention.

One of Mr. Wellmann's best suggestions is in his postscript, but before writing it he says:

> It is my intention to attend the National Convention of the M. P. E. L. of A., and should I have the good fortune to be there, it will be my pleasure to thrash out this subject with you, face to face.

We hope that Mr. Wellmann will be able to come and we shall certainly try to meet him. We would also like to say that we shall be there ourselves and shall be glad also to meet any and everyone who is interested either for or against the educational moving picture. Our address will be care of the "Moving Picture World," Pullman Building, Madison Square, New York.

> There is one item I should like to see you go after, namely, scenic pictures, travelogs, etc., do not have near enough explanatory matter, and consequently the patrons do not take the interest they should in many really valuable and interesting pictures. C. G. P. C. and Cines often release rare gems along this line and only a very, very few spectators realize their value and beauty. The pictures should at least show locations on the map as is sometimes done—a feature that has brought more favorable comment from patrons of the theater than the producers have any idea of. For this reason the "Seeing America First" series of Pathe is becoming very popular and if the producers would supply an interesting (printed) lecture for their educationals it would create an intense interest.

This is an entirely well-taken point and we have already "gotten after" some of the manufacturers on the subject of the proper annotation of the educational pictures. Later we shall have something to say in these columns; but, in the meantime, we would suggest that when Mr. Wellmann or any other exhibitor has a good picture that needs to be supplemented by explanation, why does he not try to get one of the teachers or ministers in his towns to come along and give it for him?

THE SACRED GAZELLES OF THE PARK OF NARA (JAPAN.)

This is an exceptionally pretty picture. Printed in colors of soft tone the effects are charming. It is also an ideal picture of pure Japanese park scenery and life; it is one of the most pleasing of its kind we have yet seen. In the beginning we find the graceful Gazelles at the gates of the magnificent promenade; they are exceedingly lithe and gay, yet evidently perfectly tame and gentle. Of a uniform size and color they form an attractive group and seem singularly appropriate amid their surroundings; truly a Japanese park is a delightful place, the visitors seem as happy as the place demands they should be. At the sound of a trumpet the whole herd of gazelles, in leaps and bounds, hasten to the call for lunch and are fed with biscuits, which they are just as ready to take from the hand as from the ground. They then are led by their keeper through a shallow lake of water where they follow as if thoroughly enjoying their daily bath. The freedom these beautiful animals enjoy is evidenced by the readiness with which they approach, "even to the threshold of the Temple of Buddha," where they are fed "tit-bits" by the worshippers. A party of Japanese children enjoying their lunch on the grass in common picnic fashion are not disturbed as a number of these graceful friendly animals come to enjoy the fragments. Children will enjoy this picture, while educationally it is scenic, natural-history, and, manners and customs combined; it is of usual Eclair quality. W. H. J.

HYDROGEN.

This is the companion picture to the Oxygen described recently. The "associate gas" it may be properly called because of the relationship which these gases bear to each other. The simple lesson in science first taught that water is H_2-O, that is, two parts of hydrogen to one part of oxygen are found in water. The decomposing of water by electricity shows these two gases ascending in the separate test tubes, with the hydrogen occupying double the space of that occupied by the oxygen. Again, in the laboratory the making of hydrogen alone is shown and, in conjunction with oxygen, it is electrically exploded and water is made; this primary lesson so readily taught and so easily learned, is very valuable, as the writer well remembers that in his day this lesson, now thoroughly taught in five minutes, was not mastered in a couple of hours. Various uses of the lighting and heating powers of hydrogen are shown; thus the scholar and student is well prepared for after lessons, which reveal to what a great extent the two gases enter in most of the combinations which nature reveals in the operating room of the science classes. The last picture shows the greatest use to which one single gas is applied, as beneficial in the arts of war or peace.

The occasion is a French army camp where tanks of hydrogen are brought on the field and connected by a large hose to the empty monstrous bag of a navigable balloon, which it very soon inflates; this single gas being lighter than the gases of the atmosphere the majestic balloon is soon floating proudly in mid-air. If navigation of the air is going to be made possible, and the oceans are to be crossed, and distance annihilated as some propose and contemplate; hydrogen is the power which is to be depended upon; thus this powerful agency is now explained from its simplest sources to its greatest uses, by this latest release from the "French Eclair" and makes a most thorough addition to the list of educational sciences. W. H. J.

A NEW NAME?

When are we going to have a word or name whereby to designate educational kinematography? There is no name at present which is sufficiently dignified to fill this vacancy. It is possible to go further and say that we have no one name or word which properly in itself designates a moving picture house. The word photoplay has failed to cover all that was expected of it. In itself sufficient to emphasize in abbreviated the words moving or motion picture, it has failed to replace them. It was recently shown that seventy-five per cent. of the moving picture houses still continued to use the original titles, making the addition of "photoplay" unnecessary and superfluous. From an educational standpoint, however, while it would be satisfactory if all picture amusement places were to adopt the universal use of photoplay as a standard name, it would not suffice to carry the idea which is required for churches, colleges, schools and institutions. Another strong reason is that the required word must suit as far as possible every nation and language. An English picture trade journal has recently been trying to find the much needed word, but without success. That it will come there can be no doubt, the writer believes it lies buried in the archives where lie the names submitted when photoplay was selected; it may be remembered the judges on that occasion made the sad mistake of rejecting "all names that found their origin the 'original' languages"; let these be brought to light, and prove if there is not an educational title suitable for the high standard which educational kinematography has now attained. No word ending with "play" can apply to learning, knowledge, or educational attainments, may this reminder prove a timely one, and the dignity of learning by the highest possible twentieth century methods be rightly and suitably designated. W. H. J.

INCREASING NEWS-PICTURE POWER.

The statement that Pathe's Weekly has become Pathe's Twice-a-Week is very welcome at first thought. The great service rendered by the Weekly suggests, however, a second thought; is its great weekly value to be discounted by its duplication? There can be no doubt that the greatest standard of permanent attractiveness has been secured by Pathe's Weekly. Intelligent people everywhere have made their weekly visit to the picture house for the purpose of enjoying this most entertaining news purveyor. A strong weekly is of more value than a weak daily in kinematography. Is the time coming when we shall have a daily? Certainly not, until the time also comes when the picture can be produced as quickly as the news; until that time comes, extra editions must be as equally satisfying as the first edition, or both will suffer. If then, Pathe's Twice-a-Week will maintain the high character, and enjoy the same prestige of its most worthy predecessor, thoughtful people will quickly show their appreciation of it by giving it the same cordial support.

The Moving Picture Educator has always valued very highly the help given to educational kinematography by the "Weekly," and is as jealous of the preservation of its powers as are the makers themselves, and desires most cordially to support, and to recommend to the exhibitors, the constant use of this and other similar illustrators; they are the most universal and popular forms of helpful moving pictures we now enjoy; may the increase of them be equal in the instructive quality as they are in quantity. W. H. J

RELIANCE RAVINGS.

By Hopp Hadley.

"Ashes" will be the title of the feature following "The Tangled Web." "Ashes" is an unusual drama by Marion Brooks, in which Irving Cummings will play the lead, on July 12th. It deals with five different love affairs in one man's life, and calls for versatile character acting.

* * *

Gambling being very much in disfavor at present in New York, the interest in the coming Reliance-Lubin baseball game is confined to mere speculation, and since making the deciding hit during the last half of the ninth inning of the Pathe game, Irving Cumming is enjoying the novelty of being a real honest-to-gosh hero, instead of a make-believe one in a drama.

* * *

Irene Howley was welcomed back to the Reliance studio after a two weeks' rest. "Half a Chance" proved a rather strenuous picture for Miss Howley, but she is back in the harness as good as new—and still good natured.

* * *

Edgena De Lespine swung a long, sharp dagger to such good advantage in a scene in "Ashes" that she drew the claret from Irving Cummings in the very first round. Nearly fainted, too, just to be womanly. "Very realistic," calmly remarked Director Oscar C. Apfel.

* * *

The scenarios are still voted upon by the directors and scenario staff, without the name of the author being known to the voters, and the well-known authors continue to win on their merits, although every now and then a story by some person not identified with the magazine or novel world is found among the accepted scripts.

* * *

In order to avoid any possible confusion that might arise between the film and the play, "Her Rosary" will be the title under which a novel picture drama containing the beautiful lines of "The Rosary" will be released on July 16th. This single-reel subject was staged by Oscar C. Apfel, who considers it the best thousand feet of film that he has ever produced.

* * *

Lawrence McGill anticipates receiving an honorary degree from some prominent university as the result of his latest efforts as a director. He recently completed a psychological subject to be released on July 2nd, under the title of "Dick's Turning," and is now staging "The Wager," which deals with a sociological experiment in which a child of the slums is made to change places with a child of luxury as the result of a wager as to the effect of the change of surroundings upon the two lives.

* * *

In line with Manager Ritchey's interest in the "paper problem," the three-reel drama, Rosemary Theby in "The Tangled Web" will carry a line of one, three and eight sheet posters instead of one, three and six sheets. The eight sheet is a more uniform size poster than the six sheet, and should be more valuable to the exhibitor. The Reliance is now putting out both one and three sheet posters with each release.

SELIG SIFTINGS.

Plans for the new office building which the Selig Polyscope Company is erecting in Wardour Street, London West, are now before the city authorities in completed form. The plans call for one of the most modern and substantial structures in London, and when completed the offices will undoubtedly be the finest film offices in the world. Every convenience, including model projection theater, show rooms, lounges, etc., is provided for. The building alone will cost over fifteen thousand pounds. The old buildings on this location are now being razed.

* * *

Tom Jones is a good farmer when sober, but a noisome pest when in liquor. In order to save him from an attack of expected delirium tremens, and reform him for good, his clever son hires a circus menagerie which he installs in the barn. When the family's "awful dad" comes home that night he has such a scare that he immediately signs the pledge. This is the amusing story of Selig's release for July 9th, "The Reformation of Dad."

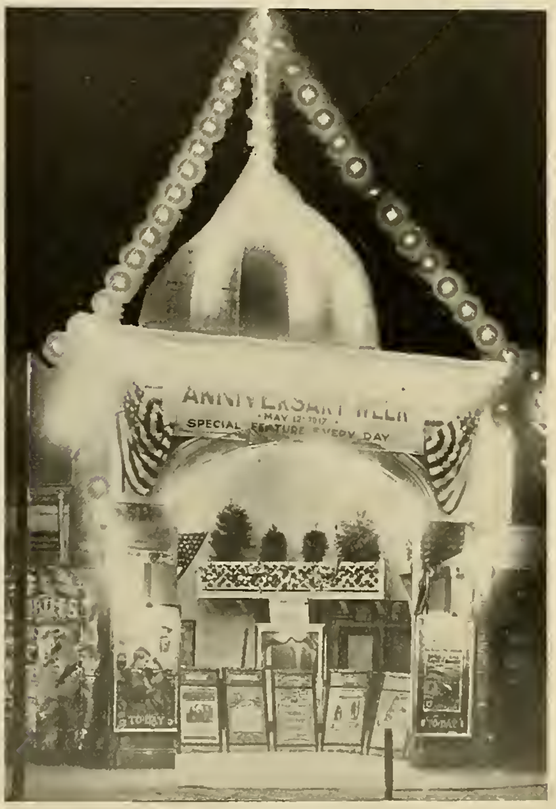
* * *

Winnifred Greenwood has completed her engagement with the Selig Chicago Company and will rest for a few weeks before accepting one of the many tempting offers she has received from other companies.

GARDEN THEATER, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The Garden Theater of New Haven, Conn, had its birth on May 17, 1912, a year ago, in the shape of the first airdome in that city. After a successful summer season, the Garden Theater Company built what is now known as the Garden Theater, situated at Munson and Orchard streets, New Haven, a photograph of which is herewith published.

The Garden Theater Company, which is composed of F. M. Hill, I. Jacocks, Jr., and C. K. Kazanjian, in a letter to this paper says with considerable gusto that they followed the suggestion of the Moving Picture World in their exterior and interior decorations, and that they usually trim the interior with some kind of decoration appropriate to the different seasons and which stay up for the length of the corresponding season.



Garden Theater.

Recently, the Garden Theater had an anniversary week and no expense was spared in making the theater look like a "big thing." The management caters to the better class of people and in spite of a lot of competition the receipts are high. The music consists of piano and drums every night with the exception of one night a week when a full orchestra is employed. The house has a seating capacity of 700 and the admission prices are five and ten cents.

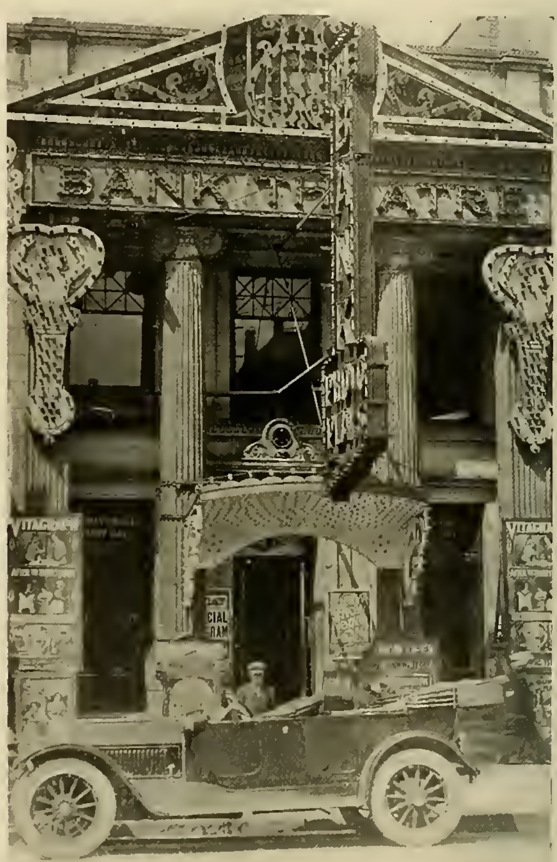
BANK THEATER, AKRON, OHIO.

We give herewith representation to Akron's $100,000 photoplay house, which the Summit Amusement Company, owners of the theater, claim to be the finest picture house in the United States for its size. The building was formerly occupied by the First National Bank. At the time the First National Bank was merged with the Second National Bank, a new home was built for the consolidated company as the building was not big enough for the new concern.

As the reader will observe from the photograph, the front is built entirely of marble and granite, the building standing on a lot 28⅓ feet by 100 feet. The front is beautifully illuminated in the evenings, there being 1300 Tungsten lights radiating their brilliancy. The interior decorations are in marble and tile, and what little woodwork there is, is hand-carved mahogany.

The building is one story high and has a front elevation of 40 feet with an inside ceiling of 30 feet. The ceiling is an art glass dome which cost $5,500, through which the auditorium is indirectly lighted. The ventilating system consists of twelve oscillating fans and two 36 inch exhaust fans, which changes the air every eight minutes. The structure is absolutely fireproof, and has the lowest rate of insurance of any building in Akron, but its location causes it to be the most hightly assessed piece of property per foot in the city. The house has a seating capacity of 300.

The Summit Amusement Company rented the building for a term of four years beginning with April 1, 1912 with an option to buy, one year from date of lease. The property was bought by the company in October of the same year for $85,000 and it has since been offered $125,000. The building is about ten years old and when the First National Bank purchased it it cost them $69,000.



Bank Theater.

REMODELING OPERA HOUSE.

The Grand Opera House, Huron, S. D., under the management of Joseph Daum, is to be entirely remodeled and converted into one of the best picture theaters in that State. The seating capacity will be increased to 800. Power's No. 6-A and a Simplex machine will be used. A mirror screen costing over $600 will be installed, and it is Mr. Daum's intention to exhibit nothing but first-run pictures. The music will be furnished by a six-piece orchestra. Mr. Daum, who has had charge of the Opera House for the past ten years, during which time it has always been a paying business, is confident of even greater success with his new venture.

$50,000 PICTURE HOUSE AT FRANKLIN, PA.

B. H. Printz has let the contract and work has been started on the new $50,000 picture house to be erected on the site of the old Pastime Theater, Franklin, Pa. Edward Zeitler, who made a great success with the Pastime, has leased the new house for a term of years, and expects to have the Princess, as the new house will be called, open early in the fall. The Princess will have a seating capacity of 700 and will be modern and up-to-the-minute in every respect.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Greetings.

We hope that a large percentage of readers of this department will be able to read this week's paper in New York City. The Convention and Exposition is the first really general appeal made the exhibitors and it is deserving of all the patronage possible. To the greater number the exposition will be merely a place of interest, but the live exhibitor will find profit as well as pleasure if he studies what he sees. The men who make advertising frames are there to sell them, but a study of frames and their uses will bring business later on if you apply to your house the ideas you see exploited. It is the same way with every line. Pick up all the ideas you can and when you get around to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD booth, No. 316, look for the fattest man there and if it is not us, Mr. Bush can locate us, so tackle the fat man, anyhow.

Advertising Films.

To the delegates, in particular, we make the appeal that they bring up in convention the matter of advertising films. Nothing at the moment is of greater importance than the slow but insidious growth of the advertising film. We have spoken of this at length, but we want to speak again on the eve of the convention and not only appeal to the delegates to take such action as shall seem proper, but to go back home and do missionary work in their state organization.

Fight the advertising film whether it comes from the manufacturer, the advertiser direct or from the exchange. This last is a more or less new development, but one Middle West exchange with an industrial department advertises that because it is an exchange it can make you take the reels they are paid for making and distributing. If you pay for service you are entitled to films and not advertisements. If you take advertisements you are entitled to the money paid someone because you are using the advertising, but insist upon having films no matter how attractively the advertising matter is framed up and in spite of the fact that your patrons do not object. Few of them will come to you with their complaint, they will simply go somewhere where they are more certain that they will not be swindled—and they are swindled if they pay you to see straight pictures and get advertising matter, even though the advertising carries a story that interests.

There is a large and growing use for the advertising film, but they should be exhibited as such in halls specially engaged or in the auditoriums of the department stores. That is where they belong and where they should be kept. They spell ruin in the picture theater and the business and it is earnestly to be hoped that the convention will place itself on record in language that cannot be misunderstood.

One Man Who Won't.

Here's a letter from a big man with a small show. It should interest every exhibitor:

> I have just finished reading in issue under date of June 21st your article regarding "Advertising Films" and wish to say that it is great and I hope you will keep up the good work. If every exhibitor in the world would look at the advertising films with the same view as I do, there would soon be a stop to them. As you say, if I want to go into the bill-posting business I should sell out my theater and go into the bill-posting business right, but I will never impose upon my patrons by showing them a film advertising some food product or any other thing that is a direct advertisement. I only have a small theater in a small town which is not worth very much and which can be called a storeroom show, but yet I conduct it just as though it cost a hundred thousand dollars and take the same pride and pains with it, and I have refused to run any advertising film under any conditions. I will tell you my experience with my exchange which I have been doing business with for three years and paid them my money for their service. A short time ago they sent me posters for my program, which I was to run in a few days, and among them was a poster advertising a food product made at Batlle Creek, Mich. I wrote them at once and told them not to send it to me as I would not run it, but they sent it just the same. I called them up by phone and told them to send me another reel, as I would not run the advertising reel under any circumstances, and they sent another reel instead; but the president of the exchange wrote me an insulting letter and told me how narrow-minded I was and slurred my house and told me that he was broad-minded enough to run the reel in his $90,000 theater and told me I was cutting my own nose off. I wrote him that I was paying for my service and did not intend to let them slip anything over on me like that and he could run such reels as that if he wished, but that I treated my patrons who attended my little junk show with more consideration than he did with his $90,000 theater and the only thing that I can see where I was narrow-minded was by not changing my service to another exchange after the letter they wrote me. What do you think about it?

That's what one Oregon exhibitor thinks about it and he has a much keener perception of the true situation than the man who runs a $90,000 theater and an exchange. He has the interests of his business at heart; he wants to run things right, and the exchange man, who will go out of business if he helps to kill it, calls the exhibitor names because he will not become a party to a swindle.

It does not matter that this was a regular release, and not a wildcat. The manufacturer was paid to produce a story. He has no right to accept money from a food concern to advertise its wares and then charge the exchanges and through them the exhibitors for the privilege of helping him to fulfill his contract. We have seen but one advertising reel that was entitled to be classed as a release and this was the "Princess Nicotine," produced by the Vitagraph some four years ago. It was advertising only to the extent that the cigar box used was an imitation of a new brand, and it was a really fine trick picture. Apart from this there has been no advertising film that really classes as a proper photoplay.

Do not wait for the action of the league. Start your own one-man campaign and let the others catch up with you.

Can't See the Joke.

If the letter below came from some town of about eight hundred inhabitants, we could understand the argument, but it comes from a town of 60,000, with three railroads. The letterheads state that the house seats 1,100 persons.

With these facts in mind read this letter:

> Upon reading pages 1244-1245 of June 21st WORLD find that to reduce cost of film service for Summer you can save tickets, and judging from the "joke," tickets only.
>
> We do not know who originated this "joke," whether it was an exhibitor, producer or exchange, but if the former he may be excused on the plea of inexperience, and if the latter two we can readily see the point, and enjoy the joke.
>
> We have been showing pictures for six years, and started with service at $14 per week, and since then we have paid as high as $125 per week for a number of weeks, and $108 per week for seven months, in fact, all of last Winter, and last Summer we paid $55 per week for the same pictures, only older, and did as much business on the $55 service as we did on the $108 or $125 service.
>
> We tested out three values in service this Spring, starting with the $125 variety for a few weeks, then down to $100 and then to $55 and now $42. That's for six reels per change, changing four times per week, so you can see that we are getting all commercial at $1 per reel now, and as far as we can see the pictures are just as satisfactory, with exceptions of a few more scratches, and what's more to the "point," we are doing just as much business on the $42 service as we did on the $125 service, and saving $83 per week or $332 per month.
>
> We are talking from personal experience only, and can you wonder that we are at a loss to see the "point" in that joke?
>
> We will be pleased to learn what you consider "cheap film service."

Just think of that! A house that will seat 1,100, a town of 60,000 to draw from and a management that thinks an all-commercial service, streaked with scratches, filthy with dirt and grease, patched and worn and with parts of scenes or even whole scenes missing plenty good enough for its patrons.

Not for Today Alone.

These and some other exhibitors should realize that they are not in business for today alone. It is supposed that they want to be in the business next year and the year after.

They ran what seems to have been a reasonably good service. They got the people coming and the people are still coming. But it is bound to happen that the people will drop out and it will become known that the pictures at the Opera House are not worth looking at. And about that time the management will be more than willing to give a $125 service if it would get the people back, but it is a lot easier to get people out of a house than into one. They cannot get the better service and at once draw the old crowd. Some of the patrons will have dropped the pictures for good, believing it to be impossible to get good pictures, and others will have turned to more enterprising management where an effort is honestly made to give the best possible and we do not believe that there is a man alive who will regard a thirty day and over service as the equal of the newer film.

This demand for "first run" stuff has been overdone, but there is a value in first run in that it is not duplicated elsewhere and there is more picture than scratch. Our correspondents may have found an exchange where the films are kept in reasonably good condition, but if they really are content with an all commercial service, they are not managers at all.

It is understandable that in a very small town with no opposition and few persons to draw from, the commercial show will be regarded as better than nothing at all, but in a town with opposition it is inconceivable that a house should make as much money with a decrepit program as one that is fresh and in good condition.

Our correspondents will probably see the point of the joke about the time they get better acquainted with the Sheriff, for it is not possible that they can run all junk and keep out of bankruptcy in the long run.

Discouraging.

It is discouraging to get letters like that now and then. If such persons hurt only themselves there would be nothing to say, but they hurt the business at large. They hurt not only the other exhibitors in their own town, but they hurt exhibitors in other towns, they hurt the business in general in that their offering (we cannot call it entertainment) gives their patrons an entirely erroneous opinion of the photoplay. Every stranger who drops into their theater goes away convinced that the picture shows are just as poor as the most rabid opponent of the pictures say they are. He cannot know that the house is a lamentable exception to the general rule. He only knows that he personally investigated and found that the pictures were poor and unattractive, straining the eyes badly, and that the houses are badly run, for the management that regards a dollar-a-reel service as sufficient is not the sort of management to pay any attention to the nicer details of running a house.

The objection to commercial reels is not the age of the film, but its average condition. The film subject that is good when it is first run is good as a subject sixty days later or two years later. We were the first, in the Film Index, to urge the re-issue of old successes and we note that the Biograph is doing remarkably well with re-issues across the water. We believe that an exchange might buy re-issues here and offer a program as original as though it was to be issued next week instead of being two or three years old, but to keep a film in service until it virtually rots apart is not good business for an exchange, and to run such stuff in a theater is still worse business for a manager.

From Another Vancouver.

Ralph R. Ruffner, of the Comet Theater, Vancouver, Wash., writes:

> I am inclosing herewith two dodgers concerning the "1912 Pendleton Round-Up" pictures with which I billed the town. The larger of the two is not my composition, but the smaller, with the somewhat suggestive title, is. I had the perforations placed so those who cared to keep the cut at the top for such fun as they might be able to have with it could tear it off.
>
> A week in advance of the show, I billed the whole town and contiguous country with the large dodger, and about three days before time I put out the small one, but not quite so general, backing up the event a bit stronger with two half-page ads in the local paper, together with some newsy readers. The latter was pretty expensive, being 15 cents an inch, the two ads standing $23, while the small dodger cost $3.50 a thousand.
>
> While the "Pendleton Round-Up" is looked upon as being pretty much a local affair—only 300 miles away—and known to every man, woman and child in the Northwest, I did not hesitate to spend more money than usual, and the results were very satisfactory, it being our good fortune to play to capacity houses at advanced prices during the two days' engagement.
>
> I have about a hundred left-overs of the two dodgers inclosed and will gladly send one of each to any exhibitor who cares to write for them. Many managers are offered films of this character during a season and the samples will be sent for such worth as they may possess.

Good for That Selig.

The poster to which Mr. Ruffner refers will work as well for the Selig "The Law and the Outlaw" as for the "Round-Up" pictures. It is a small handbill topped with a halftone of a cowboy throwing a steer by the horns. Below is the caption.

Throwing the Bull
Can you do it?

It is cut off from the rest of the bill by steel perforating rule so that it can be torn off and carried around, to be handed the man whose stories are greater than his prowess. It makes use of a current slang phrase to good advantage and it is safe to say that each time the cut is passed around it will advertise the Comet. Perhaps a better plan would have been to put the cut on one side of a cheap manilla card and the reading matter on the other. This would have made it easier to carry, as easy to hand out and would have kept in the name of the theater and the attraction, for ten times out of every ten the card would have been turned over and read before being handed back. It is limited in its usefulness to the men, but properly distributed it will help.

The other poster is a small herald issued by a Seattle show-print house. The newspaper advertising is cleancut and striking and the reading notices are well written. Mr. Ruffner has the real managerial instinct. He picks out the good points and plays them up, and he knows how to express himself.

Wesley Says So.

Wesley says his pictures and vaudeville are free. He adds, however, that a stock company costs five and ten cents in the afternoons and ten and twenty in the evenings. Wesley has opposition now—though it is closed for the summer—and perhaps when the cool weather comes he will have stuff to send every week instead of waiting until we prod him up. That will help some.

Trial Trips.

Ole M. Nelson, of the Sterling and Orpheum Theaters, Greeley, Colo., is trying himself out in preparation for a weekly, one of these weeks, and sends in the result, accompanied by this letter:

> I used to run the display ad like the ones I am sending and beside that I had from 10 to 30 lines of "black-face" type readers in the locals of our daily. Have been trying to see my way clear to scrape the time to get up a weekly "News" of some sort, but the question of time and the thoughts that maybe I would not make a success of it have kept me back. (You know in a small town you must be mighty careful about falling short of what you expect to do and what is expected by the townspeople.) If I started a paper and it was not up to what is expected it would be worse than never trying. So I got a notion into my head that I would try some stunt like the inclosed in order to find out whether or not I am capable of writing readable and attractive short items. Am not afraid of the longer "Press Agent Promises." I intend these to be sort of short arm jabs. This space is a little cheaper than B. F. Reader's, and if they sound like they will arouse interest if you were a prospective patron I will keep it up and eventually publish a weekly of some sort.
>
> I just noticed that on the back of one of the display ads, I have an opposition house display. Last week you compared the wording of one correspondent's ad with that of his opposition. Will you do it for me?
>
> Hot weather and poor ventilation at the Orpheum has caused us to close that house for the summer. Am mentioning this fact for fear that you might think that I have changed from one house to the other. The last time I wrote to you I spoke more of the little Orpheum than the Sterling, but it is the same Nelson on the same old job.
>
> Am so glad you quoted from Benny Pulitzer's catechism relative to the cheaper film service. Have been arguing for some time on just that question and that little article in No. 12, Vol. 16, put an end to all argument with them. We retain our present service.

Knows His Business.

We are glad to see that Mr. Nelson is holding out for good shows. It is a grave error to cut down too much on the program at a time when you most need a good show to draw them into an inclosed theater. He has the right idea.

The trial trips are gossipy paragraphs in the local paper, perhaps four to six inches a day. We think that Mr. Nelson can "go the distance" with a weekly and do it for pretty close to what the space costs him, or he can hustle the ads and save money or even make a little, if the Greeley merchants are wise. Given the ability to write crisp stuff, the film weekly is the thing of the future, and we'll be glad to see Mr. Nelson come on the list. His column is headed "Motofilmic Notes," and he makes proper acknowledgement to Bertram Williams for the word.

If Mr. Nelson wants to get out a weekly and will try the trick of writing it in odd moments instead of taking a day off and trying to do it all at once, he will find that it is a lot easier than he thought it would be. He takes Licensed service and can get a lot of help from Vitagraph Bulletins, some from Edison Kinetograms, about as much from the Kalem Kalendar (which should run another four pages, they do it so well), Hugh D'Arcy will contribute enough stuff for a page of Lubin chat and Selig and Essanay send out good press sheets all ready to be marked for the printer. But the main point is to cut down on the manufacturer's stuff (in spite of the temptation) and fill up with local items and local news.

We cannot compare the advertising of two houses where names are used.

Williams in Line.

It had to happen. When Bertram Williams realized that he was some months behind the procession, he hustled right over to the linotype machine and started to get out the first issue of The Airdomeite. The linotype promptly broke down, but that didn't stop him and he hustled over to the type cases. As a result the first issue is short of reading matter and long on advertising, but it is a clean looking sheet and when the long-suffering linotype machine is repaired we shall look for something good. There is a little too much border work in the first issue. Mr. Williams is strong on borders, but six point rule is a bit too heavy for a 5 x 7 page, and twelve and eighteen point border is two and three times worse. The first issue is but eight pages and cover and the best thing about it is the back page invitation to "Come in and freeze"; which is not saying that there is not good matter inside as well. How is this, for instance:

> Did you ever hear of a kiss being poison? Of course we know all about the insidious microbes and death-dealing germs which lurk within the recesses of an osculatory embrace, but to be really poison? Well, anyhow, the old trapper in "The Kiss," one of our offerings for Thursday, tells his daughter that a kiss is poison. When the young city man kissed her innocently and impulsively she sought in poisoned berries an antidote for the poisoned kisses. Oh! yes! they saved her life—but it makes a peach of a film.

Hot Air.

The Arsenal Theater, Pittsburgh, is sending up thirty hot-air balloons July Fourth, and offering passes to those retrieving the circulars released from them. It would be a good feature for street and county fairs and circus days, later on.

Figuring Advertising.

How do you figure your advertising rates? Do you say a man should pay a certain sum and charge him that, or do you go about it right? We know one dramatic publication that lost money on its card page. It figured that the actor would pay about so much and it made that price. Then they figured out that the white paper, the printing, the composition and bookkeeping represented the loss of a couple of dollars an issue—with most of the contracts made for a year.

Get your printer to help you figure the cost, figuring white paper, composition and printing cost. Now you know the cost of the page per issue. That is the least you can afford to charge. Now figure how much you will be worth to the advertiser; not how much you can get out of him, but how much you can give him. That's the most you can afford to charge. Figure your price somewhere between the two extremes. If you find that there is a demand for a greater number of copies, say an additional five hundred or a thousand, raise your prices and explain why.

Big advertising is figured on circulation per thousand or tens of thousands and the price gradually rises with the circulation. This is only fair to yourself and the advertiser as well. You use more white paper for his advertisement and must be paid for it. He gets a greater number of readers and should pay for them.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by Epes Winthrop Sargent

Bonus Payments.

THERE has been some discussion lately as to bonus payments. The bonus payment, in case you never received a bonus check, is an extra payment for a script that works out particularly well in production. An additional check is sent because of this fact.

Personally we are against the bonus system both from an editorial and a writer's point of view. If we write a script we want to be paid what the editor thinks it is worth. If we think that the price is fair we are willing to accept it and regard the transaction as closed. We are offered a price, we accept; there is nothing more in regard to that story. If the price is not what we are willing to sell the story for, we either argue the matter with the editor or else, having sent in the story "at usual rates," send no more to that market. Generally we argue, where there is any occasion for it, not as to the price of that story but as to the company's average rate of payment, but we would rather take $25 flat for a story than accept $15 with a possible additional $25 coming if the story turns out to be better than the editor thinks.

When we buy a package of crackers and find them better than we thought they would be, we do not go back and hand the grocer an extra five or ten cents. We paid him what he asked. He is content. If we got what we expected we have broken even. If we got more than we expected we are that much to the good. It is precisely the same way with selling stories. The editor is supposed to know what a story is worth to the firm and to pay that much. If he pays a bonus it is, in one sense, a confession that he does not know how to appraise a story, and we would have scant respect for his judgment on other stories. Whether we sold the crackers or bought them, our position is the same. The sale of a story closed the relations between the seller and buyer so far as that story is concerned. If it is worth $40 to a company, it is not worth $25 and $40 should be paid, but if the author is willing to accept $25 for a $40 story he should be content with the accepted price and not ask more. It generally happens that the added value is contributed by the director and players rather than the writer.

We think that the bonus system is a vicious one to writer and studio alike. If a writer does much business the matter averages up in the long run. Just as a matter of fairness, the author who gets a bonus on a good production should return the company a bonus on a poor production. It's an odd sort of knife that cannot cut two kinds of wood.

The high light of the entire argument, so far as a writer is concerned, is this. If he lets his stories go, virtually "on approval," he will get a lower average rate than if he sold outright, and it is the average that counts in the long run.

Sensing the Story.

Several scripts and letters lately have shown afresh how very few persons are able to realize just what a story is.

To many people anything that happens is a story and they write down anything that comes into their minds and send it around the country until repeated rejections show them that it is not—and then, perhaps, they blame it on the editors.

A story is a series of related incidents that tells the history of some accomplishment. Lots of you know that. Old readers of this department should know it by heart, but there is a constant accession of new readers and this is our day for telling them again.

If you go out into the street and walk from where you were to where you get to, that is incident, but it is not a story. You have gone from your house to the post office or the store, but nothing much happened. You just walked along the street.

But suppose that you started for the post office. On the first corner you saw a drunken man fighting with a policeman. In the middle of the block a horse was down on the pavement with a broken leg and the ambulance came and took it away. A couple of blocks beyond a man killed his wife because she put fried onions on his beefsteak the night before and on the block above a man fell out of a ninth-story window and didn't hurt the sidewalk as much as he did himself. Then you came to the post office, bought a two-cent stamp and mailed the letter to Aunt Mary.

That sounds more like a story, doesn't it? There is most enough in that to fill two reels. But that isn't really a story, because you have nothing whatever to do with the persons concerned in these various affairs. So far as your story is concerned you have no more story than if you simply went to the post office and bought a two-cent stamp to put on Aunt Mary's letter. There was a lot happened that was interesting or thrilling, but none of it was part of your story, was it? It was more like an Animated Weekly than a plot. Each incident was interesting, but not one had any connection with another or with yourself, and the main appeal in a real story lies not in the incident, but in the plot; the thread that holds the matters of interest together.

Suppose that you had started for the post office with the intention of meeting Lizzie Smith there. On the third block Joe Green came along in a cab and dragged you in. Stifling your cries, he took you off to the docks, where you were thrown aboard a ship ready to sail for China. You knew that if you went all the way to China that Lizzie would be married to Joe long before you got back, so you jumped overboard and swam ashore and walked back home to get there just in time to keep Joe from marrying Lizzie, whom he had convinced of your elopement with the pretty Mrs. Black, who, it happened, had sailed for Europe without telling anyone of her intention.

Now the tale of your visit to the post office has become a story. There are plenty of things happening with you as the leading actor instead of a gawking bystander, and through it all is the fear of the audience that Lizzie will marry Joe before you get a chance to get back. All of the incident has a direct bearing on this question and that is why it is a story instead of merely incident.

Look over your script and see if you have in it the peg on which the incident and the interest is hung. If you lack that peg you have no sort of story no matter how thrilling the incident may be.

Don't Be Too Serious.

Don't take yourself too seriously. The really big man doesn't wrap himself up in his egotism—that's why he's big. Lots of writers who might make good if they were only regular human beings get the idea that because they are authors they must wear the laurel wreath in place of a hat and regret that the toga cannot replace the sack coat.

It's a fine thing to be an author, to be able to sway the millions of picture patrons all over the world, to feel that when you sit down at your machine and muss up some paper you are preparing laughs or sobs for uncounted thousands, but you cannot sway the people if you get so stuck up that you no longer regard yourself as one of the common herd. The closer you keep to the everyday men and women the better your understanding of their sentiments and the greater your ability to play upon their emotions.

The fact that you write for a living does not make you any better than the man who digs in a trench, so don't put on airs or you'll be in the trench. Be proud of your accomplishments, be possessed of a proper self-respect and demand this respect from others, but do not draw yourself apart from the world and wonder how it happens that you have cobblestones instead of a pedestal under your feet.

Maybe you think that this doesn't mean you, but think again and see if perhaps you don't feel a little that way clear down in your secret heart. If you do, stop it. An over-developed self-esteem has ruined more promising careers than all other causes combined. Don't live in the dream world of the genius. Rub elbows with your fellow men and then you'll be able to put real people on the screen and make appeal with them to other real people. It's lonesome being a genius. Come play with the rest of us fellows.

Looking For Plots.

If a plot walked right up to you and punched your nose would you know it was a plot or would you think that it was a thug?

The other day a writer lamented that he had not been able to think of a plot. He wasted our time and his in aimless chat and in that time he hit two plots and thought they were just conversation. He was chatting, he was not looking for plots and so they walked right by him and if we had not called them back he would not have known his loss.

A plot is like a tree. The oak was not always a giant of the forest. Once it was nothing more than an insignificant little acorn. Just so a plot starts by being a clue, it grows into an idea and at last becomes a really and truly plot. If you've got time to wait for them to grow, it's all right, but the oak does not come until the acorn has germinated and the plot does not take form until the clue has been developed. Get the germs and sprout them for yourself.

Anyone should be able to see the full-grown, able-bodied plot, but if you train yourself to look you'll see plots in almost every happening of your daily life. Mrs. Jones comes over to your house to inquire if you know why Jones, who works in the same office with you, did not come home to dinner. You remember that you promised Jones to tell his wife that he had to stay at the office to get out the bills for the first of the month. Then you go back to your machine and wish that Mrs. Jones and Jones and the office and all the rest of it were in a place that must be strictly fireproof since it hasn't burned down yet. You have only a couple of hours in the evening to work on your plays and here she comes bothering you just as you almost had a plot and now you know that you'll make faces at the machine until ten o'clock and roll off to bed with never a line written.

You don't realize that Mrs. Jones brought you your choice of a dozen plots. You may not realize it even now. If you want to try some mental gymnastics, lay the paper down for a minute and see what you can get out of Mrs. Jones' visit.

Here are some of the ideas that might have come to you:

Mrs. Jones is jealous. Jones lingers on the way home. He is bringing his wife a handsome vase for her birthday. As he comes up the street she starts for him with a broom and breaks the vase. That might make a decent farce, fixed up. Here's another:

Mrs. Jones doesn't know Jones is at the office. She sends for her mother. They go to look for Jones. They look for him at the restaurants and theaters. They spend a lot of money and come back to find Jones in bed, fast asleep. Mrs. Jones is minus the money for the new dress.

Perhaps instead Mrs. Jones goes to her mother. They swear out a warrant for Jones for desertion. Jones was with a party at the theater and a policeman arrests the entire party with three divorce cases as the result.

Mrs. Jones is waiting for her husband. He has been slaving to get the money to keep an establishment going that is planned beyond the means of his normal income. To aid his wife's ambitions he has literally worked himself to death. Mrs. Jones' anger is due to the fact that Jones did not come home, though he knew that she was giving a dinner party. Jones comes home in an undertaker's wagon, a victim of his wife's society aspirations.

With Mrs. Jones' visit as a foundation you can run the gamut from farce to tragedy, and yet you complain that her inquiry checked your inspiration. Did it, or was it that you lack the ability to recognize a plot unless it is full grown and in blossom?

Splitting the Reels.

Dividing the two and three part story into reels seems to be something that gives the average author considerable trouble. It is not an easy matter to definitely decide that a certain amount of written action will run a thousand feet.

Just the other day we had a half reel rejected by one company, so we took it, shortened the action a little in making minor changes, and sold it to another company for a full reel. In one case a certain amount of action would have run about 600 feet. In the other only four-fifths of that action was supposed to run a thousand feet.

With this the case it is not easy to lay any formula for the exact determination of length. It is not even possible to study the methods of any particular company and decide that they will play a given amount of action in a stated number of feet, for three directors with one company may take the same script and show a variance of five hundred feet in the making.

About the best rule to follow is this. Get a good, gripping plot. Figure roughly whether there is enough action to make two or three thousand feet. Get a punch for the first half or third, a better for the second and, if it runs three reels, one even stronger for a third. Don't study the production methods. Study the story by itself. Write it out and leave it to the director. He is the only one who can tell and if you send in a story with a good plot that will approximately divide into halves or thirds the director will build up or cut down as may be necessary.

There is a lot of technique around a studio, but ideas are not so plentiful, so worry more about the idea and less about the length and trust to fate.

Marking Them Down.

A certain correspondence school advises its students to write the studios and ask what is wanted. We know of one studio that makes a list of the students who follow this advice and marks them down as people to keep away from. This may seem rather rough on the author, who really is not to blame, but the practice is justified in that the particular studio in question finds that the pupils of this school do not learn how to write acceptable stuff.

Names.

It's characteristic of a lot of persons who write photoplays that one company invariably changes the names given the characters by the author because it has found that frequently the author uses his own name and the names of friends for the characters.

This is either the indication of an absolute poverty of idea or else a development of the mental weakness that causes persons to write their names on public buildings and places of general interest. It is a mental weakness in either event and should be avoided. It may tickle Jim Jones to know that he is the hero of the play that the Globe Film Company will make and it may turn a good laugh on Frank Smith to make him the villain of the melodrama you sell the Star Company, but why act like a four-year-old child? Try and behave like a practiced and experienced author and no regular writer will use the names of friends when he writes a story. If you lack invention, make up lists of names. Some mail order papers advertise lists of names with some such catchline as "Naming the Baby." Invest ten cents, and then get an old telephone directory or something like that for the last names, where you have to use them, but do not send story after story into the same studio with the same names used over and over again.

It should not be necessary to write such a warning as this, but it is necessary and it is given for the benefit of those who need the advice.

All Alike.

We clip from "The Pictures," an English publication, this illuminating paragraph:

> Many correspondents have written us to the effect that they are going to start with comedies, and will advance to drama as soon as they feel their feet. It is really extraordinary, is the widespread acceptance of the view that comedies are easy to write and require less experience than drama. They are the most difficult sort of photoplay to write, and require natural talent in an even greater measure than other descriptions. If our readers meant comics—well, that is a different proposition; but the beginner would be well advised to leave comedy proper until he has gained some experience.

Apparently they are the same across the ocean. They will dash off a few comedies until they have learned the trick of writing, and then, when practice comes, they will settle down to serious dramatic work.

That's the same way it is over here. The beginners and the experts write comedies and the latter sell them. The beginner doesn't because he does not realize that while the idea may carry the dramatic story it is the business that helps carry the comedy.

If you are just starting in, start in with drama and when you can write a good drama, then, perhaps, you can write comedy if only you can appreciate the fact that you must have both idea and action humorous and not either one or the other. The Reverend Sydney Booth writes:

> In two weeks' time it will be just one year since I began to write photoplays and in that time I have written 43. I once wrote three in one week, never more. I have sold three, two one-reel stories and one two-reel, so I suppose I may feel sufficiently encouraged to go on with it. Gross receipts $90. Expenses for paper and stamps $7.66. Against the value of my time I put the pleasure I have had writing them, finding it stimulating practice and of considerable help in my other work. I have tried my 'prentice hand at comedy to the extent of about half a dozen scripts, but have not yet discovered what constitutes real comedy. I shall stick to straight drama and perhaps some day I shall hit on the secret of comedy.

The secret of comedy is nothing more than the practice which enables an author to express his idea in smart action, providing that he possesses a sense of humor to start with.

From Maine and from London we have the same contention that comedy is the least easy to write, a fact that some beginner would do well to take to heart. It seems easy to write a lot of funny happenings, but funny happenings are incident, not plot, and plot is the first requirement.

And even since we wrote this, Capt. Charles Kiener, who writes with his brain as well as a typewriting machine, dropped in from Washington and casually remarked that he had never tried comedy, and yet he was a star writer at a time when only four studios had editors, and he has done some of the best of the Kalem two and one reel stories. It's more or less of a trick to write comedy, rather than an intellectual accomplishment, but you are most apt to come upon the trick by first studying drama.

Winter is Coming.

Just remember that after the winter comes the summer, and after the summer winter comes again. When you are trying to think of an all-outdoor play and your imagination insists upon handing you a series of all indoor stories, do not use naughty words. Grab the indoor plots gently but firmly by the neck and get them down on paper against the time the sun goes south along with the rich tourists and the Lubin comedy section. You may need them then. Start them out in September.

Inquiries.

NOTE—No questions can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. A list of addresses to which photoplays may be sent will be mailed on receipt of a STAMPED AND ADDRESSED ENVELOPE.

RICHARD ROE—Mrs. Hathaway was the Mrs. Melville in "The Power that Rules." Sorry we cannot give the Independent names, but only a few of the casts are given.

B. S.—We do not find the player mentioned in any recent casts.

E. M. T.—The important thing is not why they take scripts not so good as yours, but why they do not take yours? The theater is primarily a place of entertainment. A certain proportion of unpleasant plays may be used, just as one or two drops of tobasco may be used to give zest to a sauce, but you make the common mistake of the beginner of thinking that the more horrible a plot is the stronger it is. Take a more cheerful view of life, avoid the "true" story that reeks of the sewer, and give your imagination more play. You seem to have a good style, to judge from the quoted comments, but the synopsis you send as a sample is utterly impossible. If you could work alongside the director sometimes, you'd understand why he could not clear the street for that colonial parade.

W. R. B.—Divil a sign of a truce. Your subscription will be looked up. There seems to be no way to eliminate advertising slides save through appeal to the individual exhibitor. If your house offends put up a kick and get others to do the same. Some exchanges permit the exhibitor some latitude in the selection of a program, others do not. There is no rule. It depends largely on the personality of the man who runs the exchange or the branch.

PAT—We fail to find a K-B Boomerang but can give you your choice of Kalem, Nestor, Thanhouser or American, all within the last two years. Miss Jennie Lee was the mother in "His Mother's Son" and Miss Forde was one of the players. The Identifier has not yet sent in the cast for "A Dangerous Foe." He has been vacationing. George Moss played the title part in "The Grandfather." Walter Lewis was Miss Gish's father in "My Hero." If you read the answers to see if we have previously replied and then tell us to answer at our convenience you get in a class all by yourself. Glad to meet you.

C. H. N.—"The Snare of Fate" has been used as a title by both Vitagraph and Thanhouser within a few days. The stories are not the same. See reply to Pat for a more extensive duplication. Kinemacolor is Independent, but is run with several licensed programs.

F. W. F.—Miss Myrtle Stedman is with that section of the Selig company working in Colorado and Arizona.

R. A. D.—Good for you, but don't get so elated over the check that you stop trying to do your best. Your paper is a trifle light, but it will pass. A heavier weight makes a better impression. There are two members of that Lubin cast you overlooked. Here are the rest. In "The Weaker Mind" the engineer was Romaine Fielding and the fireman Robyn Adair, Miss Mary Ryan was the fireman's sister, Miss Eleanor Mason the engineer's daughter and Miss Reina Veldez was the riotiously inclined young person.

W. C. F. R.—Miss Ruth Hennessy was the leading woman in "The Star."

R. J. M.—Your letter has been forwarded.

ANTHONY—Your mad and hopeless passion for the lady does not interest us and it does interfere with our appetite. Stick to questions. "A Woman's Heart" was a Western Lubin and a cast of the play was not forwarded to the home office. You should know John E. Brennan. He is the player you ask for.

H. E.—In sending your letters to New York it will expedite delivery if you use the New York and not the Chicago street address. Jose in the Thanhouser "Carmen" was William Garwood. Licensed films are licensed by the Motion Pictures Patents Company. Independent films are not. Don't monkey with exchanges, clearing houses or associations. Sell direct to the companies. The advertised polls are of no value.

Technique of the Photoplay

First edition is completely

SOLD OUT

Kindly send no more orders or remittances for above.

Second edition in course of preparation. For publication date and price, see future notices.

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,
17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

A Nice Bunch of Questions.

PHILADELPHIA, the home of the modest Quaker, sends in the following exceedingly modest bundle of questions. If we had him here, we would pull his hair, but, inasmuch as even the hair of the poet would not reach from Quakertown to Gotham, the only thing we can do is, I suppose, answer the queries and thus ease the burden of his soul. He writes:

> I am a department reader, and the owner of one of your hand books. Will you please answer the following: (1) If one of the wires of an Edison 3 wire d.c. system is negative, why is it you can light a test lamp with this negative and a ground when no current is being used on the system; no other lamps or motors or anything except the test lamp? If the neutral is both positive and negative, why can't you light a test lamp with it and a ground? (2) If I have a 55 volt line, two 110 volt 25 ampere rheostats in multiple, do I get 25 amperes at the arc and about 48 volts? If so, how is this figured by Ohm's law? (3) If I have a 110 volt a.c. economizer, such as a Fort Wayne Compensarc, working on the 40 ampere notch, and a rheostat giving 40 amperes on 110 volt d.c., and in each of these cases the line voltage should drop to 100, would there be less amperes at the arc through the economizer than through the rheostat? If so, why? (4) If it is true that 48 volts is about the average arc voltage, and the amperes divided into the arc voltage gives the resistance of the arc in ohms, and the farther the carbons are separated, the greater the resistance, how does the following work out? When there are 25 amperes at the arc and the arc voltage is 48 there would be nearly 2 ohms resistance, and if there were 40 amperes at the arc there would be 1⅕ ohms arc resistance? Now, to get 1⅕ ohms resistance at the arc the carbons would have to be closer, according to the above reasoning, and from this it would seem that the higher the amperage the closer the carbons must be to each other. Is it not true that the arc having 25 amperes would be shorter than the arc using 45 amperes? If this reasoning is true, then there must be something else which increases or decreases the resistance at the arc other than the length of the arc itself. What is it? (5) I have a 110 volt, 25 ampere rheostat, connected on the negative wire. Will a voltmeter show about 48 volts if connected to the top and bottom carbon arms of the lamp when the lamp is burning? Would the voltmeter show 110 volts from top carbon arm to a ground when the lamp is burning, and would it show the difference between 110 and 48 volts, or 62 volts, from the bottom carbon arm or negative when the lamp is burning? Would the voltmeter show the same voltage (supposed to be 48) at the arc by connecting to the top and bottom carbon arms of the lamp if the rheostat was connected to either the positive or negative wires? (6) Can two 110 volt economizers be connected in series on a 220 volt line and get the same arc voltage and amperes as if one were connected to 110 volts, as in the following sketch? (7) Can two 114 volt choke coils be connected in series on 220 volts in the same way two rheostats would be connected?

(1) In the first place, Philadelphia, you must remember that the neutral wire is positive to one outside wire and negative to the other so that there are really two negative wires in a three-wire system. Don't let that point slip your memory. Also get a good grip on the fact that the neutral of a three-wire system is always grounded. Now, if you are using the side on which the neutral is positive to the other wire, then a test lamp would light between the negative and a ground, of course. You cannot light a test lamp between the neutral and a ground for the very simple reason that the neutral is itself grounded, hence current would not flow through the high resistance of a lamp filament when it has an easier path.

(2). You must remember that figures on things of this kind are not accurate, since the arc voltage varies. I have selected 48 volts as the average d.c. arc voltage because that seemed to be a fair average, but it fluctuates between 45 and 55, sometimes reaching as high as 60. To figure the problem presented in question 2 you would first have to determine the resistance of a 25 ampere 110 volt rheostat which, remembering that it is only a 25 ampere rheostat when working in series with a projection arc, requires that the arc resistance first be subtracted and, inasmuch as the arc resistance is represented by a 48 volt drop, we subtract that sum from 110 which leaves 62. Therefore, since voltage divided by amperes gives ohms, 62 divided by 25 gives us the actual resistance of the rheostat, which would be practically 2½ ohms. The problem now is: how much current will be forced through 2½ ohms resistance by 55 — 48 = 7 volts pressure? Or, in other words, 7 divided by 2½ would give you the amperage delivery of one of these rheostats when working in series with an arc, and this multiplied by 2 would give you the total delivery. The total figures out about 6 amperes, which, however, would not be by any manner of means reliable, though it would be, I think, as close an approximation as could be arrived at through figuring. In general, it is not safe to figure the resistance of an arc by Ohm's law. If anyone can suggest a better solution of Philadelphia's problem No. 2, let him stand forth and be heard.

(3) I couldn't say positively, but I am inclined to think the economizer would deliver proportionately less amperage, due to the fact that, while a rheostat made to work on one voltage will work equally well on any other lower voltage, an economizer built to work on one voltage doesn't work quite so well on another. However, I am not sure about this and would like to refer the matter to our electrician correspondents for discussion. The question is a new one, in the sense that it has never been sprung before. You do not say whether your rheostatic resistance is kept at the same point or not. I could easily call up various experts in economizer construction and get an authoritative answer, but I first would like to have the views of our readers, since discussion of this kind I believe to be of large value.

(4) There is another equation entering into this matter as follows: Through the volatilization of the carbon, a gas is formed, and this gas not only supplies a high-resistance conductor between the two carbons, but it varies in quantity according to the number of amperes of current being used. The question you have sprung is a very complicated one and one of which I have yet to find any man able to offer a complete and satisfactory solution. As a matter of fact, all practical operators know that the distance between the carbon points varies somewhat, according to the number of amperes used, and that the greater the amperage, the farther apart the carbons will be, which seems, as set forth by Philadelphia, to be an anomaly. The explanation lies, however, I think, in the increased volume of gas generated by the higher amperage, which tends to neutralize the added resistance offered by the greater distance between the carbon points. I would also be glad to have the department correspondents discuss this matter, and see what they can get out of it.

(5) The voltmeter ought to show somewhere between 45 and 55 volts between the top and bottom carbon arms when the arc is burning in such manner as to produce the best projection light. I have never tried the voltmeter from the carbon arm to the ground, or, at least if I have I don't remember it, but I see no reason why there should be any difference in its reading thus than when connected directly between the two carbon arms, since the mere fact that you attach to a ground instead of the other wire does not have the effect of cutting out the resistance which consumes the difference between the arc voltage and the line voltage. No, it would not show 62 volts between the bottom carbon arm when the lamp is burning. Connecting the rheostat into the positive or the negative wire would make no difference with the reading if you connect the leads of the voltmeter properly.

(6) Connecting two 110 volt economizers in series on 220 volts ought to give you practically the same amperage delivery as would be received from one 110 volt economizer working on a 110 volt line. (7) They can.

Machine Binds.

Mr. P. J. Bilodean, Wisconsin, complains that his Edison machine binds. He writes as follows:

> Just a few lines to let you know we are still on the job. Have a model B Edison in which I recently installed new gears for the outside revolving shutter; also new driving gear, intermediate and shaft gears. Everything was O. K. for a while, but now they seem to bind, or at least I feel a pull, though not through the entire revolution of the crank, but just in one place, about one-quarter of the distance around. I can not understand the following: I get a fine, steady light for the last show; a light that cannot be beaten, but for the first show it is always more or less punk—usually more. I run two shows a night, pay strict attention to my arc, and try to feed it always the same.

Well, neighbor Bilodean, I don't exactly know what to say about the machine binding, but you can locate the trouble as follows: set the crank in the position where the heaviest bind is and then carefully try out all the gears and the shutter, by gently rocking them with your finger until you find the one that is tight, and there you will doubtless locate the trouble. As to the light, I think you will find that you are connected to street mains which are overloaded during the first part of the evening. Possibly some big store, large hall or some plant using power which takes service from those lines, shuts down before your second show. The best way to determine this matter is by having the power company test the voltage on the two wires feeding your house, both at the time your light is poor and at the time it is good. If there is a material difference then it is a cinch that your feeders are carrying beyond their capacity, with the consequent drop in voltage. I would suggest that, unless you can get this condition remedied, you arrange your resistance so that you can cut out some of it when the light is poor.

Reflecting Projectors.

W. G. Walker, Butler Theater, Tonopah, Nevada, wishes to know how hand-writing is made to appear on the screen; that is to say, when a hand appears and proceeds to write a message to the audience. He says he understands mirrors are used in this work and would like very much to have the arrangement. This, so far as I know, can only be done by means of a special projector, which is pretty expensive. They are made to order and cost approximately $200, so I am told. If anyone can give Tonopah directions for the construction of such a machine, let him send it in and we will publish it.

Surehold Shutter Setter.

The Surehold Shutter Setter Company sends sample of their device for examination. It is designed to replace the hub of the outside shutter on projection machines and it is so arranged that, by merely turning a thumb screw, the shutter blade is advanced or moved backward, thus providing a very convenient method for setting the shutter. From the mechanical standpoint, the device is very well made indeed. It is nickel-plated and its mechanical make-up cannot be criticised. I cannot better describe it than by using the following, taken from one of the circulars put out by the company:

> This little device is made up of only a few parts, each piece being interchangeable, made as accurately as can possibly be made. All screws are hardened, thus eliminating wear. Note on cut part No. 1, which is hub finished from the solid bar, bronze and nickel-plated, which holds the sheet iron part of shutter on back by the three little screws. No. 3 is a small worm gear, milled from solid steel. This fits into the hub, No. 1, held in place by the screw on the side of hub No. 1. This screw fits into the groove on worm gear, No. 3, which takes up end play. The thumbscrew, No. 4, fits into the hole at 6, on the hub 1, which comes in mesh with the worm gear, No. 3, and is held in place by the screw at 5. The set-screw 7 is for holding shutter on shaft of your machine. To adjust shutter, turn screw 4, which will revolve shutter around shaft, so that you will have no trouble in setting to the 1-1,000 part of an inch.

Stereo Lens Wrong.

Bloomdale, Ohio, writes, complaining that, while his moving picture is clear and sharp, the stereo is out-of-focus. Says it will not focus up at all with the back lens in. Has tried moving the lamphouse forward and back; also moved the lens to different positions, without result. Says when he takes the back lens out, he can "focus them almost where he wants them," but to get the size picture he wants, he must use the back lens, but with that in he cannot get a white light at all.

I do not exactly understand Bloomdale, but presume you mean that when you remove the back combination of your stereo objective, you get a clear picture, though, of course, a very small one. You are using a pretty long focal length objective and possibly it is a quarter size lens, in which case you could not get a clear field. I think that is the trouble, in which event you should have a half-size lens, or else the lenses of your back combination are, either one, or both of them, reversed. The heaviest bulge or convex to all lenses should be towards the screen.

A Warning.

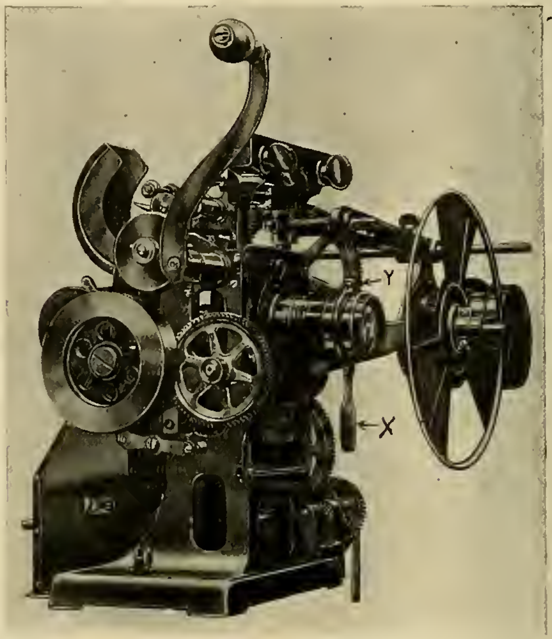
A correspondent who wishes his name suppressed because he does not want his friends to know the fix he is in, writes from Los Angeles, Cal.:

> The Projection Department has been of vast assistance to me in my work and knowing it would be read by 99% of the operators, I am giving my experience to keep some poor devil of an operator from committing the same blunder I did when I took Horace Greeley's advice to "Go West and grow up with the country." I left a good job in Kansas City, took advantage of a cheap railroad rate and came to the Coast, landing at San Diego, Cal. Here I found the operating room of every theater to be controlled by the union and, not being a card man, I could not light. Coming on to Los Angeles, I found the following conditions. You must pass a city examination and pay $5.00 for a license before you can work. There are 120 jobs in this territory and 650 licenses issued to date. Out of the 120 jobs, the union controls all the best ones, or about 65. The others pay from $7.00 to $10.00 for suburban night jobs with Sunday matinees, to $15.00 for a 13-hour grind, and, believe me, there are plenty of good men hunting for work at these prices, as the union requires a 6 months' residence of an applicant for membership. As soon as I can beg or borrow railroad fare, I will bid this Land of Ozone a long farewell.

Well, I don't know just what comment to make on this letter. In the first place, I would suggest that before the operator accepts our good friend, Horace Greeley's advice, he amend it to read as follows: "First join the union and then go West." Of course, I understand that the brother can very likely come back at me with the assertion that he didn't have any chance to join the union, owing to the 6 months clause. Well, I have about come to the conclusion that the 6 months' residence clause is, after all, a wise enactment, although it seems to, and, at times actually does work injustice. It is, however, about the only means the union has of separating the sheep from the goats and you can take it from me, there is a considerable number of very goaty goats. The advice this brother offers is good, however, even for union men. Los Angeles, San Diego and the various Pacific Coast towns are usually the Mecca towards which every Western pilgrim heads. The result is that the towns almost invariably will be found to contain a surplus of labor in every line, from the professional to the ditch digger. The brother will set his face toward the rising sun, a wiser, even though a sadder man. He has bought and paid for a nice little bundle of experience and is generous enough to give his fellowmen the benefit thereof, without money and without price.

Change in Power's Six.

The Nicholas Power Co. has made quite an important change in its lens focusing arrangements, the same being illustrated herewith. Instead of having to reach in behind the shutter and focus by means of the thumb-screw operating a rack and pinion, the lever shown at X has been substituted. This is a more important change than it appears on the surface and will be of interest to operators. The old method of focusing by means of the thumb-screw was not satisfactory, particularly when used with a short focal length lens, but aside from this, it was necessary to loosen the screws holding the lens-ring and set the lens in such way that the thumb-screws came in the right position and this usually spelled trouble since there was always the danger of (a) not getting the ring properly centered, (b) not getting the lens ring screws retightened in such manner as to hold the lens perfectly square to the face-plate, or the aperture. It is now not necessary to loosen these screws at all. Screw the lens in tightly and then loosen screw Y which will allow lever X to be slipped around to any desired position.



Ghost Trouble.

Prairie Grove, Ark., complains of ghost trouble. He says:

> Am using a Power's 6, projecting a 14½ foot picture at 75 feet, using direct current from a 4 k.w generator. My condensers are 7½ next the arc and 8½ in front. I have tried every way I know to get rid of the double spot, and certain ghosts on the screen.

Prairie Grove will have to describe those ghosts more clearly, if I am to help him in that respect. As to the double spot I would suggest that he study pages 204 to 212, inclusive, of the handbook, particularly the illustrations on pages 206 and 211. I don't see how Prairie Grove can get a double spot when using direct current. I would advise him to examine his condensing lenses and see that they are parallel to each other.

More Ghost Trouble.

Manilla, Iowa, complains as follows:—

> When I get my spot large enough to cover my screen there is a spot in its center. What condensers should I use, and what distance should they be apart. I use 110 d.c., with one hard and one soft carbon, projecting a sixteen foot picture at 82 feet.

Two 7½ condensers should be all right in your case, Manilla. They should be set as close together as possible. Try moving your lamphouse backward and forward. I don't quite understand what you mean by "when the spot on the screen is large enough." You can not alter that without moving the machine ahead or backward, or else changing your lens.

Guil Pastil O. K.

Mr. Charles Russel, Ashcroft, B. C., to whom I sent a Guil Pastil for trial, reports as follows:

> Pastil is all that its importer claims. I have used it four nights, using Model B gas generating outfit, and it has simply doubled the light, as against the old limes. Gas users should be advised through the department at once. The Pastil is surely a jewel. I only consumed five cakes of oxone in one hour and a half run.

We are obliged to Brother Russel for his prompt report. If the pastil is as good as this the fact cannot be too quickly known.

Machine Brace.

Mr. Humphrey Woods, Richmond, Missouri, cries:

> Help! Help! Have not received my M. P. World for four weeks. Please look the matter up, because I surely miss the Projection Department. I have my machine set in the concrete floor of the operating room about two inches. I also made a brace of good, heavy strap iron and braced the top of the magazine to the front wall, so that the whole thing is as rigid as it is possible to have it.

We will look the matter up at once and forward the missing copies. Belting the top magazine to the wall is a good scheme, if the wall itself is without vibration.

Sprocket Holes Show.

Mansfield, Ohio, says he is getting good results with two Edison Model B machines, but the sprocket holes show on the left-hand side of the screen. He has set the star and cam shaft as far to the right as he can get them. Possibly your top gate idlers are too far to the left. See that they are central with the aperture. Also possibly the bracket, 18181, Fig. 106, page 238 of the Handbook, which supports the aperture plate, is too far to the left. Loosen its screws and see if you can move it slightly to the right, but first try the top sprocket, aperture, intermittent and lower sprockets with a straight edge, as directed in general instruction No. 4, and illustrated in Fig. 101A, all on page 215 of the Handbook.

A Fallen Idol.

Some time ago I visited a certain theater in Bay Ridge, and was pleased with the results I saw on the screen. The light was brilliant, white and well handled. The house, however, was new and at that time had only been running a short time. A few days ago I again visited this theater and was sadly disappointed. The light was still brilliant, but it was by no manner of means well handled, and oftener than not there were shadows, and sometimes very heavy ones, too, on the screen. Now there were two things, which, in my judgment, caused this state of affairs: (a) The machine was motor driven. (b) The observation port is only about seven or eight inches square. Beyond any question of doubt the operator, though he understands his business, and is capable of putting on high-class projection, has grown careless. Instead of sitting right there by the machine with his hand on the motor control and his eye on the screen every moment of the time, he "lets George do it," George being the motor, and instead of keeping his eye on the screen he watches the spot. The result is bad, and to me it was disappointing. I had spoken highly of the projection of this house to a number of friends of mine, and came very near taking some of them along that night, in which case I would have been a laughing stock. But the operator in this case has no fair chance to watch his projection. The observation port should be arranged as per page 74 of the Handbook. The opening should not be less than eight inches high and twelve inches wide, so that the operator won't have to place his face right up against the wall and peep through a knot-hole with one eye, in order to see his picture. I have, times almost without number, pointed out to managers the fact that a little 2 x 4 observation port is one of the most prolific scources we have of poor projection. Personally, I would refuse to work in an operating room having such an observation port. My advice to the manager of this house is to enlarge that port and do it quick, and then to insist on the operator keeping shadows off the screen. My advice to the operator of this house is that he insist on a larger observation port and when he gets it, keep his eye on the screen and his hand on the motor every moment of the time there is a picture being projected. Only in this way can he do justice to himself, to the audience and to his manager. No doubt the manager and operator will know to whom I am referring. They are very pleasant gentlemen, both of them, and I appreciate their friendship. I have written this out of kindness both to the operator and to the manager of this beautiful theater where the projection was very good indeed, but has fallen away, partly through the fault of the operator, and partly through the fault of the manager, who has not given the operator a fair show to do his work right by only allowing him a sort of glorified knot-hole for an observation port.

Fuse Capacity.

Mr. C. F. Givan, President of The Pickwick Club, Sussex, New Brunswick, asks the following questions:

> Each set of borders, strips, foots, etc., contains about 25 five c. p. lamps. Each set is controlled by a separate switch and fuse. Each six of these sets is controlled by a master switch and fuses. What is the proper size fuse plugs in these two cases? Current is alternating, 110 volts, 133 cycle. Three transformers are used, all well within their rating. With the same current, but from a separate circuit, we run a Motiograph, getting a 20 ft. picture on a 75 ft. throw. Everything is thoroughly satisfactory with the exception of constant breakage of condensers, which crack as soon as they are put in. What is the proper distance from the arc to the condenser? Would a sheet of thin mica between the two protect the lens from heat?

The amperage consumption of a 4 c. p. 110 volt lamp is given as .16, and that of a 6 c. p., .22 of an ampere. We may, therefore, assume that of a 5 c. p. to be about .19 of an ampere of current or, say .2 of an ampere, which, multiplied by 25, the number of lamps in each individual circuit, gives us 5 amperes for each circuit, or 5 × 6 = 30 amperes for each set. I would suggest a 6 ampere fuse for each individual set and 35 ampere fuses for each set of six. I do not believe in fusing right down to the actual amperage consumption. The foregoing will serve every purpose of safety. As to the breakage of the condensers, I would suggest that you examine page 364-5 of the Handbook, wherein is contained information which ought to stop the trouble.

Indians are Picture Fans.

Chas. Russel Ashcroft, British Columbia, sends an order for a Handbook, and says:

> I am a Canadian Pacific railway telegraph operator who went into the moving picture business four months ago, and I am making good. I make towns 200 miles distant on the famous Cariboo Road. I have shown to every Indian in the country. Most of them never saw moving pictures before and are great fans. I run three shows in each place, charging twenty-five and fifty cents. My house runs from $70 to $100 per night, and everybody praises the show. I am using a Model B gas generating outfit with good results, although I never ran one before. I overhaul it every day and keep everything in first-class condition. I have just returned from one of my trips and am now showing at Ashcroft, in a tent 24 x 70 with a 9 foot wall, made of ten ounce white duck, stretched over 2 x 4 framework. It has stood one of the heaviest winds we have yet experienced, so I feel safe. I use a three foot projecting black hood around my painted screen. I started the show last night at 8:30, though it doesn't get really dark before 9:45, using gas at that. I have 250 lawn folding carpet seat chairs at $1.00 each. Ashcroft has 1,000 inhabitants and hot weather prevails, so my tent is a hit. My machine gets a good many hard knocks, but the only damage I find is an out-of-focus effect, which I usually locate without trouble. I use a three-wing shutter and a 6½ condenser next the arc, with a 7½ in front. If Park Falls, Wisconsin, cares to write me I can furnish some good advice as to his belt.

Mr. Russel sends an interesting photo of game. Those rabbit and dear look pretty good, brother Russel. Your letter is very interesting indeed, and I am sending you a Guil Pastil, which is a new substitute for the lime. I want you to try it out carefully and report results. You will find description of it on page 1029 of June 17th issue. You certainly must be putting up a good show if you are able to get 25 and 50 cents, using gas. Success to you. If I were you I would use a two-wing shutter instead of a three-winger, when using gas.

That Flywheel Shaft Collar.

Brother Blaine Day, Sherman, Texas, insists that the collar he has placed on the fly-wheel shaft of his Power's Six machine, which we described in the Department, and commented thereon, is of value. Our own views were that placing the collar next to the right hand bushing simply transferred the wear from the left hand end of the left hand bushing to the left hand end of the right hand bushing, and that the moving of the fly-wheel shaft to the right would tend to decrease the bearing of the cross pins on the cam ring. The Nicholas Power Company has recognized the utility of such a collar and is now placing it on their Number 6 fly-wheel shaft, but, instead of placing it against the left hand end of the right hand bushing, it is placed against the right hand end of the left hand bushing, which is a distinction with a difference, for this reason: wear which produces end motion of the fly-wheel shaft is largely caused by wear between the gear and the right hand end of the right hand bushing. Now, by placing a steel collar against the right hand end of the left hand bushing the wear between the gear and the boxing is largely done away with, and end motion will only develop very slowly. We think friend Day struck a good idea, but has not applied it in the best possible way. We think he will himself agree that there will be a distinct gain if he will slip that collar over against the other bushing. Brother Day also expresses an opinion that all machines should be equipped with removable shaft bearings, held in place by a set screw. In this he would be perfectly correct, provided this were a practical thing to do, which it is not, under existing conditions. This matter, like many others, hinges on the question of selling price. The exhibitor wants cheapness in his projector. It costs money to do all these various things, and, for various reasons, it would cost considerably more to equip machines with this kind of a bushing than without them. Friend Day cites the fact that the old Power's 5 machine had removable bushings, which is correct, insofar as the fly-wheel and cam shafts were concerned, but he overlooks the fact that, while it costs fully twice as much to build the modern projector, that is to say, such a machine as the Power's 6, Simplex, Motiograph, etc., as it did the Power's 5, still the manufacturer lacks considerable of getting twice as much money for them, and is compelled to economize. To put in removable bushings means that the bushing must be turned, inside and outside. It means that the hole in the casting must be bored perfectly true, and that there must be a hole drilled and tapped for the set screw, and the screw itself must be provided. Moreover, it means more time in assembling, all of which spells expense. I have repeatedly pointed out the fact that projection machines are too cheap. They ought to sell for somewhere between $400 and $500, instead of for less than $300. You provide the manufacturer the money, brother Day and he will do the rest, I can assure you of that. Incidentally we note from a clipping enclosed in brother Day's letter that Sherman is to have another new, up-to-date moving picture theater.

New Airdome.

Messrs. Morrow & Hahn, Shelbyville, Ill., write, enclosing clipping from a local paper describing the new airdome which adjoins their "Cozy" Theater at 2006 West Main Street. It passes under the name of "Cozy Annex." The projection equipment consists of a Power's 6 and an Edison Model B, projecting to plaster screens both in the theater and the airdome. Licensed service and a limited amount of vaudeville, in the shape of musical and animal acts, are used. The seating capacity is 350. The operating room is built according to the latest approved designs of the Underwriters' Association. We wish neighbors Morrow & Hahn every success in their new venture, trusting that they will maintain a high standard of projection, remembering always that, while a cosy theater, comfortable seats and beautiful decorations are important, excellence in results on the screen counts above everything else when it comes to garnering in the nickels, dimes or quarters of the amusement-loving public.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

"THE CLOAK OF GUILT" (Kalem), June 27.—A drama with Alice Joyce and Tom Moore in the leading roles. The scenes are very attractively pictured. The story is one in which a girl, jealous of her mother's secretary, hides the jewel box and throws suspicion on the latter. Her plan was perhaps a natural one, but lacked the dramatic touch necessary to make such a scene memorable. Tom's meeting with the girl at the beginning of the film seemed a little overdrawn. As a whole, this is very entertaining.

"BOB BUYS AN AUTO" (Lubin), June 27.—A short comedy. Bob's auto, purchased at a second-hand store, breaks down and leaves himself and friends in a bad predicament. Fairly amusing.

"THE BEAUT FROM BUTTE" (Lubin), June 27.—This, on same reel with above, is longer and stronger than the other. Bad Bill comes on a visit from the East and tells big stories of his prowess. But later, it is learned that he drives a sprinkling wagon in his home town. Some good laughs in this.

"FORTUNE SMILES" (Edison), June 27.—This is the twelfth and last story of the "What Happened To Mary" series. She gets her fortune by arriving at the lawyer's office just in the nick of time. The photography was not of the best in places in this last reel, but the windup of the story was very interesting. Mary Fuller, who played the leading part in the series, makes some special poses at the close.

"FIELD DAY SPORTS OF CHINESE RECREATION CLUB" (Vitagraph), June 27.—Orientals competing in field day sports appear in this half reel. They do the 100-yard dash, sack race, three-legged race and various other sports, very much the same as American athletes.

"ONE GOOD JOKE DESERVES ANOTHER" (Vitagraph), June 27.—John Bunny starts something in this, when he rubs his friend's silk hat the wrong way on April 1. The friend retaliates by throwing a fake baby in the water. Bunny calls in the whole town to help him, and they all wind up in the police court after some amusing experiences. A successful comedy, on same reel with above.

"WITNESS 'A-3, CENTER' " (Essanay), June 27.—A good, live story is this, in which a man who attended the theater one evening and sat with two girls, is charged with murdering his employer. He cannot prove his presence in the theater until one of the girls sees his picture in the paper, and comes forward to prove an alibi for him. The denouement would have been stronger if the pistol incident had been held back till the matinee tickets were produced; as it stands, the latter forms an anti-climax. But the story is interesting and well acted throughout.

"A WESTERN ROMANCE" (Selig), June 27.—Here is quite a strong tale of Western love and villainy. Tom's rival, the father of an illegitimate child, tries to throw suspicion on him, by leaving the baby at the girl's house. Later, scenes are taken at the reservoir, where Tom has charge of important construction work. His discovery of the burning fuse and stopping of the leak are well carried out. The girl finally discovers the evil work of Tom's rival and exposes him. A good offering.

"THE SPOTTED ELEPHANT HAWK MOTH" (Patheplay), June 27.—A scientific number, showing the evolution of the elephant moth from the time it was a caterpillar. Very interesting and instructive.

"ATHENS" (Patheplay), June 27.—A scenic number, on same reel with above, depicting the famous Grecian city as it now stands. Some fine photographic effects are obtained.

"A VILLAIN UNMASKED" (Eclipse), June 27.—A strong two-reel offering, notable for the sincere, impressive acting of the three principals, Juliette Feriel, George Baud and Ralph Lyon. The story is one with a decided melodramatic flavor, but as portrayed here, it worked out very naturally and without any forcing of situations beyond their inherent dramatic value. The son, seeing his mother is about to marry a man who is a villain at heart, does some amateur detective work and rounds the fellow up as one of a gang of counterfeiters. The mother appears as a well-gowned, fascinating widow. A very good offering.

"HOW DID IT FINISH" (Edison), June 25.—Good comedy. Dan Mason, as the father of the daughter whom he had denied the privilege of reading a novel, and Alice Washburn, as the mother, do excellent work. Dissolving scenes show the lurid nature of the story the father himself became absorbed in. Benjamin Wilson played the lover in the book and Herbert Prior the villain.

"EASY PAYMENTS" (Essanay), June 25.—A girl in a small country town goes to the city. From the same place goes a young man, and to the same boarding house in the city—in fact, their rooms adjoin. It later singularly develops the two are absolutely unacquainted. The girl, unable to obtain work, decides it is her clothes that are responsible and obtains a new outfit on installments. Later, when she has failed in her payments, it is the young man who gets a job as collector for the installment concern. These incidents constitute quite a remarkable series of convenient coincidences. All ends happily, though, when the man's mother comes to the city for him and tells him he can secure a forty acre tract from his father on easy payments. He takes the girl back with him.

"THE KNIGHT OF CYCLONE GULCH" (Kalem), June 25.—A burlesque which is not even funny. A timid sheriff gets into a coat of mail and, armed with a short sword and a shield, goes after a bad man. The outlaw permits himself to be taken.

"CURING HER EXTRAVAGANCE" (Kalem), June 25.—On the same reel as the foregoing is this comedy that is just so-so. One of the incidents is where the father of the new husband sends him a check for $50,000 as if it were $50, telling him such extravagance must stop.

"JACK'S CHRYSANTHEMUM" (Vitagraph), June 25.—A slight drama that will interest by reason of its Japanese backgrounds. Miss Young as the Japanese maiden is good; so also is W. V. Ranous as the American on a visit to his son in Japan.

"PAPA'S DREAM" (Selig), June 25.—A father is supposed to dream that his daughter has eloped and becomes aware of the fact that it was only a dream. The beginning and the ending of the illusion are not clearly shown. The following night the elopement really takes place and the father this time supposes he is dreaming. The picture hardly gets over.

"THE CITY OF GOLD" (Selig), June 25.—On the same reel as the foregoing is this short film of interesting scenes in Burmah.

"THE HUNGER OF THE HEART" (Pathe), June 25.—The story will interest; chiefly the picture will charm the eye. It is beautifully staged in a fine country section and splendidly photographed and tinted. The story is of a man who lives by his wits trying to win the attentions of a wife who believes her husband devotes to her insufficient time. One of the noticeable incidents of the picture is of a woman who befriends and advises another woman in distress—and does not, as our script writers too frequently incline to do, make her out worse than she is. The drama is well acted.

"CLARENCE, THE COWBOY" (Patheplay), June 26.—To evolve something really new and interesting out of a cowboy comedy is evidently a task beyond human power, as is clearly shown in this play. The comedy is anything but obvious. It is one of those "funny" film plays in which the actors on the screen are convulsed with laughter while the audience remains wholly uninfected by what is supposed to be contagious humor. The action limps and there are no genuine flashes of wit.

"A DIVIDED HOUSE" (Essanay), June 26.—The vein of humor which is represented by this comedy has long since survived its paying streak. There is still a faint trace of value here and there, but on the whole, the mine is thoroughly worked out. The strain is farcical, but not at all clever.

"WHEN MEN FORGET" (Selig), June 26.—The plot of this play was probably well known to our antediluvian ancestors. With all the centuries of wear and tear it ought now be placed on the retired list for some centuries to come. The artist meets the simple country maiden and then behaves to her like a real melodramatic "cad" by forgetting her and his promises when he gets into the limelight of success. The staleness of the story seems to be inexcusable.

"HER SWEETEST MEMORY" (Vitagraph), June 26.—A very pretty incident quite likely to occur in real life and filled with honest pathos. It will strengthen any program and please any audience. The ability of this company to make the commonplace interesting and show the marvelous dramatic things that are happening every day, even in the plain work-a-day world of a great city account in no small measure for their continued success and popularity.

"OUT OF THE JAWS OF DEATH" (Kalem), June 28.—A more or less exciting melodrama of ante-bellum days, with some tense situations. The story is of the South, with fine backgrounds; the atmosphere is well sustained.

"HER MOTHER'S OATH" (Biograph), June 28.—A motherly, almost grandmotherly, woman carries the honors of this splendid picture. Her role is that of a mother who rules with an iron hand, who is arbitrary, self-willed. Her characterization is impressive, rugged; at times it gets into your throat. Henry Walthall plays the strolling actor, Dorothy Gish the girl in love with him. Charles Mailes is the clergyman whose services are interrupted and who halts them to denounce and put out the man who dared to pass a note to a member of his congregation. All deserve praise. The scenes where the blind mother, her money gone, rolls up her sleeves and goes out and nearly falls into the uncovered well; later, when she again goes to the well, this time determined to end it all, but is saved by the returned couple, are full of pathos. A film to be featured.

"THE SECOND SHOT" (Pathe), June 28.—A picture supposedly laid in Mexico or near it, but lacking in atmosphere. The story centers about the result of a survey and a consequent boundary dispute between an American and a Mexican doctor. Crane Wilbur plays the former; the latter is inclined to melodramatic attitudinizing. A fair release.

"BRONCHO BILLY'S STRATEGY" (Essanay), June 28.—The picture is notable by reason of the fact that there is not a single subtitle. Aside from the first hundred feet or so none was necessary. The story is of the usual Broncho Billy sort and will undoubtedly appeal to audiences who favor Mr. Anderson.

"THE FLY" (Edison), June 28.—A short picture intended to show the dangers of permitting the breeding of this pest.

"CIRCUMSTANCES MAKE HEROES" (Edison), June 28.—On the same reel is this good comedy, written by Gertrude McCoy. The three rivals for the hand of the sheriff's daughter (Bessie Learn) make the most of the fun. They are Richard Neill, Arthur Housman and Edward Boulden. Bigelow Cooper is the sheriff.

"THE LOVE TEST" (Lubin), June 28.—A picture that will go well with the gallery; it will make no particular appeal to thoughtful persons. An unpleasant aspect is portraying a doctor attempting to elope with the wife of a friend.

"CLOISONNE WARE" (Vitagraph), June 28.—A very short film showing men putting the finishing touches on this ware.

"ONE OVER ON CUTEY" (Vitagraph), June 28.—On the same reel is this good comedy featuring Wallie Van. It will make laughter.

"THE BEADED BUCKSKIN BAG" (Selig), June 30.—A picture of Mexican lovers in the days when gold was being discovered in the West. The story by Everett McNeil is a bit conventional, but has been well played by the leading characters and even by the lesser figures. It will provide good entertainment. There is one fine bit in it showing the finding of gold in a mill sluice by an old man (William Hutchinson) and it is perfectly photographed. The photography of the whole is commendable. The picture was produced by E. A. Martin. Herbert Rawlinson and Adele Lane have the romantic leads. George Hernandes plays the girl's father and Henry Otto her villainous lover. Hobart Bosworth has a minor part.

"A FIGHT TO A FINISH" (Kalem), June 30.—A story of a fight for irrigating waters and in which Cupid takes a hand. Old rancher Johnson, played by C. R. Edrington, has monopolized all the water in the valley and his young neighbor. played by Helen Holmes, blows up his dam and with a rifle fires at his men who are trying to repair the damage. Johnson's son has fallen in love with the girl and who had been away but has come home when he finds how things stand takes her part successfully. His part is taken by Tom Loman. The story will interest, but the photography is not as clear as might be.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 28" (June 30).—There are several good items this week that will interest everyone. The best photographed and perhaps most valuable of them is the view of the old printing shop of Benjamin Franklin, at Burlington, N. J. A celebration was held in it recently. There is also a view of the King and Queen of Belgium at the opening of the great exposition at Ghent. We are also shown the unveiling of a statue at Valley Forge, commemorating the brave soldiers who served there.

"A GAMBLE WITH DEATH" (Biograph), June 30.—This story, without being deeply significant, has freshness and will hold the interest. The little things given to it by its players add much. It is set in a small Western village and its chief characters are a gambler, a rough cowboy and a "lunger." The scenes show us a bar-room, where these three make a pool which is to go to the surviving one when the others are dead, and it also shows places in and around the tent of the "lunger." There is a girl in the case, of course. The photography is clear enough and the offering shows up well among the others of today.

"THE STORY OF THE BELL" (Edison), June 30.—An offering giving a story of Revolutionary times with much to commend it. The story interests and has been made clear. We find good, well-chosen scenes and backgrounds which carry the action and naturally suggests the period. The costuming is also good. Perhaps the photography, which is fair, yet without that clear-cut quality that looks like real life, keeps it from seeming wholly natural and there are also moments, now and then, when it fails to convince; for instance, an ordinary person could have squirmed out from under the bell as it hung swinging in the picture. It was produced by Walter Edwin.

"ROUGHING THE CUB" (Vitagraph), June 30.—A good newspaper story with Hughey Mack in the leading role, as the "cub" reporter, who has come in from Squashville and has adopted the "World." When the other reporters find that he is a poet, they "put up a game on him"; send him chasing from one fake fire to another; but by accident he comes on a big story and makes a "beat." The script, by Courtney Riley Cooper, will take well with most audiences and should be popular. Bert Angeles directed it. Harry Northrup. as the editor, Herbert L. Barry as the police captain and others ably support Hughey Mack. The photography is clear.

"HER ATONEMENT" (Lubin), June 30.—A melodramatic picture by Wilbert Melville that will be popular with many spectators, especially in the gallery. It is a story of the West, clearly told and acceptably produced for those who are not critical as to details. The heroine (Nellie Hopkins), hero (Carl Von Schiller) and villain (Joseph Holland) are what is demanded in such offerings and will please. Dollie Larkin plays the Indian girl, a tragic-heroic part. It is clearly photographed.

"THE TRAPPER'S MISTAKE" (Patheplay), June 28.—This two-reel melodrama has many features to commend it. The story is of a man and his wife and little "Baby Violet" and a boarder. When the second man, in order to avoid causing trouble between man and wife, took his departure and the wife was taken captive by Indians, the returning husband was not to be blamed for thinking the two had left together. How the family was eventually reunited forms an interesting tale. There are splendid backgrounds, some of them wintry scenes, with snow-covered ground and ice-wrapped trees; others at a less altitude—all splendidly photographed and tinted. One of the situations of suspense is where a great bear wanders into the cabin and little Violet hides under the table. A real spectacle is the ride of the red men through the two and three feet deep water of the shaded creek in pursuit of the escaping family.

"SONGS OF TRUCE" (Selig), July 1.—A story of brothers, one of the Southern army, one of the Northern. There are no situations of real interest. There are one or two skirmishes that may arouse the boys in an audience. By the way, the introduction of the up-to-date clip ammunition belts into the Confederate service is a novelty.

"RETAGGED" (Essanay), July 1.—The theme of this film might be said to be covered with cobwebs were it not for the fact that it is used too often to permit the accumulation of these indicators of hoary age. Wife and husband have a tiff. Husband goes out to the park, meets pretty girl, learns her name and address, goes to candy store, to flower store, and orders sent remembrances. Boys delivering them meet, play dice, lose tags; merchants say for wife, of course, and accordingly the packages are delivered. Forgiving wife receives deceitful husband with open arms.

"THE DRUMMER'S UMBRELLA" (Essanay), July 1.—On the same reel is this short comedy which may make some amusement.

"HER HUSBAND'S PICTURE" (Lubin), July 1.—The story lacks a grip, it fails to create strong interest. A Northern artist goes south for his health. He induces a young wife interested in art to leave her husband and come north with him, hoping to win her. He fails, as the wife decides to return to her husband. Her decision is reached when she sees a picture of her husband.

"THE PATCHWORK QUILT" (Edison), Juluy 1.—A pretty picture. It is of the reminiscent type. It shows gradmother telling the little granddaughter the story of Jim, how they met, married, and his departure for the war, from which he never returned. There are many finely staged scenes.

"THE MIRACLE OF THE ROSES" (Patheplay), July 1.—A stately picture produced by the French company. It is finely staged, with excellent studio sets and charming exteriors.

"SIGHTSEEING IN JAPAN" (Vitagraph), July 1.—A short film, the more interesting scenes in which are views of women coaling a ship at Yokohama and long-distance views of Fujiyama, the sacred mountain of Japan.

"BINGLES AND THE CABARET" (Vitagraph), July 1.—On the same reel is this excellent comedy in which James Lackaye has his troubles trying to eat in peace. He goes from one restaurant to another, only to encounter a new form of torture in each. The picture is carefully and expensively staged under the direction of Frederick Thomson. Mrs Breuil writes the script.

Independent

"LEO, THE INDIAN" (Imp), July 5.—Burlesque comedy of the French sort. It will amuse those who like slapstick stuff.

"SKETCHES FROM LIFE" (Imp), July 5.—On the same reel as the foregoing are these drawings of the well-known cartoonist of himself. It is a fine example of double printing and also good entertainment.

"IN THE NIGHT" (Eclair), July 6.—Short drama. It is hardly long enough to establish deep interest.

"HOW DIAMONDS ARE MADE" (Eclair), July 6.—On the same reel is this rather technical, illustrated description of the manufacture of diamonds. The resulting gems are too small for mounting.

"THE POWDER FLASH OF DEATH" (101-Bison), July 8.—There are many battle scenes in these two reels, some of them picturesque. In no practical way do they have to do with the thread of the story. Three men, friends, separate and two of them go to war—one South, the other North. The third becomes a guerilla. There is a dramatic moment when the three meet in the room of a girl with whom each is in love. In spite of the fact that there is raging a battle between the North and South, the three men fight a triangular duel—instead of two of them fulfilling the duty of soldiers and returning to their respective commands. The photography is good; the picture, however, will interest chiefly as a spectacle.

"THE BANSHEE" (Kay-Bee), July 11.—A two-reel offering with an Irish setting so realistic as to make the observer think he is in the Emerald Isle. The pigs and chickens and cow are in evidence. The plot centers about the cry of the Banshee. Dan refuses to have the baby christened, but in his drunken stupor has a vivid dream, which is worked out in the film. He sees his wife flee with the landlord's handsome son, whom he follows and kills by knocking him off a cliff. Then the cabin is set fire to by the indignant neighbors. Finally the Banshee appears before Dan and this brings him out of his dream. A good offering.

"ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 68" (Universal), June 25.—An especially entertaining number, containing views of the Harvard vs. Yale boat race, the English Derby, 20,000 school children marching in Bronx Park, the recent submarine boat test, a close view of the new Imperator, and other interesting things.

"TRUE CHIVALRY" (Crystal), July 8.—Some very neat effects are obtained in this love story. Chester rescues the girl from a runaway, but proves an unwelcome suitor to her father.. The proposal of the latter to fight a duel was somewhat ridiculous, but there is a certain breeziness about this offering which makes it pleasing.

"SAFE IN JAIL" (Keystone), July 7.—Lovers of the particular brand of nonsense put out by this enterprising company will rock in their seats over this jail burlesque. Fred Sterling keeps the merriment going for the entire reel. The night scene was a lively one, with both men and women running about in night attire. Low comedy of the most successful kind.

"THE TELLTALE LIGHT" (Keystone), July 10.—In this reel kissing and spooning run riot. The Anti-Spooning Club winds up with everybody practising the art of osculation. Mabel turns the searchlight on everyone in turn. This reel, as may be imagined, is not of an elevating type, and we did not consider it very amusing, but it will undoubtedly appeal to certain audiences.

"THE WAGER" (Reliance), July 9.—This film story is notable for its big theme and pleasing characterizations. The plot itself, however, offers more possibilities than were gotten out of it. Nevertheless it stands out above the average production. The little girl from the slums grows up in good company and becomes just as sweet and attractive as the other child. A pleasing idea.

"A RURAL ROMANCE" (Reliance), July 7.—The opening scenes in this drama move along too rapidly to get up much feeling; too many of the situations seem planned to suit the convenience of the cameraman. The employer's action in kissing a girl on an open road in full view of half a dozen people does not seem likely for a man of his standing. Later along, where the boy knocks the man down for abusing his horse, the story gets hold, but even here more leisurely methods would have strengthened the general effect of the film.

"DEATH'S SHORT CUT" (Reliance), July 5.—In this picture, Rodman Law performs one of his dangerous feats. He rides over a waterfall in an open boat in order to head off a foolish wedding on the part of the heroine. This is the strongest feature of the film, which tells an otherwise conventional story.

"DICK'S TURNING" (Reliance), July 2.—The young husband, who has lost his job and is forced to send his wife back to her father, thinks he will pick up a stray cat to take to her. As he takes hold of the feline, a small boy shoots him with an air gun, from a nearby window. He is taken into the house and gets a job as chauffeur as a result of the injury, and is, of course, reunited with his wife. Somehow the story impressed us as a little too sentimental to carry much force, and the characterizations were not quite what they might have been. We have liked the leading man in this better in parts more suited to his general build and appearance.

"A GARDEN PARTY IN CALIFORNIA" (American), July 12.—Glimpses of Stewart Edward White receiving visitors at his beautiful California home, showing the grounds and studio, and some of his African trophies.

"THE SONG OF THE SOUP" (American), July 12.—A tail piece on same reel with above. Bill's manner of eating soup caused some wag to set it to music, but this joke can scarcely be said to make a strong picture.

"THE FOREIGN SPY" (American), July 10.—This production lacks both the suspense and the special atmosphere necessary to make a story of international intrigue successful. The pictures are well taken but the plot is very familiar and contains no new situations.

"SAN FRANCISCO, THE DAUNTLESS CITY" (American), July 7.—A timely and well-deserved film review of the beautiful coast city, showing how it has recovered from the disaster of 1906. Many special places of interest are shown, and also the first building of the proposed exposition of 1915.

"HER TWO JEWELS" (Thanhouser), July 4.—The simple, natural development of this picture gets hold of one's interest. The manner in which the shop girl becomes falsely suspected of stealing the brooch is well shown. Later, she marries the woman's son and thus procures her revenge. Not strong, but entertaining.

"THE GOLDEN JUBILEE OF THE NEW YORK CATHOLIC PROTECTORY" (Majestic), July 1.—A full reel devoted to the church celebration held at the protectory for Catholic orphans. This will have a special appeal to members of the Catholic church. Its general interest consists principally in the glimpses of Cardinal Farley, Father Chidwick, hero of the Maine, and other noted men.

"GAFFNEY'S GLADIATOR" (Majestic), July 5.—Fred Mace appears in this in imitation of a statue done by an artist friend. He poses not in the "altogether," but in the almost altogether. We thought this an impossible offering for high class houses, as many observers will not take kindly to this sort of humor.

"KING RENE'S DAUGHTER" (Thanhouser), July 1.—A three-reel number, introducing Maude Fealey to the moving picture audiences of the country. She won an international beauty contest a number of years ago, and her grace and girlish beauty, reinforced by years of training on the legitimate stage, make a strong appeal in the films. The entire Thanhouser Company enter into the spirit of this story of the beautiful blind princess, who must not be informed of her blindness until she is sixteen. Then the count discovers her and breaks the spell and she recovers her sight. A whimsical story, full of beauty and charm. The close could have been handled with more strength, but it is a very good production as it stands.

"MISTAKEN INTENTIONS" (Gem), June 30.—A Billy Quirk number, in which Billy has trouble with his prospective father-in-law. Instead of opposing the match, however, the father really drives the couple to church and gets the license for them. Nothing very new in this.

"OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLAHOMA" (Gem), June 30.—On same reel with above. Interesting views of this remarkable Western city and an instructive review of its up-to-date fire-fighting equipment.

"JANE MARRIES" (Imp), July 3.—An entertaining number, in which the hero must marry before 4 P. M. on a certain day to inherit his aunt's money. The daughter of his lawyer, whom he saved from insult, marries him, with a veil over her face. But of course in the end he discovers that he loves her and is already married to her. The scenes in this move a little too rapidly to get up very strong feeling, but in spite of the swift change of situations the story has considerable appeal.

"A ROSE AT SIXTEEN AND A CACTUS AT FORTY-FIVE" (Frontier), July 5.—There is a good deal of human nature in this offering. It shows how an attractive, sweet-tempered ranch girl becomes a scolding virago. She makes things fly on the ranch and years later even gives her former lover a dressing down. The character work and pleasing photography make this a freshly entertaining offering.

"THE SECRET OF PADRE ANTONIO" (Frontier), July 3.—A Mexican story, quite pleasingly photographed and containing a plot which holds the attention. The relationship of Ramon and Carmel was not very well set forth in the beginning; it should have been shown more definitely that they were lovers. The action, covering a lapse of five years, is well sustained and the picture is better than the average in general interest.

"THE GIRL REPORTER" (Crystal), July 6.—A pleasing offering, mixing comedy and drama in about equal proportions. Pearl is just about as good a reporter as she is a detective, and succeeds in getting in and out of difficulties very nicely. Good comedy drama.

"MUCHLY ENGAGED" (Crystal), July 6.—Chester is engaged to three girls, which works all right until they all visit him at the hospital, where trouble ensues. Fairly amusing. On same reel with above.

"HIS MASTER'S DOUBLE" (Gaumont), July 8.—Showing how a manservant, made up to look like his employer, started a flirtation in the latter's name, and won for him the girl. It is not entirely convincing. The only occasion when the changed servant is in the same scene with his employer is so short that it very properly gives ground for suspicion that there is a double exposure.

"MANUFACTURE OF EMBROIDERED TAPESTRY" (Gaumont), July 8.—A short film showing the designing and manufacture of tapestry, giving pictures of great machines. Will undoubtedly interest the feminine patrons. This is on the same reel with "His Master's Double."

"ANGUISH" (Gaumont).—A special two part offering whose chief quality comes from its perfect photography, the elegance of its sets and backgrounds, and the charm and naturalness of its players. The man who made it was careful as to his details and it has a finished air that satisfies the artistic sense. The story is dramatically developed and will hold the interest although there is nothing either deep or big about it. It deals with one of those innocent love affairs. Madame d'Alembert is a happy wife and mother, but she is afflicted with heart trouble. She meets her girlhood's lover and consents to call at his house for her old letters. At the house, she faints and the lover thinks her dead. Much is made of this incident and a good deal of it is convincing.

"COOKING FOR TROUBLE" (Solax), July 16.—A farce after an old pattern but lively and sure to amuse many spectators. In a way, the term "trouble" refers to Fronie Fronholtz who has a scrap with his cook (a very good farce character) who leaves. Fronie's wife (Blanche Cornwall) tries her hand with little success and the evening meal Fronie has to cook for himself with wonderful results, including a flooded kitchen. It is likely to make good laughter in many places but not in all.

"TRUE HEARTS" (Solax), July 4.—Personally, we like the story of this picture: it is sentimental but interesting and, though it is old, it has not been used very recently, so far as we know. Vinnie Burns and Darwin Kerr are juvenile lovers as well as foster brother and sister. Blanche Cornwall, hurt in an accident, is carried in their house and cared for by Vinnie's parents. In her convalescence, Darwin falls in love with her much to Vinnie's distress. Blanche discovers how things stand and nobly sacrifices herself to duty so that the two lovers come back to each other as before. It has been done in a very pretty way and we feel sure that there are many who will take pleasure in it.

"THE CODE OF U. S. A." (Pilot), July 3.—A picture that is a sensational thriller; in this it resembles the big three-part melodrama. In such offerings the stories are apt to have much in common; but stand on the fact that they give excitement. This one will not be much behind the big ones on this score. It features Louise Vale in the role of a designing woman who helps a Japanese spy to obtain what is supposed to be the diplomatic code, but is outwitted by an American hero, who, in the early scenes, has fallen in love with her. The offering shows care in its making, seems to very well photographed and will make an acceptable offering.

"BRANDED FOR LIFE" (Itala), Special Offering.—The story of this picture is interesting enough to stand up well as a feature release, though it is not, in itself big. All that is in it has been brought out effectively and dramatically and the impression of the whole is artistic and very pleasing. The title refers to a mark left on a peasant's face by the whip of a marquis. The peasant blacksmith was protesting at the aristocrat's taking from him the girl he loves. The marquis marries the pretty girl and she dies leaving a daughter who looks just like her, while, in another country, the peasant gains great riches and comes home with a son. The scenes are unusually full of beauty; they look as though they had been chosen by a painter. The peasants look like real peasants and the lowly scenes and the high scenes are as perfect in naturalness as one could desire. The picture shows the hand of a skillful producer in every way, including the development of the story and all the means of carrying it forward, the sets, entrances and exits of the players and their business generally. The photography too is very good.

MARCUS A. BENN.

Marcus A. Benn, of Philadelphia, went into his first theatrical venture in 1908, after having been a manager of a sewing machine company for over fourteen years. Since that time he has built and promoted more than twelve theaters, all of which are now being operated successfully. He is the sole owner of the Benn Theater, at Sixty-fourth Street and Woodland Avenue, and is a stockholder in, and secretary-treasurer of, the A. B. C. Theater.

Marcus A. Benn.

At Eighty-fourth Street and Eastwich Avenue, Mr. Benn has a picture theater under way, and there is no doubt but that he will create quite a stir among motion picture men in Philadelphia when he announces the exact spot on Market Street, east of Broad, for the location of another enterprise.

Mr. Benn has an eye for beauty as well as for architectural construction. This fact is particularly noticable in his A. B. C. and the Benn Theaters. Between August 29 and September 18, 1913, a delegation of experts from all parts of the world will hold a convention at the A. B. C. Theater to discuss matters pertaining to the advancement of the motion picture industry.

"The Seed of the Fathers" (Monopol)

By George Blaisdell.

THIS singular story, a study in hereditary influences, is told by Marion Leonard in six reels, although for convenience in exhibiting it is divided into three acts. In one way the picture establishes a record for American producers—it is the first time, on this side of the water, an original story has attained this length; indeed, it may be questioned if on the other side there has been produced a picture equaling six reels which was not an adaptation. Mr. Taylor has written the script, as he has also produced it. Miss Leonard portrays three periods in the life of a woman cursed by a father who proved to be a traitor to his country in its time of stress; by a husband who was condemned to spend the remainder of his days in the cell of a felon; by a son who grew to manhood and turned out a thief and a companion of murderers. Whether the act of the mother in ending the life of this wayward son and thereby exterminating the last of his race was a justifiable act is a question on which there is bound to be a deal of controversy. Certainly the advanced sociologists—or the eugenists, if they so prefer to be described—will be inclined to defend the violent step of a woman who has witnessed the several downfalls of the men of three generations.

The story holds throughout. It is straight drama—serious, impressive. The opening shows a man at his majority. He has been carefully reared, in the knowledge of what is right and what is wrong. His mother has had bitter experiences with his father and with her father. In spite of training, however, the son stays out at night. One evening when he is particularly late the mother sits up for him. She falls asleep; when she awakes she goes to the room of the son and finds him in drunken slumber. Also she discovers a revolver, a jimmy, a flash lantern and a letter which supplements and completes the story told by the possession of these sinister implements. Back to her table she goes. There as she holds in her lap an open autograph album, unconscious of the fact that police are already looking for her son on a charge of complicity in a murder, her mind traverses the events of the previous twoscore years. Dissolving views show her as a girl of sixteen, her father starting for the War of the States. He is an officer and shortly becomes attached to the staff of the commanding general. He falls under the spell of a girl who proves to be a spy. Weakly he agrees for a consideration to sell battle plans to the enemy. His companions are defeated in a fight; he is not suspected. Again he plans to betray his country, but this time he is caught. He is shot. When the news is received back home the shock kills his wife.

Fifteen years later the girl is married, happily it seems. After a few years the husband becomes negligent of the wife. Of course, there is another woman on the horizon. His own household bills are unpaid, but presents of jewelry are heaped upon the new love. To keep up the pace the husband steals from his firm. When he is caught by a fellow-employe he kills. At the trial he is sent to prison for life. It is after a review of these tragedies of life that the mother takes a revolver and goes to the room where her son sleeps. She embraces him fondly. Then she closes the door and the window and pulls down the shade. A policeman passing the house stops as if checked by the sound of a shot. The mother is seen leaving the room with the pistol in her hand. The policeman outside is joined by a detective, who confers with the man on post. The two enter the house, seeking the son. There they find the body of the long-suffering woman. Upstairs is found the body of the son.

The foregoing is a bare outline of the many incidents crowded into the picture. Standing out strongest, of course, is the work of Miss Leonard, but there are many others deserving of praise for consistent acting. Much care has been given to the selection of backgrounds and settings. Best of all, though, is the photography. It is uniform, even notable. "The Seed of the Fathers" is a worthy production.

WARNER'S PRE-CONVENTION NOTES.

"We're going to be there—look for us—with an exhibit that you cannot afford to miss. We've also arranged to furnish some of the sight-seeing cars that will take you around Lil' Ol' New York," says a representative of Warner's Features.

"Our biggest production—'Theodora'—will be shown several times a day on the exposition floor and you are cordially invited to inspect this magnificent feature.

"The Princess Theater, of Denver, the largest photoplay house in the Rockies, is taking a complete service of Warner's Features."

Scene from "The Seed of the Fathers" (Monopol).

"THE PERIOD OF TRANSITION AND THE FEATURE PROGRAM."

By H. Z. Levine, Solax Company.

"IT has all developed into a game of poker. The boys are all holding four-flushes and not one of them has the courage to raise or call for a showdown," said an old-time Western exchange manager in discussing the present film situation. "Some weeks ago, while my books showed a deficit, I was forced to declare a two per cent. dividend, so that the stockholders interested in my exchange would not regard me with askance. The dividend was declared like the dividends of other corporations in tight places with money that came from angels. If you've got a lawyer with a business head, you can declare six dividends a year." This condition is characteristic of the times.

But many exchange managers today are not so frank. They are emulating the old matron who daily cautioned her pale and wan daughter of marriageable age to pinch her cheeks, so that the neighbors may not know the true state of her health. Creating an impression of strength is really not done with the intent to wilfully deceive, but is done out of a sense of self-preservation.

After a close study of conditions and an assimilation of information gathered first hand in twenty-one of the largest film centers in the country, Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Des Moines, Wichita, Kansas City, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Atlanta and Philadelphia, the truth becomes forcefully evident that present chaotic conditions in the film market are not artificial conditions caused by stock manipulations and realignments of manufacturing interests, but actually due to natural laws of evolution.

The film output to-day, including all the junk floated on the market, averages about two hundred reels a week, including the feature subjects released by feature companies. Of this number approximately one hundred and twenty-five reels are released weekly on legitimate programs. The remaining seventy-five reels of so-called "outlaw" film are swallowed up by "feature" and "junk" exchanges. Gradually, as conditions have been growing more complicated and unsettled, these "feature" and "junk" exchanges have been increasing numerically. They are doing thousands of dollars' worth of business—business which under healthy market regulations would go to legitimate exchanges. In the States of Illinois, Missouri, Ohio and Pennsylvania, the feature and small junk exchanges are as numerous as mushrooms and they are all doing, in total, more business than the legitimate exchanges in their restricted territory, because the junk exchange is a non-respector of agreements and has the advantage of not being handicapped by contracts to operate within certain boundary lines. The increase in the output of junk features besides the steady growth of outlaw manufacturers has been also contributed to the development of the junk exchange business.

With the junk exchange on one side and the feature exchange on the other, the regular exchanges in between are crowded to the wall and compelled to give service at unprofitable prices. In Iowa and Minnesota, early in January, there were seven or eight feature-buying exchanges besides several junk exchanges. A price war was started along about in March and to compete with feature and junk exchanges, regular exchanges booked out in the regular service features outside their "program" at ridiculous prices, and feature exchanges competing against each other and against the regular exchanges, cut prices down to one dollar and twenty-five cents a reel, or three dollars and seventy-five cents for a three-reel feature. Cutting each other's throats in this manner put all of the feature exchanges out of business by June. Only one survived and that one survived because it did not participate in the rate war. The manager bought the very best the feature market afforded and stuck to his prices, while the others made false economies by purchasing junk features at eight and nine cents a foot, and in this way killed the confidence of exhibitors in the quality of their service.

But legitimate exchanges and manufacturing organizations have unwittingly contributed more toward the development of junk business than the outlaw film makers. Exchanges and manufacturing corporations have for months been working the experiment of making a program of twenty-two reels a week in four or five studios under their immediate control. Working under such conditions, which practically means the making of one picture a day, results cannot be other than mediocre. This compromise with quality in the interests of quantity has been a strong "talking point" for the feature exchange men. They have been able to convince exhibitors of the efficacy of a feature program for the purpose of business-getting on dull days or working up run-down houses—houses that have lost prestige, because of having used an inferior service. Good working feature exchanges like Flinton's of Kansas City, the Ohio Feature of Cleveland, the Fairmount of Philadelphia, the Pacific of San Francisco and Portland, Petus of Dallas, and others, can supply a circuit of houses with a daily service of features exclusively for a period of thirty days. In any given territory, a strong feature exchange commands the business of the biggest and best houses—$150 and $100 customers. "If I can get films like 'Quo Vadis?', 'The Manger to the Cross,' 'Dick Whittington,' 'Les Miserables,' 'The Palace of Flames,' and 'Kelly From the Emerald Isle,' on a regular program," said Manager Rothapfel, of the Lyric of Minneapolis, "on a regular program from a single exchange, I'd have 'em standing in the aisles seven days a week."

Two years ago a feature exchange would have been a bad investment. To-day there are about one hundred and fifty feature buying exchanges in the United States and Canada. The reason that they are doing a big business is because they are buying the cream of the market, while old-time exchangemen, because of a disinclination to increase their "buy" or a lack of faith in film selling above ten cents, are loyal to their old loves and New York home offices. In the meantime, the feature exchanges have been steadily gaining ground and feature manufacturers cannot turn out features fast enough.

We are now going through, what is believed by some of the most astute film men in the country, a sort of period of transition, if you please. The one-reel output, because of a certain sameness of complexion, which it has assumed, is losing its popularity. Within the last year there has been a regrettable lack of mental reinforcement in manufacturing plants to bring the one-reel production above the mediocre. Showmen like Hopp and Plough of Chicago, Mandelbaum of Cleveland, Morgan of Kansas City, Werner of St. Louis, A. A. Schmidt of Buffalo, Fitzgerald and Blankmeyer of Detroit, Freuler of Milwaukee, Seery of Chicago and Charentette of Atlanta, who continually have their fingers on the pulse of the exhibitors, while they will not admit that the one-reel production will be relegated to the rear, still they admit that a multiple reel or one subject for an entire evening's entertainment is in greater demand to-day than ever before. They believe that the more multiples on a program the better chance the program has for success and profit.

Part of this present strife and trouble, and partially this apparent unstability of the market, is due not only to the fact that too many manufacturers are interested in exchanges to encourage quality, but also to the fact that at present there is an oversupply of one-reel subjects and an undersupply of three-reel subjects.

In the face of this condition, which is a natural one caused by the evolution of the business, the feature program consisting of a feature release every day will be the next step in our march of progress. The feature exchanges handling the feature program will offer exhibitors an unparalleled service. Their "talking points" will be convincing.

WRONG DOPE ON THE "SPIDER GANG."

The Apex Film Company stated erroneously in their advertisement that the Wyoming exhibition rights had been sold for their feature "On the Trail of the Spider Gang." Washington was the state sold instead of Wyoming.

EXHIBIT OF THE SIMPLEX MACHINE.

The Precision Machine Company's exhibit will occupy spaces 319 to 322 inclusive, at the exposition, and will be presided over by that popular and handsome machine expert, Mr. J. E. Robin. Mr. H. B. Coles, general manager of the Simplex business will shed the light of his charming personality about the place. Mr. Frank B. Cannock, inventor of the Simplex, and Mr. David F. Cowan, New England representative of the Simplex will also be on hand.

PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO. EXHIBIT.

The Picture Theater Equipment Company will hold forth at the exposition in booth 351, showing its extensive line of staple motion picture supplies and novelties. Mr. H. E. Edwards, general manager of the company will be on hand to welcome his many friends in the trade and give demonstrations of the various mechanisms that he handles.

OZONE PURE AIRIFIER AT THE EXPO.

If you should be sitting in one of the model theaters at the exposition and your sense of smell is greeted with a soothing pleasant breeze that reminds you of the clover meadow on the dear old farm, you will know that the Ozone Pure Airifier is on the job in that theater.

Official Entertainment Program

Compiled by the Entertainment Committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League for the Week of the Convention, July 7 to 12, 1913.

THE following entertainment features have been arranged by the Entertainment Committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Greater New York for benefit of delegates and exhibitors and their wives and friends attending the Third Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, held at Grand Central Palace, New York, July 7 to 12, 1913.

MONDAY, July 7—Courtesy of the Universal Film Company—Sight-seeing busses will leave Grand Central Palace at 1:30 o'clock P. M., sharp, proceeding to the headquarters of the Universal and thence to Fort Lee, N. J., visiting one of the company's studios; thence to Palisade Amusement Park, where the various amusements will be open to the party. Supper will be served here to the members of the party.

TUESDAY, July 8—Courtesy of the Edison Company—Automobiles and sight-seeing busses will take the visitors about the city, visiting all interesting points. Parties will leave Grand Central Palace at 9 A. M., 11 A. M., and 3 P. M.

WEDNESDAY, July 9.—Courtesy of Pathe Freres—Steamer Adirondack will leave Pier 32, North River, for a trip up the Hudson to West Point. Time of departure is 10 o'clock.

THURSDAY, July 10 (Day)—Courtesy of the Kalem Company—Entertainment at the Cliffside Airdome studio, New Jersey, leaving 42d Street Ferry at 12 o'clock sharp.

THURSDAY, July 10 (Night)—Courtesy of the Famous Players—Grand reception and dance at the Famous Players' studio, 213 West 26th Street. Refreshments will be served and good music will be provided.

FRIDAY, July 11 (Day)—Courtesy of the Vitagraph Company—Reception at the Vitagraph Studios, Flatbush, Brooklyn. Special trains will leave Brooklyn Bridge on the Brighton Beach line at 1 o'clock and every ten minutes thereafter. Entertainment and refreshments.

FRIDAY, July 11 (Night)—Motion Picture Exhibitors' League banquet at Brighton Beach Casino and Shelbourne Hotel at 8 P. M.

SATURDAY, July 12—This day has been reserved for the Western manufacturers, Selig, Kleine, Essanay, who have arranged a little surprise for the delegates and their friends.

SPECIAL NOTICE—The entertainment committee desires to announce that all entertainment features will be strictly informal. Tickets for each entertainment will be issued by the committee, which will have a booth on the convention floor.

WILLIAM HILKEMEIER, Chairman,
Committee of Entertainment.

GEORGIA STATE LEAGUE ORGANIZED.

The State of Georgia was permanently and thoroughly organized June 30th, and delegates were elected to the national convention. U. T. Koch was elected national vice-president, and John Evins was elected president. A full delegation will be in New York to represent the State of Georgia. A big banquet was held at the Kimball House, Atlanta, on Monday night, June 30th, and was given by the Consolidated Film Company in honor of the occasion of the State of Georgia being organized. The Georgia exhibitors are coming to New York in force to carry off the convention in 1914, if possible, for Atlanta.

NEW YORK ORDINANCE PASSED AT LAST.

The New York Board of Aldermen at their meeting on July 1, by a vote of 55 to 5, approved the motion picture ordinance which has been hanging fire for the past four years. It is quite certain that the measure will be signed by Mayor Gaynor, as the ordinance was orginally framed by him and introduced by Alderman Ralph Folks at the Mayor's request. Under Folks' management, the bill was emasculated a couple of times and only served to give that alderman considerable publicity with no other results. The Mayor finally rebuked Alderman Folks and recently gave the bill to Alderman Dowling to put through. This was done at the last meeting and the bill as passed stands practically in its original form except for an amendment that prohibits galleries in theaters on lots twenty feet wide or less.

When this bill is signed by the Mayor it will mean that the exhibitors of New York City may increase their seating capacity to 600, without going to the great expense of fireproof construction. The limiting of the seating capacity of non-fireproof structures in New York to 299 seats is the reason why there are so many small "dumps" in the city. From this time on we may expect to see some elegant structures built that will vie with those of western cities. That New York has been so backward in fine picture houses is no fault of the exhibitors, but the fault of the laws, or lack of them.

NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS AT HOTEL IMPERIAL.

The Imperial Hotel, located at Broadway and 32d Street, New York, has been selected as the headquarters of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and the M. P. E. L. of New York. National President, M. A. Neff, and Samuel H. Trigger, president of the New York State league, are already located there, as is also the Ladies Reception Committee. The Imperial is a very popular New York hotel and was selected as headquarters for a number of reasons. It is located in the heart of the city, between the only two great railway terminals that enter the metropolis. Its rooms are noted for being large, well furnished, airy and reasonable. The cuisine is famous and is only excelled by the courtesy of the management.

JOHNSTONE STILL A NEW MAJESTIC.

Lamar Johnstone has not quit the New Majestic, that company begs to report. A man of almost similar name did join the American Company at Santa Barbara. The Lorimer Johnson, of American, is a director and not a player. Lamar Johnstone, actor, still acts for New Majestic. The Majestic's Brooklyn Heights (Los Angeles) studio has been enlarged in the stage section. There are now six working stages.

MORE STATES SOLD FOR "LES MISERABLES."

The Eclectic Film Co., of 110 West 40th Street, New York City, announces that it has sold to the Union Feature Film Company, of Philadelphia, the exhibiting rights in a number of states for the great French masterpiece "Les Miserables." The territory included in the deal is Maryland, Virginia and Eastern Pennsylvania.

Thomas Rickets, American Film Co. Producer.

THE EMPRESS THEATER, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND.

The Empress Theater, which was formerly known as the Adelphi, Wellington, New Zealand, was opened in October, 1912. It is one of the houses owned by the J. D. Williams Company. There are nine hundred chairs in the auditorium, and there is plenty of room between each row to allow persons to reach their seats without disturbing those seated. The Empress is the only theater in the city of Wellington employing the indirect lighting system. In the warm weather the house is kept cool by a suction fan in the roof driven by a 500-volt d. c. motor.

EMPRESS PICTURE THEATRE

Empress Theater.

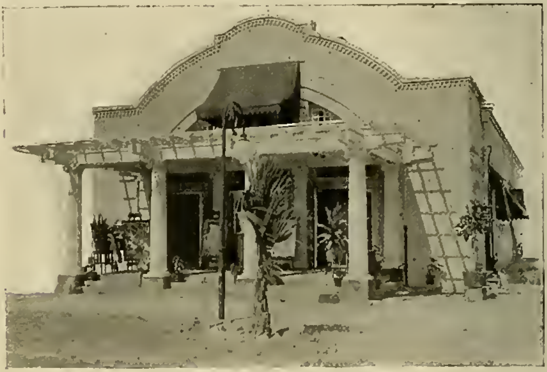
Interior View to Empress Theater.

The operating room, which is built of ferro-concrete, is on the outside of the building. A Power's No. 6 machine projects a twenty-four-foot picture onto a plaster screen at ninety-six feet, using 70 amperes, d. c. The machine is hand-driven, with a motor on the take-up. Another machine will soon be installed.

The music is furnished by a pianola during the day and by a six piece orchestra during the evening sessions. The theater is open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m., and the five reels constituting each performance are changed twice a week. The admission prices are 3d., 6d. and 1/ for reserved seats.

MONTGOMERY'S LATEST.

This extremely handsome theater, looking more like the residence of a Mexican Hidalgo than a place of amusement, is the newest addition to the string of Montgomery theaters through the Southeast. This house, which was photographed before the decorations were fully completed, is located in Tampa, Fla., just one block from the leading business street. It is the ninth Montgomery house, but will soon lose its title of newest to a still more recent house now building in Fitzgerald, Ga.



Montgomery's Theater.

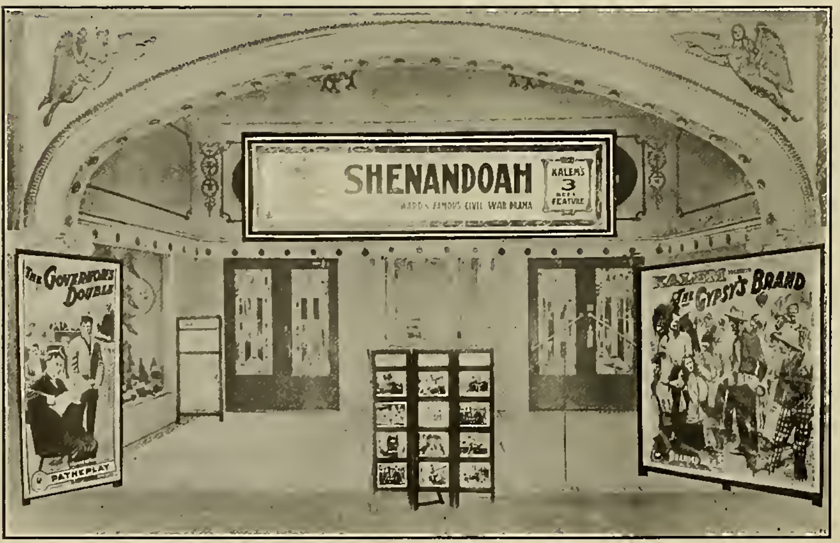
Here is an unusual ruling: The magistrates of Lochgelly have specially asked local picture theater proprietors to open on Sundays.

* * *

A new word has been coined as a synonym for picture palace patron, in "Cinemagoer." An association of cinemagoers is suggested.

A PRACTICAL LOBBY DISPLAY.

The lobby display reproduced herewith is in striking contrast to the carelessly arranged displays one often sees in front of moving picture theaters, particularly in the large cities. It was arranged by George Balsden, from material supplied in the advertising helps service of the General Film Company. Neat and dignified, but not without the necessary power of attraction, it shows what can be done with the proper use of the right sort of material.



Ideal Lobby Display by the Poster Department of the General Film Company.

NEW THEATER OPENED.

Wilson L. Augustine has opened a moving picture theater in the residental section of East Decatur, Ill. The building represents an investment of $6,000, and has a seating capacity of 500. Brick and concrete material were used in the construction, making the house fireproof. The name of the theater is the "Crescent."

Kost & Wagner are erecting a $25,000 picture house in Ashland, Pa.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"ASHES" (Reliance).

This two-reel picture is distinctly a novelty; taking an old man, already on the verge of the grave, back through the various love episodes of a very checkered career.

The old man—all alone in his mansion, gives a dinner to the memories of the girls he loved and lost. As he stops at each place and raises the different bouquets of flowers, he sees within the blossoms, old love tales. The violets take him back to the sweet country girl who loved another more than she did him—the lily of the valley brings its memory of the society belle who rejected him for a richer man—the orchid holds in its purple depths the bewitching face of the beautiful countess who pretended to love him when he was in the diplomatic service; but she was a spy and thought she might use him as a tool. Red roses—they brought back a night in Paris when, at the opera house, he first saw Carmencita, the incomparable dancer, light of foot and lighter still of heart. He fought a duel for her, only to find that she cared less than nothing for him. A bunch of sweet peas—they held the memory of the pretty, innocent girl who would have married him at her parents' bidding had he not discovered in time that her heart was given to his young secretary. And, so for her, last of his loves, he made his first great sacrifice.

Scene from "Ashes" (Reliance).

As the old man rises to toast these memories—the stem of his glass snaps and he fall dead across the table. An overturned candle sets the draperies on fire and soon all the flowers are but cold heaps of ashes!

Irving Cummings plays the old man with very telling effect and the five beautiful women are Rosemary Theby as Carmencita, Edgena de Lespine, the countess; Norma Phillips, the mercenary girl; Bobbie Robbins, the country girl; Irene Howley, for whom he made the sacrifice.

This picture was directed by Oscar C. Apfel and contains some unusually fine effects. Released July 12th.

"THE GRAIN SPECULATOR" (Great Northern Feature).

A well-presented photodrama, in three parts, giving the unsuspecting "lamb" an insight of the workings of the ticker which commands the wheat market at intervals, and brings about "the corner" which enriches the speculator and adds to the burdens of the poor. The real merit of this feature lies in the fact that it is not overdrawn for the sake of sensation and deals with a subject that is familiar on the surface, but never before touched upon in motion pictures. The character of John Sutton, the money-mad speculator, stands out boldly and disillusions the unwary who may be tempted to "plunge" on a market that already is in the hands of a merciless manipulator.

The story from the outset is gripping and there are many thrilling scenes and an abundance of excellent photography. The element of heart interest is interwoven when we are made acquainted with the fact that Sutton, with his millions, is anxious to have his daughter marry a prince. The latter is killed in a thrilling elevator accident and his sly secretary takes his place. Then follow many complications in which a famous young surgeon, Dr. McHerren, takes an active part. The latter has exacted a promise from Sutton to refrain from "cornering the market," but the old speculator yields to temptation and causes another advance in prices. In order to further his own ends the sham prince urges Sutton to increase his fortune by this means and in the final scene the "prince" and the grain speculator are seen on the platform of a huge grain elevator. When Dr. McHerren and Sutton's daughter appear on the scene with proofs of the duplicity of the sham prince, there is an exciting scene and Sutton and his intended son-in-law topple over a ledge and are smothered in the stream of wheat which pours upon them. It is a logical and winning story throughout and bears all the elements of an unusual feature.

Scene from "The Grain Speculator" (Gt. Northern).

"DAY OF JUDGMENT" (Union Features).

Many a man has been ruined by a women, so the theme is vital. This powerful picture is the story of a highly respected and influential banker who is induced to issue shares of stock in a mining company, although he has received positive assurance, from an expert engineer that it is worthless.

His stenographer makes the swindle possible by skilfully changing the message from the engineer.

When the engineer returns he accuses the banker of being a swindler. The quarrel is overheard by the editor of a sensational newspaper, who uses the information to extort large sums of hush money. The banker finally refuses to give further and he immediately prints the story. The result was a great run on the bank. The frenzy of the cheated depositors and stockholders know no bounds and the magnificent furniture of the institution is demolished in the melee.

The president of the mining company, a dupe, has been entirely ignorant of all the nefarious scheming and feels himself everlastingly disgraced and humiliated by his connection with it. He kills himself just as the mob reaches his office. Beside his dead body, his widow swears to avenge him and to bring the guilty ones to justice.

Some time later the banker and his stenographer, who have fled are startled to see a woman dressed in widow's weeds, enter their room. She lifts her veil and they know the Day of Judgment is at hand.

There are many thrilling situations in this most exciting three reel feature. It depicts the terrible penalty that comes from dealing with unscrupulous swindlers.

"ON HER WEDDING DAY" (Lubin).

In this excellent Lubin photoplay the fierce disposition of a woman madly in love gives way to a quick realization of her better self just in time to save a worthy life. The situation is very melodramatic, but consistent to the story, which is full of pathos and replete with human interest. The atmosphere of the lumber camp is a feature of the excellent scenic effects that surround a tale of life among the lowly.

Paul Clark, unable to find work, sends his wife, Alice, to her parents. The next morning he reads that the ship has been wrecked and all on board lost. He goes to a nearby lumber camp and gets a job, there he meets Clara Jackson and in a short time they fall in love. In the interim, Paul's wife has been picked up, half demented, by Jim Croft, a fisherman. When convalescent, Alice writes to her husband, but her letters are returned. She accidently reads in a newspaper the announcement of the coming marriage of Paul to Clara Jackson and starts to the lumber camp. There she meets Clara, shows the newspaper and declares herself to be Clark's wife. Clara, who is madly in love with Paul, drives the woman off the place and she falls exhausted across the railroad track. A train is just approaching and Clara for a moment hesitates on making the rescue, but her better nature prevails and she drags the woman off the rails just as the train thunders past. Paul comes to the cottage and is rejoyced at meeting his wife. Clara tears her bridal veil and vows silence to the world.

Scene from "On Her Wedding Day" (Lubin).

"THE WITCH" A UNION FEATURE.

The Eclair Company has produced an acceptable three reel feature called "The Witch." It has many points of merit, and aims to reproduce the New England atmosphere of witchcraft days. The photography is up to the best average of the Eclair Company and some of the settings are charmingly artistic.

Scene from "The Witch" (Eclair).

Universal Factions Conferring

The Universal troubles are still unsettled at the time the Moving Picture World goes to press, on Wednesday afternoon. All the parties were in court before Judge Goff on Friday, June 27. The justice told the contending factions that he would allow them until the following Monday to come to an agreement, at which time he said he would, unless the parties came together, entertain the first application presented for the appointment of a receiver. There has been so reasonable a prospect for the adjustment of the differences that the case has been permitted to remain open from day to day. It was said at the office of Mr. Powers on Wednesday that if the conferences being held that day failed to result in a mutually satisfactory agreement the whole controversy would be presented to the court on Thursday morning. One matter that has been settled is that the exchange service of Mr. Powers and Mr. Swanson will continue as formerly.

Mr. Laemmle was asked late Wednesday afternoon as to the situation. He said there had been a directors' meeting, the regular monthly gathering, during the afternoon, at which Mr. and Mrs. Swanson, both of whom are directors, were present. The president of the Universal added that the cases in which the company is interested would come up in court Thursday.

A POWERS-WEBER THEATER DEAL.

There has been incorporated at Albany the Joe Weber's Photo Plays Company, the registered headquarters of which are at Nyack, N. Y. The directors are Patrick A. Powers, Joe Weber, of Weber & Field, and Morris Rose of the Times Building. While the company is chartered to manufacture and deal generally in moving picture films, machines, etc., the chief intention of the incorporators is to own and manage theaters of the larger class. The company will begin immediately securing locations and acquiring options. The capitalization is $750,000.

HALLBERG ECONOMIZER AT THE EXPOSITION.

A matter of especial interest to exhibitors from all parts of the country, will be the demonstration of the much talked of Hallberg a. c. to d. c. economizer, at the exposition. This apparatus will be shown in the booth of the United Electric Light & Power Co., connected to a moving picture machine, affording an excellent opportunity to investigate the merits of Mr. Hallberg's a. c. to d. c. economizer.

FOR SALE
SIX NEGATIVES
For U. S. A., Canada and South America
These Negs Are of the Best German Manufacture and Are All Good Thrilling Drama—Length 2000 to 3000 Feet
Cable best offer to Andreora, London
Andrews Pictures, Ltd.
Cine House, Greek Street, London, W.

Special reduced rates at
Hotel Martinique
"The House of Taylor"
Broadway and 32nd St.
To Delegates and their friends for
The Motion Picture Convention
Outside rooms with private bath (occupied by a person $2.00)
Double outside room with private bath (occupied by two persons $3.50)
Large double outside rooms with private bath (2 beds $4.00)
Restaurant prices very moderate
Chas. Leigh Taylor, Pres. Walter S. Gilson, V.-Pres.
Walter Chandler, Jr., Mgr.

CORRESPONDENCE

ILLINOIS.

Moving pictures of the parade of the annual convention of the Illinois Lodges Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks at Rock Island, were made by the Industrial Moving Picture Company of Chicago, under the direction of Manager Quinn of the Majestic, in that city.

Moving pictures of the field day exercises for school children at Peoria, were made by the Advance Motion Picture Company of Chicago.

The Colonial Theater of Galesburg, is conducting a voting contest in which four girls will be given a trip to Niagara Falls, down the Hudson River to New York, to Boston, Washington, and other eastern points.

The Palace moving picture show is now occupying the Sand Building in Roanoke.

Boosters for a new court house in Madison county gave a free moving picture show at the airdome in Alton. The pictures were furnished by W. M. Sauvage, the Alton amusement magnate.

John A. Hoeuich, who is playing the pictures at the Family Theater in Dixon, Ill., has kept track of the vaudeville acts for which he has played. He has accompanied over 9,600 acts.

Merchants of El Paso used moving pictures as one of a number of attractions for a free play day June 11. Automobile races, all sorts of athletic events, a ball game, an automobile parade and a merry-go-round, induced the people to be the guests of the merchants on that day.

Harry Daley has leased the city opera house at Carlinville for two years, for $700 per year. The house formerly was leased by H. O. Tally for $810 for the two years.

A. J. Woods of Aurora, has leased the airdome theater in Monmouth.

Charles Mitchell of Gibson City, has gone to Bicknell, Ind., where he has a position as trap-drummer in the picture show.

Joseph Hill and others of Ogden, are interested in an airdome which has been erected in that city. A picture program will be given.

The Board of Directors of the Elgin Opera House at Elgin, have decided to install 500 more seats. The company has elected the following officers: president, D. B. Hoornbeek; first vice-president, Mrs. D. B. Hoornbeek; second vice-president, Mrs. Mary Plummer Landon; manager and treasurer, John Newman, and secretary, John B. Newman.

River breezes are a feature of the new Aurora Theater, which has been opened on Stolp's Island in Aurora. Six latticed windows allow the breeze from Fox River to enter the house. City Clerk W. C. Flannigan, and Building Inspector William Mullen, are the proprietors of the theater, which was built at a cost of $20,000. The new playhouse is 148 feet long, including the foyer, and 27 feet wide. The theater proper is a 110-foot addition built onto the new Sherer Building. A room 38 feet long is used for the lobby and foyer entrance. There are 600 seats in the theater, all on the main floor, with an aisle eight feet wide running down the center.

The moving picture show at Meredosia has been sold to J. G. Berger and C. B. Hedrick.

The Lyric Theater at Villa Grove, recently gave a benefit performance for the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Order of Railway Conductors.

Manager Alger of the Crystal Theater, at Paxton, has installed a new Wurlitzer unit orchestral pipe organ and a set of Deagan electrical chimes. When the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Paxton Carnegie Library had a tag day, Manager Alger showed moving pictures on the street.

Photoplay managers of Danville gave part of their earnings June 4, to charity.

H. H. Johnson, manager of the Lyric Theater at Champaign, is building a twenty-foot extension to his theater, which will increase the seating capacity to about 400. The seating plan will be re-arranged and a complete indirect lighting system will be installed and a new mirror screen put into place. In addition to this there will be anextension to the ventilating system.

The Globe Airdome at Monticello, is running pictures nightly. On rainy nights the shows are given at the Globe Theater. In addition to this, performances are given at the Globe Theater on Wednesday and Saturday nights.

The plan to increase prices in Aurora from five to ten cents failed. One manager announced that he would agree to charge ten cents Saturdays and Sundays, providing all the theaters would agree to run two reels on week days and three on Sundays, but the other managers would not reduce the length of their program.

The ban on the attendance of children at moving picture shows in Granite City, has been removed by Mayor M. E. Kirkpatrick. The scarlet fever epidemic has abated and business is expected to revive.

The Gem Airdome at Hillsboro, ran a solid week of feature pictures the week of June 9.

G. D. Webber, cornetist, and Joseph Skelley, violinist, have joined the orchestra of the Lyric Theater at Morrison.

Ross McPherson, manager of the airdome at Bunker Hill, sent out several hundred post cards, addressed to the members of the G. A. R., and all soldiers. The post card was good for admission on Decoration Day evening for both the holder of the card and lady.

The Princess Theater in Galesburg, has installed a mirror screen.

Scott's Hippodrome has been opened on East Morgan street in Jacksonville, by Great Scott, owner and manager of the Great Scott shows. Feature pictures will be shown daily with a five and ten-cent admission.

The vaudeville season at Fox Theater in Aurora has ended, and June 4 it began a season as summer garden, featuring moving pictures. Palms and Japanese lanterns and pennants fluttered in the wind driven by the many electric fans. Every Wednesday night will be amateur night, two shows with different talent being given.

An airdome, featuring moving pictures, has been opened at Reservoir Park in Paris.

Jones, Linnick & Shaffer Company of Chicago, which has been endeavoring to secure an option on the Star Theater in Elgin, has given up the attempt to secure a house in that city.

Frank B. Hooper, who founded the Lyric Theater in Ottawa, is dead in Sherman, Texas.

The directors of the Litchfield-Hillsboro Chautauqua have decided to use moving pictures in connection with the annual assembly which opens August 3 at Litchfield. Two carefully selected reels will be presented at the close of each evening's entertainment.

The Yale Theater Company of Carbondale, has been repainting and redecorating, and has installed a new ventilating system in its building.

Clyde Buffum and Dean Ingalls of Rock Island, have started in the moving picture business, playing churches and schools in that vicinity.

The Chicago and Joliet Electric Railway Company presented, at the Efficiency Show in Joliet, a new film which had been made by the Advance Motion Picture Company, for the Chicago Railway Company, to be used in a public safety campaign. The picture shows the accidents common to the operation of street railways. Another film was shown by the Illinois Steel Company. It was entitled "The Workman's Lesson." A pretty little love story runs through the film. Another reel instructed the school children in the care of the teeth.

The Orpheum, at Rockford, will show feature pictures on Sunday.

Manager Kindle, of the Opera House at Watseka, recently turned over his moving picture show to the Woman's Relief Corps for a benefit performance. He also donated a hall to the organization. To show their appreciation the members of the organization attended his show one night in a body.

J. G. Berger, W. T. Hedenberg and Wilbur Parsons, have rented the old Lutheran church building in Meredosia for a picture show. Three reels are given each Tuesday and Saturday night. A season ticket was offered to the young lady under sixteen years of age who furnished the best name for the house.

Frank Warren, who has been conducting a motion picture show in the King Building at Wyoming, has opened an airdome in that city.

Robinson & Robinson of Peoria, will erect a new house to replace the Crescent Theater at 311-313 Main street, in Peoria. The building, which will be three stories high, will cost $75,000. The theater will occupy the entire main floor, and the second and third stories will be devoted to offices. It will have a seating capacity of 1,000 persons. It has not been determined whether to make it a vaudeville or a picture house.

Frank Rice, who has been operating a picture show at St. Joseph, has opened a show at Fithian, giving exhibitions every Friday night. He has cut his St. Joseph date to each Saturday night.

Pictures of the spring festival at Rockford were taken for the Animated Weekly by Edwin G. Lindin.

The Empire Theater at Rock Island, E. T. Dolly manager, has discontinued stock company's performances, and is presenting moving pictures. Nightly performances and Saturday and Sunday matinees are given. A three-piece orchestra is used. It was announced that a diamond ring would be given away every night.

The Lyric, at Champaign, recently featured "The Good in the Worst of Us," which was written by Mrs. Fred H. Kay of Urbana. The following pertinent announcement was made: "You learn to know the actors, but you seldom ever hear of the person that writes the story. Here is one from home, and you will want to see it the second time."

Moving picture theaters operated successfully in Rockford the first Sunday they attempted to do business. The managers had secured licenses signed by the mayor and city clerk. When it was announced that the council should have passed upon the applications, there was a good deal of quivering and talk of arrests for technical violation of the law, but nothing was done in the matter.

The Board of Health at Canton suggested that all theaters be fumigated at least once a week, but it was decided that this might prove burdensome, and the matter was dropped.

Manager Cox of the Lyric Theater, at Carbondale, has erected an airdome on West North street. High class moving pictures and vaudeville will be the attraction with an occasional stock company.

Manager Robert Hopper, of the Lyric Theater, at Freeport, has announced that in the future, his house will not sponsor any benefit performances.

E. C. Lind of Anna, expects to open a new vaudeville house in that city July 4.

Miller's Opera House at Anna, will be remodeled into an office building.

Z. B. Bailey has sold his interest in the Colonial Theater at Virden, to James Bogers, who has assumed charge of the house.

The Coliseum, at Danville, on June 9, inaugurated cabaret performances in connection with the picture show. Stunts were introduced between the pictures.

Louis May of Edwardsville, contemplates erecting a new three-story building in that city, and provisions may be made for a theater.

The upper house of the Legislature passed, by a vote of 28 to 0, Chamberlain's Senate Bill No. 639, which prohibits the exhibition of pictures depicting legal executions, lynchings or riots. It will have to be passed by the lower house and signed by the governor before it becomes a law.

The Fox Theater and the "Beacon-News," of Aurora, are conducting a popular baby contest. The voting is done at the picture house where the pictures of the infantile candidates are shown upon the screen, and the newspaper furnishes the desired publicity. The paper also gives two admission tickets and two votes to each person that brings in a one-month paid-in-advance subscriber.

The Village Board of Taylor Springs, has passed a Sunday closing ordinance, but has exempted the amusement places, restaurants and cigar stores, and the butcher shops until ten o'clock in the morning.

Rev. G. K. Little announced that he would open an inter-denominational revival meeting June 20 in his portable tabernacle at Freeport, his home city, in which he would use a moving picture machine. "Thus we will instruct through the eye as well as the ear in the great truths pertaining to vital union with Christ," he proclaimed.

The Gem Airdome at Hillsboro, gave a series of three benefit performances for the widows, orphans and injured laborers, under the auspices of the Trades Council.

A new company will be formed in Rockford to operate a moving picture show at 105 West State Street. Charles Lamb, manager of the Grand Opera House, will be at the head of the company. The building will be remodeled and an arcade front will be placed. The construction is to be such that the theater can be reached in the summer time from the river front as well as from the State Street entrance.

Mrs. Sophia Sauer and son, August, of Oregon, Ill., have purchased the airdome of Rochelle, Ill. August Sauer will have charge of the business and will give three reels of pictures each night and will furnish a vaudeville program on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

George C. Martin, who opened the first moving picture house in the tri-cities, has gone into partnership with E. T. Dolly, owner of the Empire, at Moline, for the summer season of pictures. The photoplay will hold sway until opening of the vaudeville season August 24.

The Hippodrome Theater opened its summer season at McHenry, June 14, giving photoplays de luxe. Two shows are given each evening. O. V. Lyon is manager and W. B. Cameron operator.

Gayet & Stevenor have opened their airdome at St. David.

The Kinemacolor pictures at the Orpheum Theater at Peoria have proved so popular that Manager Felix Greenberg has added Saturday and Sunday matinees. Souvenirs are given to each lady and child attending.

The M. & F. Feature Film Corporation, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000 to deal in all kinds of moving picture films. The incorporators are Samuel J. Shaeffer, A. F. W. Siebel and H. B. Fitzpatrick.

The Iris Theater on South Main Street, in Rockford, has been remodeled and reopened under new management.

Manager J. B. Parker of the Grand Theater, at Kewanee, closes that house Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of each week because of the hot weather.

Thomas Scott, of Jacksonville, is planning to link up his new Hippodrome and Scott's Theater. As a part of this plan he made the street between the two places a "Great White Way," stringing lights between the two places. In addition, every person who attends the performance at the Hippodrome with ten cents is given a coupon, which, with five cents, will entitle him to admission to Scott's Theater, or, in short, the two shows for fifteen cents. The grand opening was announced for June 23 and 24, but a preliminary opening was given June 20 and 21, when the feature picture "Satan" was exhibited.

Henry Baker, manager of the Lyric, at Trenton, Mo., has let the contract for a new theater building. He was recently in Quincy getting ideas from the photoplay houses there.

The advent of ground floor moving picture theaters is given as one of the reasons why Bain's Opera House in Rochelle, for thirty years one of the best known theaters in northern Illinois, will be remodeled into office buildings.

Miss Mary Meibach has accepted a position as pianist in the Neil theater in Champaign.

Although the management of the Gem Theater at Jacksonville has not been decided upon, the place, which was ruined by fire several months ago, has been remodeled. The capacity of the place has been increased.

A petition asking that the question of whether the city of Lincoln should have an ordinance allowing the exhibition of moving pictures on Sunday be submitted to a referendum vote of the people was tabled indefinitely in the city council.

The Chicago and Joliet Electric Railway Company, operating Dellwood Park, several miles outside the city of Joliet, believes that the moving picture will solve the park entertainment program. For the last six years it has employed a twenty-piece band during the park season, but believes the expense is not warranted. This year it cut down its musical appropriation to a sum sufficient to pay for three or four concerts each week, two of which are to be given on Sunday. In lieu of the band concerts the company is planning to give free picture shows each evening in the open air but charging for reserves of the better class of seats. These seats will be located in the center of the airdome and surrounded by a railing to separate them from the free benches beside and behind them. For the present a side wall of canvas will be erected all around the seats in order to prevent confusion from the outside. Later, if the plan is successful, the management hopes to put up a good stage on which they can play vaudeville, stock, tabloids, or concerts, and enclose it with a wall of ventilator-shutters made of lumber or galvanized iron. A short roof will have to be extended from the picture curtain, as there are many thousands of electric lights near the site of the proposed open air picture house. Pictures will be changed every day. A three-piece orchestra will be employed, and possibly a singer, all of which will cost about $100 per week.

The Twin City Chautauqua, given by residents of Urbana and Champaign, will have moving pictures on the evening program this year.

The Reikendorff Orchestra has been playing at the Bijou Theater in Quincy.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IOWA.

THE Lyric Theater, at Davenport, is featuring its pipe organ. E. G. Mazha plays any sheet music brought to him by any person in the audience.

The Palm, 428 Brady street, is again under the management of the American Amusement Company.

Charles E. Palmer of the Crystal, has leased the airdome at Molton.

City Health Officer Dr. A. L. Husted, recently showed one of the fly films at the Princess Theater in Muscatine.

It is reported that Charles Berkell may open a new moving picture house on West Third street, between Main and Harrison and Davenport. Architects Clausen & Clausen are preparing plans.

J. C. Houser will reopen the old Bijou, in Iowa City, as a moving picture house.

An unofficial opinion by C. A. Robbins, assistant attorney general, may affect Sunday moving picture shows in Iowa. The Supreme court of Connecticut has ruled that the sale of tickets to a moving picture show on Sunday is a violation of the law and the Iowa statute is declared to be more stringent than the Connecticut measure. The opinion was given as the result of action at Sidney, where law and order agitators closed the restaurants and mercantile houses on Sunday. One of the affected men threatens to enjoin a Chautauqua, promoted by the law and order people, from selling tickets on Sunday.

W. W. Pettit, a playground expert, made a survey of amusement conditions in Sioux City, Iowa, and says that 25,000 tickets are sold each week by the moving picture theaters. "The playground will not be aimed to detract from the picture houses the throngs that now go there," said Mr. Pettit. "The picture theaters do a large amount of good where properly managed. I have been pleased to find a high class of pictures are shown in all the theaters here. The pictures are generally of an educational nature, if they are not always amusing. The picture house throngs are watched by us only to determine the characteristics of the people and their aggregate desire for something to amuse and lift them from their everyday grind."

The Commercial Club of Sioux City, may have a set of films made to be used for advertising purposes.

The American Theater in Davenport, Iowa, has gone out of the picture business, and will open early in August as a vaudeville house, under the new management of Butterfield & Helmann.

The Idlehour moving picture theater at Bloomfield, was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of about $200,000 to the proprietor, J. Howard Newell, with no insurance. Four reels of film were destroyed and six recovered. H. A. Wishard, owner of the building, will erect a new two-story structure, the lower floor of which will be occupied by Newell with a picture show.

D. M. Livingston has sold his picture show at Wayland to Mr. and Mrs. Al. Hagre. The new owners will conduct a restaurant in connection with the photoplay house.

Martin & Gilbert of Chicago, who talk of series of pictures in Muscatine, leased the Lyric Theater for four days for their exhibition.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

THE airdome at Elkhart, Ind., found band concerts so attractive that they decided to feature a band concert every Thursday evening.

J. A. Kester and S. E. Meier have opened a moving picture house on East Johnson street, in Madison, Wis. A tent was used for the show until a fireproof building could be constructed.

Among the changes that have taken place in the Minnesota houses are the following: H. G. Kurzbein and Louy Bartelmhs have leased the Opera House at Janesville; Henry Bishop has bought the Princess Theater at Le Roy, from J. M. La Vere; C. B. Collins of Albert Lea, has leased the Grand Opera House at Crookston, from Theodore L. Hays and J. H. Vail Wie of Minneapolis; C. J. Woodmansee, manager and proprietor of the Majestic Theater at Bemidji, bought the Grand Theater, and will conduct both establishments, and V. Keskinen takes the place made vacant by the resignation of Peter Nyy manager of the Chisholm Opera House as Chisholm.

The class in traction engineering at the Agricultural College at Fargo, N. D., was taken for the Pathe Weekly.

Charles B. Skiff, manager of the Royal Theater in the Voelker Block, took over the Lyric Theater on South Main street, in Marquette, Mich., succeeding Zema & Herron.

The Liberty Amusement Company of Indianapolis, Ind., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The directors are: Oliver M. Allen, William H. Pye, L. C. Stoelting, C. R. Rhodes and P. W. Leviston.

Dr. B. L. Newkirk of the University of Minnesota extension course, is using moving pictures in his lectures throughout the state on "The Art of Flying."

Fitzgerald Brothers of Superior, Wisconsin, who recently leased the Waterman Block for a picture house, change programs daily, an innovation for Superior.

Manvel Olson has purchased the moving picture theater in Lanesboro, Minn., from Charles Nicholas.

Three reels of pictures were shown at the banquet of the graduating class of the Agricultural and Manual Training High School in Fargo, N. D.

Cohn & Simmons have given up the lease on the Grand Theater at Crookston, Minn. Charles B. Collins of Minneapolis, has taken a five-year lease on the place.

The "Gazette," of Billings, Mont., is urging a stricter censorship over crime pictures, and asks the enforcement of Chapter 2, Section 8881 of the revised codes of Montana of 1907.

O. L. Lunt has sold the Bijou Theater at Akeley, Minn., to R. Clayton Diggins, formerly of Los Angeles, Cal.

The Ideal Theater in Waterville, Minn., has been sold by A. H. Farrington to Charles Leavitt of Magnolia, Minn.

Free moving pictures for the children and for the older folks as well will be offered by the newly appointed playground directors who will have charge of the school playgrounds in Sioux City, Iowa.

The moving pictures of Billy Sunday, the baseball evangelist, which were made at the May Day Festival at Columbus, Ohio, were shown recently at the Hippodrome in Springfield, Ohio.

The Family Theater of Davenport, Iowa, has booked the "Battle of Gettysburg" for Labor Day.

The Advance Motion Picture Company, of Chicago, took a series of pictures in Madison, Wis., which was shown at the Fuller Opera House.

The Bijou Theater at Fergus Falls, Minn., which is owned by Miss Mary McLean, is being enlarged and remodeled. Hogan Johnson is manager.

A. J. Rose has purchased the interest of his partner, Fred Cook, in the Princess Theater at Rapid City, S. D.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

THE latest moving picture project for Springfield is a photoplay show, to be erected at Third and Adams streets, by Mayor John S. Schnepp and others. The embryonic plans call for a veritable "Temple of Amusement." The place, if erected, will contain a bowling alley, billiard and pool rooms and a roller skating rink, in addition to a fair-sized motion picture theater. If the plan is carried out, a stock company will be formed among business men and bankers, with Mayor Schnepp at the head of it. The capital stock will be about $100,000. The location is outside the business district proper, and the operation of a picture house in a section neither outlying nor in the business district, would be watched with interest.

Springfield's only airdome, or the Boulevard Airdome, on South Fourth street, was opened June 14. The place is just off Monroe, one of the principal streets, and the pebble dash structure has been made sufficiently attractive and well illuminated. It has a seating capacity of 800 persons. A specialty will be made of multiple-reel features each night. A vocalist and a character comedian were on the bill the first week. A ten and five-cent admission is secured. The company is composed of Charles Sullivan, a real estate man, Frank McGowan, a hide and fur dealer, and Frank Oppleman, who will act as manager.

Lee Carroll of Jacksonville, who has managed photoplay houses in that city, has accepted a position as operator at the Vaudette on South Fifth street.

The Gaiety, East Monroe street, recently played Miss Alberta Claire, the Wyoming girl who rode across the continent and is on her way back with her pony and dog.

The Co-operative Amusement Supply Company of this city, has sold motion picture outfits to Ellis Bostick of this city, who will open a new photoplay house in Pekin, and to Ogle & Davidson, also of Springfield, who are to invade the Danville field. Bostick, who has been connected with the Internal Revenue office in Springfield, will go into competition with D. C. McClelland, who has had a sort of a monopoly on the amusement business in Pekin, operating three houses. Ogle & Davidson expect to be ready for business about the middle of July. Both sales included Power's 6-A machines.

Julius Schwartz, violinist, and George Eckland, organist, are now playing at the Gaiety.

The Amuse-U, North Sixth Street, has been featuring Joe Carlton, a character singer.

The Springfield "News" has taken up the cudgel against pianists who fail to play the pictures, or more especially those who ignore the common courtesy due to the patrons. Some local offenses have been pointed out.

The Vaudette Amusement Company received a large order for paper and other advertising for the engagement of "From the Manger to the Cross" at the Crown Theater in Chicago. One set of the pictures has been playing some of the smaller towns in Sangamon county, near Springfield. The picture probably will appear at a number of chautauquas throughout the state, as its religious and educational value has created a demand for it.

The Y. M. C. A. of this city has ended its season of Sunday pictures for men and boys. There is little doubt but that they will be resumed, as they have been found a very effective agent in interesting men and boys in the various departments of the organization.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

BUFFALO.

ACCORDING to Manager F. S. Hopkins, of the Buffalo branch of the Victor Film Co., the moving pictures of that concern have just been installed for the first time in Shea's Vaudeville Theater, Buffalo. Al Becker will operate the pictures. This service has taken the place of the Edison talking pictures, shown there for several weeks.

Warner's Feature Film Co. is now comfortably located at 45 Erie street. Lew Strong is in charge of the branch. The management of the Plaza Theater, in William street, Buffalo, has just booked some new features from this company. Mr. Strong will introduce to Buffalonians at an early date Warner's feature, "Theodora," from the famous novel of Victorien Sardou.

At a recent meeting of Mutual exhibitors of Buffalo and vicinity at the office of the Mutual Film Corporation in Washington street, a Mutual Social club was formed. It was decided by the organizatin to hold two enjoyable social events each year. There will probably be a clambake in the summer and a ball in the winter.

The fourth international congress on school hygiene will be held in Buffalo the last week in August. Among the novel features for the entertainment of visiting delegates will be motion pictures dealing with school hygiene problems.

Joseph Gauvreau, city inspector of theaters, including moving picture houses of Montreal, Can., reports that 125,000 persons, or one quarter of the population of that city, patronizes the theaters daily.

In connection with the purchase of a theater site on Main street, near Chippewa, Buffalo, by the McNaughton Realty Co., a mortgage for $600,000 was recently filed in that city. Vaudeville and pictures will probably be among the attractions of this house.

Mr. D. Kinnard, of England, is in charge of an extensive moving picture creation showing the many resources of Canada. It is said the offices of the enterprises are located in Winnipeg.

The Aldermanic Fire Committee has denied the petition of the Nassoy Amusement Co. for a permit to build a moving picture house at 400 Prospect avenue, Buffalo. Among those who appeared in opposition were former Alderman John Martin, Dr. John R. Grey, and C. D. Chamberlain. Robert F. Schelling and others appeared for the company. The reason given by the committee for turning down the proposition, was that the proposed theater was to be located in a strictly residence district.

Acting Mayor Burley of Buffalo, recently held a hearing on the petition of G. Morton Wolfe, to build a moving picture show at 444-8 Connecticut street, this city. The petition had been favorably acted upon previously by the common council, in spite of opposition from some residents, including ministers. At the hearing before Mr. Burley, the opposing property owners stated that all objections would be withdrawn if the the theater promoters agree to close on Sundays. William J. Hickey appeared for the theater promoters and offered to limit the Sunday shows to educational or religious pictures, but would not consent to absolute closing.

The Griffin Amusement Co. has bought a site in Stratford, Ont., for the erection of a moving picture and vaudeville theater. The cost is estimated at $40,000, according to a report from that city, and the new theater is expected to be ready by Fall. The Griffin Co. has also bought a site for a new theater in St. Catharines, Ont. The same concern, it is reported, will spend about $14,000 on a new theater in Chatham, Ont. BILLY BISON.

NEW ORLEANS.

ESTABLISHING a record of progressive faith in the future of the "silent drama" in the South, Josiah E. Pearce & Sons, pioneers in the development of the industry, opened three theaters in as many days—totalling in all half a million dollars—setting a record in this section of the country heretofore unsurpassed. They recently opened the new hundred thousand dollar house—The Tudor—their latest addition to the local fold, and during the same week opened Pearce houses in Port Arthur and Houston (Tex.), respectively, that are said to be the finest in the Lone Star State. While the latter statement cannot be consistently verified with any degree of certainty, it can be authoritatively stated that they, in erecting the Tudor, have given to New Orleans one of the handsomest and best exclusive motion picture theaters to be found in the United States. The interior and woodwork decorations of the Tudor are of the Gothic type of architecture, blended with just enough of the old English baronial to suggest the period from which the house derives its name. The walls are ornamented with panel heads representing old English characters, designed in laps of cypress casings, while the mural decorations over the proscenium arch display a hunting scene of the old English lords and ladies passing with their falcons. A balcony measuring about one-quarter the length of the theater and piqued by a decorative railing of three feet in height serves to add to the beauty of the house. A big pipe organ peals forth during the intermissions, and when augmented to the regular orchestra furnishes a program blended with the intonations of all that is great in the musical firmament. The Pearces seized upon this opportunity, long neglected by local managers, to introduce descriptive music during their exhibitions, and that the innovation will meet with signal favor is indicative in the reception accorded the Tudor orchestra, conducted by H. Mentin on the opening night. The linolite system of lighting, which is installed throughout the building, affords a relaxing and harmonious effect to the eyes, and together with a gold fibre screen that obviates flickering, the picture is the predominating feature of its equipment. A spacious arcade commands the attention of the visitor on entering, running about fifty feet in depth, and is embellished in burnt green tiling, flanked with scarlet center inserts erected to a uniform border, while at the terminus of the arcade a lobby of sufficient space allows entrance and exit openings large enough to handle the largest crowd with perfect safety. The Pearce syndicate has contributed a testimonial to its achivement and to the industry, bringing with it music, art and science that is bound to be followed with its logical concomitant—success.

The Plaza Theater, which is in course of construction at the corner of Dauphine and Canal Streets, a recent acquisition to Fitchenberg's Enterprises, is being rushed to completion and it is said will open by September 15th. This will mark the fourth house of Fitchenberg on Canal Street and, according to reports, will exceed the expectations of local patrons in its construction and equipment features. The other houses operated by Mr. Fitchenberg are the Alamo, Dreamworld and Picto, the two first-named billing pictures and spot singers, while the latter is devoted to feature films exclusively.

The Orpheum, after a dash of five weeks, following its regular winter season, is endeavoring to innovate talking motion pictures, closed recently and will probably stay dark through the summer.

The Lyceum, operated by the St. Charles Amusement Co., enlarged the seating capacity of its auditorium, and the additional space is barely noticeable on account of the crowds which visit the cozy St. Charles Street emporium daily.

After attempting to be opened by six different managers in as many months, the Napoleon Theater, considered by many local exhibitors to be the "jinx" of suburban houses, after a lapse of ten days following its last closing was opened on June 21st by Frank Davis, who announces his policy as feature films and tabloid productions. Mr. Davis thinks he can kill the "jinx" and local "wise-acres" are awaiting its "assassination" with interest.

MAURICE H. BARR.

PHILADELPHIA.

CHARLES M. RAPAPORTE, of the Grand Theater, Seventh Street and Snyder Avenue, donated the use of his theater for a benefit concert with motion pictures on Sunday afternoon, June 22. The proceeds of the entertainment were given to a public day nursery.

A novelty that is sure to meet with the approval of the public, and which has up to the present time attracted many patrons to the Allentown Candy Kitchen, of Allentown, Pa., seems certain to be a money-maker for the promoter. Charles Patterson, who conducts a large ice cream saloon, has had the interior of the store so altered as to accommodate over 900 people at one time, and the tables in the establishment have been so arranged that patrons may look at motion pictures while eating in the place. A six-piece orchestra furnishes the music and no admission is charged. Children not accompanied by their parents or guardian are not admitted.

Senator McNichol, of Philadelphia, has introduced a bill into the legislature making it unlawful to operate a moving picture show, theater, or place of amusement, or entertainment of any kind, within 500 feet of a public or parochial school, hospital or other public or semi-public institution, without the consent of the authorities of such schools or institutions.

The Kinemacolor Company has opened the Forrest Theater for the summer season, and is attracting large crowds. Special features are being offered and a special fashion plate is being shown to attract the ladies.

A $100,000 picture house will soon be built at the corner of Main Street and Cresson Avenue, which, when completed, will be the largest exclusive picture house in the city. Behind the venture is the Plaza Theater Company. The structure will be of brick and will have a seating capacity of over 2,000.

An equity suit brought by Matthew and William A. Schmid, minority stockholders in the Lancaster Avenue Theater Company, against W. W. Miller and other stockholders, was heard before Judge Sulzberger in Court No. 2 of Philadelphia. The court reserved decision. According to the Schmids, the other directors leased the theater to the Penn Charter Amusement Company for $22,000 a year, whereas another amusement company had offered to lease it for ten years at $30,000 a year. The Schmids seek to have the lease declared void.

The Hippodrome Theater at Pottsville, which is in the course of construction, was wrecked by a heavy storm which swept through that city last week. The walls, which were built of brick, concrete and steel beams, were blown over as though they were seemingly no stronger than egg shells; the interior galleries and stage were completely demolished. The wrecking of the building will delay its completion for at least six months.

R. Boyd, one of the most progressive exhibitors of this city, owner of the Bijou Dream Theater and the Family Theater of Newark (his most recent purchase), will soon have another place of amusement at Seventeenth and Market Streets, Philadelphia. The new theater will be called the "Regent," according to Mr. Boyd. Every known device that will make the patrons comfortable will be installed and no expense will be spared to make it the greatest picture house in the world.

The Bijou Dream, at 1205 Market Street, is to be equipped with the Ozon air purifier, and a drinking fountain; individual cups will be installed and furnished free.

A Dauphin County grand jury returned a verdict of guilty of misdemeanor in a test case of five colored people against Atheus George, proprietor of a theater, who had refused to permit them to sit on the first floor. He had posted a sign which stated that the gallery had been provided "For Colored Patrons." The case was brought under the act of 1887. The verdict, returned after three hours' deliberation, in effect gives colored people the right to select any seat in a theater they are willing to pay for.

Exhibitors out in Altoona have been informed that they will not be allowed to display any kind of a swinging banner or posters in front of their moving picture houses. The order was made by the city government and a violation of the order is subject to a fine or loss of license.

CONGDON.

PITTSBURGH.

THE Allegheny County Amusement Company will be incorporated in this city by Harry Davis, John P. Harris and Herbert L. May. The purpose of the company will be to maintain theaters and music halls in Pittsburgh. Mr. Davis and Mr. Harris are prominent theatrical men of this city who at present own or control a number of moving picture houses and larger theaters.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, Local No. 1, of Pittsburgh, will be hosts at a dance to be held at the Palms on the evening of June 27th. From the way the tickets are now selling every indication points to a well attended ball. All those who went to the last ball held in the Fort Pitt Hotel have made arrangements to be on hand at the Palms and join in the enjoyment of the evening.

Motion picture exhibitors are showing interest in an ordinance introduced in the city council recently restricting certain films. The bill now being considered by the council prohibits the reproduction on the screen of pictures showing the commission of crime, or indecent or degrading subjects, with a fine of $25 or 30 days' imprisonment for its violation. The moving picture men are sincerely backing the council and the police authorities in their endeavors to prohibit the exhibiting of indecent films, but the local exhibitors take exception to that clause in the proposed act which forbids the showing of pictures in which an element of crime enters. As one of the prominent exhibitors stated, "It is almost impossible to present a play or a story in which there is not some slight crime element," and the picture men take the stand that if they are prohibited from showing this class of pictures the same prohibition should go into effect against the publishers of the magazines and the newspapers. The motion picture men are working in harmony with Director Dailey of the Department of Public Safety and insist that there is no necessity for a further censorship of the pictures. Officers of the Safety Department are supposed to make daily visits to the local theaters and inspect the films shown on that day and then report to the director if any of the films are objectionable.

The State legislature has received a bill making a license fee of $5 payable to State censor of moving pictures on self-playing pianos. The bill has been referred to the committee, where it will probably remain.

A building permit has been issued to M. Glukoff for a two-story brick building on Federal Street, Second Ward, to be used as a motion picture theater and to cost $40,000.

The Pittsburgh city councilmen posed recently around the committee table in the council chamber and went through the motions of transacting city business in front of a camera. The pictures will be part of a film showing the inner workings of the city government and will be exhibited throughout the city.

Application for a Pennsylvania State charter will be made by Henry Rosser, George I. Kreamer, A. W. Mendel, James J. Durning, Jr., and Harry C. Mendel for a company to be known as the Motordrome Amusement Company, of Pittsburgh, and which will maintain a motordrome and combined motion picture house in a large public park.

John P. Harris, the amusement promotor, has opened another motion picture theater on Fifth Avenue, using part of the building at 221 Fifth Avenue. The new theater is called the Wonderland, and while smaller than the other downtown theaters is splendidly fitted up in the interior and is handsomely decorated throughout. The auditorium is comfortable and the whole theater is a cosy little house.

DAVID L. MANLEY.

LOUISVILLE.

THE Kentucky Derby, run at Churchill Downs, Louisville, in May, was a recent attraction at the Orpheum Theater, and drew big crowds. Though the racing scene has shifted to Latonia, Ky., the Louisville public is still much interested in the thoroughbreds, and is following their work closely. The pictures of the classic are unusually good in every detail, and the audiences who went to the Orpheum were much pleased with the attraction, which is a Selig production.

A. C. Winston has opened the Sycamore airdome at Third and Central avenues. The Sycamore has a seating capacity of 500. Moving pictures, varied a bit by a vocalist, form the program at the new house, which is open nightly.

A visitor in Louisville was A. C. Farrell, sales manager of the Central Film Service Company, of Louisville. Mr. Farrell was much pleased over the prosperity of exhibitors throughout Kentucky and other states, all of whom are finding the business profitable with high-class attractions.

The Louisville branch of the Knights of Columbus, which will reproduce the signing of the Declaration of Independence in Louisville on July 4, has made arrangements to have the affair photographed. The film will be shown throughout the country, and with Catholics deeply interested in the work of the Louisville body, should prove a strong attraction everywhere.

Moving pictures are to be seen at the Walnut Theater, Louisville, in the near future, Pittsburgh men having secured a lease on the house. The Walnut has never been a great success, though both "legitimate" and moving pictures have been shown from time to time. It seems to be a hard matter to get the amusement-loving public to leave Fourth street, where plenty of moving pictures are offered. The lease on the Walnut is said to begin July 15. The theater will again be turned over to the legitimate profession in the fall, according to present plans. With the National Theater to be devoted to moving pictures and vaudeville going up half a block from the Walnut, the latter is likely to find the going as rough as ever.

Grace L. Barnes, better known in Louisville moving picture circles as Grace Lair, was married to Thomas G. Gaylord in Chicago recently. Miss Lair appeared at several Louisville moving picture theaters as vocalist and was popular both because of her talent and her unusual beauty.

Alf Oldham's airdome, the Woodland, is becoming extremely popular among the amateur actors of Louisville, two nights of the week being set aside for the aspirants to places in the ranks of Thespians. Contests are held on Tuesday and Thursday nights, cash prizes being awarded to the winners, who are picked by the audiences.

The Hippodrome and Annex theaters, of Lexington, Ky., have been closed for the summer and will be remodeled into one big house. L. H. Ramsey is the owner of the theaters, which are located on Main street, and are among the most popular of the chain in Lexington. The seating capacity of the new theater will be about 900. The contract for the changes has been awarded, and work will begin immediately. The new house will be ready for the public some time in August. Mr. Ramsey plans to open the theater during the Blue Grass Fair in Lexington, an event second only to the Kentucky State Fair in Louisville in September.

The Dunbar Theater, for colored persons, opened at Earlington, Ky., on July 1, an old church having been remodeled for the house. Though much comment was aroused by the new use of the church, it was conceded by many that the change was an appropriate and not unhappy one. The Dunbar secured its name from Paul Lawrence Dunbar, a colored poet of prominence. The rebate plan has been put into effect at the Dunbar, six tickets being sold for 50 cents, twelve for $1, and twenty-six for $2.

Another moving picture theater is to be established in Danville, Ky., the old quarters of a newspaper having been leased. Alterations are to be made and the theater opened late in July. Danville will have four animated picture houses with the new addition. All those now in operation are drawing well, being considered the leading attractions of the college town.

"Tooth Ache," the educational film put out by the National Mouth Hygiene Association, was shown at the Majestic Theater, Louisville, recently and from there went to other moving picture theaters of the Kentucky metropolis. All of the Louisville exhibitors consented to use the film, despite the fact that it could hardly be termed strictly amusing. However, a good deal of instruction was contained in the picture, and the pill was sufficiently coated with sugar to allow the public to swallow it unsuspectingly. The film is moving Southward, and will be shown in Nashville, Tenn., and other Southern cities in the near future.

A new airdome is going up at Eastern avenue and Beechmont, in Linwood, near Cincinnati, the plans having been completed. The theater will contain 300 seats. Moving pictures are to be shown exclusively, the usual admission price of ten cents being used.

The Empire Theater, on Spring Grove avenue, Cincinnati, has changed hands, the identity of the new owners being concealed, however. The deal was engineered by a real estate man. The consideration involved was $3,500, including only the theater privileges. The realty is owned by F. A. Dietz, of Cincinnati.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

NEW ENGLAND.

A RECENT incorporation is the Scollay Square Olympia Company of Boston, with Nathan H. Gordon, Max Skoolman and Edward D. Levinton, named as the promoters. This concern filed its papers as a $65,000 corporation, and is in connection with the big theater, now in course of construction at Scollay square, Boston. When completed, the new theater, which will seat about 2,600 persons is to offer vaudeville and moving picture programs. Nathan H. Gordon, of the Gordon Brothers Amusement Company, of Boston, is the prime mover in this proposition.

The Empire Amusement Company of Augusta, Me., was incorporated this week, with a capital of $30,000. Ernest L. McLean of Augusta, E. M. Leavitt, of Winthrop, and R. A. Kittredge, of Hallowell, are named as the officers.

On Monday, June 16, the Star Theater, Boston, exhibited a local film, showing the parade of the Elks through the city. The reel was made by the Senco Film Company, a local concern, in which Manager O'Brien, of the Scenic Temple, Boston, is interested. The reel was clear and well done, creating considerable interest.

Manager Frank of the Scenic Theater, East Boston, Mass., has closed for the summer season, according to his usual custom. Mr. Frank reports that the season just past has been a good one, and the Scenic will reopen early in August.

The Superb Theater, Roxbury Crossing, Boston, has reduced its admission price from 10 to 5 cents, for matinee shows. The warm weather has slowed down the Superb's trade, as it has the great majority of theaters hereabouts.

The "Quo Vadis?" reels are doing very well indeed at the Park Theater, Boston. No doubt the exceedingly favorable press notices have helped some. The critics were lavish in their praise of these truly remarkable reels.

Sharp & Company has leased for Lewis B. Curtis, of Bridgeport, Conn., 11,000 square feet of land at the southeast corner of Broadway and 107th Street, to the Reela Amusement Company, for twenty-one years, as a site for a three-story theater, store and offices. The theater will seat about 2,000 persons, and with a policy of vaudeville and photoplays, should make good.

The new Empire Theater, Brattleboro, Vermont, which was opened by Lawler Brothers, of Greenfield, Mass., on May 29, has been doing a real capacity business to date. The Empire is the most up-to-date and modern theater in Brattleboro, devoted to a policy of photoplays, vaudeville and illustrated songs. An unusually capable house manager was secured by Lawler Brothers in the person of F. Shehay, well known in Lynn, Mass. Manager Shehay knows his business thoroughly, and the Empire is sure to prosper under his care. The Lawler Brothers own several other paying theaters.

Mr. Pope McKennon, a real estate dealer, and owner of the Palace Theater, a photoplay house, of Bangor, Me., is finding business very good. On this account McKennon has decided to give the Bangor photoplay fans a new house that will be modern, up-to-date and thoroughly fireproof. Plans have been made and accepted by McKennon, calling for a house to seat 1,500 people, built on a lot of land 60 by 174 by 41. The new house will be known as the New Palace and should be ready for its opening by September 15. Arthur Allen, who has been running the Palace Theater so ably in Mr. McKennon's interests, will have charge of the new house. Vaudeville and moving pictures will be the policy. Bangor can easily stand a modern theater and the New Palace has every chance to be a money-making proposition. Manager Allen is very popular with his patrons, as he always tries to deliver the goods in the shape of good programs. The New Palace will cost about $50,000.

Thomas J. Donnelly, formerly associated with the Nelson Theater, Springfield, Mass., a vaudeville and picture house, has resigned and is now superintendent of Poli's Theater of that city, succeeding Mr. J. P. Crane, who resigned to look after his interests at Riverside Park.

Waterbury, Conn., is becoming quite a theatrical city now-a-days. The Princess Theater opened on June 16 with a large program of photoplays, and Manager Cobb finds business unusually good, the lateness of the season considered. The Princess is a cosy theater and should do well. Work on William Fox's new theater at Waterbury is now well under way, and this house should be ready for the public by October 1, at the latest. The regulation Fox brand of vaudeville and pictures are to be offered. Mr. Fox now operates several New England theaters, all of which are doing very nicely, very nicely.

The new Victoria Theater, Greenfield, Mass., opened to the public on June 9, making the second new house to be opened in Greenfield this year. Messrs. Herbert S. Streeter and Charles F. McCarthy are the owners of the Victoria, which is an up-to-date and unusually attractive theater. Vaudeville and photoplays are the present policy, although the Victoria is large enough to stage road attractions if desired. The house has a good location on Chapman Street and has been doing a capacity business thus far.

Marie Eline, "the Thanhouser Kid," is learning something every day. Marie had an engagement at the Columbia Theater, Attleboro, Mass., June 12 to 14. Right after the first performance Mr. S. Stratten, the manager, was arrested for violation of the Massachusetts law which prohibits children under fifteen years of age from appearing on the stage, in other than monologue roles, without dancing and singing. The case came up in the Fourth District Court in Attleboro on June 14 and was placed on file with the condition that the act is not put on any Massachusetts stage again. The Thanhouser Kid, her sister, Grace Eline, their mother and Mr. Samuel Stratton, the manager, immediately left for the Thanhouser studio, New Rochelle, N. Y.

The Gem Theater, Peak's Island, near Portland, Me., opened for its regular summer season on June 28, under the management of Mr. John B. Bishop. The usual policy of moving pictures has again been chosen by the Gem.

Work has now been started on the New Empire Theater, Portland, Me., the details of which have appeared in these columns. The Empire should be completely finished early in September, according to present plans.

Messrs. Spitz and Nathanson, owning a large chain of theaters throughout New England, offering vaudeville and picture programs, announce that they have sold their Empire Theater, Providence, R. I., to Mr. Charles Williams. Mr. Williams owns the Casino Theater, of Providence, a straight photoplay house. Under the new management the Empire will play to motion pictures exclusively; no vaudeville acts being used. Admission prices will be 10, 20 and 25 cents. Mr. Williams is a most successful exhibitor, and no doubt will get the best there is out of the Empire, as he is now doing with the Casino. Mr. Williams has just installed a choral cello in the Casino and gave a free concert to the public on Sunday, June 15, by way of introducing this feature to Providence folks.

Manager Felix Wendelschaefer, of the Providence, R. I., Opera House, states that he is more than pleased with the business he is doing with the five-reel feature, "The Battle of Gettysburg." Mr. Wendelschaefer does not run photoplays as a rule, but made an exception in this case, due to the high merit of the reels.

Manager H. A. Chenoweth, the live manager of the Shawmut Theater, Boston, is offering some of J. W. Gorman's musical comedies in addition to the regular photoplay programs, to offset the warm weather. Mr. Chenoweth has a special feature nearly every night. Piano contests, baby shows and song contests are used. As a result the Shawmut is doing much better than ever before and this condition is due to Manager Chenoweth's ability and judgment.

The Tripoli Theater, in the Italian quarter of Milford, Mass., has just opened and seems to be doing very well indeed. The Tripoli is a small house, catering to the Italian trade almost exclusively.

The Milford, Mass., Opera House is closed and Manager Tompkins will not reopen until the first week in September, with vaudeville and moving picture programs.

Moe Mark, owner of the Comique Theater, Lynn, Mass., has closed a deal whereby he comes into control of the old Sagamore Hotel property of that city. Mr. Mark is having plans made which call for a large, modern and fireproof theater to be devoted to vaudeville and motion pictures. Al. Newhall, manager of Mr. Mark's Comique Theater, will also have charge of the new house.

Charles K. Robinson, manager of the Orpheum Theater, Haverhill, Mass., has closed his house for the season. Extensive improvements and alterations will be made over the summer and the seating arrangement is to be changed. It is not as yet decided whether the Orpheum will reopen as a stock company house or with vaudeville and photoplay programs.

On Saturdays the Old South Theater, Boston, charges fifteen cents for its show of vaudeville and licensed photoplays. This means, of course, that the Old South is doing a nice business.

Marcus Loew has arranged to show a "local weekly" in his Boston Theaters, the St. James and the Orpheum, starting June 23. Pictures of special interest to Bostonians will be taken. As Mr. Loew says, "Look out for the camera man." This novelty ought to prove mighty popular.

It is rumored that the Globe Theater, Boston, playing to vaudeville and picture programs, has been sold. The Globe is a former "legitimate" theater that soon turned over to moving pictures.

The work of demolishing the D'Esopo building on Main Street, Hartford, Conn., has been started. Upon this site S. Z. Poli is to erect a large theater, built in the characteristic Poli style, which will offer programs of vaudeville and pictures. The location is a very good one and this house will no doubt add one more to the long list of Poli winners.

The Union Square Theater, Pittsfield, Mass., has eliminated all vaudeville acts from its programs and will run a straight photoplay program until Labor Day, when the vaudeville will be continued again. The Union Square management reports the season just past to have been satisfactory.

P. L. Strong, of Glens Falls, N. Y., has taken over the Empire Theater, Pittsfield, Mass., and will open it on July 7 as a vaudeville and photoplay house. Under the right management and with good shows there is no reason why the Empire should not prosper. The house has had a somewhat unsatisfactory record to date, because of mismanagement.

Claude Saunders, formerly manager of the Alhambra Theater, has been secured by Mr. William Fox to direct his Lyric Theater at Bridgeport, Conn. Some time ago Mr. Saunders was general manager for Joseph Gaites. Mr. Fox is fortunate in securing the services of so able a man as Mr. Saunders and the Lyric will, no doubt, take a new lease of life as a result.

The various activities and local scenes of Lawrence, Mass., have been "filmed" by the camera man lately. The recent parade of the Chamber of Commerce being an important part of the reels.

One fine afternoon this week, little Miss Runa Hodges, of the Reliance Company, with her mother, dropped into the Olympic Theater, Boston. This incident immediately stirred Manager Joseph Roth into action. As a Reliance picture, "The Dream Home," was being exhibited just then at the Olympic, Mr. Roth hit upon the idea of having a "Reliance night" all of his own. And so, just before "The Dream Home" was flashed on the screen, "Joe" mounted the stage, told of the little film star, and promised to introduce Miss Hodges to the audience after the picture. This novelty was very pleasing to the Olympic audience and people are still asking if Miss Hodges will play a return engagement at this house. Mr. Roth is one of the most resourceful managers we have ever met, as well as being alert, active and capable. It is in recognition of his ability that the Olympic Company has made Mr. Roth a member of the corporation. When a manager shows the kind of results that Mr. Roth exhibits, it is always good business judgment to hand over some of the corporation stock, unless you are willing to have some other concern rope in your prize.

The many friends hereabouts of Mr. Harry Owens were sincerely grieved to learn of his sudden death. Mr. Owens had contracted to decorate and generally improve the appearance of the Colonial Theater, Onset, Mass., before its opening for the summer season. While at his work Mr. Owens fell from the staging, fracturing his skull.

The supplementary season of motion pictures inaugurated at the Gaiety Theater, Washington Street, Boston, has come to an untimely end, due to lack of trade.

Middletown, Conn., exhibitors are telling about the recent activity of Rev. George B. Gilbert, rector of the local Episcopal church, who has leased the dancing pavilion at Lake View Park. This pavilion will be conducted as a model dance hall and moving picture theater during the summer. Leading society women are interested in this scheme.

The International Theatrical Stage Employees' Alliance of Boston, on June 22, gave final instructions to delegates, who will leave soon to attend the international convention in Seattle. The delegates are: John J. Barry, Edward Reynolds, Joseph Haley, J. J. Callahan and William Gallagher. A donation was voted to aid the striking workers at Everett, Mass.

A recent incorporation is the Sterling Amusement Company of Boston. This concern filed its papers as a $25,000 corporation, with Charles A. Dooley, Henry T. Schafer and Harry J. Jaquith named as the promoters.

Col. Everett C. Benton, a candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, gave an illustrated lecture on his recent South American trip, at a smoke talk of the Boston Bridge Tenders' Union, on Thursday night, June 26. Moving pictures and slides were used by the colonel to explain his story.

The Steinfeld Amusement Company, Inc., of Springfield, Mass., has just appeared, with $2,500 as capital. The officers of this corporation are: Samuel H. Steinfeld, Samuel V. Grand and Harry Asher.

HENRY.

Decorative Material

For use in Theatres, Cafes, Restaurants, etc.

French Landscape and Figure Subjects
in Natural Colorings

Reproductions of Grecian and Pompeian Processional Friezes

Lin-O-Wall
An imperishable wall decoration in solid relief

Aerochrome
A novel wall decoration in multi-color blends

Panoramic Friezes in Great Variety

Illustrations in color with quotations upon request. Plans or Suggestions free of cost.

NEW YORK
890-892 Broadway

Henry Bosh Company

CHICAGO
521-527 S. Wabash Ave.

YOUR BIGGEST "FEATURE" DRAWING CARD

PURE FRESH AIR

— as supplied continuously by the —

OZONE PURE AIRIFIER

What This Machine Does for YOUR PATRONS

Supplies a healthful, oxygen-filled atmosphere for them to breathe—rendering the air sweet and wholesome in the most illy-ventilated theatre.

Does away with bad odors and "closeness" (so objectionable to many persons); destroys disease germs—thus minimizing possibility of contagion.

Write for descriptive literature,
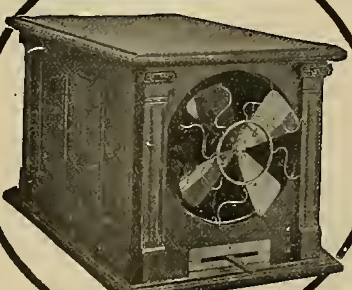
endorsements, prices and terms.



What this Machine Does for YOUR BUSINESS

Advertises you, to an extent worth one hundred times its cost, each season—insuring standing-room-only at all performances.

Draws and holds best class of patrons, by giving you publicity and prestige as an entertainer having care for the public's comfort and health.

OZONE PURE AIRIFIER CO., 909 Rand-McNally Bldg., CHICAGO

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

Current Releases

MONDAY, JULY 7th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—A Sea Dog's Love (Comedy) ....
BIOGRAPH—The Noisy Suitors (Comedy) ....
EDISON—Over the Great Divide in Colorado (Scenic)
EDISON—Winsome Winnie's Way (Comedy).........
ESSANAY—The Forbidden Way (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
KALEM—A Stolen Identity (Drama)..................1000
LUBIN—The Mysterious Hand (Drama)..............1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 30 (News).......
SELIG—The Trail of Cards (Drama)..................1000
VITAGRAPH—The Glove (Drama) 1000

TUESDAY, JULY 8th, 1913.

EDISON—Scenes of Other Days (Scenic).............1000
ESSANAY—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Profits of the Business (Drama)........1000
PATHEPLAY—The Airman's Bride (Drama)........
SELIG—Old Doc Yak (First of the Seligettes Series), (Comedy) ....
SELIG—A Jolt for the Janitor (Comedy)..............
VITAGRAPH—Count Barber (Comedy) 1000

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th, 1913.

EDISON—His Mother-in-Law's Visit (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—The Outer Shell (Drama)................1000
KALEM—The Treachery of a Scar (Drama)..........1000
LUBIN—A Hero Among Men (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
PATHEPLAY—The School Ma'am (Drama)..........
SELIG—The Reformation of Dad (Comedy-Drama)...1000
VITAGRAPH—A Millinery Bomb (Comedy).......... 500
VITAGRAPH—Solitaires (Comedy) 500

THURSDAY, JULY 10th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Enemy's Baby (Drama) ....
ESSANAY—A Flurry in Diamonds (Comedy).........1000
LUBIN—When Love Loses Out (Comedy)............ 400
LUBIN—Building a Trust (Comedy).................. 600
MELIES—His Chinese Friend (Drama)..............1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 31 (News).......
PATHEPLAY—Hannigan's Harem (Comedy) ....
SELIG—Made a Coward (Drama)......................1000
VITAGRAPH—The Carpenter (Drama) 1000

FRIDAY, JULY 11th, 1913.

ECLIPSE—The Statue of Fright (Special 2-part Dra.)2000
EDISON—In the Old Dutch Times (Drama)..........1000
ESSANAY—The Sign (Drama) 1000
KALEM—Entertaining Uncle (Comedy) ....
KALEM—Cosmopolitan New York (Topical) ....
LUBIN—On Her Wedding Day (Drama)...............1000
PATHEPLAY—Porcelain (Industrial) ....
SELIG—Budd Doble Comes Back (Drama)...........1000
VITAGRAPH—A Spirit of the Orient (Drama)........1000

SATURDAY, JULY 12th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Mistake (Drama) ....
EDISON—The Diamond Crown (Being the First of the Series of "Kate Kirby's Cases"), (Drama)..........1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the Western Girls (Dr.)1000
KALEM—Rounding Up the Counterfeiters (Drama)..1000
LUBIN—Her Only Boy (Drama)........................1000
PATHEPLAY—Dynamite, the New Farm Hand (Ind.)
PATHEPLAY—A Little Trip Along the Hudson (Sc.)
SELIG—A Wild Ride (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
VITAGRAPH—The Moulding (Drama) 1000

Advance Releases

MONDAY, JULY 14th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—A Gambler's Honor (Drama) ....
EDISON—A Pair of Foils (Comedy).................1000
KALEM—The Lost Diamonds (Drama)...............
KALEM—The Mermaid (Comedy)...................
LUBIN—The Apache Kind (Drama).................1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 32 (News)........
SELIG—The Only Chance (Drama)...................1000
VITAGRAPH—O'Hara as a Guardian Angel (Com.-Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Diamond Mystery (Special—2 parts Drama) 2000

TUESDAY, JULY 15th, 1913.

EDISON—In the Garden (Drama)...................1000
ESSANAY—Something Rotten in Havana (Comedy)..
ESSANAY—When Ignorance is Bliss (Comedy)......
LUBIN—His Better Self (Drama)....................1000
PATHEPLAY—Denizens of the Deep (Zoology) ......
PATHEPLAY—Port of Marseilles, France (Scenic)....
SELIG—The Tree and the Chaff (Drama).............1000
VITAGRAPH—My Lady of Idleness (Comedy-Drama).1000

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th, 1913.

EDISON—The Dream Fairy (Drama).................1025
ESSANAY—The Great Raymond (Novelty)..........1000
KALEM—A Thief in the Night (Drama)..............1000
KALEM—The Fight at Grizzly Gulch (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
PATHEPLAY—The Snowy Egret and Its Extermination (Zoology) ....
SELIG—Sweeney's Dream (Comedy)................1000
VITAGRAPH—The Master Painter (Drama).........1000

THURSDAY, JULY 17th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Sweat Box (Comedy) ....
BIOGRAPH—A Chinese Puzzle (Comedy) ....
ESSANAY—The Heart of a Gambler (Drama)........1000
LUBIN—The Wiles of Cupid (Drama)................1000
MELIES—The Poisoned Darts (Drama).............
MELIES—A Chinese Funeral (Topical) ....
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 33 (News).......
PATHEPLAY—Easy Money (Comedy)...............
SELIG—Put to the Test (Drama)......................1000
VITAGRAPH—Hubby's Toothache (Comedy)......... 500
VITAGRAPH—Sandy and Shorty Work Together (Comedy) 500

FRIDAY, JULY 18th, 1913.

EDISON—To Abbeville Courthouse (Drama) 900
ESSANAY—Every Thief Leaves a Clue (Drama)......1000
KALEM—What the Doctor Ordered (Comedy)........
KALEM—The Concrete Industry (Industry) ....
LUBIN—The Hidden Bank Roll (Comedy)............ 400
LUBIN—When Mary Married (Comedy)............... 600
PATHEPLAY—Jiu Jitsu (Sports)....................
PATHEPLAY—Beautiful Catalogue (Scenic) ....
PATHEPLAY—The Secret Formula (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
SELIG—Granny's Old Armchair (Drama).............
VITAGRAPH—The Yellow Streak (Drama)...........1000

SATURDAY, JULY 19th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—Doing the Round-up (Drama) ....
EDISON—On the Broad Stairway (Drama)............1000
ESSANAY—The Two Ranchmen (Comedy-Drama)....1000
KALEM—The Smuggler (Drama)......................1000
LUBIN—Jim's Reward (Drama).......................1000
PATHEPLAY—The Friendless Indian (Drama)......
SELIG—The Ne'er to Return Road (Special 2 parts—Drama) 2000
VITAGRAPH—The Taming of Betty (Comedy).......1000

CLEARANCE SALE OF POSTERS

One-Sheet Posters for all Licensed Releases over 4 months' old, 5c each; 3-sheets, 15c each (One Reel Subjects); we are compelled to sacrifice them at half their cost to make room for new stock. Exhibitors or Exchanges, send in your film lists at once and orders will be filled the same day as received. On small orders include 1c per sheet for postage, otherwise sent by express. Send for our free booklet and advertising matter.

EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO.
Arthur D. Jacobs, Pres.
30 Union Square, New York

SEEING IS BELIEVING

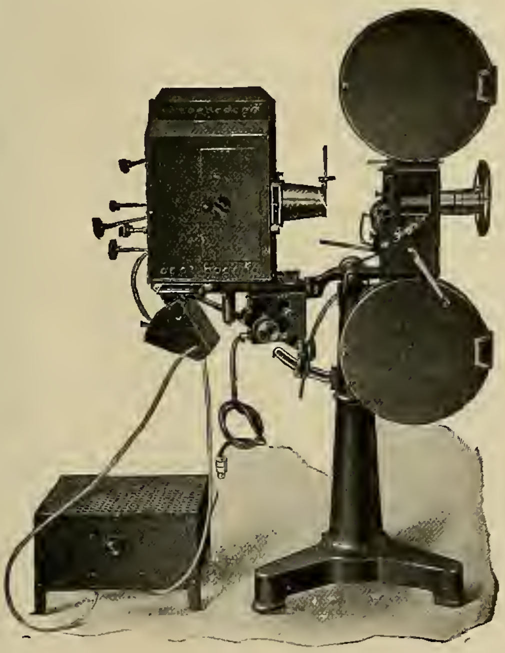
While at the Convention take a look at the

Simplex

Motion Picture Machine

Spaces 319-320-321-322 Grand Central Palace

If you do nothing else while in New York July 7th to 12th it will repay you for the trip.



Simplex projectors mark a wonderful step in advance in the art of motion picture machine construction.

If you are ambitious to excel in the projection of motion pictures, you cannot do without this

Peerless Projector

If you cannot come, catalogue A will tell you much about it. Write for it today.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

The PRECISION MACHINE CO.

317 EAST 34th STREET NEW YORK

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co. Current Releases

SUNDAY, JULY 6th, 1913.
CRYSTAL—The Girl Reporter (Comedy) ....
CRYSTAL—Muchly Engaged (Comedy) ....
ECLAIR—In the Night (Comedy) ....
ECLAIR—How Diamonds Are Made (Industrial) ....
REX—Suspense (Drama) ....

MONDAY, JULY 7th, 1913.
IMP—His Mother's Birthday (Drama) ....
NESTOR—The Proof of the Man (Drama) ....
GEM—Billy, the Wise Guy (Comedy) ....

TUESDAY, JULY 8th, 1913.
101 BISON—The Powder Flash of Death (2 parts—Dr.)
CRYSTAL—True Chivalry (Drama) ....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th, 1913.
NESTOR—John the Wagoner (Drama) ....
POWERS—Elsie's Aunt (Comedy) ....
ECLAIR—The Trail of the Hanging Rock (2-part Dra.)
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly No. 70 (News)..

THURSDAY, JULY 10th, 1913.
IMP—The Wop (Drama) ....
REX—Beauty and the Beast (3 parts—Drama)........
FRONTIER—The Frontier Twins Start Something (Comedy.) ....

FRIDAY, JULY 11th, 1913.
NESTOR—Four Queens and a Jack (Comedy) ....
NESTOR—When He Wore the Blue (Comedy) ....
POWERS—Morgan's Treasure (2-part Drama) ....
VICTOR—A Modern Witness (Drama) ....

SATURDAY, JULY 12th, 1913.
IMP—Oh, You Flirt (Comedy)......................
IMP—Lightning Sketches by Hy Mayer (Novelty)....
101 BISON—The Head Hunters (2-part Drama)........
FRONTIER—The Line Rider's Sister (Drama) ....

Advance Releases

SUNDAY, JULY 13th, 1913.
CRYSTAL—Pearl's Dilemma (Comedy) ....
CRYSTAL—Squaring Things With Wifey (Comedy)...
ECLAIR—It Is Hard to Please Him (Comedy)........
ECLAIR—The Catholic Mission (Educational)........

MONDAY, JULY 14th, 1913.
IMP—A Possibility (Two parts-Comedy-Drama) ....
NESTOR—The Grit of the Gringo (Drama)............
GEM—Little Buster (Comedy) ....

TUESDAY, JULY 15th, 1913.
101 BISON—The Picket Guard (Two parts-Drama) ....
CRYSTAL—In Death's Shadow (Drama)..............

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th, 1913.
NESTOR—The Operator and the Superintendent (Dr.)
POWERS—Why Page Left Home (Comedy-Drama)..
ECLAIR—For the Man She Loved (Two parts-Drama)..
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly No. 71 (News).

THURSDAY, JULY 17th, 1913.
IMP—Her Nerve (Drama) ....
REX—The Wrong Road (Drama)......................
FRONTIER—The Smallpox Scare at Gulch Hollow (Comedy) ....

FRIDAY, JULY 18th, 1913.
NESTOR—The Tale of a Hat (Comedy)..............
NESTOR—When His Courage Failed (Comedy).......
POWERS—The Awakening (Drama) ....
VICTOR—Nihilist Vengeance (Two parts-Drama) .....

SATURDAY, JULY 19th, 1913.
IMP—Binks Ends the War (Comedy)..................
IMP—In Cartoonland With Hy. Mayer (Novelty).....
101 BISON—When Sherman Marched to the Sea (Three parts-Drama) ....
FRONTIER—The Half-Breed Sheriff (Drama)........

Mutual Film Corporation Current Releases

SUNDAY, JULY 6th, 1913.
MAJESTIC—The Shadow of the Past (Drama) ....
THANHOUSER—(No Release This Date) ....

MONDAY, JULY 7th, 1913.
AMERICAN—San Francisco, the Dauntless City (Scenic)
KEYSTONE—Safe In Jail (Comedy) ....
RELIANCE—A Rural Romance (Drama) ....

TUESDAY, JULY 8th, 1913.
MAJESTIC—One of the Finest (Drama) ....
THANHOUSER—For the Man She Loved (Drama) ....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th, 1913.
BRONCHO—Grand Dad (2-parts Drama) ....
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 28 (News) ....
RAMO—Man and Woman (2-parts Drama) ....
RELIANCE—The Wager (Drama) ....

THURSDAY, JULY 10th, 1913.
AMERICAN—The Foreign Spy (Drama) ....
KEYSTONE—The Telltale Light (Comedy) ....
MUTUAL—Funnicus' Mother-in-Law (Comedy) ....
MUTUAL—Saigon (Travel) ....
PILOT—Sanitary Gulch (Comedy) ....

FRIDAY, JULY 11th, 1913.
KAY-BEE—The Banshee (2-parts Drama)............
THANHOUSER—An Errand of Mercy (Drama) ......

SATURDAY, JULY 12th, 1913.
AMERICAN—The Song of the Soup (Comedy) ......
AMERICAN—A Garden City In California (Scenic)....
MAJESTIC—The Ingrate (Drama) ....
RELIANCE—Ashes (2 parts; Drama)................

Advance Releases

SUNDAY, JULY 13th, 1913.
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported)......................
THANHOUSER—A Crepe Bonnet (Comedy-Drama)..

MONDAY, JULY 14th, 1913.
AMERICAN—Truth In the Wilderness (2parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—Love and Rubbish (Comedy)..............
RELIANCE—The Fisherman's Fortune (Drama)..........

TUESDAY, JULY 15th, 1913.
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported).......................
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Reported)................

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th, 1913.
BRONCHO—Heart Throbs (2 parts—Drama)...........
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 29 (News) ....
RAMO—A Dog-Gone Baron (Comedy) ....
RELIANCE—Her Rosary (Drama).....................

THURSDAY, JULY 17th, 1913.
AMERICAN—To Err Is Human (Drama)..............1000
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Reported)......................
MUTUAL—(Title Not Reported)......................
PILOT—(Title Not Reported).........................

FRIDAY, JULY 18th, 1913.
KAY-BEE—The Red Mask (2 parts—Drama)...........
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Reported)................

SATURDAY, July 19th, 1913.
AMERICAN—At the Half-Breed's Mercy (Drama)........
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported).......................
RELIANCE—The Strange Way (Drama)...............

Exclusive Supply Corporation Current Releases

MONDAY, JULY 7th, 1913.
DRAGON—Ticket of Leave Man (2-part Drama) ......

TUESDAY, JULY 8th, 1913.
GAUMONT—His Master's Voice (Drama) ....
GAUMONT—The Making of Tapestry (Industrial) .....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th, 1913.
SOLAX—The Flea Circus (Scientific & Comedy) ......
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 70 (News) ......

THURSDAY, JULY 10th, 1913.
GAUMONT—The Trombone Marathon (Comedy) ....

FRIDAY, JULY 11th, 1913.
SOLAX—As the Bell Rings (Drama) ....

SATURDAY, JULY 12th, 1913.
GREAT NORTHERN—The Jolly Recruits (Comedy)..

Advance Releases

MONDAY, JULY 14th, 1913.
DRAGON—The Organist (Drama) ....

TUESDAY, JULY 15th, 1913.
GAUMONT—With Honor at Stake (Drama)...........

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th, 1913.
SOLAX—Cooking for Trouble (Comedy)..............
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 71 (News).......

THURSDAY, JULY 17th, 1913.
GAUMONT—The Tiny Troubadour (Comedy)........

FRIDAY, JULY 18th, 1913.
SOLAX—The Intruder (Drama) ....
LUX—Title not reported.

SATURDAY, JULY 19th, 1913.
GREAT NORTHERN—A Country Cousin (Drama)...

Mutual Film Corporation

Executive Offices: 60 Wall Street, New York City

EVERY DAY IS FEATURE DAY WITH THE MUTUAL PROGRAM

The Mutual Program Is the Greatest Feature Program in the World

Every exhibitor visiting the Exposition should make it a point to visit the Mutual Theater and compare the wonderful films shown there with other programs.

Other manufacturers have advertised that they would show "a picked selection of reels." The Mutual Film Corporation will show only regular releases,—the same kind of films that are released every day and every week.

SEE THESE MUTUAL FILMS and then compare them with the carefully selected productions of competitors and form your own conclusions.

The Multiple Reel Features listed on this page are the greatest collection of money-getters in the world.

Five Reels Every Day—Every One a Feature

Exclusive Agent in the United States and Canada for the following popular brands:

THANHOUSER, KAY-BEE, BRONCHO, MAJESTIC, RELIANCE, AMERICAN, KEYSTONE, MUTUAL EDUCATIONAL and MUTUAL WEEKLY.

BRONCHO	"Old Mammy's Secret Code" (3)	July 16
THANHOUSER	"Tannhauser" (3)	July 15
GAUMONT	"With Honor at Stake"	July 15
AMERICAN	"Truth in the Wilderness"	July 14
RELIANCE	"Ashes"	July 12
KAY-BEE	"The Banshee"	July 11
BRONCHO	"Granddad"	July 9
KAY-BEE	"The Crimson Stain" (3)	July 4
AMERICAN	"Quicksands"	June 30
RELIANCE	"The Tangled Web" (3)	June 28
KAY-BEE	"The Seal of Silence"	June 27
BRONCHO	"The Transgressor"	June 25
GAUMONT	"The Demon of Destruction"	June 24
KAY-BEE	"The Failure of Success"	June 20
BRONCHO	"From the Shadows"	June 18
THANHOUSER	"The Snare of Fate"	June 17
AMERICAN	"The Soul of a Thief"	June 16
RELIANCE	"Half a Chance" (3)	June 14
KAY-BEE	"The Boomerang" (3)	June 13
KAY-BEE	"A True Believer"	June 6
BRONCHO	"A Dixie Mother"	June 4
RELIANCE	"The Master Cracksman"	May 31
KAY-BEE	"A Child of War"	May 30
BRONCHO	"Drummer of the 8th"	May 28
THANHOUSER	"Carmen" (3)	May 27
AMERICAN	"Ashes of Three"	May 26
KAY-BEE	"The Miser"	May 23
BRONCHO	"The Sea Dog"	May 21
KAY-BEE	"For Love of the Flag"	May 16
BRONCHO	"A Slave's Devotion"	May 14
RELIANCE	"The Big Boss"	May 14
THANHOUSER	"The Marble Heart"	May 13
MAJESTIC	"Children of St. Anne"	May 6
KAY-BEE	"A Black Conspiracy"	May 2
RELIANCE	"The Bawler Out" (3)	Apr. 30
BRONCHO	"Bread Cast Upon the Waters"	Apr. 30
AMERICAN	"Oil Upon Troubled Waters"	Apr. 28
KAY-BEE	"Will o' the Wisp"	Apr. 25
BRONCHO	"Retrogression"	Apr. 23
BRONCHO	"A Southern Cinderella" (3)	Apr. 16
RELIANCE	"Held for Ransom"	Apr. 16
KAY-BEE	"On Fortune's Wheel"	Apr. 11
BRONCHO	"The Grey Sentinel"	Apr. 9
KAY-BEE	"With Lee in Virginia"	Apr. 4
BRONCHO	"The Sinews of War"	Apr. 2
RELIANCE	"The Judge's Vindication"	Apr. 2
THANHOUSER	"Cymbeline"	Mar. 28
BRONCHO	"The Iconoclast" (3)	Mar. 26
BRONCHO	"The Pride of the South" (3)	Mar. 19
RELIANCE	"The Vengeance of Heaven"	Mar. 19
KAY-BEE	"The Sergeant's Secret"	Mar. 14
BRONCHO	"The Sins of the Father"	Mar. 12
KAY-BEE	"The Lost Despatch"	Mar. 7
BRONCHO	"The Barrier"	Mar. 5
RELIANCE	"The Man from the Outside" (3)	Mar. 5

The Kleine Optical Co.

Largest and Oldest Wholesalers and Retailers of Motion Picture Supplies and Apparatus in America

Fits the Theatre Complete from Tickets to Curtain!

Nowhere can you find larger selection of equipment, better prices or more prompt service.

The Kleine Optical Co. invites your business---offers you choice stocks of the latest and best in theatre equipment.

If You Re-Decorate or Build this Summer

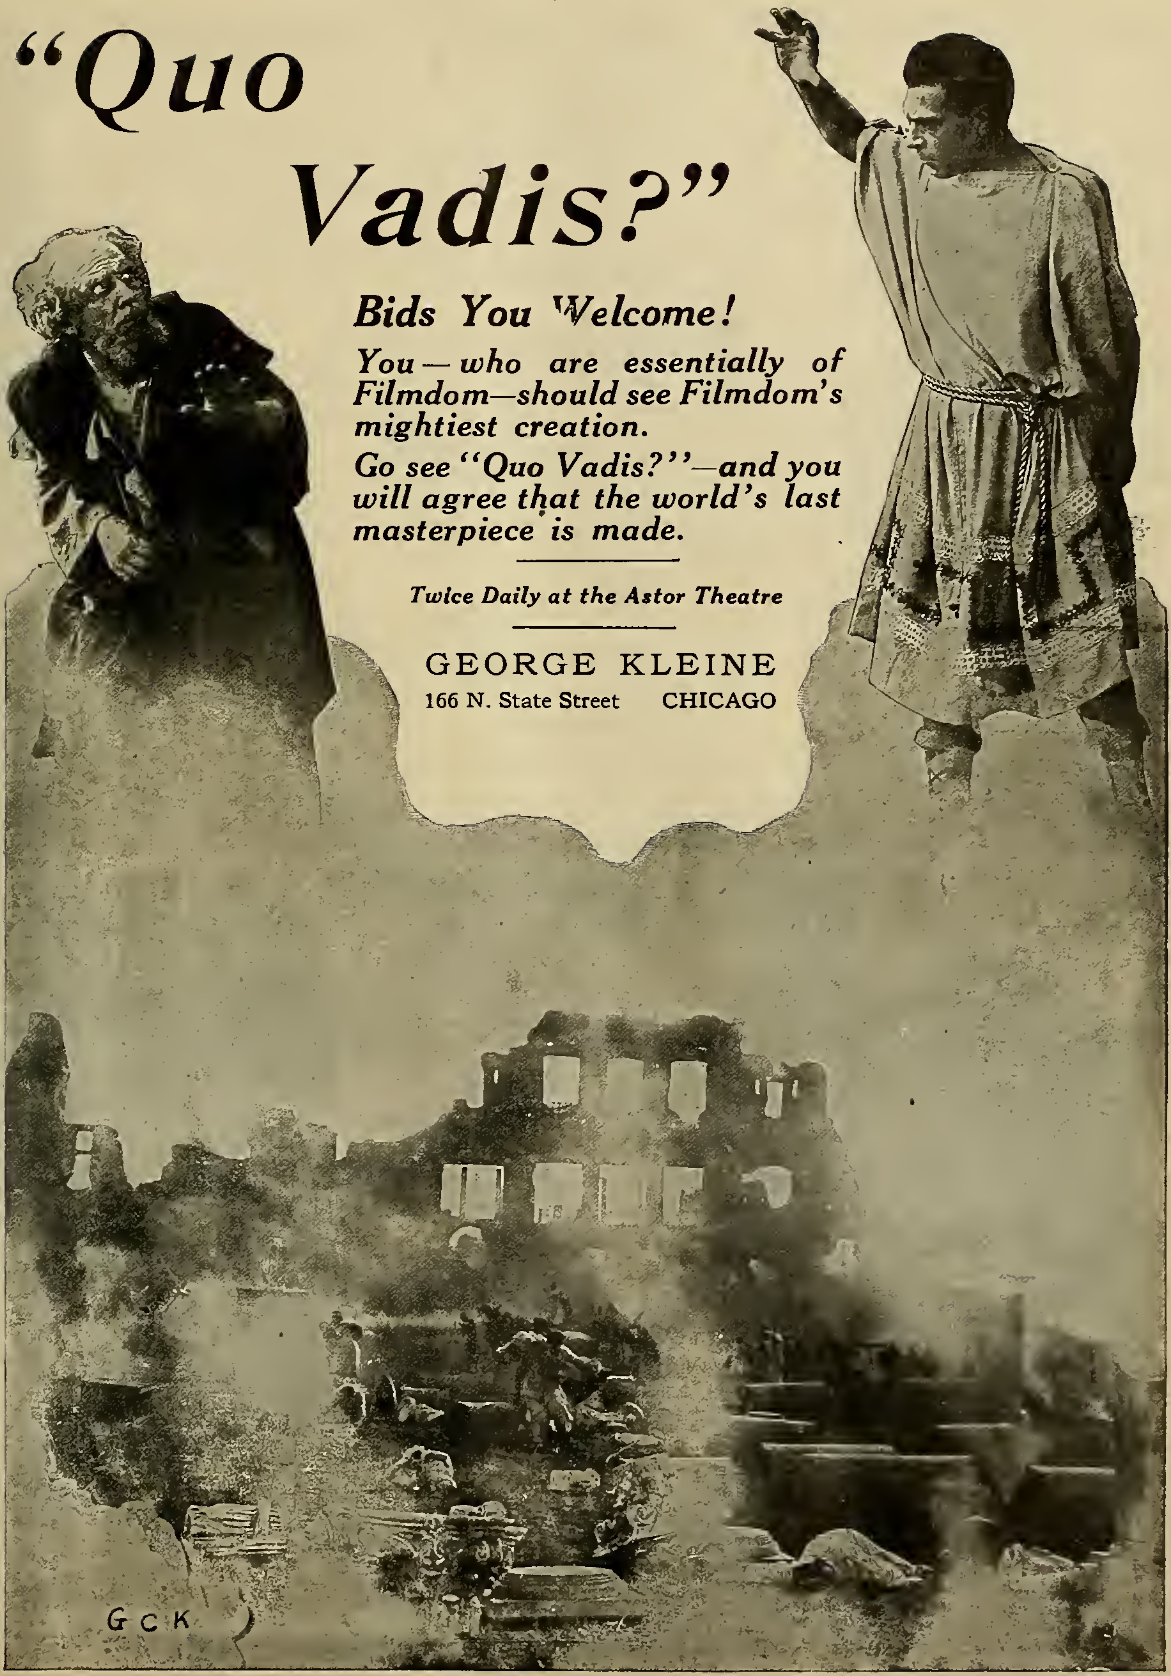
See us! Remember we supply EVERYTHING needful--and from under one roof--thus saving you the confusion of separating your purchases, awaiting delayed shipments with the attendant dissatisfaction and loss. America's largest and oldest house guarantees you a square deal, prompt and courteous attention and rock bottom prices. What more can you ask?

The Theatre Equipment Department Store

Chairs
Mercury Arc Rectifiers
Rotary Converters
Transformers
Rheostats
Lenses
Condensing Lenses
Tickets
Ticket Holders
Ticket Choppers
Ticket Boxes
Ticket Dispensing Machines
Spot Lights
Bunch Lights
Color Wheels
Cement
Oil
Film Menders
Exit Lights
Slides
Special Advertising Slides
Cork Carpet
Hemp Carpet
Cocoa Matting
Poster Frames
Etc., Etc., Etc.

Kleine
Optical Co.
166 N. State St.,
Chicago

"Quo Vadis?"



Bids You Welcome!

You — who are essentially of Filmdom—should see Filmdom's mightiest creation.

Go see "Quo Vadis?"—and you will agree that the world's last masterpiece is made.

Twice Daily at the Astor Theatre

GEORGE KLEINE
166 N. State Street CHICAGO

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—Cameraman with his own Camera. Ready for work at short notice. Anywhere, any time. Five years' experience. Address MOVING PICTURE, Huguenot Park, N. Y.

EXPERT CAMERAMAN—At liberty, many years' experience all branches of Moving Picture work. Camera, printing, developing, finishing. Address O. NELSON, care of Moving Picture World, Chicago, Ill.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—First class moving picture lecturer to lecture from curtain and make himself generally useful in our theater here. Must be steady and industrious, will pay $20 per week. Address HAPPY HOUR THEATER COMPANY, E. H. Miller, Mgr., 129 W. Superior St., Duluth, Minn.

MECHANIC OPERATOR WANTED—Steady job, winter and summer, six days a week. Must be reliable and sober, either Yankee or Italian. Married man preferred. Address, giving all the particulars and references, to A. E., care of The Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED—Motion picture musicians, all instruments. Permanent jobs. State lowest salary. Address MGR., Arcade Theater, Paducah, Ky.

WANTED—A young man capable of filling the position of sales manager for our new theater construction and equipment department. Must have a discriminating taste for artistic furnishings and architectural effects. No special knowledge necessary. Will have an opportunity to become interested in a prosperous and promising business. Address HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY.

I WILL BUY anything from a second-hand roll of tickets to a theater. I sell machines, chairs, pianos, etc., of long ago, or up-to-date. Have also a few picture theatres for sale. Address TRIGGER, 212 Third Ave., near 18th St., New York City.

CAMERA FOR SALE.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE—Edison Kinetoscope Type "B," machine, complete and in good condition. will sell cheap. Address ROOM 216, Masonic Temple, Portsmouth, Ohio.

FILMS FOR SALE.

TEN DIFFERENT REELS—Entire Italian-Turkish War, perfect condition, great attraction, profitable rental or percentage. Write for program and particulars. Address SANEEVERIN, 63 5th Ave., New York City.

PERFECT FILMS—At 7c a foot. Talking pictures with records, singing, dancing, and talking subjects. Quo Vadis?, Alice Loyd, Eva Tanguay, Louisiana Minstrels, Farmer Boys' Fun, and 50 different subjects to select from. Address or call. JACK HILBERT, care Sunset Film Co., 32 Union Sq., New York City.

HUNTING IN AFRICA—3 reels, $35. Homer's Odyssey, 3 reels, $30. Napoleon, 1 reel, $20. Antonia, double reel, $15. All well worth double the money. Except close offer. Inquire STEEL, 1101 American Trust Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

FOR SALE—500 reels of film with posters to match, all in good condition. Many subjects practically new. Address McINTIRE & RICHTER, 29 E. 14th St., New York City.

FILMS FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Pathe's Passion Play, hand colored, three reels. Almost new. Four three sheet posters wanted. $5 per day, $25 per week. Cash with order. Address H. F. STOCKER, 39 W. 8th St., Bayonne, N. J.

FILMS WANTED.

FILMS—Scenics, industrials, also old commercials, costume Pathe, Biographs, Essanay, Western. State make, length, condition. Low price. Address W. M., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—250 new or second hand opera chairs. Address S. J. GILMAN, Dundee, Mich.

WANTED—About 250 cheap used opera chairs. Address J. ZELLNER, Wayside, Wisc.

WANTED—One and two-reel features in A-1 condition, with paper. Must be cheap. Address DR. CHAS. LYNDON, Homeworth, Ohio.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Vaudeville and picture theater, city of 5,000. Only show house. Seating 400. Good opportunity to man with little capital. Theater now running pictures. Will sell at bargain. Address J. ODENTHAL, Batavia, Ill.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED—Every anti-suffragette to sing "Where is My Wand'ring Ma To-night." Send five cents in stamps to E. D. MACFEE, Petersburg, Va., and get a sample copy, and instructions how to put it on in vaudeville to make it go.

WANTED—Pianist to send for sample leaf of my booklet on "How and What to Play for Pictures." Address E. A. AHERN, 436 Sixth Ave., N., Twin Falls, Idaho.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

POWER'S 5 MACHINE—Booth, first class condition, $75. Also 60 reels film, 40 Biblical. Address LUBECK, 199 3rd Ave., New York City.

FOR SALE—Complete moving picture outfit cheap, electric player, 235 opera chairs, No. 5 Power's machine, Asbestos booth, Mica coil, 5 electric fans, curtain, 2 sets scenery, electric fixtures etc. Good as new. Sell cheap. Address N. E. HOOVER, Greencastle, Pa.

THESE illustrations represent the most attractive and practical poster frame made. The easel and back are attached, the frame opening up in front. Poster fits in perfectly and held in position tight when frame is closed. Made in bronze and dark green finish, very handsome and durable, in two sizes, one and three sheets.

Write for Illustrations and Special Prices

AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO.

1st Nat. Bank Bldg., Chicago

"The Best Advertised
Film Series
Ever Released"

MARY FULLER
IN
"Who Will Marry Mary?"

WHO WILL MARRY MARY ?

Every exhibitor knows

"WHAT HAPPENED TO MARY?"

Be sure to book the sequel,

"WHO WILL MARRY MARY?"
Filmed by EDISON

Ask about it at the Exposition

Stories in THE LADIES' WORLD

LICENSED FILM STORIES

SELIG.

THE ONLY CHANCE (July 14).—Charley West, a lineman, complains about his rickety old hand-car, and is given one that is up-to-date. He tries it out and finds he can send it sixty miles an hour. The train despatcher, forgetting an on-coming special freight, allows a passenger train to leave the yard before he discovers his mistake. The trains are rushing toward each other, and there seems to be no way of avoiding a collision. Charley hears of this from the line operator, and decides to catch the passenger train. After a thrilling chase, he catches up with the train, twists the shutoff of the air line at the rear of the last coach, brings the train to a standstill and averts the imminent tragedy.

THE TREE AND THE CHAFF (July 15).—George Warner, the ne'er-do-well son of a God-fearing deacon, is, in this instance, the symbol of chance-blown chaff. He has been religiously raised and his inclination is toward good things, but, being weak, he follows the line of least resistance and drifts down to the low, degraded levels of life. In contrast to this pitiful wreckage is the fine, faithful, resourceful girl, Grace Cole, whom he loves and who loves him, only to find disappointment in him at the end. But at last the love of the pure woman is triumphant, and in her arms his weak and vacillating soul finds strength. She, in the symbolic tree of strength and purity, lifts him high above the low currents of earth that drives the chaff as worthless stuff, rejected by the gleaners who bring the harvest home.

SWEENEY'S DREAM (July 16).—While many men think they can manage a hotel, a theater, or a newspaper, they are in the minority compared with those low-browed adelpates who believe they could run the government. The freedom of the Republic is at once its peril and its pre-eminence, yet this pioneer has weathered the storms of nearly a century and a quarter, proving the eminent success of the government for and by the people. Sweeney, the hod-carrier, inspired by potations of "suds," dreams he has been elected president of a republic, and proceeds to "rush the can" right into the most sacred precincts of the ruling powers. His tads and flannel faces stumble into the halls of state, appear in social functions in misfit clothes and misfit manners; in fact, everything in the most dignified community takes the topsy-turvy low-comedy call that inspires laughter from a gurgle to a roar. Sweeney's first stroke of a pen (which simply makes his mark), is to settle the hod-carriers' strike and give the ladder-climbers $5 per hour, while the builders who came to argue are glumly permitted to escape with their lives. Mrs. Sweeney, who milks the cow on the State House lawn, gives a dinner to foreign diplomats that outrivals the newsboys' dinner for rush, war and rough-house. Sweeney is about to suppress the war in Mexico, when he wakes up with cold feet.

PUT TO THE TEST (July 17).—Gertrude Grey, the sweet singer in a country church choir, is beloved by Owens Vale, a gallant youth, who loves her for herself alone. Max Desci, a teacher from the great city, hears her sing one Sunday and immediately offers to educate her, so she goes away amid tears of farewell. Among the patrons of Desci's atelier is Paul Marchmont, a young millionaire, who is immediately enamoured by the voice and becomes the shadow of the young singer. Their engagement is to be announced the night of her debut. Poor Vale, longing for his sweetheart who has wandered to the city, accidentally oversees a scene that confirms the report. The night of her debut "stage-fright" paralyzes her vocal chords and an eminent specialist, immediately summoned, declares she will never sing again. When Marchmont hears this he leaves the city, sending her a note that their engagement must be indefinitely postponed. Discouraged, the broken girl returns to the country-side, and when time has healed the cruel wounds, she marries the faithful friend and lover, Vale. One day, after the baby comes, she is seized with an uncontrollable desire to sing, and all the pent-up founts of song, inspired by the mother love, break forth. Her husband is delighted, and they pick up matters where they dropped so pitifully, and she makes a wonderfully successful debut under the direction of Desci. She gives the fawning Marchmont the grand "cut-out," and her husband and child are her single thought, as the tumult of her rapturous listeners storms her ears in her hour of triumph.

GRANNY'S OLD ARMCHAIR (July 18).—Granny Willard, seeing the end of her days approaching, begs to leave her bed and sit in her old arm-chair, the humble throne about which three generations have assembled. Her favorite grandson, Tom Willard, has come in from the farm with his buxom wife to visit. So the strong arms of youth carry old age gently to the arm-chair in the sun-lit room for a last meeting with all her kith and kin. There came the rural types known to that modest old cottage, and then that more sacred circle of grandsons with their wives and little ones. So a lovely day passes, as do others, until the shadows darken and tears pay tribute to the passing of dear old granny. After the days of mourning, the family again meet to hear the last will and testament of the departed. All are remembered in substantial fashion, save the beloved grandson, Thomas, who must needs be contented with Granny's Old Armchair. Other members of the family, visibly more fortunate, expect that Thomas, the poorest of them all, will attempt to break the will; but he accepts the legacy with love and gratitude. Fate, as if to further vex him, burns his house, but he, faithful to his trust, saves the rickety old chair. Part of the bottom is burned away, showing a note projecting from the upholstery. He investigates and finds it is upholstered with valuable securities, so, while he lost his house, he gained a fortune, and all his loving kindness was rewarded after all.

A WILD RIDE (Special, 2 parts, July 12).—To contrast to the dreary, lonely, rural regions, the scene opens in Johannesburg, where the young heroine has a "coming-out" party, succeeding her graduation exercises. On this occasion she meets a dashing young Englishman who has just arrived in Africa to assume his duties at a remote military station up the country. It is a case of love at first sight, but the Englishman is too self-contained to be completely bowled over. However, the impression that the young woman makes upon him registers deeply.

The young lady and her mother, having closed their town house, start for the far away farm, up country. They are halted, robbed and insulted at a lonely spot by a band of Zulus. Happily, the young soldier and his troop pass along the same way en route to their new station. They roundly trounce the rascals, return the goods, and see the ladies well on their way, after the young officer administers special treatment to the half-breed. This latter fact incurs the most venomous hostility on the part of the renegade, which smolders until it breaks into a fire of fierce vengeance that almost destroys the family at the farm. When he recovers from his wounds he haunts the neighborhood and inspires the half frenzied Zulus to attack the farmer after they have driven off all the stock, so that they can wipe out the family at leisure without interruption or fear of rescue. The farmer and his family take refuge in the farm house, and as they have arms and ammunition, they put up a stout resistence against the savages.

The daring daughter, observing that the ammunition is running low, knows that it will be merely a question of time before they are overcome. She escapes through the rear window of the house, makes her way to the ostrich pen, mounts her favorite riding bird, and speeds away across the tractless desert to secure help from the military station. She arrives in time so that several troops of cavalry immediately take to the saddle, return to the farm, followed by an elephant which carries a gatling-gun detail, so that the Zulus are thoroughly punished, the ringleader killed, and the family are rescued and gather about the ruins of their burned house ready to begin life anew with greater assurance of protection than ever before.

VITAGRAPH.

O'HARA AS A GUARDIAN ANGEL (July 14).—After they move to their new home, Tom starts working hard on his inventions and rather inclines to neglect his wife, Aileen. She grows rather bitter and tries to persuade him that she would much rather have less money and more of his society, but he cannot understand her point of view. One night Tom brings home Bob Barrett, one of his chums, to supper, and he makes himself very agreeable to Aileen, who is considerably flattered by his attentions. O'Hara sees trouble ahead, but is unable to do anything to avert it. Tom gets a letter from Julius Blake, a promoter, asking him to call and explain his invention, and has to break an engagement with Aileen to go there. When he finds that she is angry, he suggests that Bob Barrett can take her to the theater in his place. After this Tom becomes more and more engrossed in his work and has less time to give attention to his wife, who greatly feels his neglect. Bob continually flatters the young woman and worms himself into her good graces, taking Tom's place whenever he wants to stay at home with his work, which frequently happens.

One night O'Hara comes to the house to see his grandchild and finds him alone, his mother having gone out for a walk with Bob. He puts the little boy to bed and stays up in the room with him until he falls asleep. While he is still upstairs with the boy, Aileen and Bob return from their walk and enter the house. Bob commences to make love to Aileen and tries to take her in his arms and kiss her, whispering to her that her husband no longer cares for her, and suggesting that she go away with him. She suddenly realizes the danger she is in and calls loudly for help, being heard by her father, O'Hara. O'Hara comes downstairs and angrily orders Bob from the house, telling him never to enter its doors again. Then he comforts his daughter and makes her see how foolishly she has been acting. Tom comes in later, thoroughly disheartened. The promoter, Blake, has stolen all his ideas and refuses to recompense him in any way for them. Aileen comforts her husband in his sorrow, while O'Hara reminds them that they still have their home and their child and tells them not to worry over what might have been. Drawn together by their deeper knowledge of themselves, Tom and Aileen find that their true happiness lies in consideration for one another, and bless O'Hara for all that he has done for them.

MY LADY OF IDLENESS (July 15).—A handsome society woman, Edith Hanson, grows somewhat tired of her matter-of-fact, business-like husband, who spoils her a great deal, and imagines herself in love with Karl Brennan, an artist. She permits the calls of Baron Von Sachs. A wealthy woman, who is very much in love with him, Mrs. Williams, determines to be revenged upon her rival and seeks to get the baron away from her by destroying Edith's reputation. Edith goes to Karl's studio with her sister, Alice, and persuades him to paint her as a Venus. One day Mrs. Williams visits the studio and sees the nearly finished picture. She now sees her way clear to getting back at Edith. Calling at Edith's house a few days later, she finds Alice there by herself, and hears from her that Edith has gone alone to the artist's studio, where she is having a final sitting. Mrs. Williams makes a hasty adieu, intending to go at once to Mr. Hanson, and tell him where his wife is to be found. She meets Hanson as she is leaving the house and at once tells him that Edith is alone with Karl. Hanson leaves at once and rushes away to the studio. Alice overhears the conversation between her brother-in-law and Mrs. Williams, and determines to save her sister if possible. Leaving the house by a back entrance she gets into a taxi and is quickly whirled along the streets to Karl's residence, which she reaches a few minutes ahead of Hanson. She tells her sister that her husband is on his way there. She quickly seizes one of Karl's brushes and paints out the face of the picture. Then she tells Karl to make love to her and is found in his arms when Hanson enters the studio. Alice explains to him that the picture is of her and that she had smudged over the face because she did not like it. Edith realizes that she really loves her husband and that her infatuation for Karl was simply an idle fancy. Karl turns the pretended love-making with Alice to the genuine article and it is easily seen that an engagement will soon follow.

THE MASTER PAINTER (July 16).—With an ultimatum from his landlady to the effect that he must pay up or get out of his studio, Robert Gordon, a young artist, takes a few of his paintings and goes out to sell them. He is unsuccessful, all the dealers being overstocked. On his way home he saves an old man from death under an automobile. The old gentleman is John Marshall, a master painter. He sees the paintings that Gordon is carrying and notices that he is evidently weak from starvation, in fact, he guesses at the young man's whole story. In gratitude for what Gordon has done for him, Marshall asks him to come to his home and study under him, which offer is gladly accepted. At Marshall's house Gordon meets Marise, the master's niece, and before long falls in love with her.

Under Marshall's instruction Gordon progresses rapidly with his art and is soon engaged on a painting of Marise. The master himself is occupied with a painting that he imagines will be the crowning effort of his life. Marshall's painting, however, is really unutterably bad, for the old man is rapidly losing his eyesight and conception of color and line. When Marise and Gordon find that he thinks it a masterpiece and intends to enter it for the coming exhibition they are filled with pity for him but dare not tell him the truth. Night after night Gordon goes down into Marshall's studio and works on the master's picture, determined, if it be possible, to save his master's reputation as an artist. One evening he is discovered by Marise, to whom he explains his actions. Their constant association together has fanned the flame of love between Marise and Gordon and at last he goes to Marshall to ask for her hand. The old man is highly indignant and refuses to allow her to marry what he calls "an unknown artist." The night before the exhibition opens Gordon puts the finishing touches on the picture, which is a really beautiful work of art and would have done credit to the master himself had it really been his work. Just as Gordon is about to lay down his brushes for the last time, Marshall enters and sees him at work. Explanations cannot now be avoided and so Marise tells him the truth about his painting. Marshall is sadly disillusioned, but generously acknowledges that Gordon is now the master and he the pupil. Placing the hands of Robert and Marise together, he fondly bestows upon them the blessing that he had before refused.

HUBBY'S TOOTHACHE (July 17).—Wifey, having had a tooth pulled, has a badly aching jaw but gets no sympathy from Hubby, who pooh-poohs the idea that she is in pain. At breakfast, however, he gets some sugar in his own teeth and soon changes his mind about the painfulness of toothache. While he is on his way to the dentist's Wifey telephones ahead and arranges for the dentist to teach him a much-needed lesson, which is done zealously. Hubby is almost scared to death. After the dentist has finished with him

COMING—A MONOPOL TRIUMPH

MISS MARION LEONARD

IN THE FIRST SIX REEL ORIGINAL STORY EVER FILMED

"THE SEED OF THE FATHERS"

A PICTURESQUE, EMOTIONAL AND SENSATIONAL STUDY IN EUGENICS AND HEREDITY, BY S. E. V. TAYLOR

IN THREE ACTS—6,000 FEET

BIDS INVITED

MONOPOL FILM CO. 145 West 45th Street, New York City
PHONE BRYANT 3358

Wifey relents and fondly strokes her husband's swollen cheek while he, now all sympathy for what she has already suffered, gently returns her caresses.

SANDY AND SHORTY WORK TOGETHER (July 17).—Sandy and Shorty, the famous California hoboes, get jobs with two rival grocers, Flanagan and Cohen. They help these men in their feud with one another and work really hard. Finally they discover that one is undoing the work of the other as fast as it is done and vice versa. Quitting their jobs they hit the pike again and leave the angry grocers to fight for themselves.

THE YELLOW STREAK (July 18).—Hearing from the bank that he has overdrawn his account to the tune of five thousand dollars, John Matthews speculates with what little money he can command in the hope that he may be able to recoup his former losses. He loses all and goes home to his wife to tell her of his ruin. He suggests that she shall mortgage her house and let him have the money to recoup his former losses. He loses all and is obliged to confess to his wife that he has violated her trust in him. During the afternoon Mrs. Jackson, a neighbor, comes to the house and, handing Matthews several thousand dollars, asks him to invest it in some good mortgage for her. He puts the money in his safe and then leaves the house to go back again to his office. From the office he telephones home to saw that he is going away on business and that he will not be home that night. He then buys a mask and waits around in the town until about midnight, when he goes to his house and breaks in through a window. Going to the safe he opens it and takes out the money that he had deposited there earlier in the day, thinking to get away with it and claim that a burglar had stolen it during his absence from the city.

His wife hears a noise below and descends the stairs to see what is the matter. She fears that the burglar may be her husband, but none the less shoots at the figure she sees in the darkness. The bullet enters Matthews' heart and he falls lifeless. Mrs. Matthews' is not surprised when she finds that she has shot her husband and thinks it for the best—he were better dead than living a life of dishonor. She throws away his mask and drops the revolver by his side. Then calling in the police she explains to them that hearing revolver shots she had come down and discovered that her husband had been killed. The next day the coroner's jury brings in a verdict that John Matthews met his death at the hands of an unknown assassin who was bent on robbing his house.

THE TAMING OF BETTY (July 19).—Mrs. Forester, a wealthy widow residing in Hong Kong, receives a letter from Sir James Disbrow, an English M. P., saying that he is coming to visit her with his son Charles. He suggests that a marriage between Charles and Betty, Mrs. Forester's daughter, would be a good thing and expresses the wish that the young people will like one another. When Betty hears of this she is highly indignant and is about as anxious to meet Charley as she would be to go to jail. When her friend, Miss Cutler, the missionary, suggests that she shall join the cause she readily assents, as it will give her a good excuse to be away when Sir James and his son arrive. All the pleadings of her brother Ned and of her mother are of no avail. She insists on having her own way and moves her things down to Miss Cutler's house. Sir James, on his arrival, is very much disappointed that Betty is not there, Mrs. Forester explaining that she is off on a visit with friends. Charley, however, is considerably relieved as he did not look at all with favor on the proposed match between them. Ned makes up his mind to get Betty back again some way or other and discusses a little scheme with his mother, to which she agrees. He puts on a pig-tailed wig and makes up as a Chinaman. Then, meeting his sister on the street where she has become separated from Miss Cutler, he grabs at her pocketbook and gives her an awful fright, hoping that it will cure her missionary zeal. Her screams are heard by Charley, who happens along that way, and he rushes up and administers a severe beating to the supposed Chinaman. This was hardly on Ned's program but he thinks it for the best. Betty, of course, is grateful to her rescuer and allows him to take her to Miss Cutler's house. The next day a message is sent to Betty saying that her mother is seriously ill, which brings her hot-foot to her home. She finds that mother is as well as ever, and has to be introduced to Sir James and his son. Her surprise is great when she recognizes her rescuer of the day before and all her objections to him vanish in thin air. Charley is equally surprised and enjoys a great laugh with himself when he thinks of his former objection to meeting the young lady. Mrs. Forester and Sir James are as pleased as anyone at the way that things have turned out. The schemes of mice and men do not always "gan agley."

EDISON.

A PAIR OF FOILS (July 14).—An actor, preparing for a part in a romantic drama, grows tired of rehearsing a duel scene and falls asleep. He finds himself in a magnificent palace. Wandering about in increasing bewilderment through the unfamiliar surroundings, he at last reaches the throne room where, alarmed by the noise of approaching trumpets, he hides himself behind the throne. Preceded by her obsequious court, a queen enters and sits on the throne behind which the actor is hidden. The queen is neither peculiarly young nor particularly beautiful, but she is intensely playful and has an affectionate disposition. Three princes enter and pay their addresses to the queen. None of them comes up to her ideal of a husband, however, and she dismisses them cavalierly. At this stage the hidden actor is discovered. He flees in terror, but is captured by guards in the courtyard below and dragged before the queen. She immediately falls violently in love with him and announces that she will marry him. Meanwhile the three rejected suitors have determined to revenge themselves on the haughty queen. Joining forces, they march to the castle and attack it. Within the castle all is mirth and revelry. The actor, unversed in the motions of the stately minuet, has succeeded in teaching the court the Turkey Trot and is dancing vivaciously with the queen. Suddenly the three suitors rush in at the head of their men. A general engagement ensues in which the queen's men are rapidly getting the worst of it. Then the actor takes a hand, fights all three princes at once and slays them. The hostile forces are routed and the castle is saved. The grateful queen covers her doughty champion with caresses. At this delightful moment the victorious hero awakes and finds that the queen's head, which has been resting affectionately on his shoulder, is really his fencing mask.

IN THE GARDEN (July 15).—Old Mr. Stevens finds a lover, at a dance, sulking because his sweetheart is kind to other men. To prevent two lives from being spoiled by misunderstanding the old man tells the indignant swain the story of his own lost love.

In 1860, Stevens, a gallant young Southerner, was deeply in love with a girl, Julia. One evening, at a dance, the charming Julia seemed to her jealous lover to be accepting too many attentions from the young beaux of the company. With a Southerner's characteristic impetuosity Stevens bitterly reproached her for her fickleness and turning on his heel left her. That very night Stevens enlisted in a Confederate regiment. Next day, as the troops marched out of town, Julia stretched out her hands pleadingly to her stern lover, but he ignored her and left her without even a smile of farewell. We are not all made of the stern stuff that can wait and wait without hope, and that was why Julia grew paler as the days went by, why her blue eyes became deep somber wells of sadness. Stevens at last came home to find that he, like a better man, "threw a pearl away richer than all his tribe." For Julia wept no more—she was dead. As the old man finishes his story the young man's sweetheart appears, radiant and lovable in her youth and beauty. It appears that it is the last dance, and she has saved it for her lover. With a hesitating look at the poor old man, the lover takes his sweetheart's hand and they go out together, while old Mr. Stevens looks after them, sighs, and then slowly turns away.

KALEM.

THE LOST DIAMOND (July 14).—John Holden discovers a burglar in his house and shoots at the escaping thief. Warding, a detective, and the officer on the beat hear the shot and hurry to the scene. The detective finds a large diamond set on the library rug and concludes it has been lost from the thief's ring. Thinking it probable the crook will try to recover the diamond, Warding secures a paste duplicate which he places on the rug and awaits developments.

The accomplice, Nancy, is sent to the house in the guise of a book agent. Admitted to the library, she pretends to faint and while Mrs. Holden is getting a glass of water the girl searches for the stone and finds it on the rug. When Nancy departs Warding, who has been watching the affair, trails her to the thieves' hiding place and obtaining the assistance of an officer, he succeeds in arresting the criminals.

THE MERMAID (July 14).—The old fisherman spreads his nets to dry on the beach and goes to the tavern, where he imbibes rather freely. Jim and Helen, who have been enjoying a dip in the sea, decide to play a joke on the old fellow and Helen is wrapped up in the net. The fisherman trudges home with his odd bundle, much to the merriment of Jim, but when the latter calls at the shack, the fisherman declares that whatever he finds in his nets belongs to him. Meanwhile a thief steals Jim's clothes and when Helen is finally liberated, the young people decide that the fisherman has enjoyed the best laugh.

A THIEF IN THE NIGHT (July 16).—The husband comes home ill and when the doctor is summoned he leaves medicine with directions that it be given to the invalid every half hour. Night comes on and the wife prepares for a lonely vigil that she may faithfully administer the medicine.

In the still hours of the early morning a thief breaks into the library. The wife starts at the sound and breaks the bottle. She knows that if the husband learns of the presence of the intruder he will succumb to the shock. There is no telephone in the house and as the nearest neighbor is almost a block away the woman is frantic when she discovers it is time to give the medicine.

She pursues the only course and appeals to the thief. The latter, fearing a trap, will not listen to the request and proceeds to fill a sack with loot, seeing that the wife is defenseless. Stepping to the curtain he realizes the seriousness of the woman's predicament and finally consents to secure a new supply of medicine from the doctor.

When the burglar is admitted to the doctor's house he hides his sack of stolen goods, which is discovered by the town constable. Recognizing an old offender, the officer trails the thief when he returns to deliver the medicine. The husband's life is saved by the thief's timely arrival and when the constable would lead his prisoner away, the wife declares that she has presented the crook with the valuables in reward for his services.

WHAT THE DOCTOR ORDERED (July 18).—The doctor informs John, a fat man, that unless he submits to rigid diet and takes plenty of exercise he cannot hope to overcome his frequent attacks of indigestion. The doctor also recommends a trip to the seashore.

John and his wife, Jane, start for the seashore. At the railroad station he climbs on the scales and finds that he weighs 225. At the resort Jane determines to see that the doctor's orders are followed to the letter and while the others enjoy all manner of palatable edibles, John is forced to subsist on health foods. He grudgingly takes his exercise while Jane basks in the sunshine of the beach with her friends.

Finally they decide to return home. John mounts the same scales and finds that he weighs 250. That is the beginning of a series of arguments. At the restaurant he sees a living skeleton enjoying a huge repast. Through a subterfuge John gets rid of Jane and orders everything on the menu.

THE CONCRETE INDUSTRY (July 18).—This instructive industrial subject shows the latest method of blasting thousands of tons of rock; the huge stone crushers and steam shovels; a cement plant with a capacity of 40,000 barrels per day; constructing the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge over Gunpowder River in Maryland; the preparing of a cofferdam and the measuring and mixing of concrete; how a slab consisting of 13 tons of steel and 40 tons of concrete binds the piers together, and many other interesting sights.

BIOGRAPH.

A SEA DOG'S LOVE (July 7).—Slivers longed for the excitement of shore and, with the captain's dollar in his pocket he sought the Widow McManus's tavern. Warmed by the mugs of ale, he proposed, only to be told that she wanted "a foin bit of a man, wan to protect me." Slivers sought to be the would-be protector, but the widow made short work of his make-believe burglar, whose ghost at the grave pointed an accusing finger at Slivers. The sea dog fled to his captain—enough excitement ashore.

THE NOISY SUITORS (July 7).—They came to conquer the heart of Bella Donna. Her choice was he of the musical harp; he made less noise. To rid herself of the persistent suitors' efforts to entertain, she sought her American friends. Three jealous Spanish gentlemen handed cards and muttered "Sunrise," but things were settled to Bella Donna's satisfaction by a regular boxing duel.

THE ENEMY'S BABY (July 10).—A feud began with a political argument. Then the justice declared if grandad did not pay up he would attach his household goods. Granddad was that mad all he left of the furniture was kindlings. When he learned his act had made him liable to the law he fled with his family, but came back after a lost baby, now in the hands of the enemy.

THE MISTAKE (July 12).—"It will make no difference. You will like the wife," declared the husband to his friend in this tale of the lonely gold hills, but the friend feared the woman's coming. He went away, only to return on dispelling his foolish fears. Then jealousy came, ending in the fearful mistake and contaminating all that was really held dear.

LUBIN.

THE APACHE KIND (July 14).—Joe, a bandit of the "Apache Kind," infests the region around the Sabinia Canon. He has a sweetheart, a beautiful half-breed named Loretta. One fateful day Joe comes into town to gamble. Losing, he retrieves his losses by holding up the game with his gun. Silver Jack, a gambler, seeks the sheriff, Bud Jones, and the two start out to bring about the Apache's capture. Here begins a train of events which carry the spectator through a bewildering succession of exciting scenes, showing how the sheriff and Loretta met; how Loretta fell in love with the handsome officer; how Joe learned of her perfidy, and the peculiar way in which he wrecks vengeance upon Silver Jack, his faithless sweetheart, and outwits the sheriff.

HIS BETTER SELF (July 15).—Tom Douglas, a city chap, stops in front of the country grocery store to get gasoline. While doing so he sees Milly Andrews, a country girl, enter and when she comes out wins an introduction to her and takes her home in his car. The romance develops

UNIVERSAL FILMS TRADE MARK

CRYSTAL

BRAND

EXHIBITED UNIVERSALLY TWICE A WEEK TUESDAY and SUNDAY

PEARL WHITE and CHESTER BARNETT
Playing Leads

Current Releases:

Sunday, July 13th PEARL'S DILEMMA
SQUARING THINGS WITH WIFEY

Two of the most ludicrous farce comedies produced in a decade.

Tuesday, July 15th IN DEATH'S SHADOW

A masterful production, absorbing in its intensity. A sure thriller. Get it.

Sunday, July 20th THE HALLROOM GIRLS
HOW MEN PROPOSE

A split reel of unusual merit.

Tuesday, July 22nd THE BROKEN SPELL

A very pretty rural drama with a sympathetic theme. Don't miss it.

Sunday, July 27th COLLEGE CHUMS
BELMONT STUNG

An exceedingly good combination of two amusing farces makes this reel a winner.

Tuesday, July 29th THE PAPER DOLL

THE MOST SENSATIONAL AND UNIQUE DRAMA EVER PRODUCED IN ONE REEL.
One and Three Sheet Posters.

Demand Them All

Find out why the Name of Your Theatre Should be on Our Mailing List

CRYSTAL FILM CO.
430 WENDOVER AVE., N.Y. CITY

and finally he gets her to elope, promising marriage in the city. They elope, but it is not long before she realizes the step she has taken and begs him to do as he promised. He quarrels with her, then flatly refuses and she leaves him. She walks the streets until, nearly starved and weak from exhaustion, she is seen by Grace Forrest, a society girl, and taken to her home. There she learns Milly's story, believes in her and makes her a companion. Grace's fiance, Charles Dorney, objects when he hears that she has taken in a girl from the street, but Grace, with her father, wins him over and he lets the matter drop. Grace is happy in her love for Dorney and Milly is supremely happy with Grace until the father deals with Douglas under an assumed name and invites him to his home. He meets Grace, but does not meet Milly. Grace becomes infatuated with him and begins to treat Dorney a trifle coolly. Charles resents it. The climax comes the evening Douglas makes violent love to Grace and she forgets everything and allows him to take her in his arms. Milly comes down stairs and sees her in Douglas's arms in the dimly lighted room. Horrified, she is wondering what to do when Charles arrives and opens the parlor door. What he sees causes him to draw back and shut the door. Milly enters the room and confronts Douglas, then, hearing Charles, who has decided to face Grace and end the whole affair, she motions Grace into the next room and throws herself into Douglas' arms as Charles enters. He turns up the light and is surprised to find Milly and not Grace. Happy, he takes Milly's advice and seeks Grace in the other room. Douglas has a change of heart and when Grace and Charles enter reconciled, Milly is ready to forgive Douglas and marry him. Charles enters into the suggestion joyfully and they agree to have a double wedding.

THE WILES OF CUPID (July 17).—As children they played together and no one interfered. But when she grew into a beautiful young woman and he became a man, things began to change. He was the son of a widow and the "big brother" of two little sisters and he had to work hard to keep the little home together. She was the daughter of a wealthy man who wanted still more wealth and that was the cause of all the trouble. Her father told her he wished her to marry a wealthy man. She told the boy about it and the two of them vowed they would have each other and no one else. At her request the wealthy man gave the boy a position in his office. But he didn't know that the boy and the girl were lovers, and arrangements for his wedding with the girl went on. After a bittle struggle with himself the boy realizes the apparent hopelessness of his position and unselfishly he bids the girl obey her father. Piqued at what she considers his lack of spirit, the girl berates the boy and in desperation prepares to marry the rich man. In her wedding gown the girl steals from the big house and goes to the back fence where she and the boy used to play. She wants to see him just once more. She gives the old signal and the boy comes in answer. In her father's house the rich man and the guests are waiting to proceed with the ceremony. Strolling into the library the rich man looks out of the window. He sees the boy and the girl bidding each other a sad goodbye. He can't understand, so he goes to investigate. What he learns makes him scratch his grey head and think. But he's a good rich man and decides quickly. The guests are astonished when the rich man, whom they supposed was to be the groom, turns into a best man and leads the boy to the girl and insists that the clergyman pronounce them man and wife.

THE HIDDEN BANK ROLL (July 18).—Bob Prichard, who has spent a very lively night at the club, approaches his home very tipsy. Upon arriving at the door he thinks it best to remove his shoes, which he does. Then, after drinking the water from the flower vase, and trying for some time to open the door with a cigar while he has the key in his mouth, he succeeds in getting the door open. He is about to enter the house when he thinks that he had better hide his bank roll, which he puts safely in one of the shoes. He decides to go to bed, and unconsciously picks up a flower pot instead of the shoes. He retires, leaving the shoes with the money on the front porch. About five minutes after Bob has gone upstairs, Weary Willie, a hobo, happens along, sees the shoes and no one in sight, puts them under his coat and goes away. He finds a quiet spot and sits down to put on the new shoes. They are a little tight but he gets them on and starts off again. But the money stuffed in the toe of one of the shoes makes it so uncomfortable that he cannot stand the pain, so he takes them off and walks back to the place, and after putting on the old shoes, starts out to dispose of the new ones. He meets Sleepy Sam, who is busily engaged devouring a lunch. Weary makes a trade of the shoes for a sandwich and goes on his way. Sam picks up the shoes and starts on his way. Happening to pass Bob's house, where by this time the maid is sweeping the sidewalk, and the baker, having just delivered the morning rolls, Sam asks her for one. She gives him a roll and recognizes her master's shoes. Sam at the same time sees a cop on the corner, drops them and takes to his heels. About this time Bob has awakened, and, in searching for the shoes, he comes out of the house and sees them in the maid's hand. He feels for the money and finds it safe. He is so overjoyed he rewards everybody and starts to kiss the maid when his wife catches him and she, with the maid, gives him a good beating.

WHEN MARY MARRIED (July 18).—Mary Young becomes secretly engaged to Jack Wanamaker, a clerk in the office where she is employed as stenographer. Mathew Flurt, her employer, tries to flirt with her on many occasions, and the end comes when Mrs. Flurt, visiting her husband at his office, catches him annoying Mary. Mrs. Flurt bulldozes her husband into discharging Mary, and when Jack takes Mary's part he is discharged also. They get married and Jack gets a new job. The boys get a letter from him which Mathews learns of. Mathews sends a note to the newlyweds telling them he hopes they will like the present he is sending. The office boy shows the letter to the clerks and they plan a surprise for the newlyweds. Orders are placed for every conceivable kind of merchandise in the newlyweds' name, and soon the street in front of their house is a howling mob of delivery men and wagons. The newlyweds think Mathew Flurt is responsible because of the letter, and the police take everyone to the station house. Cops are sent for Flurt and when he arrives the men proceed to muss him up considerable. The boys are caught and the truth learned. Some are jailed and the others released. The newlyweds go back to their nearly wrecked home, while the boys sorrowfully look from prison bars and Mathew ruefully surveys his tattered condition.

JIM'S REWARD (July 19).—Jim Dalton and Tom Manly love Mary Porter, a town belle. She refuses Jim and gives her love to Tom. Jim, heartbroken, decides to seek his fortune in the West. Arriving there, he takes up a claim. Mary, who has married Manly, speedily repents of her choice, for he turns out to be a gambler and drunkard. One day during a violent quarrel between the two, Manly strikes Mary, who, in falling, hits her head against a table. Believing her dead, Manly takes their little son and flees the town. He finally gets to the border end of civilization and joins a wagon train which is about to cross the great divide. Mary is convalescent in the home of her parents, to whom she has returned. The wagon train stops one night to make camp. The boy wanders away from the camp and is lost. Before the little fellow can be located the occupants of the train are compelled by an Indian attack to abandon the search for the missing boy and fight for their lives. The train is wiped out, the sole survivor being the little boy who has saved his life by wandering away. During this time, Jim Dalton, whose mining experiments have not been successful, has determined to commit suicide, but is stopped by the arrival at his cabin door of the wandering boy. Jim takes the child in and determines to keep him. Three years later, Mary, who has had no word of the fate of her husband and child, is appointed postmistress of Twin Oaks, the settlement nearby Jim's cabin and where his mail is delivered. Arriving there to assume her duties she finds her lost boy and girlhood lover and all ends happily.

ESSANAY.

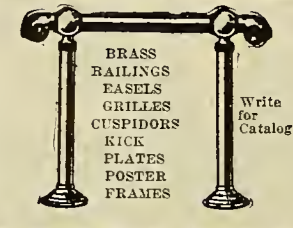
SOMETHING ROTTEN IN HAVANA (July 15).—Mrs. Wimble presents her husband with a box of Havana cigars. Hubby tries one of them in the back yard, but it is so awful that he decides to bury the box immediately. A belated wayfarer, hearing a noise, thinks the house is being robbed. Looking through the window, he discovers Wimble hitting a woman over the head with a shovel. The town constable is notified. Wimble makes the constable and his assistant dig up the box of cigars, and each smoke one. Mrs. Wimble returns from town with several boxes of cigars, which her husband presents to the now enraged constable and his party. The woman was a dummy model Mrs. Wimble used for sewing purposes. The cigars are returned to Wimble post-haste over the garden gate.

WHEN IGNORANCE IS BLISS (July 15).—Robert Holmes is informed by his wife that the newspapers are printing an article regarding a pretty confidence woman, who swindles business men by claiming she is a stenographer across the hall and would like to get her salary check cashed. Holmes laughs. He laughs in another tune, however, when he gets stung himself that very day.

THE GREAT RAYMOND (July 18).—The Great Raymond, who has appeared before all the crowned heads of Europe, demonstrates his remarkable and weird accomplishments in this excellent feature. Several clever card tricks are performed, also his magical incubation trick that is the talk of the country. Raymond's original trunk mystery is shown to good advantage. The throne of mystery, the fairy cage of the Magi, and several other startling illusions make this photoplay very interesting.

THE HEART OF A GAMBLER (July 17).—John Gould, a gold miner, out of food and in desperate circumstances, sends his young daughter, Kathleen, to the general store, thinking, perhaps, that the store keeper will give the child some food. Kathleen is refused. Dan Jordan, a gambler, seeing the child in tears, offers her assistance. Gould thanks the gambler from the bottom of his heart, and tells the latter that if he will grubstake him.

MoKENNA



BRASS
RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS
KICK
PLATES
POSTER FRAMES

Write
for Catalog.

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH

MAILING LISTS

17,000 Moving Picture Theaters, United States, Canada, Panama, Manila and Hawaii, $40.00 or $3.50 per thousand by States.

547 Film Exchanges, U. S. and Canada..$3.50
52 Moving Picture Mfrs. and Studios.... 1.00
636 Moving Picture Theaters, Foreign Countries 8.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries... 2.00

Ask for detailed specification and "Silent Salesman" showing over 2,000 other Mailing Lists; Free. Send check with order.

Trade Circular Addressing Company
Desk B 166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880. Phone: Franklin 1182-1183.

LAEMMLE LUCK

Attention!

The Universal people are now releasing some of the most wonderful features ever made in the history of pictures. They have been holding them back just to give you some extra marvelous attractions during the hot weather. My offices are buying every one of them, of course. Don't miss them. Get every one of them and go right out after new business without delay! Take my word, they are simply glorious!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

Leaders Of The World

A FEATURE PHOTO-PLAY OF NUMEROUS EXCITING AND UNUSUAL SITUATIONS

A VICTIM OF INTRIGUE

IN THREE PARTS

COPYRIGHTED 1913

INFRINGERS, BEWARE

NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENT

BE ACTIVE AND BOOK NOW

Territorial Rights Now Being Disposed Of

Attractive One, Three and Six Sheet Posters, Enlarged Photos and Descriptive Heralds

OUR FEATURES INSURE CAPACITY HOUSES

Write for List of Our Authorized Exchanges

WE EXTEND THE ALLIED EXHIBITORS OF AMERICA A CORDIAL GREETING AND WISH THEM CONTINUED

PROSPERITY

Great Northern Special Feature Film Co.
42 East 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

Gould will give him half interest in the mine. The gambler stakes him. A year later the gambler returns to the town broke. Gould refuses to come to his assistance. An explosion occurs in the mine and Gould is seriously injured. He dies, leaving Kathleen and the mine to the gambler.

EVERY THIEF LEAVES A CLUE (July 18).—James Henderson, a jeweler, is found bound and gagged in his place of business. He files his claim with his insurance company. Henderson gives a graphic story of the holdup, and as evidence, presents the manager of the insurance company with a piece of cloth he tore from the burglar's coat sleeve. The insurance company put one of their detectives on the case. The detective captures the real thief, who proves to be no other than James Henderson himself.

THE TWO RANCHMEN (July 19).—Joe Churchill, a ranchman, quarrels with his neighbor, Fred Martin, over the big opening in the fence which allows Martin's chickens to dig up all of Churchill's seeds. Churchill's daughter, Dorothy, quarrels with Mrs. Martin about the affair. The two women end the feud by a hair-pulling match. Both ranchmen hitch up and leave to notify the sheriff. On the way to town Martin's horse runs away, turns over the buggy and kills the ranchman. Churchill returns to his ranch with the sheriff, but when told of the death of his neighbor, dismisses the officer. A year later Churchill falls in love with Martin's widow.

PATHEPLAY.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 26 (June 23).—New York, N. Y.—In the International Tennis Tournament for the Davis cup the American team defeats the representatives of Australia.

Seattle, Wash.—The first Seattle-built foreign warship, submarine Iquique, for the Chilian navy, is launched successfully.

Washington, D. C.—Two hundred and fifty police chiefs meet in convention and are received by the President.

Cape Lizard, England.—The barkentine "Queen Margaret" runs aground on the treacherous Stag Rocks.

New York, N. Y.—Iriquois Indians in their production of Hiawatha. Ga-he-u-ah, as Minnehaha. Ga-meh-jo-wah-neh, who plays Hiawatha.

Annapolis, Md.—Senator Smith of Maryland presents the "Class of 1871" sword, awarded for excellence in ordnance and gunnery, to W. H. P. Blandy.

West Point, N. Y.—Secretary of War Garrison witnesses the graduation exercises of class of 1013, United States Military Academy.

London, England.—The Church of Hatcham, in southeast London, is totally destroyed by fire and the suffragettes are blamed.

St. Louis, Mo.—Street Commissioner Talbert inaugurates "Clean-up Week" in this city and starts work in Foster alley. Great results are expected.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Dream, the Tocsam II. and the Barbara II. start in the Philadelphia-Bermuda motor boat race. Dream, the winner.

Comic Section.—Jeff fixes it so that Mutt gets an ovation at the California Alien Land Law banquet.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 27 (June 26).—East Orange, N. J.—One thousand five hundred school children take part in a series of folk dances at the Orange oval.

Boston, Mass.—Governor Foss, second from left, reviews the Flag Day parade in which many women participate. Secretary of the Navy, the Honorable Josephus Daniels, on the left, is a conspicuous figure in the parade.

Portland, Ore.—Rose festival week is inaugurated and Rex Oregonus, King of the Carnival, rules the city.

Hoboken, N. J.—A twelve-mile Marathon race through streets of this city. Harry Smith, winner. Time: 1 hr. 12 min. 29 sec. Harry Jensen, second.

Paris, France.—The opening of the French artists' salon discloses some very remarkable works.

Washington, D. C.—Dr. Lauro Miller, Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs, arrives from Norfolk on the President's yacht, with Secretary of State Bryan.

Editorial Section.—The State of New Jersey maintains a lecturer with stereopticon slides and motion pictures, who teaches school children right living and the prevention of disease—particularly tuberculosis.

Sitka, Alaska.—Governor Cook welcomes the members of the first Alaska State legislature.

Paris, France.—Summer fashions in lingerie and matinees.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The home of Betsy Ross, who designed and made the first American flag, is the scene of the Flag Day ceremonies here.

New York, N. Y.—The S. S. Imperator, of the Hamburg-American line, the largest vessel afloat, arrives here, completing her maiden voyage.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 28 (June 30).—Valley Forge, Pa.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the President, unveils the monument to the New Jersey soldiers, who served under Washington here. Governor Fielder of New Jersey, who dedicated the monument, and his staff.

Jersey City, N. J.—The annual baby parade brings out a surprising number of beautiful little tots oddly and becomingly costumed.

Bombay, India.—The new governor of Bombay, Lord Wellingdon, accompanied by Lady Wellingdon, arrives here to take up his duties.

New York, N. Y.—The Brazilian warship, Minas Geraes, visits American waters and waits in New York harbor to carry Dr. Muller, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, back to Rio de Janeiro.

New York, N. Y.—The Argentine training ship, in New York waters, is visited by Onofre Betveder, Chief of the Argentine Naval Commission.

St. Louis, Mo.—Under the auspices of the St. Louis Times, Alberta Claire, "The Girl from Wyoming starts on her 1,000 mile trip through Missouri.

Portland, Ore.—Blackfeet Indians from Glacier National Park arrive here to return the visit of Portland newspaper men, and participate in Rose Festival.

Charlottesville, Va.—At the commencement exercises at the University of Virginia, Representative Underwood presents a silver cup to the class of 1908.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Brooklyn handicap on the Belmont track is won by Whisp Broom, Notter up. Whisp Broom and Jockey Notter.

Burlington, N. J.—President John S. Merrill, of New Jersey Society of Sons of American Revolution, presents a flag to President Mrs. H. N. Pancoast, of the D. A. R.

Comic Section.—Jeff fails to qualify as a merry milkmaid. Drawn by Bud Fisher.

DENIZENS OF THE DEEP (July 15).—The commonest articles hold a lesson for us if they are only presented from the proper angle. Lobsters and crabs, for instance. These shell fish are so common that their interesting peculiarities have probably escaped the attention of the public. This film, therefore, has a message for every person, for it treats of the catching and handling of lobsters and crabs in a manner that covers the subject thoroughly from an educational standpoint and with the maximum of entertainment.

PORT OF MARSEILLES, FRANCE (July 15).—A delightful tour to this quiet but very busy little French port, replete with scenes that have made the famous paintings of the Old Masters.

THE SNOWY EGRET AND ITS EXTERMINATION (July 18).—This picture tells graphically the story of the cruel procedure necessary to secure the egret used by milliners for the fancy trimming of hats; how the egret is obtainable only during the breeding season of the snowy heron, or snowy egret, and how, with the killing of the father and mother bird, there being no way to feed them, the fledglings are left alone to die. Do not make the mistake of believing the film disagreeable! It is only a statement of the plain facts, but, nevertheless, a masterpiece that will sweep the country with a wave of sympathetic understanding of the plight of the birds that will result in necessary national legislation.

EASY MONEY (July 17).—Clarence loved Gwendoline and Gwendoline loved Clarence, but Gwendule's father refused to consent to the marraige until Clarence could show his ability to earn $500.00. Clarence started out bravely and got the five hundred, too, but only after the funniest experiences imaginable, which included a conviction and sentence to prison for robbing his own house.

JIU JITSU (July 18).—An art which, for effectively forestalling the attacks of armed marauders, is unexcelled. An expert demonstrates the innumerable holds obtainable and he and his assistants go through the performance slowly so that all who see may know and understand. The film has the delightful thrill that possesses us when we witness any contest of skill, particularly delightful when right triumphs over wrong.

BEAUTIFUL CATALOGNE (July 18).—A little jaunt into Spain, passing through the beautiful province of Catalogne, with its charming scenes, so quaint, quiet and peaceful.

THE FRIENDLESS INDIAN (July 16).—An old Indian, no longer of use to his tribe, finds himself a weary wanderer with no home but the open prairie. At the risk of his life he proves himself a man of strength and courage by rescuing the child of a white man from death. His only reward is a nod of thanks for, of course, he is a Redskin, and as such is doomed to walk the world alone.

THE SECRET FORMULA (Special—2 parts—July 18).—Professor Ward's discovery of a secret formula for the manufacture of an indestructible cement threatens to revolutionize the industry, and causes a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Cement Trust to be called. They decide that Ward's formula must be acquired at any cost. A flattering offer of money, made by Gerald B. Smythe, chairman of the monopoly, is refused by the professor.

Paul Shafter, Mrs. Ward's brother, who makes his home with her, is in love with Smythe's daughter. When Paul asks for her hand the trust magnate agrees to give his consent, provided Shafter will secure the secret formula which his brother-in-law refuses to sell. Smythe also offers Shafter a responsible position with the trust if he succeeds. Shafter weighs the proposal carefully and finally promises to get the formula.

The first opportunity Shafter can find to accomplish his purpose presents itself at a fox hunt given by Professor Ward. Shafter opens Ward's safe and extracts the formula. His sister discovers him in the act. Mrs. Ward explains the situation to Ward's secretary, begging him to get the formula from her brother before her husband

PHOTOGRAPHS FOR LOBBY DISPLAY

size 8x10 of all 2 and 3-reel FEATURES of the following: KALEM, EDISON, THANHOUSER, LUBIN, BRONCHO, KAY-BEE, RELIANCE, PILOT, MAJESTIC, AMERICAN.

SET of 12, $2.00. SET of 6, $1.00.

KRAUS MFG. CO., 14 E. 17th St., N. Y.

DISTRIBUTORS WANTED IN CANADA, FAR WEST and SOUTH for our PHOTO PLAYERS POST CARDS, Association and Independent, 200 different players.

SPECIAL TO-DAY
MONEY TO BURN
EDISON

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters. We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at

101 - 103 FOURTH AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y.

Write for Catalog

Established 1882.

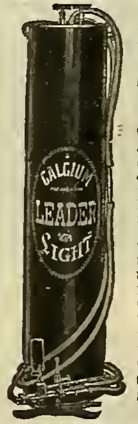
The Newman Mfg. Co.

715-721 Sycamore St.
Cincinnati, Ohio

VISIT OUR EXHIBIT AT THE CONVENTION.

THE REAL LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT

ELECTRICITY'S NEAREST RELATIVE



No more trouble with saturator hanging on outside of tank, It cannot tip over

NO NOISE — STEADY LIGHT — COMPACT

The Leader, having the saturator inside of the tank, requires 25% less oxygen to evaporize the ether and owing to its simplicity, lightness and compactness, it is claimed by all large traveling companies, small town theatres, first-class dealers and all other users as the only and best calcium light for moving picture and stereopticon work

The Leader is 38 inches high, 7 inches in diameter and weighs only 15 pounds and will burn two and three hours on one charge

Complete with high grade burner..... $25.00

Write for full particulars

ACORN MOVING PICTURE CO.
173 N. Green St. Chicago, Ill.

ATTENTION!

LET US DO YOUR

Developing and Printing

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
BY OUR YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

WE ARE MAKING

FILM TITLES and
ANNOUNCEMENTS

For All the Reel Exchanges and Film Renters
Let Us Make Yours

3 Feet for 25 Cents
In Any Length

GUNBY BROS., Inc.
199 Third Ave. New York City

WARNER'S FEATURES

Greeting—Exhibitors!

When attending the Exposition, call at our booth and secure particulars regarding the following 3-reel productions:—

Glass Coffin
Redemption
Regeneration
Peril of the Plains
Power of Civilization
Mona Lisa
Raiders of the Mexican Border
Tracked by Wireless
Saved in Mid-Air
A Traitor to His Country
His Life for the Cause
Kentucky Feud
Rescued from the Burning Stake
A Daughter of the Confederacy
Their Lives by a Thread
Mexican Conspiracy Outgeneraled
The Eye of a God
Her Supreme Sacrifice
When Men Hate

THEODORA

WARNER'S FEATURE FILM CO.
145 West 45th Street
NEW YORK CITY

discovers the loss. The consultation between Mrs. Ward and Ward's secretary arouses the suspicion of the professor.

Shafter deserts the hunters and turns in the other direction, followed by the young secretary. After a sensational leap from the horse he is riding to the back platform of a flying train and a bitter fight in the car, the messenger returns to Mrs. Ward with the secret formula. Ward discovers his secretary and his wife in earnest conversation. His jealousy gets beyond control and he thrashes the innocent suspect unmercifully. Mrs. Ward breaks her silence and explains the circumstances. The professor pleads with his secretary to forgive him. The secretary agrees on condition that Ward will forgive Shafter. Ward promises Shafter that he will forget the incident and a short while later, Shafter writes to Smythe that he has decided not to secure the formula, but will win the girl despite her father's disapproval of the match.

MELIES.

THE POISONED DARTS (July 17).—(Produced at Passir Riz, near Singapore, Straits Settlements, Asia.)—A shipwrecked crew, consisting of an officer and several men, find themselves on an island in the East Indies. After consuming the scant stores saved from the ship, they resolve to venture inland, following a path through the tropical forest. Already a mutinous spirit against the officer has developed, and this culminates when, one of the crew having surprised and seized a native girl, the officer releases the girl and sends her on her way. In anger the men next morning lay hold of the officer and bind him to a tree. On the principle that dead men tell no tales it is resolved to kill him, and lots are drawn to determine who shall commit the deed. One man is chosen, and is in the act of raising the officer's pistol to shoot him when a poisoned dart from the jungle ends the man's life. The officer's bonds are at the same time severed by a knife, a dusky figure showing dimly through the bushes behind the tree and unseen by the captive. Wondering at his release, but thankful to be free, the officer follows his men and, amid the general dread inspired by the poisoned dart, once more takes command. The survivors struggle on through the forest, but one by one, as they menace or ill use the officer, the men fall victims to poisoned darts mysteriously shot from the jungle. At last the officer is alone, and, utterly wearied, he falls asleep under a tree. On awakening he finds fruits, cakes and water by his side. Then he realizes that, because he saved the girl, the unseen natives are saving and succoring him. Eventually they appear, invite him to their village, and nurse him through a fever. News is brought of a ship in sight, and the castaway is carried to the beach by his faithful native friends, and rescued by the passing vessel.

A CHINESE FUNERAL (July 17).—One of the oddest sights that can be beheld by the traveler in the far East. The procession is led by a gong band creating terrific noises to scare away the evil spirits. Giant grotesque figures are employed for the same purpose. All the friends of the deceased parade to the grave where, while the casket is being lowered and covered with cement, they partake of a meal furnished by the deceased's relatives. It is the Chinese custom to feast and be happy as a fitting culmination to the long days of prayer and vigil. The rites and ceremonies of a Chinese funeral are the most interesting of any burial.

PICTURE THEATERS PROJECTED.

Elizabeth, N. J.—F. C. Yoong, Market near Beaver Street, Newark, N. J., has received bids for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 36 by 100 feet to cost $6,000.

Bethlehem, Pa.—Bethlehem Steel Company, are to build a one-story social hall, 57 by 71 feet to cost $20,000.

Tamaqua, Pa.—P. J. Boyle is to build a two-story theater and store building, 60 by 150 feet to cost $10,000.

York, Pa.—Herbert V. Jennings will shortly build a one-story moving picture theater, 32 by 98 feet to cost $4,000.

Springfield, O.—Langonda Amusement Co., care John Leach, 464 Stanton Avenue, who were to erect a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 44 by 100 feet to cost $15,000 have the project in abeyance pending the clearing up of the wreckage accumulated by the recent floods in this section of the state.

Medina, O.—F. M. Branch has completed plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 35 by 95 feet to cost $7,000.

Welshfield, O.—This village have plans under way for the building of a one-story town hall and auditorium, 92.8 by 21.8 and seats 300 persons.

Detroit, Mich.—B. C. Weitzel & Co., 405 Hammond Bldg., is preparing plans for additions to a theater, one-story, 30 by 100 feet, to add 400 seats to its present capacity.

Pottsville, Pa.—Charles Haussmann, 8 So. Md. Street, is demolishing a building and in its place will erect a two-story theater, 79 by 105 feet at Railroad Avenue, north of Main Street.

Homestead, Pa.—Homestead Amusement Company, have let the contract to Henry Chambers, Frankstown Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 110 feet to cost $9,000.

Stamford, Conn.—M. W. Rossi, 1 Bank Street, has let the contract for the building of a one-story theater to cost $10,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The property 1121 to 1125, inclusive, Fairmount avenue, has been sold by Kahn & Greenburg to Jacob Weinrich for an undisclosed consideration, and will be improved by the purchaser, by the construction of a moving picture theater, to cost about $15,000. The property is part of a tract occupied years ago by the Tivoli Gardens, a well-known resort to Philadelphians some twenty-five years ago. The lot has a frontage of 48, and a depth of 79 feet, and is assessed at $4,800.

Philadelphia, Pa.—R. Werner is preparing plans for a moving picture theater to be built at 64th street and Haverford avenue, for H. H. Brosine. Building to be of brick, 40 by 125 feet.

Philadelphia, Pa.—R. J. Reich is estimating on plans for a moving picture theater to be built at 1426-28 South Fourth street, for Jacob Kaplan.

Evansville, Ind.—Pythian Castle Association (colored) have plans under way for the building of a three-story theater, lodge hall and office building, 40 by 75 feet, to cost $20,000.

Tyrone, Pa.—George C. Wilson is to build a two-story theater, 50 by 113 feet, to cost $8,000.

State College, Pa.—Robert Foster has received bids for the erection of a two-story theater and store building, 48 by 125 feet, to cost between $8,000 and $10,000.

Elizabeth, N. J.—L. M. Finger, 800 Broad Street, will build a two-story moving picture and vaudeville theater, 46 by 200 feet, to cost $40,000. Same will have seating capacity of 900.

Fitchburg, Mass.—L. M. Des Chenes has preliminary plans under consideration for the building of a theater to seat 900 persons.

Newark, N. J.—Fieldler Corporation, 784 Broad Street, are to build a one-story theater and roof garden to cost $30,000. The theater will seat 900 and the roof garden a lesser number.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Charles Swozzo, 98 Fifth Avenue, has taken sub-bids for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 20 by 100 feet, to cost $4,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Stephen Hoff, 68 Macon Street, is taking sub-bids for the building of a one-story theater, 40 by 79 feet, to cost $10,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Stuyvesant Amusement Co., 133 West 21st Street, are taking bids for the erection of a two-story theater, 70 by 100 feet, to cost $50,000.

New York, N. Y.—Land Realty Co., John Steinmetz, president, 1009 East 180th Street, is about to ask for sub-bids for alterations to their moving picture theater and store building, to cost $15,000.

New York, N. Y.—Harold L. Young, 120 Broadway, is preparing plans for alterations to a theater; rearrangement of interior and the addition of a meeting room to cost $15,000.

New York, N. Y.—W. Volk, 301 West 42nd Street, has plans completed for a two-story theater, 36 by 100 feet, to cost $25,000.

Barrington, Ill.—R. W. Gracy, Crystal Lake, Ill., is to build a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 90 feet, to cost $6,000. The theater will have seating capacity for 400 persons.

Chicago, Ill.—William F. Pagles, 19 South La Salle Street, is preparing plans for a one-story theater and store building, 48 by 95 feet, to cost $18,000.

New York, N. Y.—Kramer Construction Company, 35 Nassau Street, contemplates the erection of a moving picture and vaudeville theater in the near future.

Whitestone, L. I., N. Y.—E. Bleecher, 102 Seventh Avenue, has completed plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 100 feet, to cost $4,500.

West New Brighton, S. I., N. Y.—William G. Willcox, Davis Avenue, has plans completed for a moving picture hall and shop, one-story, 40 by 94 feet, to cost $14,500.

Schenectady, N. Y.—E. B. Hayes, 327 McClellan Street, will shortly start work on the erection of a one-story theater and store building, 30 by 90 feet, to cost $3,000.

Springfield, Mass.—McCauley Brothers, 185 Main Street, are to build a two-story theater, 52 by 70 feet.

Amherst, Mass.—John Sheehan has plans under way for the building of a one-story moving picture theater to seat 375 persons.

Somerville, Mass.—Warren Lock has preliminary plans under way for the erection of a two-story theater and office building on Davis Square, to have a seating capacity of 1,200.

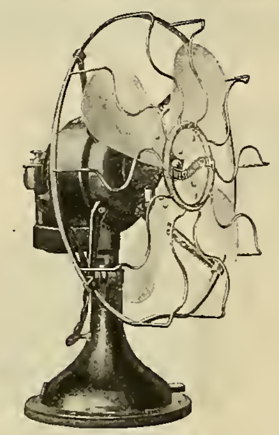
Newark, N. J.—W. E. Lehman and Able Frest, 738 Broad Street, have plans under way for a three-story moving picture theater, 50 by 170 feet, to cost $90,000. It will have seating capacity for 1,500.

Elizabeth, N. J.—W. R. Brown, 280 Morris Avenue, contemplates building a moving picture theater in the near future.

Passaic, N. J.—J. J. O'Leary, Bloomfield Avenue, has preliminary sketches completed for a two-story theater, 50 by 130 feet, to cost $50,000. There will be seating capacity for 1,000. Lessee, Theo. Losch, Washington Place.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Hewitt, Granger & Paste are preparing final plans and specifications for a theater, 34 by 102 feet, to be erected for Harry J. Moyer, at Mt. Airy. The new structure will seat 500 persons and will be used for combined vaudeville and moving pictures.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Erie Holding Company will build a theater, office and store building, to cost $80,000.



16" Oscillating Fan

Most breeze for the least money is only one reason why Electric Fans for your Theatre should be

Westinghouse

Another reason is the long life of the Westinghouse Fan, making it cost you less per year.

Another reason is the splendid construction of the Westinghouse fan, making it unnecessary for you to touch it from the beginning of the season until the end.

Buy Westinghouse fans and "divide the cost by the years they last."

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
EAST PITTSBURGH, PA.
(Sales Offices in 45 American Cities)

THE PERFUME OF FLOWERS

ZALMUZ Air Purifier Disinfectant

5 gallons, $1.50 per gal. 1 Spray free
10 gallons, 1.40 per gal. 2 Sprays free
15 gallons, 1.35 per gal. 3 Sprays free

Made by SOL. HYMES
79 Maiden Lane, New York

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA 738

HIGH GLOSS
POST CARDS
Of Association Moving Picture Players
Best and Highest Quality Made. 60 Different Kinds. Send for Samples

$2.50 Per 1000. Per 1000 $2.50
Assorted any way you want. We pay Express Charges on all Orders

The KEYSTONE PRESS
12 East 15th Street, New York

VAUDEVILLE
PREMIER
VAUDEVILLE

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

2549 Archer Avenue ::: CHICAGO, ILL.

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

VICTOR.

NIHILIST VENGEANCE (2 parts, July 18).—The daughter of the Jewish banker, Zoleski, is beloved by the young Prince Gortchakoff, a Christian. Zoleski is a Nihilist and there meets at his house, in secret conclave, some of the most prominent members of this noted order of liberty.

The Count Zobanhoff, who is a member of the Russian secret police, succeeds in becoming an initiate of the Nihilist society. At a ball given in the Prince's palace, among those present is the Jewish banker's daughter. Count Zobanhoff, the spy, while under the influence of liquor, insults the Jewess, and is rebuked for it by the prince in stern fashion and driven in disgrace from the ballroom.

This fellow now hatches a plot against the prince and the latter is arrested and proven a Nihilist. To add to his bitter cup, the prince is degraded and broken from his high official dignities in the army. He is also condemned to be shot.

The Jewess sweetheart now remembers that her father once saved the life of the Czarina and received a promise and a token from her that any favor would be granted him upon presentation of the token and document accompanying same: and so she resolves to make use of this boon in behalf of her lover. In spite of the machinations of the spy, the Count Zobanhoff, who even goes to the length of blowing up a bridge to impede her progress in reaching the throne room and gaining the favor desired.

The spy is now condemned to death by the Nihilists and his executioner appointed. In the meantime, the banker, Zoleski, has been arrested by the spy, and every effort is made to extract from him the names of his fellow conspirators, but without avail. His daughter is distracted, but her prince lover swears to liberate her father. By a bold ruse, he gains admission to the office of the governor general, which is the rendezvous of the Count Zobanhoff. The governor general is seized, overcome, and the prince assumes his personality in a clever fashion.

When the spy calls, the governor general meets him and forces him to write a letter exonerating the Jew and implicating himself in a Nihilist plot, and intimating an intention of suicide. An hour later, the spy is found dead with a revolver in his grasp. The Nihilist's verdict had been carried out! The old Jew is set free and conducted by the prince to his daughter, who is waiting for him in the Nihilist's den. The prince, now being a member, is warmly greeted and receives as a just reward, the hand of the beautiful Jewess from her grateful father.

CRYSTAL.

PEARL'S DILEMMA (July 13).—Pearl's janitor quits his job. She advertises for another. Previous to this she has received a letter from the Black Hand threatening to blow up her house unless she paid some money. An Italian calls at her house carrying a bundle, which Pearl and the maid think is a bomb. They telephone for the police and entertain him, and wine and dine him, hoping and praying for the arrival of an officer before he explodes his bomb. When a policeman does arrive and after a struggle subdues the Italian, his dangerous package is opened, and instead of a bomb they find his overalls which he carried with him, expecting to get the job as janitor, which was advertised. Pearl, her dilemma at an end, engages Tony and all ends merrily.

SQUARING THINGS WITH WIFEY (July 13).—Brown and Green are two gay boys. They leave their wives and go out on a spree. They get drunk and get arrested. On gaining their liberty Brown buys a diamond brooch for his wife. By mistake Green gets his coat and Mrs. Green finds the brooch. She forgives Green, when Brown rushes in and demands his brooch. Mrs. Brown follows and Green has to make good with a check, which Mrs. Brown gets. Both men swear off, as such sprees proved to be more than they could afford.

IN DEATH'S SHADOW (July 15).—Frank is chief engineer of Mr. Barrows' mining properties. Carlotta, who brings his lunch every day, falls in love with him. Mr. Barrows arrives in Mexico, with his daughter, Grace. Frank and Grace become sweethearts. Carlotta becomes jealous. Frank explains to her that he uses cyanide of potassium in testing ore, and that it is deadly poison. Carlotta puts some of the cyanide in some of Frank's food. Pedro sees her. Grace saves Pedro from a beating at the hands of a Mexican. He tells her of Carlotta's treachery. Grace hastens to Frank's cabin and is just in time to dash the food from his hand and thus save his life.

THE HALLROOM GIRLS (July 20).—Pearl and Charlotte room together. Chester, who is Pearl's beau, and Joe, who is Charlotte's fellow, also room together. Chester borrows Joe's coat and visits Pearl. Pearl receives him in Charlotte's new dress. He invites her to go to a ball. Returning home, Joe takes his suit away from him. The next day he calls on Charlotte. He puts his hand in his coat pocket and finds the ticket Chester had bought for the ball. He invites Charlotte to go with him. The night of the ball, both girls are expecting their friends, but neither tells the other where they are going. The same with the boys. Charlotte lays out her new dress and Pearl, desirous of wearing it, pretends that she has a toothache, and induces Charlotte to run out to the drug store and get her some toothache drops. As soon as she has gone, Pearl dons the dress. Joe has hired a dress suit for the occasion, and goes out to get his shoes shined. Chester discovers the suit, puts it on and leaves before Joe returns. Charlotte returns. She discovers that the dress is missing. Joe returns and discovers the loss of his dress suit. He rushes to Charlotte's house, determining to go in a sack suit, and is surprised to find the two girls fighting and Chester trying to separate them. He engages Chester in battle and the landlady runs out for a policeman. One returns and the two boys are arrested. The girls go to bed and engage in a pillow fight. One of the pillows rip open and the place is strewn with feathers. The girls see the ludicrous side of the affair and make up while Chester and Joe are in a police cell, scheming how they can get out and vowing never to scrap again.

HOW MEN PROPOSE (July 20).—Three friends, unknown to one another, pay attention to the same girl. Each of the men has fallen very much in love with her, and has proposed marriage to her. By clever manipulating she has always managed that the visits of the men be so timed that they never met while calling on her. To each in return for an engagement ring she gives one of her photos. The friends are exceedingly happy over having won so charming a woman as their promised bride, and are telling one another about her. They show the photo to one another, and upon seeing that they have all been engaged to the same girl, nearly collapse. They are in a quandary as to what should be done, when they are saved the trouble of further argument and controversy by the arrival of their fiancee's maid, who returns their rings to them with the information that her mistress, who is writing a book entitled "How Men Propose," used them as fitting subjects, and informing them that they may keep her photo as a remembrance.

POWERS.

WHY RAGS LEFT HOME (July 16).—A tragedy of childhood blights the tender life of Roco, a ragged newsboy, when the ruthless hand of the dog catcher captures "Rogs," the boy's comrade and chum—a miserable, unlicensed dog—and carries him to the pound to await official extermination. Stunned by the weight of his sorrow, the lad seeks his squalid home in the tenement district to determine, in childish manner, some means of saving the life of "Rags." Early morning found the sleepless boy waiting at the pound for the arrival of a gruff pound master, to whom he pleaded for the dog's freedom. Told that the dog would be spared for a few days, Roco starts to amass, by frugal saving, the license fee necessary for the dog's liberty.

The day came when within the boy's ragged coat lining was concealed the price of freedom for his chum—"Rags." Dashing wildly down the street when the night air was burdened with chill, Roco saw standing beneath a street lamp, a ragged girl of his own age and station. A pile of unsold papers at her bare feet explained the cause of tears. He was a boy, tender and sympathetic—and an hour later the papers were sold and he was leading to her home a girl whose eyes glowed with gratitude.

Then came the test. On a pallet of straw lay the mother of the girl, her brow flushed, her sunken cheeks mutely voicing the lack of nourishment. As the girl knelt to meet her mother's waiting caress, the boy stole away to think. He returned, placed all his savings on the vacant table, then scurried away to again begin saving for the imprisoned "Rags."

Surrounded by councilmen and city officials, next day the Mayor's office was invaded by a ragged newsboy who poured out his plea for assistance, reciting in unrealized simplicity the details of his noble sacrifice. Someone started a hat for a collectin. A few laughed, low and softly, as grimey hands gathered up the contents of that same hat, a childish yell resounded, and a capless boy dashed therefrom.

All the money was crowded into the hands of the gruff poundmaster, and a moment later the staccato yelping of a welcoming dog delayed the passing back of money far more than was needed. "There is enough to save them all," said the poundmaster. Once more money changed hands—and later there came forth a ragged child leading by many tangled strings a motley collection of cavorting dogs—but hugged tightly to his breast was his chum, "Rags."

THE AWAKENING (July 18).—Irene Farwell, a selfish girl, breaks off her engagement to the man she loves, and marries a man of wealth, so that she will have the luxuries of life. The boy's heart and spirit are broken over the affair, and his life ruined.

After five years of luxury, the selfish nature remains unchanged, and she exhibits a lack of consideration for others at every turn. Her modiste is unable to have her gown finished at a certain time. Irene threatens to withdraw her trade unless the gown is finished as promised. Fearing to lose her custom, the modiste overworks one of her girls, which causes the girl to lose her sight. The gown is finished on time, but the thoughtless woman flippantly decides to wear another.

Her selfish nature again asserts itself, when her sister appeals to her for money to save her invalid husband's life. Irene, instead of lending her the money, purchases a racing car; and, unable to procure the necessary money, the sister is forced to see her husband die.

Seized with the speed mania, she neglects her husband's warning, with the result that she runs over a child, and is only brought to a realization of her selfishness when she finds it to be her own.

REX.

THE WRONG ROAD (July 17).—In a small hamlet upon the ocean sands, there live an old fisherman and his two daughters. Betty, the more attractive of the two, having won the heart of Bob, a youthful fisherman, whom her sister, Jane, also loves with a silent devotion. At the opening of the story Bob has several affectionate scenes with Betty, in which her lack of sincerity and depth are manifested in deep contrast with the character of Jane. Joe, an artist, lured by the picturesque seacoast, happens upon the peaceful settlement and is immediately attracted by the unusual beauty of Betty, whose services he manages to enlist to pose.

Bob, who has felt a gradual indifference upon the part of Betty, later happens upon the scene in which his betrothed confesses her love to the young artist. Overcome by his emotion, the young fisherman demands that she choose between them, and Betty, innocently following the inclination of her heart, leaves with Joe. Bob, heartbroken at the loss, bears his grief in silence, while in a faraway city, Betty has become the mistress of the artist. Jane, whose unspoken love for Bob has become intensified by the past, one day, in pensive mood, unaware of Bob's presence, carves his name upon the sand. His eyes trace the letters which tell him of her love. A tearful confession follows, and the noble-hearted youth gathers her in his arms in sympathy.

As time passes, Betty's youthful beauty shows signs of fading and Joe has grown weary of her. One day she finds proof of his infidelity, and heartbroken, leaves to seek refuge in the midst of other evils. Bob, whose sympathy for Jane has ripened into love, has taken her to his cottage—a wife. In those humble walls love reigns supreme, in happy anticipation of their coming child.

Betty, heartbroken and weary of life's struggles, decides at last to return to her old home. She meets her aged father at the gate, who, still embittered, denies her entrance. Learning of the marriage of Bob and Jane, she goes to the seashore, where she gives way to tears and remorse. The next day the repentant father finds her hat and coat upon the sands to tell the story of her peaceful rest.

HIS WEAKNESS CONQUERED (July 20).—Jack Hamilton, in childhood, is afraid of snakes. His mother humors his weakness until he arrives at a point where anything resembling a serpent throws him into a frenzy. Twenty years later he becomes a prosperous business man, but his fear has grown with him until it has almost assumed the proportions of insanity. A friend calls at Jack's office, wearing a snake scarf pin. Jack becomes frantic, until the friend removes the pin. Jack is in love with Mary Charleson, a charming young widow, who has a little daughter. This love is returned, but she fears for his health, and tells him she cannot marry him until he has conquered his weakness. Mrs. Hamilton entertains some guests at a week-end house party at her hunting lodge. Mary purchases a snake ring for Jack as a birthday gift, while there, and the effect upon him when she presents it alarms her.

Mary's little daughter is given a Chinese paper snake and thinks it will be a great joke to frighten Jack with it while he is reading a book. The child sneaks up upon him and drops the snake over the book Jack is reading. Jack, in a frenzy at sight of the snake, strikes at it with a heavy paper cutter and hits the child on the head, felling her to the floor. Crazed by his act, he rushes from the house and flees into the woods. The child is attended to and the guests start in search of Jack. They find him, late at night, on the verge of insanity, and bring him back to the lodge. Later a friend suggests a cure by auto-suggestion. He makes Jack place his hand over his, telling him he holds a snake. Jack cowers and trembles, but the friend suggests that Jack let his mind be guided by his. When the friend opens his hand, he holds a watch, and Jack is brought to a realization of the folly of superstition and imagination. The child is brought into the room, carrying a snake. Jack looks at the snake and then takes it from the child.

GREETINGS

WHOEVER you are or wherever you're from, so long as you're a pilgrim to the motion picture Mecca and its great Exposition, we hold out the right hand of fellowship and give you greetings. Likewise, so far as lies within our power, we bid you "Welcome To Our City." We hope you will have a glorious time and never forget it.

Meanwhile, if you should find yourself with a little spare time on your hands, come around and we will show you our latest state right feature; a five-reel gem from Europe, entitled:

"THE MYSTERIES OF PARIS"

If at any time you feel that you would like to be the owner of the rights for your State to the greatest feature film in all the world, just step around to our handsome new offices and we will show you the great

"LES MISERABLES"

Remember — our offices are not far from the Grand Central Palace. You are certain to be near them a half dozen times, at least, during the day. Any time you are near 42nd Street and Broadway you're near us.

ECLECTIC FILM CO.

110 West 40th St. New York City

ECLECTIC FILMS TRADE MARK PARIS-NEW YORK

"THE CREAM OF THE EUROPEAN MARKET SELECTED FOR AMERICA"

Telephone: Bryant 302

PLEASE NOTE OUR NEW ADDRESS

IMP.

A POSSIBILITY (2 reels—July 14).—Some clubmen in New York watching the Suffragette parade from the club window, discuss the possibility of the final success of the suffragette movement, and the whimsical idea strikes one man to picture to the others what will happen in the future when women have become not only the equal, but the stronger sex. The story then tells of the simple farm boy who is wooed by the big-hearted farmer girl, and how the boy, while coy and coquettish of the girl's advances, still is enough fond of the girl, and how this gently budding romance is shattered by the advent in the village of an unscrupulous and wealthy club woman from the city, who steals away the country boy's heart by her tales of the gay life of the city. The boy remains true to the virtuous principles taught him by his honest parents, but does consent to an elopement, believing, however, that the handsome woman from the city intends to marry him on their arrival in New York. Their getaway is successfully made, and the boy's irate mother awakes too late to reach the unscrupulous woman with a shot gun and the pair are well on their way.

Fortunately for the simple minded boy, his country girl has suspected something wrong and followed the car to the city. There she succeeds in frustrating the villainous schemes of the unscrupulous club woman, and shows the weak but still honest boy how close he has come to a life that could only lead to shame and remorse. The country girl has a terrific struggle with the club woman for the safety of the weeping boy, but finally returns the now thoroughly awakened young man to his weeping father and irate mother. She succeeds in softening mother's stern wrath toward the erring boy, who has been more sinned against than sinning, and finally the young man, recognizing true and honest love, goes into the strong arms she holds out for him.

HER NERVE (July 17).—Violet Horner, the relief operator, arrives at Lonesome Valley Station. Upon alighting from the train she is met by the express agent, who is smitten with her charms. He takes her in and introduces her to the other operator, whom she is to relieve. The two operators become friends and practically ignore the agent, who, angered at this, at his first opportunity insults the girl, for which he is knocked down by Barrows, the other operator. He is later discharged.

The shipment of money arrives for a mine near by. The agent contrives to open the safe and get this. Violet catches him in the act. While he is at work on the safe, Barrows, who is in the other room, gets a wire to the effect that the bridge at Mars Creek is burning and to stop train 44. The agent hears this, rushes into the telegraph room, knocks Barrows down and ties him.

Violet climbs in through the window, takes the box containing the money, jumps out of the window and is seen by the agent, who chases her. There is a long chase in a motorboat and an automobile ride. Violet arrives in time to save the train, while the agent, in making a sharp turn in the road, is thrown from the auto and killed. Violet returns to the station, receives congratulations and promotion from headquarters.

BINKS ENDS THE WAR (July 19).—Binks and his family leave their cottage at Squedunk in charge of an oriental maid servant, and go to the city. As soon as they have departed, she and the valet next door, who is another oriental, arrange to hold a native festival in Binks' house, and invite a troupe of native acrobats, who are resting in a nearby city. They arrive and are quietly feasting when the master of the house unexpectedly returns and goes quietly to his room and gets in bed. Then a native girl gives them a characteristic dance and the applause awakens Binks, who dressed in pajamas, steals to the kitchen, but the orientals have sneaked into the closets. The maid tells him she is alone, but he sees a man's foot and drags him from under the table, and a struggle ensues. The native gives him a tough fight and the kitchen is wrecked and Binks is worsting the native, who gives the native war cry, and his fellow countrymen and women swarm on from all corners, and tackle Binks, who fights them away and rushes through the window and is chased down the street by the enraged foreigners. Binks runs into the village glee club and tells them that the war with the orientals has broken out in his kitchen. They scoff at him but his words are confirmed by a shower of sods, rocks, clubs and other missiles, which descends upon the glee club. Before they can recover from their surprise the furious foreigners tackle them and a terrific rough and tumble is on.

The constable rushes on with a shot gun, which explodes and the foreigners rush off one way, while the frightened country jays rush into the house. The foreigners get on a train and leave Squedunk forever. The next day the rubes are drawn up and Binks reads them this letter, which he has written:

"To the war department—Last night an Oriental army landed on our coast. We met the enemy and they are ours. They escaped. Consider the war scare as over. The citizens of Squedunk."

The war department receives this and all are happy to think that trouble has been averted.

NESTOR.

THE OPERATOR AND THE SUPERINTENDENT (July 16).—The lure of the West appeals so strongly to Ellen, seated in her tiny hall bedroom, that she determines to answer an advertisement for a telegraph operator for a western station. Ellen is successful in securing an appointment at Tempuch and is escorted to her new office by Wilson, the superintendent of the western division. A mutual attraction springs up between the two young people, and Wilson departs for his office, six miles distant, reluctantly. The freshness and beauty of the new operator attract the attention of one of the most notorious gamblers in Tempuch, who, after being scorned by Ellen, determines to win her. Later he proposes to her and in a rage at her refusal, advances toward her, but the timely advent of the superintendent saves Ellen from further unpleasantness. The gambler is, ordered away and the superintendent proposes to Ellen and is accepted. The gambler, returning, sees their fond embrace and vows vengeance. He secures a couple of ruffians and, in company with them, goes to Ellen's office, where, after a struggle, he makes her a prisoner, but not before Ellen, during the scuffle, has had an opportunity to send a call for help over the wire to Wilson. The gambler and his pals take Ellen to a shack, which the gambler has in the mountains.

Wilson, unable to get into communication with Ellen in response to her frantic call, secures a handcar and after a wild ride finds the office in confusion and his sweetheart missing. With the sheriff's posse he pushes after the gambler, who, seeing the posse at a distance, gags and binds Ellen and puts her in an old well under the shack. Wilson and his men are about to leave, having failed to find Ellen, when she accidentally hits her spur on a pipe running up to the room above. She taps her whereabouts in the Morse code on the pipe and Wilson quickly releases her, while the sheriff and his men keep the gambler and his pals covered. Needless to say a new operator is wanted at Tempuch at once.

THE TALE OF A HAT (July 18).—Mr. and Mrs. Gray have been married for many years and have arrived at that comfortable age when they should both be beyond the jealousy stage. Their daughter, Roby, is secretly in love and engaged to Jack Newton, but father does not approve of him, and orders him away from the house. But love always finds a way, and the lovers manage to arrange a meeting at the house unbeknown to father.

Mr. Gray buys his wife a new hat—a peach of a creation—and ma tries it on and leaves it on the table. Jack calls while Ruby is seeing how nice she looks in her mother's hat and the rascal kisses her. Pa appears in the doorway and as the fashions demand exaggerated hats, their faces are not discernible and pa breaks out into a cold sweat, says "My Lord! It's Ma!" and collapses. He sees Jack's hat on the table and as the young couple hide and ma enters with her usual smile, pa accuses her of flirting and jams his fist through Jack's perfectly good tile.

Ma is properly devastated and retires to weep more comfortably, while pa does a Marathon up and down the carpet and says impolite words. Jack and Ruby come from their hiding places and look ruefully at each other as they recognize their success in breaking up of the happy home life. Jack resolves to tell pa, while Ruby undertakes the task of enlightening ma. Ruby finds her mother and confesses, but Jack does not get the right opportunity. Mrs. Gray tells her daughter to go and get her father and she will give him a good lesson.

The maid tries on the fatal hat and the butler takes the chance to kiss her. Ruby sees this and takes the butler for Jack and forthwith discharges the maid. Jack is seen hiding by the butler and is taken for a burglar. The butler hastens to tell Mr. Gray. Meanwhile Ruby gives Jack fits and telling him she hates him, will never speak to him again, and to leave the house forever.

The police are 'phoned for and arrive, and Jack is about to be taken to durance vile when explanations are made and all the mystery is cleared up.

WHEN HIS COURAGE FAILED (July 18).—Mrs. Dean is an ardent suffragette. She rules her husband with a hand of iron. Things get even more unpleasant for him when his wife joins the Woman's Temperance Union. One night Mr. Dean stays downtown with the boys and imbibes a little too much. His courage fails him when he starts for home and he implores his two friends to go home with him. Mrs. Dean is awaiting him and ready for battle. She puts the two friends to flight and refuses to let her husband enter the house. The cook, hearing the noise, gets up and takes Mr. Dean's part, and Mrs. Dean discharges her on the spot. This leaves Mrs. Dean in the house alone and victorious.

Mr. Dean is in despair, so he goes to his two friends for advice. Things look very blue for

WE CAN HURRY
YOUR ORDER OUT
STAFFORD Chairs excel all others.
Heavy Five Ply seats and backs.
The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.
STEEL CHAIRS TOO
We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.
ASK FOR CATALOG 808
E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Make Your Own Moving Pictures!
Our Ideal Motion Picture Camera Does the Work!
Excellently constructed, beautifully finished, simple to operate, fitted up with a Bausch & Lomb Zeiss Tessar Lens, 1. C., F 3-5, one of the best and fastest lenses in the market; holds 200 feet stock.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue
PRICE COMPLETE $75.00
Motion Picture Camera Co., Inc.
Dept. A 5 West 14th Street, New York

TO THE TRADE
Negatives Developed. 1c per ft.
PRINTS MADE ON
Eastman Stock.... 4½c per ft.
(In quantities over 5,000 feet)
Including Tinting and Toning
TITLES, 8c per ft.
Prompt deliveries. All work guaranteed.
Commercial Motion Pictures Co., Inc.
102 W. 101st Street, New York City
Telephone, 8724 Riverside

Stop the Leakage
Use Corcoran Tanks.
No. 6 price list is a money saver.
A. J. CORCORAN, INC.
11½ John Street New York City

THE SIMPSON SOLAR SCREEN
The only Metallic Screen without seams, patented. Buy the real thing. Beware of imitations
ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.
No. 113 W. 132nd St., N. Y. City

MOVING PICTURE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT
Used and Highly Endorsed by the United States Army.
BIGGEST SENSATION IN THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Can be operated by a boy 10 years old. One customer writes:
"Plant running like a top and delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house. Costs us about one-tenth as much as public service. Also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day."
Write to-day for Bulletin 101. It is a mighty interesting booklet.
(163) DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. 102, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

$25 BUYS the 1913 [300 FOOT SPECIAL] DERBY

ENGLAND'S GREATEST CLASSIC RACE
THE SADDEST DERBY EVER RUN

SEE EMILY DAVISON, MILITANT SUFFRAGETTE, THROW KING GEORGE'S HORSE; "CRAGANOUR," THE FAVORITE, DISQUALIFIED FOR BUMPING; THE RANK OUTSIDER, "ABOYEUR," WIN THIS EXCITING RACE :: :: :: :: ::

THESE THREE EPISODES ARE ALL CLEARLY AND DISTINCTLY SHOWN UPON THE SCREEN — MEN WHO KNOW SWEAR THAT GAUMONT'S FIFTEEN CAMERA MEN MUST HAVE HAD INSIDE INFORMATION ABOUT THESE HAPPENINGS :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: ::

BE UP-TO-DATE; BE FIRST IN YOUR TERRITORY

WIRE: Gaumont Flushing, N.Y.

YOUR PROGRAM IS NOT COMPLETE
YOUR RECEIPTS CANNOT IMPROVE

YOUR PATRONS CANNOT BE SATISFIED
YOUR THEATRE CANNOT BE POPULAR

UNLESS YOU SHOW

KARAMBO In 5 Parts

The LONGEST and the BEST detective story in the world. (We mean it.)

GENISSAR In 4 Parts

The most dangerous bandit measuring his wits against KARAMBO, the celebrated detective.

IN THE DAYS OF KING SOLOMON In 4 Parts

Great, Spectacular, Educational, Interesting. A REAL FEATURE

JAIL BIRDS In 3 Parts

The kind of Feature your audience likes.

THE WEAKER VESSEL
In 3 parts (colored)

FOLLY AND REMORSE
In 3 Parts

THE DEVIL'S DAUGHTER
In 3 Parts

FROM THE GRAVE TO THE THRONE
In 3 Parts

REVENGE
In 3 Parts

AND OTHERS

If you care to run these features you MUST apply to

FEATURE FILM CO.
127 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
108 East 12th Street, New York

little Mr. Dean until one of his friends gets an idea. He thinks that if once Mr. Dean can get into the house he can assert himself and prove who is master. Knowing the cook is fired, one of the friends dresses himself up as a woman cook and goes to Mrs. Dean and applies for the position and is engaged by her. The supposed cook tells Mrs. Dean that her things will arrive in a basket that afternoon and to kindly take charge of it. Mrs. Dean agrees and tells the cook to come to work the next morning. The friends concoct a scheme in which Mr. Dean is to be put in the basket and to be delivered to his residence as the new cook's things. They bribe two expressmen to handle the basket carefully. The basket arrives as Mrs. Dean is putting up a picture of a Suffragette president in the dining room. The two men leave, chuckling. Mrs. Dean sees the reflection of the basket in a mirror nearby. Mr. Dean's courage is beginning to fail and he gently raises the cover of the basket as his wife looks in the mirror, and he lowers it again. For once Mrs. Dean is thoroughly frightened. She makes a wild jump for the basket and sits upon it. She thinks it contains a desperate character. She grabs the telephone and soon has the entire police force out.

They arrive and the basket is taken to the station. The judge sits waiting and Mrs. Dean is surrounded by her friends. The basket is opened and Mr. Dean is brought out more dead than alive. One look at him and Mrs. Dean decides to forgive him. She falls into his arms in a faint, while the courtroom is cleared.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 69—(July 2).—The Coaching Marathon.—The event of the London society season is run from Hyde Park to Richmond, England.

Water Sports.—Many amateur swimmers compete at the First Annual Aquatic Meet, New York, N. Y.

Royalty in Berlin.—King George and Queen Mary of England are welcomed by the Kaiser and Kaiserin upon their recent visit to the German capital.

Intercollegiate Rowing Regatta.—The Classic eight-oar 'varsity race of four miles on the Hudson is won by the Syracuse crew, Poughkeepsie, New York.

Rose Carnival.—The annual season's festival is a riot of floats and flowers, Portland, Ore.

Jubilee Handicap.—The greatest of the year is won by "Absolute" at Kempton Park, London, England.

First Electric Submarine—Is successfully launched at the Mare Island Navy Yard, San Francisco, Cal.

Weekly Fashion Hint.—Chic styles in gowns and frocks. (Shown by courtesy of The Ladies' Home Journal Pattern Company.)

Exciting Balloon Races.—England's amateur aeronauts compete for the Dunville trophy, Burlingham, England.

Shriners at Fargo.—The Shriners of the Northwest hold their Annual Field Drills and Exercises at Fargo, N. Dak.

Washington to Chicago Relay.—The Boy Scouts start on their long relay, carrying a message from President Wilson to Mayor Harrison of Chicago.

London Celebration.—Eight thousand children take part in the Empire Day parade and are reviewed by the Duchess of Fife, Princess Maud and others of England's nobility.

Thrilling Yacht Races.—Glen Cove and course trophies are closely contested for at the Sixty-sixth Annual Regatta of the New York Yacht Club.

Who's Who in Pictures.—John Johnson (Universal).

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

AMERICAN.

TRUTH IN THE WILDERNESS (2 parts, July 14).—Bruce Willard, an employee in the office of the president of a mining company, becomes dissatisfied with his lot and demands an opportunity to earn more money. He is offered the chance to go to Mexico. His success is to be rewarded with an interest in the business.

His sweetheart, Helen Courtney, a society butterfly, promises to await his return to become his wife. Her choice is not that of her mother's and she readily bestows her affections on one George Scott, a wealthy but aged gentleman.

Bruce Willard, spurred on by the prospects of success and happiness, puts forth his best efforts and is successful beyond his fondest expectations. His presence at the mining camp has meant much to Mary, the saloonkeeper's daughter, who has been in constant attendance upon him. His every kind look and deed have meant a thrill of joy to her and when he prepares to return home in answer to a call from the president of his company, the heart strings of the poor girl are sorely torn. Returning home, Bruce finds that his sweetheart is betrothed to Scott. Willard's success, however, causes Helen to revert to her old lover only to be discarded for her fickleness. He returns to his Mexican camp where Mary finds him more responsive and soon the world holds brighter views to both lovers.

Developing and Printing, Tinting or Toning.
Also Titles to Order
Shortest Time, Perfect Work Guaranteed.
Repairing or New Equipment To Order.
STAR "A" SHOP
129 W. Chicago Avenue - Chicago, Ill.

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
Send for Booklet
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176 N. State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

Junior Professional Camera
and Film Making Outfit, simplest method, none better. World's greatest productions made with this camera. Expert advice and guarantee. Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Perforators, Raw Film, Lenses. Developing done, whole building to the business Write for catalogue.
Eberhard Schneider, 219 Second Ave., N. Y.

We have a Catalogue of full line of Moving Picture Machine repair parts ready to put in your machine at reduced prices. We make them, and for that reason can sell them very low. We also sell Stereopticons for $12.00; Calcium Jets, $3.00; 100 Carbons, $2.00; Condensers, 55c; Arc Lamps, $2.25; Stereopticon Lenses, 50c.; Slide Carriers, 25c; Moving Picture Objectives, $3.75; Jackets, $1.75; Ticket Holders, 75c.; Rheostats, $4.00; 50 Candle Power Stereopticon Lamps, 75c.
L. HETZ, 302 East 23rd Street, New York City

FULTON'S A-to-Z LIST
Pocket Edition 120 Pages
Illustrates, describes and prices everything used in or about the Motion Picture Theatre and in the allied industries. Costs you nothing. Worth its weight in gold.
E. E. FULTON —152— W. LAKE STREET CHICAGO

TRY US
WE do developing and printing, make titles, furnish Cameras and Camera Men.
Films Renovated by our secret Parisian Process, which thoroughly cleans, polishes and SOFTENS the film.
Price $1.00 per reel. Lots of ten or more, 75 cents.
PARISIAN MFG. AND FILM RENOVATING CO.
4940 Wentworth Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.

TO ERR IS HUMAN (July 17).—In a little country home not unlike any number of other similar places securely tucked away in the embrace of orchard and grape arbors and the many other little touches of beauty so deftly applied by nature, is a little domicile in which a widow with her three children enjoy the happiness that would naturally come to a family in like circumstances.

The older brother has taken upon himself the father's duties and he watches and guards over the interests of his mother and sisters, one of which is in the very tenderest of years. His responsibility rests upon him to such an extent that he even takes upon himself the right to determine the friends of his sister, his junior but by a small margin. Steve, a clean cut young fellow, pays modest attentions to the girl and meets with approval, but is unceremoniously ordered from the premises. The brother unwittingly becomes a bully and when later his mother meets an accidental death he is positive that Steve is guilty of murder. The evolution of the story and the part little Helen played make the story the more interesting and lay the basis for a sequel exemplifying "To forgive is divine."

AT THE HALF-BREED'S MERCY (July 19).—When Ed. leaves home to deposit his employer's money in the town bank, he takes affectionate leave from his wife and little dreams of the pitfalls that confront him before the day is over—how he would become dishonest, disloyal, brutal and a coward before he would again see the sweet countenance that radiated inspiration and love into every fibre of his big frame.

The tide turns quickly and from the hunted criminal he becomes the worshipped hero. Twice the daughter of the saloonkeeper is rescued from the clutches of death. The mad rush of horses on the country road as they are urged on to aid in the administration of justice give rise to a singular condition of anxiety as one half hopes that justice will be done and at the same time fervently wishes that the case go by default.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 27, (July 2).—Long Beach, Cal.—The "Cage" submarine breaks the 24-hour record in establishing a new 36-hour submersion record. The Mutual Weekly was the first to wire congratulations.

New York City.—The animals in Central Park are removed to their summer quarters.

The Fashion in New York and Paris.

Washington, D. C.—Boys take first swim at the bathing beach.

Brookland, England.—Auto races.

New Orleans, La.—A huge barge is launched and slips sideways into Lake Borgne Canal.

Paris, France.—The taxicab, in which both children of Isadora Duncan were drowned, removed from the Seine.

Jersey City, N. J.—The babies, too, have their turn.

St. Louis, Mo.—Motor races.

Munich, Bavaria.—One hundred houses afire.

Ridgewood, N. J.—The "Three Blondins," of the New England Balloon Company, perform a thrilling parachute drop.

Berlin, Germany.—King George V., of England, arrives in Berlin to witness the royal wedding and is received by the Kaiser. The three most powerful monarchs of Europe are present at Princess Louise's wedding.

The Next Great International Polo Match.

RELIANCE.

A RURAL ROMANCE (July 7).—Nancy Hall, the village belle, and Jack Fisher, a farm hand, are sweethearts. Ernest Ashe, Jack's employer, a wealthy grower, chances upon them and is taken with Nancy's beauty. Ashe pays court secretly to Nancy, until Jack, stumbling upon them, learns the truth. They quarrel and Jack is discharged. Infuriated, Ashe continues his work of collecting rents. Old Tom Moore is in arrears in his rent and trembles at the approach of Ashe. Spying his tenant's horse, Ashe insists upon its surrender for debt. Moore has to submit and tries in vain to subdue his grandson, Teddy, who is heartbroken at the loss. Next day Jack goes to collect his wages from Ashe. Directed by his fellow-workers he meets Ashe coming out on Beauty, Moore's horse. They settle their account. Two bright eyes are watching them, for Teddy is trying to enter the stable. Looking after Jack in vile temper, Ashe returns to the road, where Beauty has wandered to the field to graze. This provokes him to brutality. As Teddy sees him lash his pet he is seized with blind fury, and picking up a rock he hurls it at Ashe, who falls. Horrified at his act, Teddy dashes across the fields and to the railroad crossing, where he crawls inside a freight car, crying himself to sleep. Five minutes after directing Jack to Ashe, the farm hands find Ashe unconscious. Jack is suspected. Meanwhile Jack meets Nancy and is reproaching

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
Moving Picture Machines and Films.
Theatre Brokerage Exchange,
440 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

This is No Economizer

A SWELL SHOW

of the Much-Talked-About

HALLBERG

A. C. to D. C.

ECONOMIZER

is now on at the

Grand Central Palace, N. Y. City

in the center of the Main Floor, in conjunction with the exhibit of the United Electric Light & Power Co.

MR. EXHIBITOR: If you come to the Show, don't fail to take in this exhibit and to call at my office and show rooms. If you cannot come, send for my new special free catalogue of Hallberg A.C. to D.C. and other Economizers.

FACTORY SELLING HEADQUARTERS FOR

POWERS, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES

"HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS

"HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS

MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I Equip Theatres Completely

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalog, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail

---

J. H. HALLBERG

36 East 23d Street, New York

her, when he is interrupted by the law for the murder of Ashe. Protesting innocence, he is dragged to jail, while Nancy flees to the Ashe home. Ashe regains consciousness and sees Nancy enter his chamber. Fearing death and believing her the cause, he denounces her. Nancy is turned out of doors. She realizes her folly. Teddy, in the mean time, is carried off in a Western-bound train. He is found and cared for by trainmen who finally return him to his home, where he is snatched to his granddad's breast and sobs out his tale. Nancy happens in to console the old man and hears the tale. Grabbing Teddy, she dashes off to the jail, where all may learn of Jack's innocence. Nancy then turns away very sorrowfully, but is followed by Jack and all is forgiven.

THE WAGER (July 9).—To prove his argument that any child reared in the right atmosphere will turn out well, young John Dean, millionaire, adopts a child from the slums and has her raised with little Edith, the child of his friend, Mr. Ellis. The children are of the same age and grow up together as sisters. When the girls are eighteen, Dean returns from abroad and his pride in his young ward turns to love. They are very happy together. Edith has become infatuated with the good-looking chauffeur and Mary tries in every way to take her thoughts from him. One day she drops a letter from him in the library. Dean and her father find it, and as they are puzzling over it, Mary enters, looking for something, and to save Edith, claims the note as hers. Dean is heartbroken and Mr. Ellis says, "I told you so." Mrs. Ellis agrees. Edith, impatient at Mary's long absence, rushes down, and seeing Mary's plight, confesses. Mary is about to go away forever when Dean rushes after her and blames himself for doubting her. He offers her his name and his heart. And as she has learned to love him, she accepts both.

ASHES (2 parts, July 12).—An old man, alone in his mansion, decides to give a dinner to the memories of the girls he loved and lost. He has the table decked with garlands and at each place he puts a bouquet of the flowers most representative of the girl who would occupy that place if she herself were there instead of his memory of her.

There is a bunch of violets at the first plate. As he stoops over the fragrant blossoms, he lives again the first romance of his life when he met and fell in love with pretty Betty, a country lass. This was in the first days of his youth and her refusal of him almost broke his heart. Seeing her in the arms of his more fortunate rival, he left the village, and there the memory of the violets ends. There is a bunch of lillies of the valley at the next plate. They bring back a girl just as white and cold as the flower. She was a society belle and he met her when he first visited the big city. She said she loved him and he believed her; but when a richer man proposed, she cast him aside for wealth. Her wedding was the talk of the town, but the boy did not wait for it. He never saw her again. Orchids at the next plate, their purple depths held sweet memories of a bewitching face, the face of the lovely Countess, whose most ardent admirer he was when he first went up to Washington, a young attache in the diplomatic service. She pretended that she loved him and he was very happy. But, into the midst of his joy came the shock of discovering that his sweet Countess was a foreign spy, who intended to use him to gain information she could not get any other way. He left Washington at once to forget her. Red roses! What memories their perfume held! That night in Paris when he first met the dark-eyed Spanish dancer, Carmencita. How he loved her, and how she loved him, until her lover, the Count, challenged him to a duel on her account. Then Carmencita realized that it was not the American to whom her heart was given, after all. She rushed to the duelling ground to prevent bloodshed, but wholly for the Count's sake.

Returning to America, an older, wiser man, he finds his ideal in the charming daughter of some old friends. Realizing that he is very rich, this girl's parents insist upon her accepting him. But he discovers in time that her heart is given to his secretary and for her sake he gives her up. The sweet peas at this last plate are perhaps the dearest flower of all to him. As he rises to toast these ladies of his past, the stem of his wine glass snaps and he falls across the table, dead. An overturned candle sets fire to the draperies and before many minutes each flower is reduced to a small heap of ashes.

KAY-BEE.

THE RED MASK (2 parts, July 18).—Red Mask, a daring bandit, has cast terror in the region of Bald Eagle, Ariz. Always appearing with a red mask upon his face, and vanishing as mysteriously as if the earth had swallowed him, Red Mask was the cause of much worriment to Sheriff Burns, who was completely baffled. The public feeling against the sheriff for his failure to capture the bandit was growing more and more intense, when the government decided to take a hand, owing to Red Mask's boldness in interfering with mail trains.

John Ruskin, of the United States Secret Service, was despatched to Bald Eagle to assist Sheriff Burns, but before presenting his letter of introduction he decided to do a little quiet work. He trailed Red Mask, and in a thrilling battle the detective was killed. The bandit searched the dead man's pockets, and, finding the letter, he boldly presented himself to the sheriff. Molly Burns was a winsome lass, and the bandit fell in love with her. The body of the strange man was found, and the excited populace made a demonstration against the sheriff, as it was evident that this was more of the work of Red Mask. Red Mask, moved by his love for Molly, decided to reform, and built beautiful air castles of the future. His dreams were rudely interrupted by the receipt of a telegram addressed to John Ruskin, the man he was impersonating, from the dead man's mother, saying that she was coming to join him.

Red Mask knows that his game is up, and determines to make one more haul before quitting his evil life. The paymaster of the Red Eagle smelters is expected with the monthly payroll, and he successfully holds him up. He is seen by the sheriff, however, and a desperate battle takes place. Red Mask, mortally wounded, gets the drop on the sheriff, but his heart fails him as he thinks of Molly, and he spares his pursuer. Before passing away, the bandit tells the sheriff why he did not shoot, and reveals the hiding place of the loot.

BRONCHO.

HEART THROBS (2 parts, July 16).—John Acres, of Hampton, Va., obtains a position as school teacher in Lakeville, Vt., and falls in love with pretty Mary Bates. Mary's mother, however, wishes her daughter to marry Jim Groves, an elderly, wealthy man. Mary's heart has been completely won by the handsome Southern boy, and she makes it very plain to Mr. Groves that she will never marry him.

The war breaks out and John receives a letter from his father entreating him to come back home and fight for the stars and bars. Alarmed, Mary asks him to take her with him, as she fears that the irrepressible Groves, with the support of her mother, will force her to marry him if deprived of the support of her lover's presence. John and Mary are married, Mrs. Bates and Groves arriving at the minister's house a few moments too late to interrupt the wedding. The mother is very angry, and vows never to speak to her daughter again.

John brings his bride to his home, where she is pleasantly received. Groves becomes a northern officer, and John goes to the front at the head of a Confederate company. Nearly a year later a terrible battle takes place near Hampton, just as Mary is about to become a mother. Forging ahead, Captain Groves drives the Confederates back, and, harassed by sharpshooters, takes possession of the Acres home. Driven frantic by the sight of the Union soldiers in his father's home, John leads his men in a desperate charge and drives the Union soldiers away, though he is mortally wounded in a personal encounter with Groves, who is killed. Before dying, John kisses his new-born babe,

After the war Mary goes back to her mother with her child, but the stern old lady refuses to forgive her daughter. Mary is given shelter by a kindly neighbor, and goes to work for the maintenance of herself and her child. Several years elapse, and grief and hard work shatter Mary's health, and she is finally confined to her bed. She grows steadily worse, and the doctors hold out no hope for her recovery.

By chance, Mrs. Bates meets Mary's child, and the scorn of the little one stings the old woman. She begins to see herself in a new light, and finally, after a terrific mental battle, she finds that her love for her own flesh and blood is stronger than her stubborn will, and she goes—very penitently—to her daughter's bedside and begs forgiveness; and as the sick woman's eyes light up with pleasure and she clasps her arms about her mother's neck, it is apparent that the Grim Reaper's visit will be delayed for many years.

MUTUAL EDUCATIONAL.

FUNNICUS ATTENDS A FAIR (July 3).—Funnicus' parents, M. and Mme. Dupont, introduce the mischievous collegian to the captivating Mme. Du Hamel, who is their house-guest. Papa Dupont proceeds to take his pleasure in the garden. Mama Dupont is called away by the maid. Funnicus Dupont remains to entertain the stout but romantic visitor.

Funnicus makes affectionate overtures. Madame's heart responds. Funnicus grows bolder. As he kneels to implore a wee kiss, papa and mama enter the room and pour forth vials of wrath upon the precocious fledgling. As papa seizes his

SHERLOCK HOLMES SERIES
Eight subjects to choose from—two reels each. Territory in Indiana, Kentucky, Wisconsin (south of Green Bay), Illinois (north of Springfield).
Almo Feature Film Co. (Inc.)
D. W. McKinney, Mgr.
36 W. Randolph St. Chicago
Phone, Randolph 2345

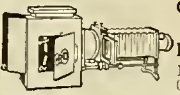
"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
130 Kearny St., San Francisco. Cal.

SOUTHERN FILM SERVICE
Every Motion Picture Accessory.
Distributors Nicholas Power Products.
Phone, Preston 3162.
Southern Pacific Building :: HOUSTON, TEXAS

The Strelinger catalogue of
BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
tells why direct current is very much better than alternating current for moving picture shows.
Send for it.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

Changeable Illuminated
PROGRAM SIGN
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE
ZENITH MFG. CO.
Box 252 Cincinnati, Ohio

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories



CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO.
Large Line of Edison Goods. Established 1899.

McCRAY & McCRAY
Amusement Brokers
Dealers in
Everything for the Theatre
We sell it for less—Write for list.
306 Madison St. Fairmont, W. Va.

ELECTRIC EXHAUST FANS
Twenty-four-inch, $80. Thirty-inch, $110. New 16" Straight Alternating Current Fans, $12.50 each. All General Electric make and for alternating current, 1 phase, 60 cycle, 110 volt.
GEORGE BENDER
82 Centre Street, New York City

The Old Reliable
BULL DOG CEMENT
AND ONE DROP OIL
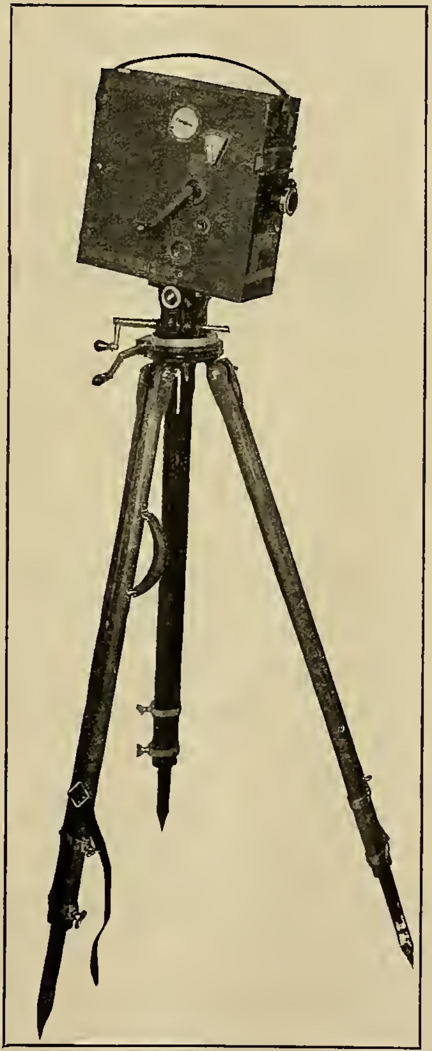
At Your Exchange
ONE DROP OIL CO., 15 S. Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

HOW ABOUT VENTILATING Your Theatre?
Our system of single heat transmission, the most economical in first cost and operation. We manufacture and install complete heating and ventilating equipments in accordance with the most rigid ventilating laws.
B. F. REYNOLDS & CO., 412-14 Dearborn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE FAMOUS

American Professional MOTION PICTURE CAMERA

High Class Scientific Motiographic Apparatus



Proven by Test the World's Very Best

Perforators
Tripods
Printer's and Complete
Studio and Dark
Room Equipment

AGENTS FOR
EASTMAN RAW MOTION PICTURE FILM

SEND FOR CATALOGUE A

AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO.

617-631 West Jackson Boulevard - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

child's ears the fair Madame Du Hamel intercedes in his behalf. Grateful Funnicus is led away and locked in a room so that he cannot go to the fair.

Is Funnicus subdued? Nay, nay, hardly! He gaily improvises the most practical means of exit from his dungeon and arrives at the fair in time to confound his respected parents. Madame Du Hamel again intercedes for him. Bravo! Bravo! Funnicus is pardoned. With the protecting angel by his side he proceeds to try every form of diversion the fair affords.

Finally, to impress his angel, Funnicus daringly exhibits himself in a lion's cage as tamer. He is acclaimed by the admiring public, tenderly kissed by his enraptured parents and proudly escorted home by the fair though fat ideal of his heart.

JAPANESE GARDENS (July 3).—The Japanese stand pre-eminent as decorators in the history of the world. Chief among the curious yet beautiful things they cultivate, are miniature gardens. Most of us have seen specimens of the dwarfed trees which, although perhaps a century old, do not exceed a foot in height, still are perfect in shape, foliage and coloring. American fashionables, appreciating the quaint beauty of these miniature plants, employ them for banquet decorations, and within the compass of an ordinary dish-pan they may have a perfect reproduction in miniature of the lovely trees, bridges, waterways, rockeries and tea-houses which make the Japanese garden a triumph of landscape designing.

FUNNICUS' MOTHER-IN-LAW (July 10).—Funnicus again arrives home late from the office. His mother-in-law and his wife impatiently await him for dinner. The former sniffs the back of his coat. Aha! It exudes perfume. She leaves the room to examine his overcoat. Aha, again! She discovers a golden hair on it. Her daughter's hair is black. Trouble begins to brew. The weather indicates rain. Mama-in-law Trouille empties a nice fat bottle of indelible ink into the indispensable umbrella. The plot thickens.

Next morning she interrupts Funnicus' happy chat with his wife to remind him that he is already overdue at his office. Funnicus hurries away, taking with him the treacherous umbrella. On his way he meets friend Polichinelle and joins him at a nearby cafe in a happy smile. Friend Polichinelle also has an umbrella. They accidentally exchange. Mother-in-law's plot may not hatch after all! The two friends part to go their ways. Friend Polichinelle meets his dear little wife just at the moment a shower begins. He opens the inky umbrella. Alas, such consternation! The Polichinelles immediately become black beauties. To complicate matters, mama-in-law Trouille bounds at the scene. Thinking she beholds Gavroche with some fair inamorita, mama-in-law vents her ire fully on both poor creatures, before explanations can be made. The final scene shows mama-in-law eating out of triumphant Funnicus' hand and she gladly promises to repose more confidence in him in the future.

SAIGON (July 10).—This, one of the most important cities of Cochin-China, is now modernized by scores of beautiful houses, especially in the European quarters. Catinat street, one of the prettiest promenades, is shown; also these places of special interest: "The Palace of the Governor-General," "Law Courts," "The Cathedral" and "The Town Hall." Luxurious gardens of brilliant coloring form an ideal setting for these imposing buildings. At certain periods of the year the Saigon races are a meeting point for resident ultra-fashionables. The display of toilettes is superb, and curiously enough, the masculine attire is more attractive because uniform white with Colonial prevail. At the exit, hundreds of sedan chairs await to convey pleasure-seekers, and an important race to reach the city first invariably takes place. City of feasts and pleasure, commerce and work, Saigon has aptly become known as the Little Paris of the Orient.

EXCLUSIVE FILM CORPORATION

GAUMONT.

KINGS OF THE KENNELS (June 26).—Very few people are aware of the great attention lavished on the fleet greyhound. These dogs are very delicate when young, and in the case of a thoroughbred, which is regarded as a prospective champion, every care is given to its diet and grooming. Roomy kennels and spacious quarters are the outstanding features of their surroundings, while in the matter of food nothing but the best is given, every hound feeding from his own plate. Exercising is an important matter, and several fine young animals are seen going for their morning run. Some of the older dogs are shown enjoying a thorough rub down after a brisk gallop, and this very interesting film ends with a coursing match between two veterans.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE (July 1).—Partly from its position and partly from the lack of enterprise on the part of its owner, Cutletts' Cafe on Canine Avenue is in pretty bad shape from a business standpoint. More frequently than not it is the staff which consumes the delicatessen and other dainties set out on the menu, hence the desire of the proprietor to sell out. When the agent informs him that a prospective buyer is coming around to view the property but is afraid there will be "nothing doing" because of the lack of customers, Mr. Cutletts hits upon the brilliant yet simple expedient of giving free lunches at the time the buyer is due. The result is a fast increasing crowd necessitating the forming of a long queue of customers waiting for the places of the early arrivals. The buyer arrives on a very busy scene indeed, and goes away apparently delighted. Next morning the bills for the supplies begin to pour in, but although the sums are enormous Mr. Cutletts is so optimistic about the sale of the restaurant that he receives all his debtors with a smile of assurance. Imagine the poor man's feelings when he is informed that his friend the buyer was looking for a quiet little place with about a dozen steady customers, and will have none of Cutletts' Cafe. We leave the deluded Cutletts to the tender mercies of his creditors and a crowd of people looking for another free lunch.

ATOM LIFE IN THE DEEP (July 1).—The surface layer of the sea is peopled with an infinite number of little creatures to which the name "plankton" is given, who rely chiefly upon sea currents for movement. It is upon "plankton" that shoals of sardines, herrings, mackerel, etc., depend for nourishment. The film gives a highly interesting description of these tiny denizens of the sea, showing the catching of specimens in a silken net so finely woven that 20,000 meshes are enclosed to the square inch. Inspecting "plankton" under the microscope one is struck by the remarkable structure of these minute creatures; they have the strangest shape imaginable, while such movements as they possess are weird in the extreme, and the tiny fish vary in size from a thousandth to a fourth of an inch in length. The specimens shown include infusoria, pagures, copepodes, the obelia jellyfish and the parcellan crab.

TRICKS IN ALL TRADES (July 3).—Bobby is home for the vacation, yet has to spend a few hours every day in studious reading, and the task of memorizing "The Wreck of the Hesperus" on a sunny summer morning is so uncongenial that we are not surprised to see Bobby throw his book aside. It occurs to him that a chicken's life must be very uneventful, so he enters the run in order to give the fowls some excitement. As a chicken trainer he is not a success and following upon the pandemonium he creates, Bobby's mother presently hauls him forth. Papa is so worried by his erring son's escapades that he decides Bobby shall spend the rest of the vacation at his school, and accordingly writes a letter that is given to Julie to mail. Bobby gets hold of the missive before it is mailed and destroys it promptly. His parents' determined attitude has a wholesome effect upon Bobby, who now develops such a thirst for knowledge that nothing will induce him to leave his books. Papa relents and writes a telegram to cancel his letter, and Bobby is sent with the message. He tears up the blank and scatters it to the four winds, a passing beggar is the happy recipient of the 25 cents telegraph fee, and Bobby returns home in a happy mood.

THE PRODUCTION OF WINE IN FRANCE (July 3).—This interesting film gives a complete survey of the various processes from gathering the grape to filling the bottle. A small army of workers is seen plucking the bunches of grapes and carrying them to the wine-press building. The compressor is a solid cylindrical machine of substantial proportions which crushes the grapes in order to produce the sugary "wort" afterwards transformed into wine by fermentation. The sweet wine flows from the compressor into a trough from which it is conducted by pipes to the fermenting vats. The fermented "wort" is then taken to the bottling depot in large carboys. Here the wine is sampled for analysis, and if found good is casked and bottled. Frequently a particular vintage can only be pronounced excellent after years of standing.

SOLAX.

COOKING FOR TROUBLE (July 16).—John's breakfast is late on account of a flirtation between the cook and the iceman. John is angry and the cook leaves. John goes to business without his breakfast, while John's wife decides to try her hand at preparing lunch. When John goes home for lunch he finds safety pins in his soup, chicken that requires a steam saw to cut it, and the result is "a quarrel with Mary," who decides to go home to mother.

Mary misses her train, returns home and locks herself in her room. John comes home late in the evening, finds the house apparently empty and decides to cook himself a little supper. Among other things, he forgets to turn off the faucet in the kitchen sink and the result is when he goes to bed the kitchen is flooded, and the cook, who returns late at night, after a pleasant day's vacation, and finding the door locked, decides to enter through the kitchen window. After much aquatics, she is finally rescued from the depths of the kitchen ocean by John and forgiven after promising never to flirt with the iceman in the morning before breakfast.

THE INTRUDER (July 18).—Bob Craig, a woodsman, while hunting one day, stumbles over the body of Preston Crandall, a rich man from the East. Craig takes him to his cabin and with the

WE TRUST
YOU
Will Visit the
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
BOOTH
During the
International Convention
July 5th to July 12th

Orchestra Music
FOR MOVING PICTURES

Violin, Cornet and Drum parts have been added to the popular "Orpheum Collection" of piano music (dramatic and descriptive) for Moving Pictures. Practical for piano alone or any number of above instruments. Issued in two parts: No. 1 and No. 2.

Piano, 58 cents each; both No.'s $1.15
Violin, 40 cents each; both " 75c
Cornet, 35 cents each; both " 65c
Drums, 30 cents each; both " 55c

Send for free sample pages.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St., Chicago, Ill.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made salable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism for a fee of $2.

Exhibitors!

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
Box 70, Madison Square Station
New York City

EXHIBITORS,

Before installing TALKING PICTURES be sure and see

The Real Life Talking Motion Pictures

of which there are countless imitations on the market, many of which claim one or more qualifications, which are peculiar alone to

The Real Life Talking Motion Pictures

But the fact remains that

The Real Life Talking Motion Pictures

are the only talking pictures with the following exclusive and original patented features:

The apparatus for the REAL LIFE TALKING PICTURES can be installed in one hour's time, and can be operated from the booth by one man.

There is no scratching, metallic, or phonographic sound whatsoever.

Picture and voice synchronize perfectly.

The sound production is greatly enhanced by the use of several horns concealed about the auditorium. The mechanism can be attached to any make of machine and run automatically by your own operator.

You can give a performance as long as may be required, from five minutes to three hours.

Remember, the REAL LIFE TALKING PICTURES are the only talking pictures on the market that possess the above qualifications.

Service begins immediately and consists of SIX WEEKLY RELEASES, of the latest and most up to date subjects, including popular songs, operatic selections, dramatic and comedy talking sketches.

The State Rights for New Jersey have been purchased by

The Famous Players Exchange, Asbury Park, N. J.

The State Rights for Pennsylvania have been purchased by

The Pennsylvania Talking Picture Co., 211 No. 13th St., Phila., Pa.

The State Rights for Ohio have been purchased by

Real Life Talking Picture Co. of Ohio, 422 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio

With the exception of California and the States above mentioned, the entire State Rights for the United States and Canada are for sale.

For New York State apply direct to New York Office and Studio.

Real Life Talking Picture Company, Inc.

120-122 West 31st Street -:- New York

Exhibitions of the Real Life Talking Pictures given daily at our new studio, at the above address

help of his wife, nurses Crandall back to health. Crandall becomes infatuated with Craig's wife and takes advantage of Craig's absence on hunting trips to show his love for her. As it nears the day for his departure he tries to induce Mrs. Craig to flee with him, but she refuses. At last Crandall leaves, bidding them good-bye, and Craig leaves on his day's hunt. Crandall returns and makes a desperate appeal to Mrs. Craig. At last she gives in and leaves, taking her infant girl, Elsie, with her, much against Crandall's wishes. On his return, Craig finds the note written to him by his wife, telling of her love for Crandall.

Several years pass and we find Mrs. Craig leading an unhappy life in the home of Crandall in the East. His love had worn off soon after their elopement. One night Crandall is particularly abusive to Mrs. Craig and is suddenly called away on an important errand, leaving Mrs. Craig and little Elsie, now five years old, alone in the house. That night a burglar breaks in and Mrs. Craig bravely goes downstairs to investigate. She captures the burglar, who turns out to be Bob Craig, her husband, who had gradually drifted down the ladder after his wife's treachery. Craig, by a ruse, gains possession of her revolver and after telling of her treachery, etc., prepares to shoot her in revenge, when little Elsie appears in the room, clad in her nightgown. Elsie's appeal saves her mother's life. Crandall arrives and covers Craig with a revolver. Mrs. Craig, pretending allegiance to Crandall, gets possession of his revolver and frees Craig. He attempts to phone for the police, but Elsie cuts the wires. She begs Craig's forgiveness and receives it and he leaves, taking his wife and child with him, leaving Crandall fuming at his helplessness.

LUX.

THE TRAIN OF FIRE (July 11).—Denise is an orphan and lives with her grandfather, who loves her dearly. Her beauty gives birth to a violent passion in the heart of the squire, but his advances are sternly rebuffed, and he swears that he will have revenge upon Denise. Some time later the squire ruins himself at the gaming tables. Without wealth and without friends he at last accepts a job as fireman on the railway. In this position he discovers that the engine-driver with whom he works is none other than Denise's husband. He remembers the insult of former days and awaits an opportunity to avenge himself. This comes when Denise travels up to town one day in the train driven by her husband. The squire sets fire to the train, which dashes along wrapped in flames. Denise and her husband have a narrow escape, but the squire meets with a dreadful end.

GREAT NORTHERN.

WINNING A PRIZE (July 5).—Bertie and Flo are deeply in love with each other, but their admiration for each other is so sincere that it amounts to jealousy at times. They enter a restaurant and a quarrel ensues after Bertie has lifted his hat in salutation to two young women of his acquaintance. At this juncture a vender of lottery tickets appears on the scene and Bertie buys a double coupon, each side bearing the same number. During their quarrel the ticket is divided, Bertie taking his half and Flo hers. They separate, "never to meet again," and go on their ways, but not rejoicing. Neither will give in, but several days later a startling end comes when they both learn that their ticket has won a prize. It is not a money lottery, but one of those commercial affairs in which articles of household furniture are presented to the winners. Bertie and Flo hasten to the lottery office. By chance they are given seats together, but give no sign of recognition. Each claims the prize and each presents half the winning ticket. There is a whispered conversation among the lottery managers, and considerable delay before the truth is made known. The prize is a baby's perambulator, and according to the rules of the lottery concern, the prize cannot be divided. Then follows a number of humorous scenes, in which Bertie is made to push the perambulator to his lodgings. Of course the humorous side of the latter incident is the means of bringing about a reconciliation.

RAMO.

MAN AND WOMAN (July 9).—James Clark, an ambitious young lawyer, is too engrossed in business affairs to attend a social affair with his wife. The young wife feels she is being neglected and her friends persuade her to attend the reception regardless of her husband's wishes.

While there, she meets Carl von Liebohen, a musician, and a too friendly intimacy springs up between the young wife and the musician. The husband is too busy to notice any change in his wife's actions. One evening the musician gives a supper party in his apartments and the young wife attends. After the supper, the young wife is detained by the musician and it is then that she realizes the follies of her actions. The musician avows his love—and the young wife, frightened into sensibility, hastens home. She now realizes her own love for her husband.

The musician broods into despondency. He sends the wife a message; that since she has refused his love he will seek consolation in death. The wife hurries to the musician's apartment, but too late to prevent his death. Out of the dead man's hand she takes a note. The musician is dead, and the young wife escapes unseen from the house. The police enter upon the scene. A strange man is seen leaving the house. He is caught and brought to the house where the dead musician is discovered. All indications point to him as the murderer and the man is arrested.

The affair has caused considerable comment. The young husband has been engaged to defend the accused man's case. The ambitions of the young lawyer spurs him into the realms of fame. His wife has possession of the two letters that would vindicate the accused man. The lawyer's case is a hard one. Circumstantial evidence is too strong against the prisoner. On the day of the great trial the wife attends and listens to the evidence, which points to the accused man's conviction. The great ordeal and strain of this conviction prompts her to her better self and she confesses all to her husband. The young wife takes the witness stand and tells all.

A DOG-GONE BARON (July 16).—Adolph Shultz sat in the little room behind his little delicatessen shop and cursed the fate that saw fit to cast him for a delicatessen merchant instead of a baron. In the daily papers Adolph had read of the epidemic of heiress-seeking barons and promptly contracted acute baronetis. He lost his appetite for sourkrout and potato salad and every time he looked at his plump frau, or one of the seven children, he experienced a sensation about the same as a bad man's hereafter.

Mary Alden, a newspaper reporter, was in court when Mrs. Shultz and her seven children broke in. She (Mrs. Shultz) filled the air with riot and requested the judge to rivet a pair of handcuffs upon runaway Adolph and bring him back. At Kirby's farm there was great excitement. The Baron Dietrich had picked Madge Kirby for a steady listener of his love tales and Madge was delighted. A baron for a son-in-law made ma's heart flutter overtime.

Farmer Kirby had no intention of splitting his fortune with a man he couldn't talk with, so every time the baron asked for Madge's hand Farmer Kirby got an attack of hesitation and called Peggy, the bulldog, who showed her disapproval of the baron by making half-moons with her teeth on different parts of his anatomy. In fact, Peggy assisted Farmer Kirby and Jack Hopkins, Madge's former suitor, in making the baron as uncomfortable as possible, but his finish was made certain by the arrival of Mary Alden, the reporter, who came to visit the Kirbys. Assisted by Peggy, she prevented the pair from eloping, and to confirm her suspicion that Shultz was one and the same, she telegraphed for Mrs. Shultz. Five minutes after the lady arrived something that sounded like yells of mortal agony came from the tall grass back of the farm to prove that the lady was making good. So endeth the romance of Adolph.

MISCELLANEOUS

KINEMACOLOR.

MISSION BELLS (2 parts).—After the day's labor, the San Juan Capistrano Mission Fathers, returning from the fields, find a mother and a young child lying on the ground. The mother is dead, but the child lives. Francisco, taking the child in his arms, accompanied by Louis, returns to the Mission, while the other fathers bury the mother and offer prayers for the repose of her

The baby grows up, and we see him eighteen years later ready for the holy orders to which Father Louis argues that he is destined, but Francisco advises the boy to go into the world and then make his choice. It was well suggested, for the boy had never seen the outside world, and fate leads him another way.

After a series of romantic adventures in the semi-Spanish society of the period, Pedro returns to the only parents he has ever known to ask their permission to marry Senorita Isobel.

LIFE ON BOARD AN AMERICAN MAN-O'-WAR.—"All the world loves a sailor," and Americans are especially proud of their navy, which since the birth of the nation has borne a brave reputation, and is believed to be ready to maintain its record in any future wars. Naval reviews are always interesting, but few have any idea of the daily routine on board an American man-o'-war—which is faithfully shown in natural colors by this Kinemacolor reel.

LOVE AND WAR IN TOYLAND.—In the first scene the Prince of Sumberland, a toy figure, departs to court the King of Loveland's daughter. The Emperor of the No-Goods, another aspirant, is also on his way to court the Princess of Loveland. The royal lovers arrive simultaneously before the King of Sumberland, who decrees that they must fight a duel in aeroplanes for the hand of the princess. The emperor's aeroplane is damaged, but protected by his aeronautic helmet the emperor himself is unhurt. The prince is proclaimed the victor.

The princess is blowing the seeds of an enormous dandelion and asking the old question: "He loves, he loves me not." While she is thus engaged she is abducted by the emperor. Whilst crossing the wild lands they are attacked by toy animals. The prince and the king come with an army to rescue the princess. Then takes place the battle of Hobby-horse Pass. The emperor retreats to the capital of No-Goods. This edifice introduces all the devices by which time may be frittered—cards, dice, dominoes, etc. The effect is most picturesque. The prince in revenge leads his aerial fleet to destroy the capital. The emperor attempts to escape by a secret passage, but he is captured and as a punishment for his misdeeds he is fired from a cannon into the burning city.

Upon their return home the prince and princess are married, after which the victors offer up a prayer to Santa Claus, whose figure is seen in the background.

Picture Theatres Projected

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Allegheny Avenue Amusement Company has conveyed the theater building, 3141-43-45-47-49 Frankford Avenue, lot 100 by 249 feet, to Joseph Cohen for a nominal consideration, subject to a mortgage of $10,000.

Erie, Pa.—Wilkay Company have let the contract to Kirschner Brothers, 437 East Ninth Street, for the building of a theater in this city.

Baltimore, Md.—Eureka Amusement Company, Ramsay and Fremont Streets, are to make alterations and additions to their moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Washington, D. C.—W. R. Talbot, 1314 F Street, N. W., has prepared plans for a moving picture theater to cost $4,000.

Cleveland, O.—Louis K. Reizl has plans under way for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 34 by 170 feet, to cost $15,000. There will be two stores on the ground floor. The theater will have a seating capacity for 600 persons.

Elkhart, Ind.—Orpheum Theater Company, North Michigan Avenue, are demolishing an old building preparatory to erecting a two-story theater, 60 by 120 feet, to have a seating capacity for 1,000 persons.

Detroit, Mich.—Palace Theater Company, Dime Building, have plans under way for the erection of the new Palace Theater, to have a seating capacity for 1,400.

Detroit, Mich.—H. B. Clement, 608 Sun Building, has prepared plans for a one-story theater to seat 300 persons. The plans call for remodeling of stores properties on Woodward Avenue.

Kansas City, Mo.—Orpheum Theater and Realty Company, Martin Beck, manager, San Francisco, Cal., and Martin Lehmann, manager, Ninth and May Streets, Kansas City, are to build a handsome new theater to be known as The Orpheum, and to cost $250,000.

Passaic, N. J.—A. K. Heckt, Washington Place, has let the contract to W. Jacobson, 115 Hope Avenue, for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 70 feet, to cost $10,000.

Baltimore, Md.—Hartlove & Kahl, 1110 South Charles Street, have awarded the contracts to James J. Hartlove for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 123 feet, to cost $10,000.

Detroit, Mich.—Casino Amusement Company, 34 Monroe Avenue, have let the contract to Frank Farington, who will soon start work on the alterations of a church building, 60 by 100 feet, into a moving picture theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—William Sachsemaier will break ground in a short time for a brick and terracotta moving picture theater, 60 by 124 feet, to be erected at the northwest corner of Twenty-fifth and Cambria Streets, for the Cambria Amusement Co. The structure will seat about 1,000 persons. The cost will be about $25,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Borzner & Wood are preparing plans for three moving picture theaters, of modern construction, to be erected in the central part of the city. The cost of each will be about $12,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Jones, Linick & Schaefer, 110 South State Street, have leased a theater building in this city and will occupy same as soon as necessary alterations and remodeling of the building are completed.

Belleville, Ill. — Grace Amusement Company, Louis Landan, president, care Famous Barr Company, Sixth and Washington Avenues, St. Louis, Mo., have received bids for the erection of a one-story open air dome and stage, 30 by 54 feet, to cost $6,000.

New York, N. Y.—H. N. Singhi, 121 West Kingsbridge Road, is having present plans revised for a moving picture theater and roof garden, one-story, 80 by 135 feet, to cost $75,000. The theater and roof garden will each have a seating capacity for 600 persons.

Buffalo, N. Y.—John J. Mahar, 250 Main Street, will build a moving picture theater, 42 by 116 feet, to cost $70,000.

McCRAY & McCRAY
Amusement Brokers
Dealers in
Everything for the Theatre
We sell it for less—Write for list.
306 Madison St. Fairmont, W. Va.

The Screen That Made Daylight Pictures Famous

MIRROROIDE

PATENTS PENDING

The Original, The Only Rough or Matte Metallic Surface Finish

MIRROROIDE

is sold under a positive 5-year guarantee. It can't turn black, it can't peel or crack.

200 per cent. more brilliancy at one-half the juice expense absolutely eliminates that hazy, out-of-focus effect so peculiar to other metallic screens.

MIRROROIDE

MIRROROIDE can be washed with soap and water. It stands any climate because we use a metallized glass coating.

We don't mind competitors' knocks, but the tale we have adopted is the unsolicited endorsements we publish every week in trade papers.

Toledo, Ohio, June 24, 1913.

J. H. Genter Co.,
Colden Street,
Newburgh, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

We opened our new theater, The Alhambra, about three weeks ago, and have not had time up to the present to write you regarding the Mirroroide curtain you installed in this house. We are very much pleased with your new flesh-tinted curtain, as we are getting a marvelously clear and beautiful picture on same.

Very truly yours,
L. W. BETTIS.

MIRROROIDE

is endorsed the world over, the world's best, bar none.

That MIRROROIDE is it, is proven in the fact that we manufacture our entire product and have the only complete equipment in the world for so doing.

Then again, we show you by sending absolutely free, large MIRROROIDE samples.

Test any way you desire, against any screen or curtain in your town.

We also make metallized glass in any color you desire. It's ready to use. Stands a 2200 heat degree test.

By Mail

½ pint Sample, 90 Cents. Pints, $1.75

See You at Space 307 Coming Exposition, New York City, July 7 to 12. Ask about our Announceoscope.

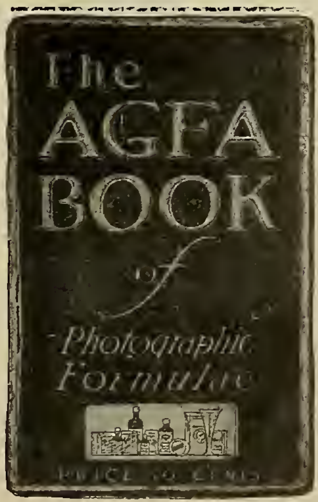
THE J. H. GENTER CO.

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

"Agfa" Metol

„Agfa"-METOL
ACTIEN GESELLSCHAFT FÜR ANILIN FABRIKATION
BERLIN
GERMANY
GERMANY
Agfa
METOL

THE basis of every good negative and every good positive when photographic values are concerned is "Agfa" Metol, the one reliable developing agent the world over. The list of prominent users would fill this page and the letters of testimony to the worth of "Agfa" products would fill the issue. Let us help you to make cleaner, better negatives and clearer, snappier prints. Our expert chemists are at your complete disposal.



THE AGFA FORMULAE BOOK

Send 10 cents and a label from any of the "Agfa" products and we will send you this valuable book which tells you the how and why of photographic developers. the Encyclopedia of the Dark Room, of tremendous value to the experimentalist and the man who wishes to know more.

BERLIN ANILINE WORKS

Photo Dept.

213-215 Water St., New York

Philadelphia, Pa.—Charles Caspar is preparing plans for a moving picture theater to be built in West Philadelphia; building to be 45 by 80 feet, of brick.

Ocean City, N. J.—Pennsylvania Construction Company is estimating on a building to be used as a moving picture theater.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Levyn Michaels, 557 William Street, has let the contract to the Eastern Concrete Steel Company, Morgan Building, for the construction of a theater, 40 feet high, 80 by 100 feet, to cost $50,000.

De Funiak Springs, Fla.—William McCaskell has plans under way for the building of a two-story theater to cost about $25,000.

St. Louis, Mo.—E. & H. Freund, 1600 South Broadway, are about to have sketches prepared for a one or two-story theater, to cost $50,000.

Onalaska, Wis.—Bids were received by Eugene Johnson and J. G. Showers for the erection of a one-story theater, 30 by 70 feet.

Detroit, Mich.—J. G. Kastler & Co., 523 Chamber of Commerce Building, has prepared plans for a one-story theater, 31 by 102 feet, with seating capacity for 400 persons.

Evansville, Ind.—H. L. Heilman, 504 Barre Street, are to remodel a one and two-story building at Third and Adams Streets, into a moving picture theater, to include stores and offices.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Tacoma Amusement Company, M. F. Gill, president, are to erect a two-story moving picture theater, store and flat building, to include two stores and two apartments. The building will measure 47 by 147 feet and have seating capacity for 600 persons.

Detroit, Mich.—J. Will Wilson, Carey Building, is preparing plans for a one-story theater, 37 by 91 feet, and to have a seating capacity of 400.

Baltimore, Md.—M. S. Pearce and P. J. Schenck, 415 East Baltimore Street, representing the Hippodrome Company, have plans under consideration for the building of a theater and hotel to cost about $250,000.

Freeland, Pa.—Refowich Brothers, South Center street, Pottsville, Pa., will soon invite bids for the building of a one-story moving picture theater, 28 by 60 feet.

Lansdowne, Pa.—M. H. Dickinson, 1524 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., is preparing plans for a one-story theater, 50 by 100 feet, to cost $20,000.

Asbury Park, N. J.—Clinton B. Cook, 505 Bond street, is preparing plans for a theater, office, store and lodge building, to cost about $40,000. The theater will have seating capacity for 1,000 persons.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Bertram Ireland, Bartlett Building, has prepared plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 46 by 150 feet, to cost $45,000.

Newark, N. J.—North Jersey Amusement Company, have plans under way for the erection of a one-story theater and roof garden. The theater will seat 900 persons, and cost $30,000.

Stamford, Conn.—Jones & Geronumo, of the Alhambra Theater, are considering plans for the erection of an additional theater, 45 by 70 feet, to cost $50,000.

Lackawanna, N. Y.—Anthony C. Zosnyka will build, by day labor, a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 96 feet, to cost $3,600.

Buffalo, N. Y.—John R. Olsher of the Tecu Theater, on Main street, contemplates the building of a moving picture theater, 59 by 112 feet, to cost $18,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Eno Greepf, 334 Fourth avenue, New York, has received estimates for the erection of a one-story moving picture booth, 9 by 8 by 7 by 8 feet, to cost $2,500.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Bernard Leonie, 1404 Pitkin avenue, has plans under way for a two-story moving picture and vaudeville theater, 42 by 85 feet, to cost $25,000.

New York, N. Y.—Misker Realty Co., Second avenue and 14th street, are about to take sub-bids for a three-story moving picture theater and store building, 60 by 70 feet, to cost $30,000.

New York, N. Y.—Robert E. Westcott Estate, 33 Wall street, are to erect a two-story moving picture theater, store and office building, 102 by 150 by 100 feet, to cost $75,000.

Ladd, Ill.—N. G. Alpaugh, 111 Park avenue, Princeton, Ill., has prepared plans for a moving picture theater, to be erected in this town.

Forest Park, Ill.—F. Pagles, 19 South La Salle street, has prepared plans for a three-story theater, store and flat building, to cost $30,000. The theater will have seating capacity for 500 persons, while the remainder of the building will be divided into stores on the ground floor and four apartments on the upper floors.

Chicago, Ill.—Rocko Navagato has plans under way for a one-story theater, 60 by 132 feet, to seat 800 persons. Cost, about $50,000.

New York, N. Y.—Notlek Amusement Co., 119th street and Claremont avenue, are taking sub-bids for the erection of an open air theater for the exhibition of moving pictures.

Cincinnati, O.—Anton Reigs, 2554 Vine street, has prepared plans for a two-story moving picture theater, to cost $20,000. It will have a seating capacity of 900.

Baltimore, Md.—M. L. Peters, 1039 South Charles street, has plans under consideration for a one-story moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Los Angeles, Cal.—F. W. Woodly, manager of the Optic Theater, 533 South Main street, has let the contract to Los Angeles Investment Company, 8th street and Broadway, for the building of a two-story theater and store building, to cost about $25,000.

ANNOUNCEMENT

EXTRAORDINARY

The
Photo Drama
Company

Announces the early coming of Bulwer-Lytton's famous masterpiece

The Last Days of Pompeii

Made by the Ambrosio Company of Torino, Italy,

IN EIGHT SPECTACULAR REELS

Watch for further announcements of Ambrosio's mightiest creations.

The
Photo Drama
Company

Rooms 505-6 Longacre Building

NEW YORK CITY

La Fayette, Ind.—Mrs. J. O. Morgan has plans under way for the building of a two-story moving picture theater, store and office building, to cost $30,000. The theater will have a seating capacity of 500. Lessee, H. H. Johnson, Champaign, Ill.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Bader & Simpson, Wilmington, Del., have been awarded the contract for a moving picture theater, to be erected at Germantown and Tulpehocken streets, to cost about $10,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The West End Realty Company has been awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story brick picture theater, 75 by 109.8 feet, on 52nd street, north of Market, to cost $40,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—B. Ketcham's Sons and others are estimating on plans and specifications for a moving picture theater which is to be constructed, using the old building of the First German Baptist church, at 903-5-7 North Sixth street. Building will seat 500.

Philadelphia, Pa.—R. C. Loos is preparing plans for a moving picture theater building, to be one-story, 80 by 90 feet, seating capacity about 1,400.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Carl P. Berger is preparing plans and specifications for a two-story brick and stone moving picture theater, 45 by 90 feet, to be erected at Sixth and Poplar streets, for the Stiefel Amusement Company. The building will cost about $8,000.

East Orange, N. J.—Martin F. Duewes, Greenwood avenue, will erect a moving picture theater, to have a seating capacity of 500 and to cost $17,000.

Hoboken, N. J.—United Theaters Company, Frank Hall, president, 95 River street, will erect a two-story moving picture and vaudeville theater, 95 by 100 feet, with a seating capacity of 2,000.

Chrome, N. J.—Adam Garber has plans under way for a moving picture theater to seat 800 persons.

Pittsburg, Pa.—J. P. McConnell, 46th and Butler streets, is to build a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000.

Plymouth, Pa.—T. B. Spry contemplates building a moving picture theater on Main street, one-story, 25 by 60 feet.

Catasauqua, Pa.—J. G. Sacks is to make alterations and additions to his moving picture theater during the summer.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Barnet Rubin and B. Devac will erect a moving picture theater on property owned by them on the north side of Chelten avenue, near Chew street. The lot is 54 by 155 feet. The structure will be of brick, terra cotta and stucco, and will seat about 700 people.

Plymouth, Pa.—James Harrison will soon take estimates for the erection of a two-story addition to his theater.

Cincinnati, O.—M. Vanden Eynden, St. Bernard street, has plans under way for the erection of a one and two-story theater, store and office building, to cost $20,000. The theater will have a seating capacity of 900.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Herman L. Gercke has secured the contract for the erection of a one-story brick moving picture theater, 53 by 107 feet, at the southeast corner of 26th and Somerset streets, for the Somerset Amusement Company. The cost will be $11,000.

Oberlin, O.—W. D. Hobbs has received estimates for the erection of a moving picture theater and restaurant building, to be one-story, 61 by 114 feet, to cost $15,000. The theater will have seating capacity of 300.

Springfield, O.—Augustus Sim is to build a three-story theater and business building, to cost $35,000.

Mt. Healthy, O.—Peter Blum, 43 East 2nd street, will soon take estimates for the erection of a theater, store and flat building, to contain two stores and two flats, to cost $15,000. The theater will have seating capacity of 295.

Indianapolis, Ind.—V. H. Winterrowd, Lombard Building, is preparing preliminary plans for a one-story moving picture theater, to have a seating capacity of 600.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Atlas Amusement Company are to build a two-story moving picture theater, store and flat building, to contain two stores and two apartments. The theater will have seating capacity for 625 persons.

Detroit, Mich.—Liberty Theater, Inc., John Kamsky, care Casino Amusement Company, 34 Monroe street, are to remodel a church building into a theater, to cost $50,000.

Rochester, Minn.—Commercial Club have plans about completed for erection of a two-story theater and commercial club headquarters, 44 by 110 feet, to cost $30,000. The theater will seat 700.

Washington, Ia.—R. R. Mayberry, 420 Cranby Building, Cedar Rapids, Ia., is preparing plans for a two-story moving picture theater, 20 by 140 feet, to seat 380.

St. Louis, Mo.—C. H. Turpin has awarded the contract to Charleville Building and Investment Company, 810 Chestnut street, for the erection of a two-story theater, to cost $25,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—M. Glukoff, 535 Liberty avenue, has awarded the contract to B. A. Groab, Empire Building, who will soon start work erecting a three-story moving picture theater and mercantile building, 36 by 110 feet.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Margolin & Block have purchased a large plot of ground on the west side of Front street, north of Susquehanna avenue, on which an option has been given them to Michael Stiffel, the owner of a vaudeville theater in the vicinity. It is reported that a moving picture house capable of seating 1,000 persons, will be built on the lot.

PATHE WEEKLY REEL
NUMBER

Combination Announcement Easel Frame No. 8.

EXHIBITORS

$4.00 Buys Our One-Sheet Brass Hanging Frame No. 1.

Standard Frame Construction Body of frame solid oak, with 2½ in. wide angle brass, double strength glass front. Compo Board non-warpable detachable back. Inside measurement, 28 x 42.

See our new designs.
Write for our new catalogue and quotations on all designs.

No. 4 A-Shape.

$5.50 Buys Our One-Sheet Brass Easel Frame No. 2 (Our Standard Construction.)

When in New York, visit our factory, where we can show you the best in Lobby Frames.

Look for our frames at the Exposition.

Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co., Inc.
357 West 42nd Street New York
'Phone Bryant 1133

THE UNWELCOME GUEST
BIOGRAPH

3 Sheet No. 7.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

TO FILM BUYERS ALL OVER THE WORLD

Bargain films for buyers of best second-hand films:

6,000 ft. of comic and drama, including one feature	$90
12,000 ft. of comic and drama, including two features,	$200
24,000 ft. of comic and drama, including four features,	$350
50,000 ft. of comic and drama, including six features,	$750

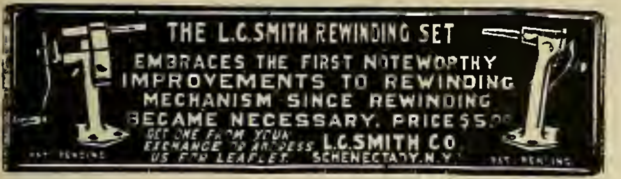
We also include free 10 posters for each reel, extra posters at 10c. per sheet; banners for features.

Splendid assortment of dramas, comics and travel films, guaranteed condition, title and finish, perfect sprockets, at one cent per foot.

Send us your requirements. We carry everything in stock from a camera to a bottle of cement.

TERMS, STRICTLY CASH WITH ORDER

G. W. BRADENBURGH
231-233 N. Eighth St., Philadelphia, Penna.
Bell 'Phone, Market 334. Cable, Bradfilms, Phila.



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00

GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET.

L.C.SMITH CO
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

THE VERY BEST VAUDEVILLE SERVICE
W. S. CLEVELAND, Mgr.
Fidelity Booking Offices
THEATRES, PARKS, FAIRS, CLUBS, CABARETS
Knickerbocker Theatre Building 1402 Broadway, N. Y. C.

"Agfa"

MOTION PICTURE FILM

Used by Makers of Quality Films

WRITE FOR PRICES

Sole American Agents

Raw Film Supply Company
15 East 26th Street New York, N. Y.

Illinois and Wisconsin Exhibitors

Call on us on your way home from convention. It will be worth your while.

Let Us Show You What We Have

101 Bridge of Sorrow (Gaumont) 2 Reels—Ill.
102 International Conspiracy (Gaumont) 3 Reels—Chicago only.
103 Vengeance of Egypt (Gaumont) 3 Reels—Ill.
104 White Glove Band (Gaumont) 3 Reels—Ill.
105 Palace of Flames (Itala) 3 Reels—Ill.
106 Blanche Walsh in Resurrection (Masko) 4 Reels Cook County.
107 Shipwrecked in Icebergs (Continental) 3 Reels—Ill., Ind., Mich.
108 In the Grip of the Vampire (Gaumont) 3 Reels—Ill.
109 Theft of the Secret Code (Vitascope) 3 Reels—Ill.
110 Human Vulture (Gaumont) 2 Reels—Ill.
112 The Great Aerial Disaster (Itala) 3 Reels—Ill.
113 The Race for the Millions (Gaumont) 3 Reels—Ill.
114 The Union Eternal (Gaumont) 3 Reels—Ill.
115 The Balkan Traitors (Continental) 3 Reels—Ill.
116 Shadow of Evil (Itala) 2 Reels—Ill.
117 Spectre of the Sea (Messter) 2 Reels—Ill.
118 A Revolutionary Wedding (Messter) 2 Reels—Ill.
119 Dagmar (Messter) 3 Reels—Ill.
120 At the Risk of Her Life (Cosmo) 3 Reels—Ill.
121 Tigris (Itala) 4 Reels—Ill.
122 Penalty of Folly (Vitascope) 2 Reels—Ill.
123 Dawn of To-morrow (Vitascope) 3 Reels—Ill.
124 Condemned for Witchcraft (Continental) 3 Reels—Ill.
125 The Gangsters (Continental) 3 Reels—Ill.
126 Driven From Home (Continental) 3 Reels—Ill.
127 The Dead Secret (Monopol) 3 Reels—Ill.
128 Voodoo Vengeance (World's Best) 3 Reels—Ill.
129 The Wizard of the Jungle (World's Best) 2 Reels—
130 Frank Merriwell in Arizona, 2 Reels
131 Frank Merriwell in Fight for a Fortune, 2 Reels
132 Frank Merriwell in School Days, 2 Reels
133 The Dread of Doom (Itala) 3 Reels—Ill.
134 The Fatal Grotto (Itala) 2 Reels
135 Vengeance of Durand (Vitagraph) 2 Reels
136 The Converted Jewess (Masko) 2 Reels
137 All the World's a Stage, 3 Reels
138 A Martyr for the People (Milano) 2 Reels
Zukon or The Social Vulture (Union) 3 Reels
501 The Two Orphans (Selig) 3 Reels
502 The Rose of Thebes (Cines) 2 Reels
503 The Siege of Calais (Pathe-Hand Col.) 2 Reels
505 For Her Father's Sake (Messter) 3 Reels
506 Hamlet (Barker) 2 Reels
507 Manon Lescaut (Pathe-Hand Col.) 3 Reels
509 Lady Mary's Love (Great Northern) 2 Reels
510 Penalty is Death (Great Northern) 3 Reels
511 Boys of the Golden West (Imp) 3 Reels
514 Sins of the Father (Eclair) 3 Reels
517 The Passion Play (Pathe-Hand Col.) 3 Reels

A complete lobby display consisting of one, three, six and eight sheet posters all mounted, are furnished with each feature without any extra charge. We also furnish photographs and illustrated heralds with quite a number of our features.

Our Wisconsin Office will be open to you about July 10th. Watch for announcement in following issue of Moving Picture World.

167 W. Washington St. M & F FEATURE FILM CORPORATION Chicago, Ill.

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS............197
ALABAMA EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE............157
AMONG THE PICTURE THEATERS............173
ARKANSAS EXHIBITORS GET TOGETHER.. 166

BIG CONVENTION IN WISCONSIN........... 158
BUFFALO 214

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES......218
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES.220
CALIFORNIA EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE........152
CHICAGO LETTER 188
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)......204
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)..205
CONVENTION COMITTEE N. Y. EXPOSITION.149
CONVENTION, THE 181
CORRESPONDENCE 213
EXHIBITORS STRONG IN INDIANA..........169
FACTS AND COMMENTS......................178
FILM IN FRANCE, THE......................179
FLICKERS 184
FLOOR PLAN. GRAND CENTRAL PALACE....177
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES......................192
GROWTH OF NEW JERSEY LEAGUE........175
"GUM SHOE" CAMPAIGN IN MISSOURI.....168
ILLINOIS EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE............145
ILLINOIS 213
IN THE MIDDLE WEST.........................214
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES..................236
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES...............252
INTERNATIONAL POLO GAMES (Edison).....190
INQUIRIES 200
IOWA PICTUREMEN ACTIVE...................154
IOWA 214
KANSAS EXHIBITORS' STATE LEAGUE......147
KENTUCKY EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE..........162
"KING RENE'S DAUGHTER" (Thanhouser)..191
LEAGUE BOOMING IN OKLAHOMA...........171
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....................226
LICENSED RELEASE DATES...................254
LOUISIANA LEAGUE 159
LOUISVILLE 215
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES........211
MARYLAND EXHIBITORS MAKE BIG START.161
MINNESOTA EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.........156
MISSISSIPPI EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.........170
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE..143
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR, THE.........194
NEBRASKA STATE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE..164
NEW ORLEANS 215
NEW ENGLAND 216
NO MORE WHITE FLAGS.......................182
OFFICIAL ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAM......209
OHIO, THE PIONEER OF THE LEAGUE......150
PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS GET IN LINE.160
PHILADELPHIA 215
PITTSBURGH 215
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 199
PERIOD OF TRANSITION AND THE FEATURE PROGRAM 208
PROGRESS MADE IN NEW YORK STATE....148
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 201
REMARKABLE RECORD, A....................193
"SEED OF THE FATHERS, THE" (Monopol).207
SNOWY EGRET, THE (Pathe)................184
SPRINGFIELD 214
SOME PROGRESS IN WEST VIRGINIA.......165
SOUTH DAKOTA LEAGUE ORGANIZED......171
STARTING THINGS DOWN IN MAINE.......173
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)..........226
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)......236
"TAPPED WIRES" (Essanay) 186
TEXAS EXHIBITORS ROUND-UP..............163
"THEODORA" (Warner's Features)............183
VIRGINIA EXHIBITORS GOING STRONG....167
WASHINGTON STATE EXHIBITORS...........144

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.

FRORUP, L. E.............................. 259
KIEWERT, L. C.............................. 258
REISINGER, HUGO........................... 263

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO...................... 264
BELL & HOWELL.............................. 267
BENDER, GEORGE............................ 240
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO....................... 259
CHICAGO METAL COVERING CO............. 256
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS.................... 238
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO................. 234
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO..................... 128
HALLBERG, J. H............................. 241
HOKE, GEO. M............................... 240
KLEIGL BROS................................ 259
ILG. ELEC. CO............................... 261
LAVEZZI..................................... 266
McILVANIE MACHINE WKS.................. 267
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO......... 265
SCHNEIDER, E............................... 240
SMITH, L. C. & CO.......................... 249
STRELINGER, CHARLES A.................. 242
WESTINGHOUSE ELECT. MFG. CO.......... 234
WHYTE-WHITMAN 261

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.

ALMO F. F. Co.............................. 242
AMERICAN F. F. CO......................... 277
AMERICAN KINETO CO...................... 126
ANDREWS PICTURES, LTD.................212
ARAB AMUSEMENT CO...................... 121
AMBROSIO F. CO............................ 118
ECLECTIC FILMS............................ 237
FEATURE FILM CO.......................... 239
FULLER'S, CHAS. L. DISTRIBUTING CO....122-3
GENERAL FILM CO.......................130-131
GT. NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE F. CO.. 231
HIAWATHA F. F. CO......................... 257
ITALA FILM CO.............................. 266
KINEMACOLOR CO........................... 264
MONOPOL FILM CO.......................227-116
MOORE, F. E................................ 259
NEW YORK FILM CO......................... 265
QUO VADIS FILM CO.......................268-69
REAL LIFE TALKING PICTURES............ 245
ROMA FILM CO............................. 256
SHERRY, WM. L............................. 255
ST. LOUIS M. P. CO......................... 262
UNION FEATURES 251
VIVAPHONE CO.............................. 267
WARNER'S FEATURES....................... 233

FILM DEALERS & IMPORTERS.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS........... 262

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.

TRAINER, C. W.............................. 240

FILM EXCHANGES.

ACORN M. P. CO............................ 232
BRADENBURG, G. W......................... 249
FULTON, E. E............................... 240
GUNBY BROS................................ 232
HETZ, L..................................... 240
LAEMMLE FILM CO.......................... 230
M. & F. FILM SERVICE...................... 249
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION............... 221
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE.... 266
SOUTHERN FILM CO......................... 242

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.

AMERICAN 120
BRONCHO FILM CO.......................... 117
CRYSTAL FILM CO.......................... 229
GAUMONT CO..............................239-129
KAY-BEE 117
KEYSTONE 117
MAJESTIC 270
N. Y. MOTION PICTURE CO................ 113
RAMO FILM CO............................. 260
RELIANCE 119
SOLAX 127
THANHOUSER 110
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURERS.....114-115

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.

EDISON 138-139
ESSANAY 111-12
KALEM 142
KLEINE, GEO..............................222-3
LUBIN 135
MELIES 271
PATHE FRERES.............................136-7
SELIG 132-3-4
VITAGRAPH 140-1

LENS MANUFACTURERS.

GUNDLACH MANHATTAN CO................ 267

MISCELLANEOUS.

AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO............ 243
BERLIN ANILENE WORKS................... 247
BOSH & CO................................. 217
BOURGEOIS, PAUL........................... 264
CANTON METAL CEILING.................... 256
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.............. 221
CLEVELAND, W. S........................... 249
CLOW & SONS, JAMES B..................... 260
COMMERCIAL M. P. CO...................... 238
CORCORAN, A. J............................ 238
EASTMAN KODAK CO......................... 257
HINES, SOL................................. 234
HOTEL IMPERIAL............................. 259
HOTEL MARTINIQUE 212
KEYSTONE PRESS............................ 234
KRAUSE MFG. CO............................ 232
LADIES' WORLD.............................. 225
McCRAY & McCRAY.........................246
McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO.................. 230
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO............... 262
NATIONAL TICKET CO....................... 250
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO............ 264
ONE DROP OIL CO.......................... 242
OZONE PURE AIRIFIER CO.................. 217
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO... 240
PRICE & EINSTEIN.......................... 255
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO....................... 249
REYNOLDS & CO............................ 240
SARGENT, E. W............................. 244
STAR "A" SHOP............................. 240
STEBBINS, C. M............................. 242
TAKITO OGAWA 259
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO......... 230

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.

EDISON 138
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO.................... 265
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH..................... 272
SIMPLEX 219

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER SALES CO....... 242
DEAGAN, J. C..............................124-5
GENTEL, ALBERT............................ 256
SINN, C. E.................................. 244
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH....................... 267

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.

AMERICAN SEATING CO..................... 266
ANDREWS, A. H............................. 266
BENNETT, GEO. W........................... 266
HARDESTY 266
STAFFORD, E. H............................ 238
STEEL FURNITURE CO....................... 266

POSTERS & FRAMES.

A. B. C.....................................251
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO............. 252
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO........ 218
GENERAL FILM CO.......................... 253
NEWMAN 232
THEATER SPECIALTY MFG. CO.............. 249

PROJECTION SCREENS.

AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO.......... 257
GENTER, J. H............................... 247
MIRROR SCREEN CO......................... 257
SIMPSON SOLAR SCREENS................... 238

SONG & ADVERTISING SLIDES.

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.................. 249

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.

DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.................... 235

THE DAY OF JUDGMENT

(IN THREE PARTS)

THE SENSATIONAL STORY OF A GIGANTIC SWINDLE.

PAPER WITH A PUNCH

WRITE OR WIRE IF YOU WANT TO BUY OR BOOK TO

UNION FEATURES

225 W. 42nd ST., N.Y. CITY

EXHIBITORS

If You Want a Full House, Display A. B. C. Posters. They Attract Attention Because They Are Attractive

ONE THREE and SIX SHEETS Now ready for the following:

KALEM'S 2-Reel Special

"THE FIGHT AT GRIZZLY GULCH"

Released July 16th

AND KALEM'S

"THE SMUGGLER"

Released Saturday, July 19th

A. B. C. COMPANY Cleveland, Ohio

SPECIAL ONE SHEETS for the LUBIN ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG SPECIAL

Richardson's Handbook

For Managers and Operators of Moving Picture Theatres

The Best Book of the Kind $2.50 per Copy Postage Paid

Moving Picture World

17 Madison Avenue New York City

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

June 23—A Husband's Mistake (Drama)......1000
June 26—Calamity Anne Takes a Trip (Com.)..1000
June 28—Dead Man's Shoes (Drama)..........1000
June 30—Quicksands (2 parts Drama)..........2000
July 3—Pride of Lonesome (Drama)..........1000
July 5—A Tale of Death Valley (Drama).....1000
July 7—San Francisco, the Dauntless City (Sc.)1000
July 10—The Foreign Spy (Drama).............1000
July 12—The Song of the Soup (Comedy).......
July 12—A Garden City in California (Scenic)..
July 14—Truth in the Wilderness (2 parts—Drama) 2000
July 17—To Err is Human (Drama)...........1000
July 19—At the Half-Breed's Mercy (Drama)..1000

AMBROSIO.

Apr. 26—Golden Rain (2 reels, Drama)........
May 3—The Spider (2 parts—Drama).......
May 10—Tempest and Sunshine (2 parts—Drama) ....
May 17—A Maid of Honor (2 parts—Drama)..
May 24—The Yellow Man (2 parts—Drama)...
May 31—An Unruly Father (2 parts—Drama)
June 7—The Sold Title (2 parts—Drama)....
June 14—The Girl of the Hidden Spring (2 parts—Drama) ....
June 21—Loves Shadow (2 parts—Drama).....

BISON.

June 17—In Love and War (2 parts—Drama)
June 21—Women and War (2 parts—Drama)..
June 24—The Guerilla Menace (2 parts—Dr.)
July 1—The Battle of Manila (2 parts Drama)
July 5—At Shiloh (2 parts Drama)..........
July 8—The Powder Flash of Death (2 parts—Drama)..............................
July 12—The Head Hunters (2 parts—Drama)..
July 15—The Picket Guard (2 parts—Drama)..
July 19—When Sherman Marched to the Sea (3 parts—Drama) ....

BRONCHO.

June 18—From the Shadows (2 parts—Drama)..
June 25—The Transgressor (2 parts—Drama)..
July 2—All Rivers Meet at Sea (Drama......
July 9—Grand-Dad (2 parts—Drama)........
July 16—Heart Throbs (2 parts—Drama).......

CRYSTAL.

July 6—The Girl Reporter (Comedy)..........
July 6—Muchly Engaged (Comedy)..........
July 8—True Chivalry (Drama).................
July 13—Pearl's Dilemma (Comedy)...........
July 13—Squaring Things With Wifey (Comedy)
July 15—In Death's Shadow (Drama)..........1000
July 20—The Hallroom Girls (Comedy)........
July 20—How Men Propose (Comedy)..........

DRAGON.

June 16—The Ghost of Sea View Manor (Drama) 1000
June 23—A Sister's Devotion (Drama)..........1000
June 30—Our Future Heroes (Topical)..........1000

ECLAIR.

June 29—Torpedo Fish (Zoology).............
July 2—The Witch (3 parts Drama)..........
July 6—In the Night (Comedy)..............
July 6—How Diamonds Are Made (Industrial)
July 9—The Trail of the Hanging Rock (2 parts—Drama) ....
July 13—It is Hard to Please Him (Comedy)..
July 13—The Catholic Mission (Educational)...
July 16—For the Man She Loved (2 parts—Drama) ....
July 20—Through the Telescope (Comedy).....
July 20—Sacred Gazelles (Educational)........

FRONTIER.

June 19—A Story of the Mexican Border (Drama)
June 21—When Lena Struck New Mexico (Comedy) ....
June 26—The Squaw Man's Reword (Drama)..
June 28—An Eastern Cyclone at Bluff Ranch (Comedy)..........................
July 3—The Secret of Padre Antonio (Drama)
July 5—A Rose at Sixteen (Drama)..........
July 5—A Cactus at Forty-five (Comedy).....
July 10—The Frontier Twins Start Something (Comedy)...........................
July 12—The Line Rider's Sister (Drama).....
July 17—The Small Pox Scare at Gulch Hollow (Comedy) ....
July 19—The Half-Breed Sheriff (Drama)......

GAUMONT.

June 24—The Demon of Destruction (Drama)....
June 25—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 68 (News)...
June 26—When the Cat's Away (Comedy).....
June 26—Kings of the Kennels...............
July 1—Sauce for the Goose (Comedy)........
July 1—Atom Life in the Deep (Scientific)....
July 2—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 69 (News)...
July 3—Tricks In All Trades (Comedy)......
July 3—Production of Wine in France (Industry) ....

GEM.

June 23—Every Inch a Hero (Drama).........
June 30—Mistaken Intentions (Comedy).......
June 30—Teak Wood (Scenic).................
July 7—Billy, the Wise Guy (Comedy)........
July 14—Little Buster (Comedy).............

GREAT NORTHERN.

June 14—An Unwelcome Wedding Gift (Comedy-Drama)...........................
June 21—Shanghaied (Drama) ....
June 28—Cupid's Score (Comedy)..............
July 5—Winning a Prize (Comedy)..........
July 5—The Trondhjem Railway (Scenic).....

GREAT NORTHERN—Universal.

June 28—The Flying Circus (3 parts, Drama)..

IMP.

July 5—Leo, the Indian (Comedy)...........
July 5—Lightning Sketches by Hy Mayer (Novelty) ....
July 7—His Mother's Birthday (Drama).......
July 10—The Wop (Drama)...................
July 12—Oh! You Flirt (Comedy)..............
July 12—Lightning Sketches by Hy Mayer (Novelty)...........................
July 14—A Possibility (2 parts—Comedy-Drama) ....
July 17—Her Nerve (Drama).................
July 19—Binks Ends the War (Comedy).......
July 19—In Cartoonland With Hy Mayer (Novelty) ....

KAY BEE.

June 20—The Failure of Success (2 parts—Drama) ....
June 27—The Seal of Silence (Drama)........
July 4—The Crimson Stain (3 parts, Drama)..
July 11—The Banshee (2 parts—Drama).......
July 18—The Red Mask (2 parts—Drama).....

KEYSTONE.

June 16—The Waiters' Picnic (Comedy).....
June 19—The Tale of a Black Eye (Comedy)..
June 19—Out and In (Comedy)..............
June 23—A Bandit (Comedy)..................
June 23—Peeping Pete (Comedy)..............
June 26—His Crooked Career (Comedy).......
June 26—The Largest Boat Ever Launched Sideways ....
June 30—For Love of Mabel (Comedy).........
July 3—Rastus and the Game-Cock (Comedy)..
July 7—Safe in Jail (Comedy)...............
July 10—The Telltale Light (Comedy).........
July 14—Love and Rubbish (Comedy)........

LUX.

June 27—Sammy, the Scorcher (Comedy)...... 455
June 27—Oh! You Unbreakable Doll (Comedy).. 495
July 4—Pat Gets On the Trail (Comedy)...... 410
July 4—An Easy Day (Comedy).............. 537
July 11—The Train on Fire (Drama)..........1000

MAJESTIC.

June 17—Beautiful Bismark (Drama).........
June 20—The Banker's Sons (Drama)..........
June 22—Side Tracked By Sister (Drama)....
June 24—The Politician (Drama)..............
June 28—Dora (Drama) ....
June 29—One Round O'Brien Comes Back (Com.)
July 1—The Golden Jubilee (Topical).........
July 5—Gaffney's Gladiator (Comedy).........

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

June 4—Mutual Weekly, No. 23 (News).....
June 11—Mutual Weekly, No. 24 (News).....
June 18—Mutual Weekly, No. 25 (News).....
June 25—Mutual Weekly, No. 26 (News)......
July 2—Mutual Weekly, No. 27 (News)......

MUTUAL EDUCATIONAL.

June 19—Willy Wants to Ride a Horse (Com.)
June 19—Through Greece (Travel)............
June 26—Funnicus Tries His Luck at Love (Comedy)...........................
June 26—Through the Land of Sugar Cane (Travel).............................
July 3—Funnicus Attends a Fair (Comedy)...
July 3—Japanese Gardens (Travel)..........
July 10—Funnicus' Mother-in-Law (Comedy)...
July 10—Saigon (Travel).....................

NESTOR.

July 7—The Proof of the Man (Drama).......
July 9—John, the Wagoner (Drama)..........
July 11—Four Queens and a Jack (Comedy)....
July 11—When He Wore the Blue (Comedy)....
July 14—The Grit of the Gringo (Drama)......
July 16—The Operator and the Superintendent (Drama) ....
July 18—The Tale of a Hat (Comedy)........
July 18—When His Courage Failed (Comedy)..

POWERS.

July 4—The Heart of Hermanda (Drama)....
July 9—Elsie's Aunt (Comedy)...............
July 11—Morgan's Treasure (2 parts—Drama)..
July 16—Why Rags Left Home (Comedy-Drama)
July 18—The Awakening (Drama).............

PILOT.

June 5—For Old Time's Sake (Drama)......
June 12—When a Girl Loves (Drama)..........
June 19—A Child of the Hills (Drama)......
June 26—An Innocent Conspiracy (Com.-Dr.)..1000
July 3—The Code of the U. S. A. (Drama)....1000
July 10—Sanitary Gulch (Comedy)............1000
July 17—Granny (Drama)......................1000

RAMO.

June 11—The Helping Hand (Drama).........
June 18—The Call of the Road (Drama)......
June 25—The Worth of Man (Drama)........
July 2—I'm No Counterfeiter (Drama).......
July 9—Man and Woman (2 parts Drama)....
July 16—A Dog-Gone Baron (Comedy).........
July 23—The Silent House (Drama)...........

RELIANCE.

June 30—Her Final Choice (Drama)............
July 2—Dick's Turning (Drama)..............
July 5—Death's Short Cut (Drama)...........
July 7—A Rural Romance (Drama)...........
July 9—The Wager (Drama).................
July 12—Ashes (2 parts—Drama)..............

REX.

June 29—Draga, the Gypsy (Drama)..........
July 3—A Woman's Folly (Drama)..........
July 6—Suspense (Drama)...................
July 10—Beauty and the Beast (3 parts—Dr.)..
July 13—Through Strife (Drama)..............
July 17—The Wrong Road (Drama)...........
July 20—His Weakness Conquered (Drama)...

SOLAX.

July 4—True Hearts (Drama)................
July 9—The Flea Circus (Scientific & Comedy)
July 11—As the Bell Rings (Drama)..........
July 16—Cooking for Trouble (Comedy).......
July 18—The Intruder (Drama)...............

THANHOUSER.

June 17—The Snare of Fate (2 parts—Drama)
June 20—No Release this date................
June 22—The Eye of Krishla (Drama)........
June 24—Forgive Us Our Trespasses (Drama)..
June 27—The Lost Combination (Drama)......
June 29—A Modern Lochinvar (Comedy)........
July 1—King Rene's Daughter (Drama).......
July 4—Her Two Jewels (Drama)..............

VICTOR.

June 20—His Daughter (Drama)...............
June 27—Brother and Sister (Drama)........
July 4—A Shifting Fortune (Drama).........
July 11—A Modern Witness (Drama)..........
July 18—Nihilist Vengeance (2 parts—Drama)

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES
Five Thousand - - $1.25
Ten Thousand - - $2.50
Twenty Thousand - - $4.50
Twenty-five Thousand - $5.50
Fifty Thousand - - $6.50
One Hundred Thousand - $8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

Look for Us at the Big Show!

WE'LL BE THERE—with banners flying. Our exhibit will be the decorative part of the General Film Theatre on the mezzanine floor of the Grand Central Palace, 47th Street side of the building.

As you approach the Theatre, you'll see the most creditable array of single, three-sheet and six-sheet posters ever exhibited. They will be fair samples of the paper supplied regularly in General Film Poster Service.

We'll show you that big banner which we have been advertising as the "one best bet" at $1.00;

And a ticket dispenser that is as unique as it is new;

And a bunch of better lantern slides that will "knock your eye out";

And lobby display frames, and photographs, and other advertising helps galore to prove that "we have what you want when you want it."

AT THE EXPOSITION: Theatre No. 4, Mezzanine Floor

AT HOME: 71 West 23rd Street, 440 Fourth Avenue, New York; 121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 1022 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; 7th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio; Equity Building, Detroit, Mich.; 218 Commercial Street, Boston, Mass.; 122 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; 737 Broadway, Albany, N. Y. Slide Dept., Bakewell Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

General Film Company, Poster Dept.

Formerly Photoplay Advertising and Specialty Co.

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph (Special).

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Patheplay, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Vitagraph (Special).

Thursday — Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Lubin, Vitagraph (Special).

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Vitagraph (Special).

BIOGRAPH.

June 21—The Mothering Heart (2 parts—Drama)
June 23—A Compromising Complication (Com.)
June 23—Mister Jefferson Green (Comedy)...
June 26—In Diplomatic Circles (Drama)......
June 28—Her Mother's Oath (Drama)........
June 30—A Gamble With Death (Drama).....
July 3—Faust and the Lily (Comedy)........
July 3—An Old Maid's Deception (Comedy)..
July 5—The Sorrowful Shore (Drama)........
July 7—A Sea Dog's Love (Comedy)..........
July 7—The Noisy Suitors (Comedy)..........
July 10—The Enemy's Baby (Drama)..........
June 12—The Mistake (Drama)..................

EDISON.

June 16—Her Royal Highness (Comedy-Drama)1000
June 17—The Twin Brothers (Drama).........1000
June 18—Civic Parade, New York City (Topical) 850
June 18—He Would Fix Things (Comedy).... 650
June 20—The Evil Thereof (Drama)...........1000
June 21—Mary Stuart (Special—3 parts—Drama) 3000
June 21—Love's Old Sweet Song (Drama)......1000
June 23—The Pyramids and the Sphinx, Egypt (Architecture)........................ 300
June 23—A Taste of His Own Medicine (Com.). 700
June 24—Where Shore and Water Meet (Dr.) 980
June 25—How Did It Finish? (Comedy)........ 980
June 27—Fortune Smiles—Being the Twelfth Story of What Happened to Mary (Drama)..................................1000
June 28—The Fly (Hygiene).................. 400
June 28—Circumstances Make Heroes (Comedy) 600
June 30—The Story of the Bell (Drama)......1000
July 1—The Patchwork Quilt (Drama)....... 980
July 2—All On Account of a Portrait (Comedy)................................1000
July 4—A Gentleman's Gentleman (Drama)..1000
July 5—The Signal (Drama)....................1000
July 7—Over the Great Divide in Colorado (Sc.)
July 7—Winsome Winnie's Way (Comedy).....
July 8—Scenes of Other Days (Scenic).........1000
July 9—His Mother's-in-law Visit (Comedy)..1000
July 11—In the Old Dutch Times (Drama).....1000
July 12—The Diamond Crown (Being the first of the series of "Kate Kirby's Cases") (Drama) 1000
July 14—A Pair of Foils (Comedy)............1000
July 15—In the Garden (Drama)...............1000
July 16—The Dream Fairy (Drama)............1025
July 18—To Abbeville Court House (Drama)... 900
July 19—On the Broad Stairway (Drama—Second of Kate Kirby's Cases)............1000

ESSANAY.

June 20—A Brother's Loyalty (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
June 20—Fear (Drama) 1000
June 21—Alkali Ike and the Hypnotist (Comedy) 1000
June 24—Across the Rio Grande (Drama)....1000
June 25—Easy Payments (Drama).............1000
June 26—The Divided House (Comedy)........1000
June 27—Witness "A-3 Center" (Drama)....1000
June 28—Broncho Billy's Strategy (Drama)..1000
July 1—Retagged (Comedy) ....
July 1—The Drummer's Umbrella (Comedy)...
July 2—The Strongest Link (Drama)...........1000
July 3—The Life We Live (Drama).............1000
July 4—What's the Matter With Father(Com.).1000
July 5—At the Lariat's End (Drama).........1000
July 7—The Forbidden Way (Special—2 parts—Drama)..............................2000
July 8—The Daughter of the Sheriff (Drama)..1000
July 9—The Outer Shell (Drama).............1000
July 10—A Flurry In Diamonds (Comedy)......1000
July 11—The Sign (Drama).....................1000
July 12—Broncho Billy and the Western Girls (Drama).................................1000
July 15—Something Rotten in Havana (Comedy)
July 15—When Ignorance is Bliss (Comedy)....
July 16—The Great Raymond (Novelty).......1000
July 17—The Heart of a Gambler (Drama)....1000
July 18—Every Thief Leaves a Clue (Drama)..1000
July 19—The Two Ranchmen (Comedy-Drama).1000

KALEM.

June 18—The Attorney for the Defense (Drama)1000
June 20—Cupid's Lariat (Comedy).............
June 20—Smoked to a Finish (Comedy).......
June 21—On the Brink of Ruin (Drama)......1000
June 23—The Detective's Trap (Drama).......1000
June 25—The Knight of Cyclone Gulch (Com)..
June 25—Curing Her Extravagance (Comedy)
June 25—The Struggle (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
June 27—The Cloak of Guilt (Drama).........1000
June 28—Out of the Jaws of Death (Drama)..1000
June 30—A Fight to a Finish (Drama)........1000
July 1—The Raiders from Double L Ranch (Drama) ....
July 2—Historic New York (Scenic)..........
July 4—A Victim of Deceit (Drama).........1000
July 4—Shenandoah (Special, 3 parts, Drama).3000
July 5—The Hidden Witness (Drama)........1000
July 7—A Stolen Identity (Drama)............1000
July 9—The Treachery of a Scar (Drama)....1000
July 11—Entertaining Uncle (Comedy).........
July 11—Cosmopolitan New York (Typical).....
July 12—Rounding Up the Counterfeiters (Dr.).1000
July 14—The Lost Diamond (Drama)..........
July 14—The Mermaid (Comedy)..............
July 16—A Thief in the Night (Drama).......1000
July 18—What the Doctor Ordered (Comedy)..
July 18—The Concrete Industry (Comedy)......
July 19—The Smuggler (Drama)..............1000

GEORGE KLEINE.

June 16—The Rival Engineers (Cines—Spec.—2 parts—Drama) ....
June 27—A Villain Unmasked (Eclipse Spec.—2 parts—Drama) ....
July 11—The Statue of Fright (Eclipse Spec.—2 parts—Drama ....

LUBIN.

June 23—Rustic Hearts (Drama)..............1000
June 24—At the Telephone (Comedy).......... 400
June 24—The Zulu King (Comedy)........... 600
June 26—The Other Woman (Drama)..........1000
June 27—Bob Buys An Auto (Comedy)........ 400
June 27—The Beaut from Butte (Comedy).... 600
June 28—The Love Test (Drama)............ 1000
June 30—The Penalty of Crime (Special, 2 parts, Drama) 2000
June 30—Her Atonement (Drama).............1000
July 1—Her Husband's Picture (Drama).....1000
July 3—The Angel of the Slums (Drama).....1000
July 4—The Waiter's Strategy (Comedy)..... 400
July 4—The Wrong Hand Bag (Comedy)..... 600
July 5—His Niece from Ireland (Drama).....1000
July 7—The Mysterious Hand (Drama)........1000
July 8—The Profits of the Business (Drama)..1000
July 9—A Hero Among Men (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
July 10—When Love Loses Out (Comedy)...... 400
July 10—Building a Trust (Comedy)........... 600
July 11—On Her Wedding Day (Drama).......1000
July 12—Her Only Boy (Drama)..............1000
July 14—The Apache Kind (Drama)...........1000
July 15—His Better Self (Drama).............1000
July 17—The Wiles of Cupid (Drama)........1000
July 18—The Hidden Bank Roll (Comedy).... 400
July 18—When Mary Married (Comedy)....... 600
July 19—Jim's Reward (Drama)..............1000

MELIES.

June 12—Views of Samarang (Scenic)........
June 19—The Lure of the Sacred Pearl (Drama)
June 19—Diving for Pearl Oysters at Thursday Island (Educational) ....
June 26—The Sultan's Dagger (Drama)......1000
July 3—The Rice Industry in Japan (Industrial) 1000
July 10—His Chinese Friend (Drama)..........1000
July 17—The Poisoned Darts (Drama).........
July 17—A Chinese Funeral (Typical).........

PATHEPLAY.

June 19—The Outlaw's Love (Drama).........
June 20—The Burial of a Rich Chinaman (Manners and Customs).................
June 20—Antibes, France and Its Environs (Scenic) ....
June 20—Monuments and Cascades of Rome (Travel) ....
June 21—The Jury's Verdict (Drama)........
June 23—Pathe's Weekly, No. 26 (News)....
June 24—The Carrier Pigeons (Zoology).......
June 24—How a Blossom Opens (Horticulture).
June 25—The Hunger of the Heart (Drama)...
June 26—Pathe's Weekly No. 27 (News)......
June 26—Clarence the Cowboy (Comedy)......
June 27—The Spotted Elephant Hawk Moth (Zoölogy)..............................
June 27—Athens (Scenic)......................
June 28—The Second Shot (Drama)...........
June 28—The Trapper's Mistake (Special—2 parts—Drama) ....
June 30—Pathe's Weekly, No. 28 (News)......
July 1—The Miracle of the Roses (Drama)...
July 2—The Missionary's Triumph (Drama)..
July 3—The Joy Ride (Comedy)..............
July 3—Pathe's Weekly, No. 29 (News)......
July 4—Consecration of a Buddhist Priest (Manners and Customs)...........
July 4—Pisa (Italy) and Its Curious Monuments (Travel) ....
July 5—A Modern Garrick (Drama)..........
July 5—The Miner's Destiny (Special, 2 parts, Drama) ....
July 7—Pathe's Weekly, No. 30 (News).......
July 8—The Airman's Bride (Drama).........
July 9—The School Ma'am (Drama)..........
July 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 31 (News).......
July 10—Hannigan's Harem (Comedy).........
July 11—Porcelain (Industrial)................
July 12—Dynamite, the New Farm Hand (Ind.)
July 12—A Little Trip Along the Hudson (Sc.)
July 14—Pathe's Weekly, No. 32 (News)......
July 15—Denizens of the Deep (Zoology)......
July 15—Port of Marseilles, France (Scenic)...
July 16—The Snowy Egret and Its Extermination (Zoology) ....
July 17—Pathe's Weekly, No. 33 (News)......
July 17—Easy Money (Comedy)................
July 18—Jiu Jitsu (Sports)....................
July 18—Beautiful Catalogne (Scenic).........
July 18—The Secret Formula (Special—2 parts—Drama) ....
July 19—The Friendless Indian (Drama).......

SELIG.

June 18—Mrs. Hilton's Jewels (Drama)........1000
June 19—The Gold Brick (Comedy)...........1000
June 20—The Fighting Lieutenant (Drama)....
June 20—Fancy Poultry (Zoology).............
June 23—The Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs (Sports)........................1000
June 24—The Marshal's Capture (Drama).....1000
June 25—Papa's Dream (Comedy).............
June 25—The City of Gold (Travel)..........
June 26—When Men Forget (Drama)..........1000
June 27—A Western Romance (Drama)........1000
June 30—The Beaded Buckskin Bag (Drama)..1000
July 1—Songs of Truce (Drama).............1000
July 2—Arabia and the Baby (Drama)........
July 2—The Sultan of Sulu (Educational)....
July 3—In God We Trust (Drama)...........1000
July 4—Sallie's Sure Shot (Drama)..........1000
July 7—The Trail of Cards (Drama)..........1000
July 8—Old Doc Yak (First of the Seligettes Series—Comedy)....................
July 8—A Jolt for the Janitor (Comedy)......
July 9—The Reformation of Dad (Com.-Dr.)..1000
July 10—Made a Coward (Drama).............1000
July 11—Budd Doble Comes Back (Drama).....1000
July 12—A Wild Ride (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
July 14—The Only Chance (Drama)...........1000
July 15—The Tree and the Chaff (Drama).....1000
July 16—Sweeney's Dream (Comedy).........1000
July 17—Put to the Test (Drama)............
July 18—Granny's Old Armchair (Drama).....

VITAGRAPH.

June 19—Bunny's Dilemma (Comedy).........1000
June 20—Delayed Proposals (Comedy)......... 650
June 20—Yokomoma Fire Dept. (Public Safety) 350
June 21—Arriet's Baby (Drama) 1000
June 23—The Lion's Bride (Drama)...........1000
June 23—The Snare of Fate (3 parts—Special—Drama)..............................3000
June 24—No Sweets (Comedy).................1000
June 25—Jack's Chrysanthemum (Com.-Dr.)...1000
June 26—Her Sweetest Memory (Drama)......1000
June 27—One Good Joke Deserves Another (Comedy)...........................
June 27—Field Sports, Hong Kong, China, (Sporting)...........................
June 28—One Over on Cutey (Comedy)....... 870
June 28—Cloisonne Ware (Educational)....... 130
June 30—Roughing the Cub (Comedy).........1000
July 1—Bingles and the Cabaret (Comedy).... 700
July 1—Sight-Seeing in Japan (Scenic)....... 300
July 2—The Song Bird of the North (Drama).1000
July 2—The Tiger Lily (Special, 3 parts, Drama) 3000
July 3—Sweet Deception (Drama)............1000
July 4—An Unwritten Chapter (Drama)......1000
July 5—Love's Quarantine (Comedy).........1000
July 7—The Glove (Drama)...................1000
July 8—Count Barber (Comedy)..............1000
July 9—Solitaires (Comedy)................. 500
July 9—A Millinery Bomb (Comedy)......... 500
July 10—The Carpenter (Drama)..............1000
July 11—A Spirit of the Orient (Drama).......1000
July 12—The Moulding (Drama)...............1000
July 14—O'Hara as a Guardian Angel (Comedy-Drama) 1000
July 14—The Diamond Mystery (Special — 2 parts—Drama) 2000
July 15—My Lady of Idleness (Comedy-Drama).1000
July 16—The Master Painter (Drama).........1000
July 17—Hubby's Toothache (Comedy)......... 500
July 17—Sandy and Shorty Work Together (Comedy) 500
July 18—The Yellow Streak (Drama)..........1000
July 19—The Taming of Betty (Comedy)......1000

Wonderfully Attractive Announcement Slides
Handsome and Most Practical Poster Frames
Everything to Advertise a Moving Picture
American Slide & Poster Co., 1st National Bank Bldg., Chicago

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT TO EXHIBITORS

We have just completed arrangements with THE FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. to handle their entire output of features in NEW YORK STATE and GREATER NEW YORK. This will mean a three or a four reel FEATURE (and when we say feature, we mean all that the word implies), about every week or ten days, the first being about September 1st.

We are now booking the following

NEW YORK STATE AND GREATER NEW YORK

James K. Hackett in "THE PRISONER OF ZENDA"

in four parts. (Licensed by the Motion Picture Patents Co.)

Pronounced by all who have had the good fortune to exhibit it as the most wonderful feature, both from an artistic, as well as financial standpoint, ever produced.

ALSO (FOR NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY)

The Famous CAPT. CHERRY KEARTON'S
Wild Animal Life and Big Game in the Jungles of Africa and India

Featuring Native Lion Hunts in the African Jungle

These pictures are endorsed by the HON. THEODORE ROOSEVELT, THE AMERICAN MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY, THE NEW YORK ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY, AND THE AMERICAN MUSEUM AT WASHINGTON.

We have a complete line of advertising matter, in keeping with the character of these wonderful features.

Send in your name and address in order that we may place same on our mailing list.

For booking on either of the above, wire, write, or phone at once to

THE WM. L. SHERRY FEATURE FILM CO., Inc.

301 Times Building, N. Y. C. Phone, Bryant 5576

Frese Cinematograph Cameras

EFFICIENT ::: RELIABLE ::: DURABLE

Embodying many unique and noteworthy features that appeal to practical cameramen

Frese Cameras and Tripods will be on exhibition in Booth 323 at the Exposition in the Grand Central Palace, New York, July 7-12.

Inspection Cordially Invited ::: Write for Our Circular

RICE & EINSTEIN

1932 CENTER STREET, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

E. M. EINSTEIN, TEMPORARY ADDRESS Hotel Woodstock, New York

State Right Buyers Don't Wait—Wire Now

"THE FORTUNE HUNTER"

In Five Parts

This film is sensational, full of thrills, and "has the punch."

The highest interest is maintained throughout this film by hair-raising races between automobiles, trains, airships, boats, dynamiting of a bridge, etc.

We have a fine line of advertising. 1, 3 and 6 sheet posters.

Our three reel feature, "LOUISE, THE CIRCUS QUEEN," is now ready for delivery.

ROMA AMERICAN FILM CO.
145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK CITY

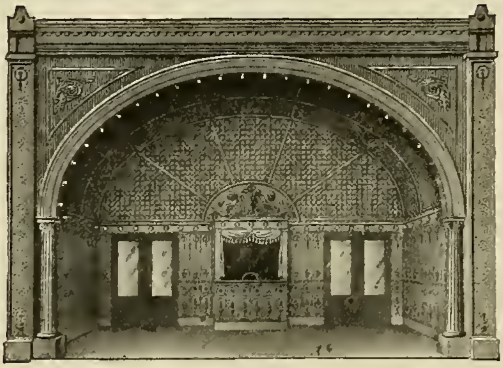
A Handsome Front Attracts



ARTKRAFT

Artistic and Durable Metal Fronts
Beautify the Exterior and "pull" the Business
Special Designs for Theaters

Send for Catalog or let us have sketch of your Front

THE CANTON METAL CEILING COMPANY
1952 Harrison Avenue Canton, Ohio

Sound Effects Produce Natural Shows

It is unnatural to see something happen that naturally produces a noise and hear nothing.

THE EXCELSIOR
SOUND EFFECT CABINET
MANUFACTURED BY ALBERT GENTEL
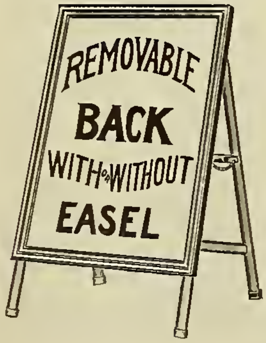
PHILADELPHIA

The Excelsior Sound Effect Cabinet

Produces a combination of more sounds at one time than any other method.
ENLIVENED PICTURES MEAN SUCCESS.
Send for Descriptive Pamphlet.

Albert Gentel, 1503 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia



REMOVABLE
BACK WITH & WITHOUT EASEL

A REAL DRAWING CARD

—Mr. Exhibitor—is an attractive lobby display

What attracts the passerby?

Poster Frames

MANUFACTURED BY

CHICAGO METAL COVERING CO.
2833-41 W. Lake Street CHICAGO, ILL.

Write for illustrated circular and price list

WITH DOOR AND TWO LOCKS WITH EASEL

Look Up "Mere and Mirror"

Webster's Dictionary defines the two words this way:

Mere—such and no more—simple—as mere rubbish—a mere actor.

Mirror — Substance that forms images by the reflection of rays of light; that which gives a true representation, or in which a true image may be seen.

"O! goddess, heavenly bright,
Mirror of grace and majesty divine."
—Spencer.

"Mere Screens and Mirror Screens"

A Mere Screen—is one of either and all of the "painted with some kind of metal" screen, so-called gold, silver, and (some copy our name and add a tail), the same kind which you can duplicate with fifty cents' worth of dope. The kind that will almost cause the eyes to bulge out of their sockets because of the "shine" that makes the haze on the picture, especially if you use enough light. The kind that runs people away from your theater because they hurt the eyes, hurt your pictures and hurt your box-office receipts.

A Mirror Screen—"thou ruling star." Webster had the right idea because it is a real mirror, made of the finest, white, clear silvering quality of polished plate glass, and it is a "goddess of heavenly light" to the motion picture exhibitor.

It gives your patrons $1.00 worth of "Picture Light" where any other screen gives two bits' worth.

It lightens your house; it lightens your pictures; it lightens your worry about a clear picture; it lightens, and will remove, the debt on your theater, because every picture is of "grace and majesty divine."

It has no shine, but catches the image of your film on a SNOW-WHITE surface that is soft and agreeable to the eyes as an opalescent shade on your reading lamp.

It is brilliant, beautiful and makes a friend of your patrons.

It is like looking out of your window into the open sunshine and meadow.

It makes your patrons happy and welcome and that is why they come often.

REMEMBER—many imitate, but there is only one Screen, the "MIRROR SCREEN."

All other screens are "mere" screens.

Get right with your patrons and show them a picture on a "Mirror Screen." It makes an ordinary film look like a feature reel.

Place your order today for a new SNOW-WHITE "MIRROR SCREEN." F. J. Rembusch, Pres.

MIRROR SCREEN CO., SHELBYVILLE, IND.

The Radium Gold Fibre Screen

"The screen you will eventually buy" Has proven superior to all in open competition throughout the country.

We can convince you, Mr. Exhibitor, at the Exposition, July 7-12—Grand Central Palace—New York. Will you let us?

Display in Booth No. 356 and
GENERAL FILM CO.'S THEATRE
(at the Exposition)

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Company,
105 N. Main St., St. Louis,
Sole Manufacturers.

G. H. Callaghan, Sixth Floor, Booth No. 3, Heidelberg Bldg., New York City.

George Breck, 70 Turk Street, San Francisco, Cal.,
Distributors.

The Indian Passion Play
"HIAWATHA"

IN FOUR PARTS

WRITE OR WIRE FOR BOOKING DATE

NEW YORK STATE RIGHTS
Exclusive of Greater New York

Hiawatha Feature Film Co.
1110 Main Street, Buffalo, N.Y.

FEATURES—FOR SALE—FEATURES

Films in A No. 1 Condition

Clean—No Jumps—and Sprocket Condition Perfect

Power of Evil	Vitascope,	3 Reels
Mormon's Vengeance	Cosmo,	3 Reels
Mysteries of Paris	Vitascope,	3 Reels
Yellow Peril	Kuntsfilm,	3 Reels
Through Trials to Victory	Great Northern,	3 Reels
Matrimonial Squalls	Pathe,	3 Reels
Power of Drink	Pathe,	2 Reels
Life's Tragedy	Kuntsfilm,	2 Reels
Mexican Revolution	War Staff,	2 Reels
Convicts 10 and 13	Great Northern,	2 Reels

The above Films are guaranteed by us and will be expressed C. O. D. upon receipt of Ten ($10.00) Dollar Deposit to guarantee return charges.

Write Immediately or Wire

THE AMERICAN FEATURE FILM CO., Ltd., 229 Erie St., Toledo, Ohio

---

EASTMAN

motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

BIO CARBONS
A Better Carbon for Projector Arc Lamps
RECOGNIZED BIO CARBONS BRAND STANDARD
BIO BIO BIO

BIO CARBONS

"Well, Bud — you seem to be happy to-day — what's the cause?"

"Why should'nt I—followed your suggestion and put 'Bio Carbons' in my machine. My pictures are perfect now and the 'Boss' raised my wages."

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK
165 GREENWICH ST.

MILWAUKEE
114 HURON ST.

SAN FRANCISCO
143 SECOND ST.

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES AND SUPPLY DEALERS

HOTEL IMPERIAL

Broadway, 31st to 32d St., New York City

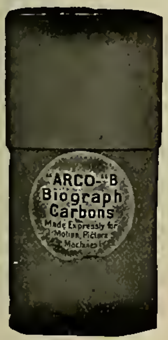
HEADQUARTERS FOR COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORTATION AND ARRANGEMENTS (including Ladies' Reception Committee) FOR MOVING PICTURE EXPOSITION, JULY, 1913

Headquarters for Mr. M. A. Neff, President Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Headquarters for Mr. S. H. Trigger, President Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New York. State convention is to be held in Hotel Imperial, Saturday, July 5th, 1913.

A hotel of the highest class, but with no fads nor fancies; a comfortable home for rest and recreation in which to meet your friends. Convenient to Grand Central Palace, where Exposition is to be held; one block from Pennsylvania Station, near New York Central Terminal, center of theatre and shopping district. Special accommodations for ladies. Write for booklet. Special rates to exhibitors, delegates and their friends.

ROBERT STAFFORD
Proprietor

COPELAND TOWNSEND
Manager



SIEMENS & CO. manufacture but One Grade of Picture Carbons.

These are Imported and sold under our mark as

"Biograph Brand"

All 12" Carbons are double-pointed.

Packed only in Cartons, as shown.

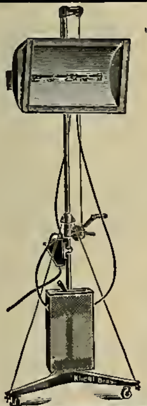
L. E. FRORUP & CO.
232 GREENWICH ST. NEW YORK

Do You Want One? It's Free

Our special Picture Show Souvenir and Premium catalog has just come from the press. It lists children's souvenirs from 45c. per gross up, and special souvenirs suitable for ladies at all prices.

With each request for one of the catalogs we will send you our leaflets, How to Increase the Attendance at Picture Shows, and A New Scheme Which Will Increase Your Attendance at Absolutely No Cost To You Whatever. It's All Free—A Postal Will Do—But Hurry.

TAKITO, OGAWA & CO.
156 W. Lake St. CHICAGO, ILL.



Kliegl Bros.

KLIEGLIGHT ARC LAMP

Universally recognized as the best light producing apparatus for taking motion pictures.

UNIVERSAL ELECTRIC STAGE LIGHTING CO.
Kliegl Bros., Props.
240 W. 50th St. New York

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(Incorporated)
50 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines Repaired by Expert Mechanics. Genuine Parts Only Used

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens
Chairs
Tickets
Pianos
Bio & Electra Carbons
Special Gundlach Lenses
Condensers
Edison Transformers
Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Asbestos State Booths
Asbestos Wire
Switches
Plugs
Spotlights
Gas Making Outfits
Limes
Film-Cement
Branch General Disinfectant Co.
Scenery, Stage Effects
Theaters Bought, Sold, Rented

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

WIRE NOW! ONLY A LITTLE TERRITORY LEFT! WIRE NOW!

The Indian Passion Play HIAWATHA In Four Parts
4000 Feet

Remaining territory will be sold regardless of value so that my exclusive attention may be devoted to the out-of-door production now playing in New York

A COMPLETE LINE OF ADVERTISING AND ACCESSORIES

F. E. MOORE, Times Bldg., New York

ASK FOR 16 PAGE BOOKLET OF VIEWS AND REVIEWS

RAMO

Copyright 1913 Wray Physioc

Our Fifth Release

JULY 9th

"MAN AND WOMAN"

A Two-Reel Feature Picture in 240 Scenes

MARY ALDEN and STUART HOLMES in "MAN AND WOMAN"

A BOOST FOR THE EXHIBITOR

3-Sheet Posters in 5 Colors
Photographs for Lobby Display

Herald and Artistic Printing Matter to pass along to your patrons

RAMO
102 WEST 101st STREET NEW YORK CITY

CLOW BUBBLE DRINKING FOUNTAINS

(Maddens Patent)

Clow Bubble Fountain in front of Orpheum Theater, Chicago. The R-735 is also made for support from wall instead of floor.

Placed in the Lobby or Foyer of Your Theatre Means Increased Attendance and Increased Profits

The owners of a motion picture theatre in Chicago installed one Clow R-735 Bubble Drinking-Fountain in the lobby. It proved such an attraction they immediately placed Clow Bubble Drinking Fountains in all the theatres controlled by them in Chicago.

WHY? BECAUSE IT PAID!

Many will stop for a drink that would not stop to look at a lithograph or glaring sign. The Clow Fountain stops them and while their thirst is being quenched the desire for entertainment is being awakened. What is the result?

THEY GO STRAIGHT TO THE TICKET WINDOW

SPECIAL CIRCULAR SHOWING BUBBLE DRINKING-FOUNTAINS SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR MOTION PICTURE THEATRES ON REQUEST.

JAMES B. CLOW & SONS
Sole Manufacturers, Harrison Street Bridge, Chicago

SALES OFFICES

New York
Whitehall Bldg.

St. Louis
Minneapolis

Milwaukee
Kansas City

San Francisco
Los Angeles

WE ARE SPECIALISTS

ON THEATRE VENTILATION

ILG • SELF COOLED MOTOR • FAN
ILG
CHICAGO
USA
ILG ELEC VENT CO
48 IN
120 OM

Let Us Give You
a Proposition on Fans or Blowers for Your House

ILG ELECTRIC
VENTILATING CO.
160 Whiting St., CHICAGO
New York Office: 13 Park Row

A NOTICE TO THE TRADE

OUR COMPACT MARVEL CAMERA OUTFIT

FOR EXHIBITORS

Has Revolutionized the Motion Picture Theatre Business

THIS CAMERA is made by WILLIAMSON of London, manufacturers of Motion Picture Cameras for more than 15 years. Before buying a camera we ask you to inspect ours.

This machine is used by theatres all over the country and some of the largest concerns in the world, namely:

General Electric Co.	Craig Colony for Epileptics
Public Service Corp., of N. J.	Western Electric Company
Department of the Interior	Bureau of Investigating Mine Accidents
Burke & James	Lumiere Jougla Company

WATCH FOR OUR EXHIBIT at the FIRST INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION OF MOTION PICTURE ART at the New Grand Central Palace, July 7th to 12th, BOOTHS Nos. 305-306.

PRICE $150.00 COMPLETE

CATALOGUES MAILED ANYWHERE ON REQUEST

WHYTE-WHITMAN COMPANY
36 E. 23rd Street Sole Agents New York City

THURSDAY
Comedy
THE FRONTIER TWINS
Are making a hit
DON'T MISS THEM

SATURDAY
Drama
Aug. 2d—"A Brand from the Burning"
Full of Thrills
WATCH FOR IT

FRONTIER

THAT POPULAR WESTERN BRAND RELEASED THROUGH THE UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

DEVELOPING, PRINTING, INDUSTRIAL WORK, the best at reasonable prices

CAMERA MEN SENT ANYWHERE GET OUR PRICES

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
25th and Montgomery Streets ST. LOUIS. MO.

MAKING A GOOD LIVING

And Saving Money Besides with a

SEVENTY-FIVE DOLLAR IDEAL MOTION PICTURE CAMERA

BEST opportunity ever offered exhibitors and Moving Picture Fans to make money, taking original moving pictures of your friends, theatre patrons, current events, weddings, outings, industrial pictures, etc.

The most complete, compact, concise, Moving Picture Camera on the market.

The only cheap thing about it is the price.

There is room for all in this field, but the wise ones will buy now and get in on the ground floor.

Send for Complete Catalogue at once

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO., Inc.
FIVE WEST FOURTEENTH STREET :: NEW YORK

Feature Films vs.
2&3 Reel Films

Our Feature Films are Spectacular and Magnificent Subjects.

Two and three subjects are often single subjects drawn out.

We have both.

Give us an order and you will buy regular.

Send for Lists

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS, Inc.
5 WEST 14th STREET
NEW YORK

ELECTRA

BRILLIANT LIGHT

"ELECTRA"
MADE ESPECIALLY FOR MOVING PICTURE WORK
ELECTRA
PINK LABEL
TRADE MARK
GUARANTEE OF PERFECT PROJECTION
FOR A.C. & D.C.
CARBONS

Hugo Reisinger
SOLE IMPORTER
11 Broadway New York

STEADY ARC

ELECTRA

ELECTRA

ELECTRA

MR. EXHIBITOR: Be Sure to See

KINEMACOLOR

at the EXPOSITION

The Latest Productions in NATURAL COLOR Moving Pictures, including DRAMAS — COMEDIES — TRAVELS — TOPICALS and FASHIONS, will be exhibited hourly in the

KINEMACOLOR THEATRE (Mezzanine Floor)

Mechanical Exhibit, showing 35-AMPERE Machine, at the

KINEMACOLOR BOOTH

(Main Aisle, near entrance)

"SEEING IS BELIEVING"

WE'LL GET YOU YET!

HAVE YOU SEEN "MOTORCYCLE MAC"? Read about him in last week's issue.

DID YOU EVER BUY A DOLLAR'S WORTH FROM US? IF YOU HAD you would know that for every dollar you spend you would have received a whole dollar's worth of real value.

DON'T INSTALL THAT NEW MACHINE UNTIL YOU WRITE US! We are headquarters for all standard makes of machines; for GENUINE Repair parts and for accessories and supplies of every description.

WE SPECIALIZE IN ALL MAKES OF SECOND-HAND MACHINES—WE BUY—WE SELL—WE TRADE—WE RENT any kind of a Moving Picture Machine.

ARE YOU USING OUR TICKET DISPENSER? DO YOU NEED ELECTRIC FANS?

OUR SLOGAN IS

EVERYTHING FROM SCREEN TO BOOTH

THE AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY, 160-A North Fifth Avenue, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

EYE COMFORT LIGHTING System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium..............................
Ceiling Height..............................
Width of House..............................
Name..............................

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.

Chicago
229 W. Jackson Blvd.

New York
505 Fifth Ave.

WANTED

Moving picture firm to take wild animal pictures of lions, leopards, elephants, etc.

The Biggest African Hunt in the History of the World

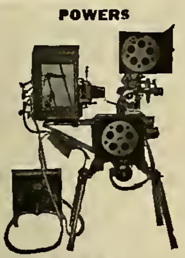
The five greatest animal trainers of the world. The fifty most famous hunters of America. Five hundred people in the expedition are going to hunt, trap and collect wild animals and big game.

Persons who like to join the party write for information

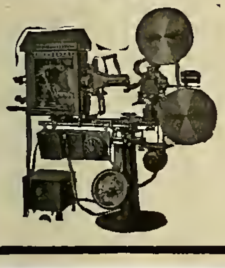
PAUL BOURGEOIS

485 Tompkins Avenue Brooklyn, N. Y.

POWERS



MOTIOGRAPH



Carbons : Tickets : Chairs : All Machine Parts

We Are Authorized Jobbers of These

MACHINES

We've Got What You Want

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Complete

PROMPT SHIPMENTS

We Receive Your Order in the Morning Mail. Shipment on its way to you by Noon.

Did You Get Our Catalogue?

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO.

The Biggest Motion Picture Supply House in America

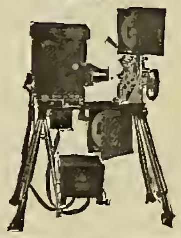
MAIL ORDERS FILLED

21 E. 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Condensers : Slides : Rewinds : Screens : Reels : Reel Cases

SIMPLEX

EDISON



HIS FIRST CINEMATOGRAPHIC APPEARANCE IN AMERICA

THEODORE BURGARTH

Actor and Stage Director of the IRVING PLACE THEATRE, New York City, acting the Leading Part in this most thrilling financial Drama in FOUR ACTS

TORTURES WITHIN PRISON WALLS

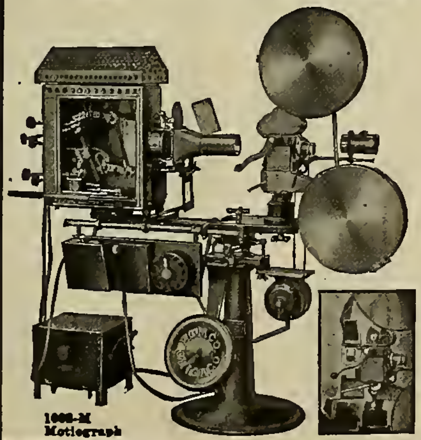
Will be ready for delivery to State Right Buyers about July the First.

One, Three and Six Sheet Lithographs, Heralds and Photographs.

NEW YORK FILM CO., 145 West 45th Street, New York City

NEVER AN ANXIOUS MOMENT

When You Have a Motiograph Installed in Your Booth.



1008-M Motiograph

Insist gently, but firmly that your dealer show you the merit of the latest model of this THE MACHINE OF QUALITY.

Do you know about our service department?
Do you know the Motiograph guarantee?
Do you know this is a "built" machine and distinctly different from an "assembled" one?
If your dealer knocks—write us.

Manufactured by

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company

Main Office and Factory, 564-572 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

Eastern Office
21 East 14th Street, New York City

Western Office
833 Market Street, San Francisco

For the Best Feature Attraction

With the greatest lobby display, write, phone or wire

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405 Schiller Bldg. Chicago

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME
THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY
NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theaters and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use. Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich. New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissel Blk. Philadelphia: 1943 Market St. Nashville, Tenn.: 316 No. 4th Ave.

Steel standards will not break

Steel or Cast Iron Standards in many styles

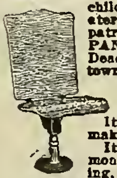
Southern California representative, California Seating Co., 1109 Van Nuys Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

N. W. representative, H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave., Seattle, Wash.

The Wisconsin Seating Company

NEW LONDON
WISCONSIN, U. S. A.

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!



Think of the motherless, the fatherless, and the childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI-PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 28 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iroquois Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible. Our chair is a friend to the Public.

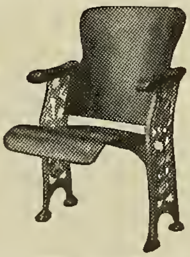
It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.

It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

It will make your theater all aisles. It is the only sanitary chair. It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree, Write today for circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

Send for our prices before buying



OPERA
Latest in Seats

CHAIRS
Best in Seats

BENNETT SEATING CO.
36 EAST 3rd ST. CINCINNATI, O.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
The A. H. Andrews Co.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office, 1165 Broadway.
Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 728 Mission St.

It pays to discriminate when you buy

THEATRE SEATING

WRITE TODAY for Cat. V2 (Moving Picture Chairs) and Cat. V3 (Upholstered Chairs) Send Floor Sketch for Free Seating Plan.

Widest range of styles and prices. Large stocks.

American Seating Company

218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO. 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK

Knock down camera Box and Machined Parts $35.00. Lens $25.00 up.

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA GUIDE

Published by E. W. Lavezzi, cameraman, inventor, manufacturer and originator of the make your own of knock down Moving Picture Camera.

Tells what uses you can make of the camera, where you can sell your negative and positive films, and ways to get the highest prices and method of putting it on the market, where you can obtain film, have it developed, etc. The only work of its kind in print.

Get this information before you buy a camera—price $1.50.

The only way to get a high-priced camera for little money—make it yourself,

Credit for guide on purchasing a camera outfit,

Plain tripod $10.00
Panoramic and tilting, $10.00 extra.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS, Advertising Bldg., Chicago

ITALA BIG FILMS

THE WORLD'S MASTER PRODUCTIONS

FAMOUS FOR
"THE FALL OF TROY"-"PALACE OF FLAMES"-"TIGRIS"
AND OTHER SUCCESSES

2 ACTUAL FEATURES EVERY MONTH 2
COPYRIGHTED

COMING

EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY AVAILABLE NOW

THE DEATH KNELL
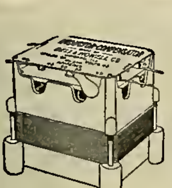
THREE REELS

WRITE FOR DETAILED PROPOSITION TODAY

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA
805 COLUMBIA THEATRE, NEW YORK
HARRY R. RAVER DIRECTOR GENERAL



THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

ALWAYS MAKES GOOD

Means are provided for five points of amperage adjustment, 40, 45, 50, 55, 60. For Sale by all dealers, or

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY
217 WEST ILLINOIS STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

How Will I Get Better Pictures?

Use a Surehold Shutter Setter Patent allowed

The best piece of mechanism ever devised for setting an outside shutter instantly. Its action is positive and accurate. Will adjust to one-thousandth of an inch in a moment's notice, producing a sharp, clear and flickerless picture; nothing like it on the market.

Over two thousand in use in the last year. No operator should be without one.

On receipt of check, money order, for $5.00, a SUREHOLD SHUTTER SETTER will be sent prepaid the following mail.

Sold exclusively by the inventor and patentee. No agents or middle men to divide profits, while you reap that advantage of buying direct from us.

Absolute satisfaction guaranteed; your money refunded if our claims are not one hundred per cent better than outlined.

Reference—Northwestern National Bank, Bellingham, Wash.

McILVANIE MACHINE WORKS
1907 H STREET BELLINGHAM, WASH.

WURLITZER

World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856

BIJOU DREAM
5
5
5
6021
6021

A Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra is used inside this theatre.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 127-121 E. 4th
NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d
CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash
PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS 912 Pine St.
CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road
BUFFALO 701 Main
LOUISVILLE 426 W. Greene
COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

SPECIFY

GUNDLACH Projection Lenses

when ordering new machines

You may as well get the best lenses with the machine as to buy them later.

Supplied to order with Powers Cameragraph, Motiograph, Simplex, Standard

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.
808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

ITS ALL IN THE LENS

THE VIVAPHONE

SINGING AND TALKING PICTURES

A SUCCESS EVERYWHERE

THE GREATEST OF THEM ALL!

See article Moving Picture World
Page 1347, Issue June 28, 1913

Simplicity, Perfection and Cheapness Our Chief Points

Remember This and Get in Touch With Us.

For State Rights Apply

Vivaphone & Films Sales Co.

INCORPORATED

110-112 West 40th Street, New York City
Phone 3095 Bryant ROOM 1803

A. Blinkhorn, Sole Agent U.S.A. and Canada

THE DIVINE TRAGEDY OF THE CHRISTIAN MARTYRS

"QUO VADIS?"

"WHITHER GOEST THOU?"

3 REEL PRODUCTION

AN AMAZING SPECTACLE OF TERRIFYING VIVIDNESS FAITHFULLY PORTRAYED

COPYRIGHTED AND FULLY PROTECTED

NO COMPETITION IN THE MOVING PICTURE FIELD

Breaking Box Office Records Everywhere

Last Call Last Call

ONLY A FEW STATES LEFT

Wisconsin — Texas — North and South Dakota — Arkansas — Mississippi — Eastern Canada, including Ontario, Quebec—Maritime Provinces

Above States will be Sold at a Bargain

For Bookings Address Following State Right Owners

Pennsylvania; New York; except Greater New York - Buffalo Feature Film Ex. Buffalo, N. Y.
New Jersey; Delaware; Maryland; D of C. - - - New Jersey Feature Film Co., Newark, N. J.
Missouri; Iowa; Colorado; Oklahoma; Nebraska - Quo Vadis Feature Film Co., of Mo. COMMERCE BLDG. KANSAS CITY, MO.
New England - W. E. Green, 100 BOYLSTON STREET BOSTON, MASS.
Illinois - Paul DeOuto, GREAT NORTHERN HOTEL CHICAGO, ILLS.
Western Canada - Rex Feature Film Co., CALGARY, CANADA
Michigan - A. W. Blankmeyer, 87 WOODWARD AVE. DETROIT, MICH.
Ohio - Electric Theatre Advertising Co., Dayton, Ohio;
Indiana - C. S. Dunn, Peru, Ind.
Tennessee - W. R. Hart, Florence, Ala.
California; Washington; Oregon; Nevada; Arizona; Idaho; Utah; Montana; Wyoming; New Mexico - - - H. O. Martin, ANGELUS HOTEL Los Angeles, Cal.

WIRE NOW WIRE NOW

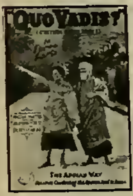
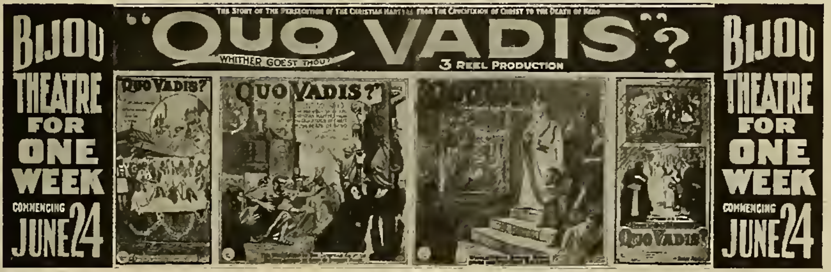
QUO VADIS FILM CO., SOLE DISTRIBUTORS
145 West 45th Street - New York City, U. S. A.

Most Magnificent Line of Pictorial Printing Ever Made for a Film

State Right Owners: Send Orders Direct to the Otis Lithograph Co., Cleveland, Ohio

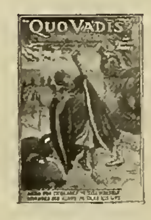


ONE SHEET

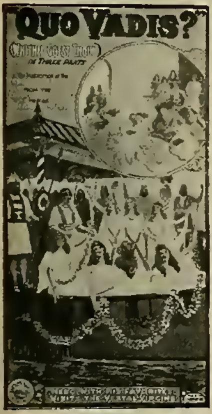


BIJOU THEATRE FOR ONE WEEK COMMENCING JUNE 24
"QUO VADIS"?
WHITHER GOEST THOU
3 REEL PRODUCTION
QUO VADIS?
QUO VADIS?
QUO VADIS?
BIJOU THEATRE FOR ONE WEEK COMMENCING JUNE 24

THIRTY-TWO SHEET

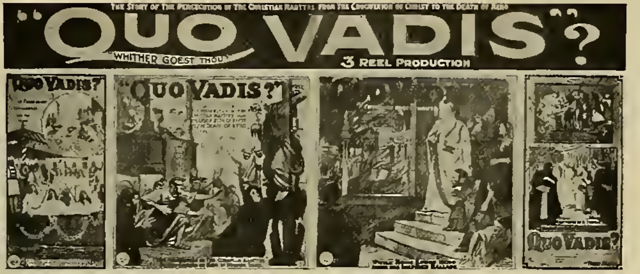


ONE SHEET



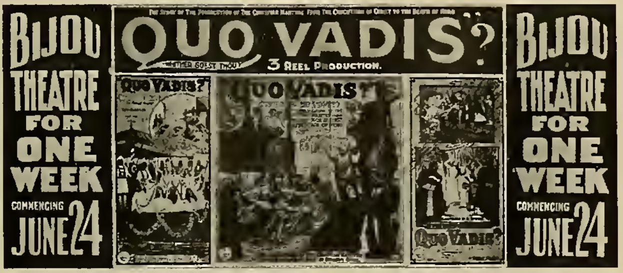
QUO VADIS?
WHITHER GOEST THOU
IN THREE PARTS

THREE SHEET



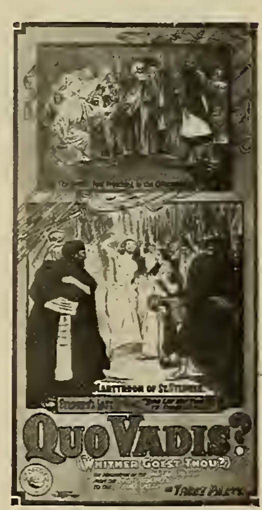
"QUO VADIS"?
WHITHER GOEST THOU
3 REEL PRODUCTION
QUO VADIS?
QUO VADIS?
QUO VADIS?

TWENTY-FOUR SHEET



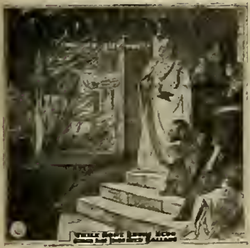
BIJOU THEATRE FOR ONE WEEK COMMENCING JUNE 24
QUO VADIS"?
WHITHER GOEST THOU
3 REEL PRODUCTION.
QUO VADIS?
QUO VADIS?
QUO VADIS?
BIJOU THEATRE FOR ONE WEEK COMMENCING JUNE 24

TWENTY-FOUR SHEET

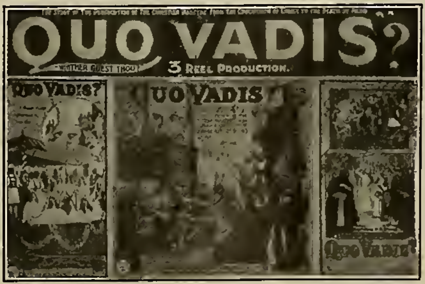


QUO VADIS?
WHITHER GOEST THOU?
IN THREE PARTS

THREE SHEET

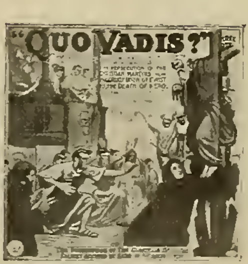


SIX SHEET



QUO VADIS"?
WHITHER GOEST THOU
3 REEL PRODUCTION.
QUO VADIS?
QUO VADIS
QUO VADIS?

SIXTEEN SHEET



SIX SHEET

SHADOWS OF THE PAST.

Majestic

You Must Not Miss "Critic's-Find" Billington (as they call Her) Now in

NEW MAJESTIC'S "Shadows of the Past"

"Critic's Find" Billington—Miss Francella Billington properly—the wonderful photoplayer who was brought out of the obscurity of "extra work" into the fame of NEW MAJESTIC "leads" by a critic's notice in the Moving Picture World, is the heroine of "Shadows of the Past," which Philip Lonergan wrote particularly for her. The new-and-sudden film star shows her appreciation of the special scenario by a line of dramatic work that will get a grip on the emotions of every man, woman and child in the audience. They'll all become Billington fans, just as they're now Mace fans and Garwood fans! When you get your patrons "going" about EVERY ONE of the New Majestic stars—asking about them, demanding their films, applauding their appearances—when you get this result YOU ARE BUILDING UP A STRONG LIST OF "REGULARS." Released Sunday, July 6.

LAMAR JOHNSTONE and Ann Drew are Surely Worth Seeing in

"ONE OF THE FINEST"

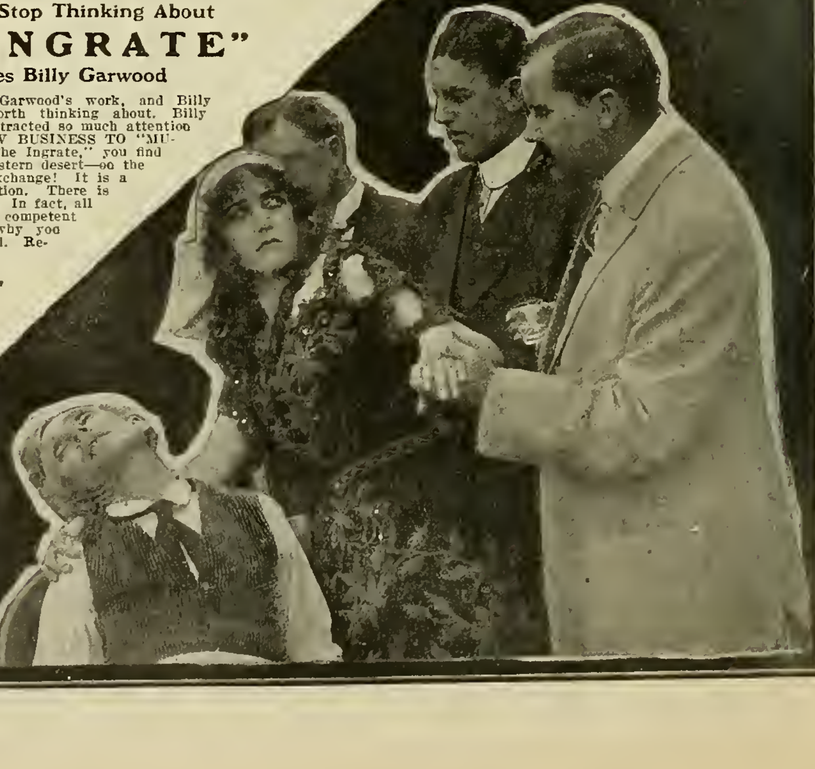
These newer New Majestic stars must not be forgotten when you're building up that list of "regulars." They are very capable players and if you show their films enough, there will be strong, regular interest in them. So be sure to show this one! It has a great rescue scene that will bring the audience to its feet every time. As you may guess from the title, "One of the Finest" is a police story. Police stories—New Majestic police stories—may always be counted on to grip, for a copper's life is a thrilling one. Released Tuesday, July 8.

Never Stop Thinking About

"THE INGRATE"

For it Features Billy Garwood

And Billy Garwood, and Billy Garwood's work, and Billy Garwood's popularity, are all worth thinking about. Billy Garwood is one of the forces that attracted so much attention to New Majestics and SO MUCH NEW BUSINESS TO "MUTUAL SERVICE" EXCHANGES. In "The Ingrate," you find him revenging a robbery of the silent Western desert—on the crowded floor of the New York Stock Exchange! It is a thrilling flash from desolation to civilization. There is a strong supporting company for Garwood. In fact, all the New Majestic stars are surrounded by competent people, which is an additional reason why you should get every New Majestic produced. Released Saturday, July 12.



"NEW MAJESTIC"

(C. J. HITE, Producing Manager)

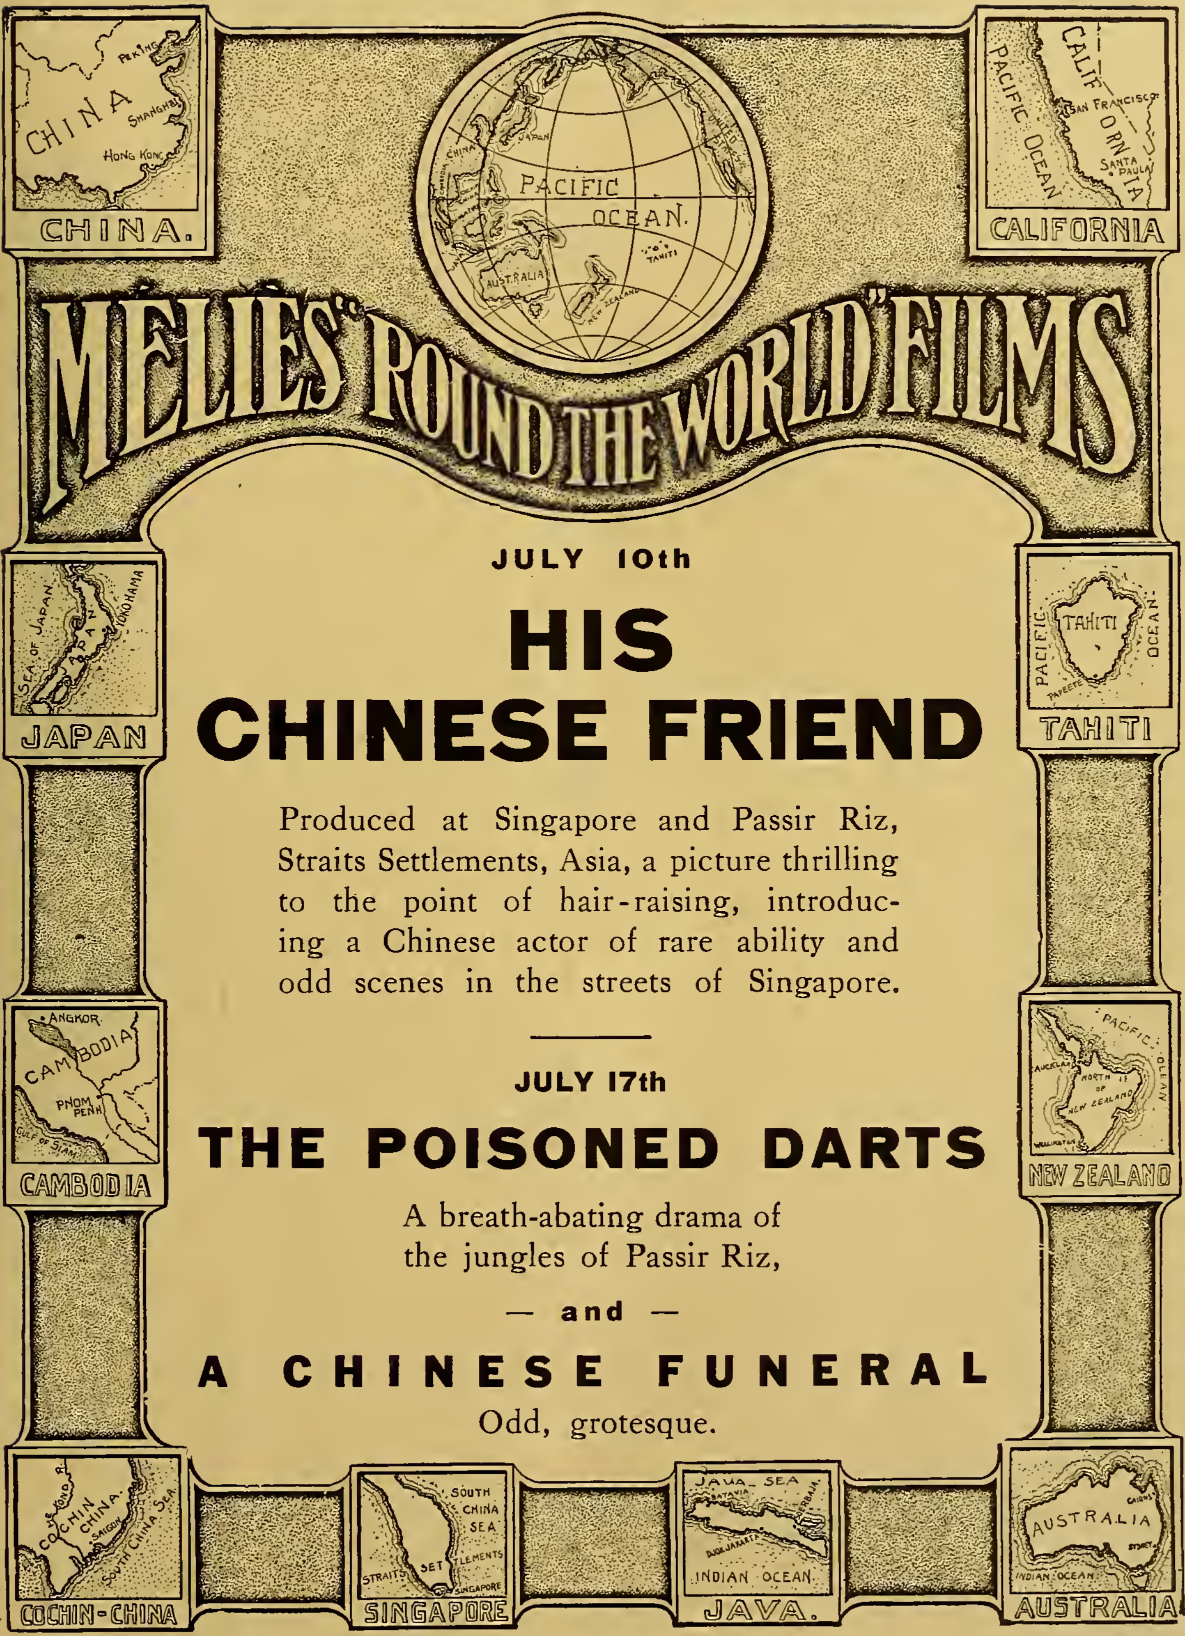
Business Offices,
New Rochelle, N. Y.

All-Year-Round
Studios, Brooklyn Heights,
Los Angeles,
Cal.



CHINA
PEKING
SHANGHAI
HONG KONG
CHINA.
PACIFIC OCEAN.
CHINA
JAPAN
AUSTRALIA
NEW ZEALAND
TAHITI
CALIFORNIA
SAN FRANCISCO
SANTA PAULA
PACIFIC OCEAN
CALIFORNIA
SEA OF JAPAN
JAPAN
YOKOHAMA
JAPAN
TAHITI
PACIFIC OCEAN
PAPEETE
TAHITI
ANGKOR
CAMBODIA
PNOM PENH
GULF OF SIAM
CAMBODIA
PACIFIC OCEAN
AUCKLAND
NORTH IS OF NEW ZEALAND
WELLINGTON
NEW ZEALAND
COCHIN CHINA
SAIGON
SOUTH CHINA SEA
COCHIN-CHINA
SOUTH CHINA SEA
STRAITS SETTLEMENTS
SINGAPORE
SINGAPORE
JAVA SEA
BATAVIA
SOERABAJA
DJOKJAKARTA
INDIAN OCEAN
JAVA.
AUSTRALIA
CAIRNS
SYDNEY
INDIAN OCEAN
AUSTRALIA

MÉLIÈS "ROUND THE WORLD" FILMS

JULY 10th

HIS CHINESE FRIEND

Produced at Singapore and Passir Riz, Straits Settlements, Asia, a picture thrilling to the point of hair-raising, introducing a Chinese actor of rare ability and odd scenes in the streets of Singapore.

JULY 17th

THE POISONED DARTS

A breath-abating drama of the jungles of Passir Riz,

— and —

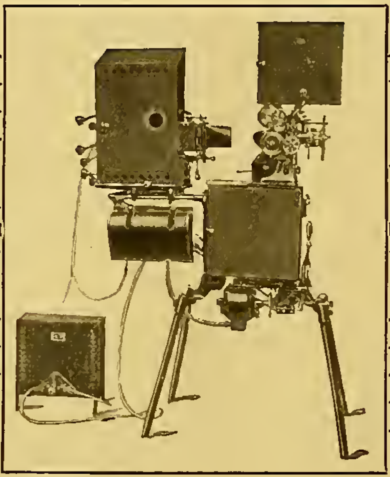
A CHINESE FUNERAL

Odd, grotesque.

See the Perfect Moving Picture Machine

Power's Cameragraph Number 6A



POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6A will be displayed at the First International Exhibition of the Moving Picture Art, which occurs at Grand Central Palace, New York City, July 7th-12th, 1913.

Spaces 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348.

Expert demonstrators will explain fully all details of this PREMIER PROJECTOR.

Ask them About:

The INTERMITTENT MOVEMENT

Ask them About:

The LOOP SETTER

Ask them why:

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH SALES REPRESENT OVER 65 PER CENT. OF THE MOVING PICTURE MACHINE OUTPUT OF AMERICA.

Our factory is the largest and best equipped of its kind in the world. We shall be pleased to have you inspect it.

Catalogue G gives full details

Nicholas Power Company
88-90 Gold Street
NEW YORK

The Leading Makers of Motion Picture Machines

Vol. 17. No. 3 July 19, 1913 Price, 10 Cents

H. E. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Her Rosary" (Reliance).

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

NEW YORK

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

TANNHÄUSER

CONVENTIONITES: Ask at the Grand Central Palace for the Thanhouser canes and chain-fans, novelties worth carrying home with you!
INDEPENDENT CONVENTIONITES: Write your exchange man FROM YOUR NEW YORK HOTEL that you MUST have on your return

Marguerite Snow and James Cruze in TANNHAUSER. After the Opera, 3 reels, Tuesday, the 15th
Maude Fealy in LITTLE DORRIT. After Dickens, 2 reels, Tuesday, the 29th

THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

Released Sunday, July 13th, A CREPE BONNET

The children are in sorrow, for their pet doll is dead—broken, that is. They must have a funeral, even hang crepe on the door for her. But passing grown-ups know naught of the doll's "death" and conclude there is a real one at the house with the hanging crepe.

Released Tuesday, July 15th, TANNHAUSER

In three reels, this "Classic" tells the story of the picturesque minstrel knight of the famous opera and his winning of the beautiful Elizabeth—to tragically lose her. There are one-sheets, threes and sixes, Hennegan and Schreiber Heralds, Standard cuts, Kraus lobby photos and Scott and Van Altena slides.

NO RELEASE Friday, July 18th because of three-reeler of preceding Tuesday.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION, New Rochelle, N. Y.

THANHOUSER STARS! THANHOUSER FEATURES! THANHOUSER QUALITY!

COMING! All the time—to your lobby. THE THANHOUSER PLAYERPOSTER. It solves the posterless reel problem. Ask your exchange man the cost.

COMING! A staggering list of THANHOUSER CLASSICS, in two and three reels and featuring such stars as Maude Fealy, Marguerite Snow, James Cruze, Flo La Badie, Mignon Anderson, William Russell, Harry Benham, the Kid and Kidlet

COMING! Sunday, July 20. "Brethren of the Sacred Fish," a comedy of secret signs and signals that will make you laugh heartily.

FIVE-A-WEEK

Essanay

COMING SOON! COMING SOON!

A Multiple Reel "Broncho Billy" Feature

WATCH FOR RELEASE DATE

Release of Tuesday, July 15th.

"Something Rotten in Havana"

"When Ignorance Is Bliss"

These two comedies are "world beaters" for laugh provoking and audience "getters." If you like comedies, book these.

Released Wednesday, July 16th.

"The Great Raymond"

A splendid reel of magic mysteries performed by The Great Raymond. The more you see the less you know. Book this.

Released Thursday, July 17th.

"The Heart of a Gambler"

This is one of those heart interest Western dramas that grips your audiences.

Released Friday, July 18th.

"Every Thief Leaves a Clue"

An exposé. An up-to-date drama showing the up-to-date manner in which an insurance company runs its man to earth.

Released Saturday, July 19th.

"The Two Ranchmen"

A unique Western drama with just enough comedy in it to make it very, very interesting. Book this today.

Released Monday, July 21st Released Monday, July 21st

"TAPPED WIRES"

In TWO REELS

AN UP-TO-DATE DRAMATIC SENSATION. SEE HOW AN OFFICE BOY OUTWITS A LARGE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE. THE SCENES IN THIS REMARKABLE FEATURE ARE GRIPPING IN THE EXTREME. BOOK IT. SPECIAL HERALDS NOW READY. ORDER YOUR ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR DIRECT FROM US.

THE PUBLIC ARE WISE—DEMAND NEW, CLEAN POSTERS. Three sheet posters of all Saturday releases will boom your business. Posters are lithographed in full four colors, 35c. each. You can order these from your exchange or direct from Essanay Film Mfg. Co., 521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of Essanay players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the Players' Photo Co., 177 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill.
Branch Offices in London. Paris. Berlin. Barcelona

NOTICE: This wonderful "101-Bison" subject is accompanied by the most costly one, three and SIX-SHEET POSTERS ever used for moving pictures! Don't miss them!

"Robinson Crusoe"

Make a note this very minute
that this wonderful
"101-Bison" will be released

TUESDAY, JULY 29th

THE GREATEST AND MOST MASTERLY 3 REEL FILM OF THE AGE

At last we have fixed the release date on this glorious feature. We predict that it will be the most talked-of production of years. Competitors who have seen advance exhibitions of it have said freely and openly that it is PERFECTION!

12¢ PER FOOT

Don't Haggle With Your Exchange About Price!

Get the earliest possible booking, whatever the cost may be, and then flood your town or neighborhood with the exquisitely beautiful posters that have been made for this great feature. And don't forget that the release date is

TUESDAY, JULY 29th

Advance Tip: — We will soon release "Ivanhoe," produced by our special company in England, directed by Herbert Brenon with KING BAGGOT in the title role, supported by Miss Leah Baird (former Vitagraph star) and a wonderful English cast. The very fact that English exhibitors have gone fairly mad over this $25,000 production will give you an idea of what a superb effort our "Ivanhoe" is.

Watch for further details.

UNIVERSAL FILM M'F'G. CO.
1600 BROADWAY
NEW YORK

GAUMONT'S
VERY LATEST SERIES

FanTomas
THE PHANTOM CROOK

No.1 "Fantomas Under the Shadow of the Guillotine"

Part 1 The Robbery at the Royal Palace Hotel
" 2 The Beltham Mystery
" 3 The Mysterious M. Gurn
" 4 Valgrand or Fantomas—Which?

THREE REELS

Novel----Sensational----Dramatic----Mysterious

Fantomas Puts All Other Gentlemen-Crook Dramas OUT OF SIGHT!

States Right Buyers and Exhibitors
"To Be or Not To Be?"
There Can Be No Question!
DO IT NOW!!

WIRE GAUMONT
FLUSHING NEW YORK FOR BEDROCK RIGHTS

RELIANCE

THE MOST REMARKABLE FEAT OF CHARACTER ACTING
EVER ATTEMPTED IN THE HISTORY OF THE STAGE.

RELEASED
SATURDAY
JULY 12TH

IRVING CUMMINGS
IN

"ASHES"

SPECIAL
ONE THREE & EIGHT SHEET
POSTERS

AN UNUSUAL DRAMA OF ROMANCE, INFATUATION, JEALOUSY,
INTRIGUE AND SACRIFICE BY MARION BROOKS
STAGED BY OSCAR C. APFEL
WITH

IN 2
REELS

IN 2
REELS

EDGENA DE LESPINE

BOBBIE ROBBINS

NORMA PHILLIPS

IRENE HOWLEY

AND ROSEMARY THEBY

MONDAY, JULY 14th

"THE FISHERMAN'S FORTUNE"

A Novel Drama of the Sea, in Which a Man Schemes to Get Possession of His Own Money, Thinking it Belongs to Another.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th

"HER ROSARY"

The Most Artistic Single-Reel Subject Ever Presented. Each Scene, Introduced by a Line from "The Rosary," Dissolving Into the Next With Startling Effect.

SATURDAY, JULY 19th

"THE STRANGE WAY"

An Intensely Interesting Love-Drama With George Siegmann and Isabel Lamon at their Best, Supported by a Splendid Cast.

MANAGER'S NOTE:—High-Class Broadway Production. One and Three Sheet Posters with Every Release. Photos by the Kraus Mfg. Co., 14 East 17th St., N. Y. Slides by Scott & Van Altena, 59 Pearl St., N. Y. C.

Beautiful Player Posters of Edgena De Lespine and Irving Cummings at Your Exchange.

RELIANCE

RELIANCE

MUTUAL SERVICE

MONOPOL FILM CO.
145 W. 45th ST.
N.Y.

MARION LEONARD as a "MAGDALENE" in

"THOSE WHO LIVE IN GLASS HOUSES"

A Modern Dramatic Depiction of the Famous Biblical Quotation from the Book of
St. John, Chapter 8, Verse 7:

> "He That Is Without Sin
> Among You, Let Him First
> Cast a Stone at Her."

Love, hatred, romance, repentance and a true Christian spirit are beautifully blended into a 3-reel story of gripping heart interest.

A production that gives the "RACHEL OF THE SILENT DRAMA" an opportunity to run the entire gamut of human emotions.

MARION LEONARD Productions are now recognized as the "Headliners" of Feature Pictures because they have "Made Good."

You Should Have Them On Your Program.

Write us for Information about the Greatest American Feature

THE SEED OF THE FATHERS

PRODUCTIONS OF MERIT

Jealousy's Trail

A story of disaster and ruin as tribute to the green-eyed monster
Monday, July 21, 1913

Tom Blake's Redemption

A psychological drama, featuring J. Warren Kerrigan, the most popular and versatile photoplay artist

One and three sheet posters — Thursday, July 24, 1913

She Will Never Know

The escapades of a wayward father. Taken from life. Excellent dramatization

One and three sheet posters — Saturday, July 26, 1913

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY

6227-35 EVANSTON AVE., CHICAGO

SOLAX SPECIAL STA

Solax

The PIT and T

ADAPTED FROM THE WELL KNOWN

EDGAR ALLEN POE'S

BLOOD CURDLING DESCRIPTION

OF THE

INQUISITION

-THREE - REELS-

Solax

TE RIGHTS FEATURE

he PENDULUM

EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY FEATURE PROGRAM

ALL-STAR CAST

FEATURING

DARWIN KARR

The screen story vibrates with all the virility and vitality of Poe's incomparable pen. The miner or laborer in Pennsylvania, the office man or clerk in Illinois, the captains of industry and professionals of all parts will alike be thrilled by the production's classic realism. The scenes mirror Poe's compellingly gruesome but not repellent verbal rhapsody.

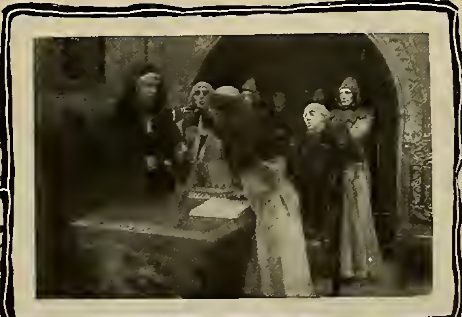
ADVERTISING MATTER INCLUDES three kinds of ones, two kinds of threes, sixes, heralds, lobby photos, and announcement slides.

SOLAX COMPANY
Fort Lee



To the Great Assemblage

of film men gathered to attend the Motion Picture Exposition and Convention, no issue is more important, no question more absorbing, than the type of picture most demanded and most appreciated. It is not taking too much for granted to assert that the greatest and most representative number of these film men would pronounce such a feature as

Adolph Zukor's Astonishing Animal Series

Capt. Cherry Kearton's Wild Life and Big Game in the Jungles of Africa and India

Featuring

Native Lion Hunt in the Heart of the African Jungle

The Greatest Animal Feature Ever Secured!

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING!

The world's most daring animal photographer face to face with savage animals in Borneo, India and Africa; astounding reproductions of wildest Nature's most thrilling scenes; incredible feats of daring and fortitude; in short, Capt. Kearton has accomplished the almost impossible.

This feature is a dignified sensation, and has been highly endorsed by naturalists, scientists and the press. Its value to YOU cannot be estimated in type; the picture, like all other wonders, must be seen to be believed.

You Film Men Who Are Now in New York

take advantage of your presence and your opportunity and make a safe investment of an hour to come over and look at the films. You be the judge—the films will carry conviction.

Unusual lithographs, interesting heralds, realistic lobby displays, authoritative lecture and everything to make it

A BONA FIDE SUCCESS!

ARAB AMUSEMENT COMPANY
TIMES BUILDING NEW YORK CITY

THE HOUSE OF SELIG

SELIG LEADS OTHERS FOLLOW

SELIG CREATES OTHERS IMITATE

SELIG DIVERTING SELECTIONS

A SEXTETTE OF SUBJECTS

Amusing, Informing and Entertaining

All for the Joy of Summer and the Delectation of the Million

July 21st. "The Short-stop's Double." A story of an infatuated baseball fan who almost lost his credit, his money and his position. Full of excitement.

July 22d. "The Senorita's Repentance." A dramatic story of the desert mines of Northern Mexico. Striking pictures, lots of snap and action.

July 23d. "The Unseen Defense." A fine story of emotions aroused by an old church song. A patriotic play of war time and its aftermath.

July 24th. "Two Artists and One Suit of Clothes." An amusing comedietta involving embarrassment from shortage of dress. On the same reel with "In Moro Land." One of Selig's picturesque educationals in our island possessions.

July 25th. "The Acid Test." A strong love drama in which a fair young lady concludes to release a dashing young man in favor of a plodding scientist who saves the family.

July 19th. A great two-reel release, from the pen of Mrs. Otis Skinner. A powerful drama of the day. "The Ne'er to Return Road."

SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

BRANCH OFFICES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
EXECUTIVE OFFICES: 20 E. RANDOLPH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL., U.S.A.

THE WORLDS FOREMOST PRODUCER

PATHÉ'S

A
Y
S BIGGEST P
R
O
F
I

The biggest and permanent feature your house every make new patrons
prestige in your own
both weeklies if you
all the

TWICE

WEEKLY

best film issued, a film which will fill time it's shown, will and add to your neighborhood. Book want all the news time

OUR WINNERS
2
A WEEK

A WEEK

RELEASED SATURDAY, JULY 19th

"The Ne'er to Return Road"

MRS. Otis Skinner wrote this story. A man finds his wife in a dance-hall with another man. A shot—and the intruder falls dead by his own hand. The husband gets a life term, escapes, and staggers, half dead from exposure, into the home of the dead adventurer's mother. What did that mother do? Don't miss this Selig film in two reels.

FOUR OF A KIND THAT FOR

The same standards of reel excellence are behind every multiple feature and every single reel film that comes to you in General Film Service. It is the kind of excellence that fills your motion picture house at every performance

RELEASED MONDAY, JULY 21st

"Tapped Wires"

THE rivalry of two news syndicates is reflected in the humorous feud between two office-boys. One of them discovers the leak that destroys every exclusive story of his company, and then things hum. A railroad wreck, a little sister reported dead and a game kid who sticks to his job through everything—these are the human elements of this gripping picture by Essanay in two reels.

General Film Company

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JULY 23d

"Home, Sweet Home"

A SUCCESSFUL man and his wife wanted his father and mother to live with them. The old home was sold; so was the furniture and the old horse, and into town they moved. How uncomfortable and unhappy they were! But they got everything back and went home again, and—well, it's the kind of story that works straight into your heart and leaves your eyes misty. The Lubin players appear in the sure-fire success in two reels.

MAKE A FULL HOUSE YOU

The kind that builds up your reputation, day by day, and lets your patrons know that whenever they come to your theatre, they are sure to see the best that brains and critical care and tremendous staging resources can supply

RELEASED FRIDAY, JULY 25th

"Honor Thy Father"

A LOYAL girl promises her dying father never to let his money pass into the hands of his scheming wife and dissipated son. She falls ill, they bully and threaten and finally plan to drug her. The violent measures visited upon her when she escapes, and upon her lover after he takes her part, provide a story packed with rapid action. Cines-Kleine produced this rattling good picture in two reels.

200 Fifth Avenue, N.Y.

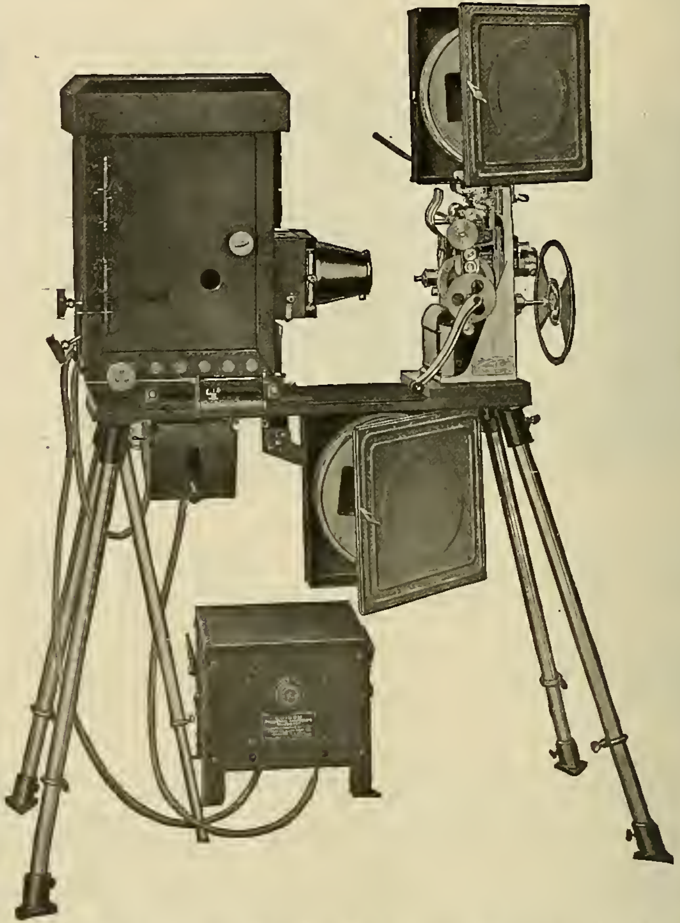
EDISON KINETOSCOPE

1913 MODEL

The machine that will outwear any other projector on the market

HARDENED tool steel in all parts of the intermittent movements and the extra heavy construction of the mitre gears give long life to the Edison. Mechanical simplicity makes it easy to operate. All metal baseboards, floor sockets and extra heavy legs give steadiness. The large lamp house and lamp, permitting the use of a 12" upper and 6" lower carbon, ¾ of an inch in diameter, spell economy.

There are many other points explained in Form 2397. Ask for it.



Price, with 25-40 ampere grid type rheostat--$250

CURRENT EDISON RELEASES

A Tardy Recognition

Drama (1,000). Released Monday, July 21st.

Having disinherited one daughter for marrying against his will, Aldrich finds himself neglected by the other as he grows old. Seeking a rest in the park, he meets the child of his disinherited daughter unknowingly, and she becomes the means of a happy reconciliation.

A Great Metropolitan Newspaper

Taken by courtesy of the New York Herald.

Descriptive-Educational (960). Released Tuesday, July 22nd.

An absorbingly interesting series of pictures which follow the life history of the newspaper from the automatic type setting machine to the hustling, pushing "newsies." From it we gain some idea of the top work precision which is necessary that we may enjoy our paper at the breakfast table.

A Knife of Fire

How Steel is Cut and Welded To-day.

Descriptive (400). Released Wednesday, July 23rd.

Oxygen and acetylene form the "blade" of this marvelous knife which cuts through a piece of Krupp steel 16 inches square in four minutes! Think of a man calmly cutting holes in a boiler with a compass! The days of witchcraft are at hand.

At Midnight

Comedy (600). Released Wednesday, July 23rd.

Crash! Aunty sat up in bed screaming and the terrified family started on a burglar hunt. Papa tiptoed cautiously up stairs and sonny—slightly the worse for wear—Nat came down stairs with an Indian club thinking he was the burglar. When the policeman arrived he found—a mouse.

The Meadow Lark

Drama (1,000). Released Friday, July 25th.

The little choir singer loves the pastor, but she is stage struck and goes to the city where she becomes a chorus girl. Discharged for missing a scene, she goes into vaudeville where the pastor finds her exhausted and takes her back to the daisy fields.

A Proposal From the Duke

Being the first story of "Who will Marry Mary?"

Drama (1,025). Released Saturday, July 26th.

Mary's fortune looms large in the eyes of a penniless Italian Duke who dazzles her by his heroism in rescuing her from a fire—set by a bribed stableman. A real accident shows the Duke's true character and places Mary under obligations to an army officer.

TRADE MARK

Thomas A. Edison

239 Lakeside Avenue, ORANGE, N. J.

LUBIN · FILMS

FIVE RELEASES EACH WEEK

"HIS BETTER SELF" 1000 feet Tuesday, July 15th

A problem play of high class. Featuring Arthur Johnson.

"THE WILES OF CUPID" 1000 feet Thursday, July 17th

A story of beautiful self-sacrifice.

"THE HIDDEN BANK ROLL" 400 feet Friday, July 18th

The laughable consequence of a jag.

"WHEN MARY MARRIED" 600 feet Friday, July 18th

A good joke on a roue employer.

"JIM'S REWARD" 1000 feet Saturday, July 19th

Excellent Western melodrama.

"AN ACTOR'S STRATEGY" 1000 feet Monday, July 21st

An actor does a clever stunt which furnishes a job for the sheriff.

"SPECIAL"—Released July 8th—50th Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg—1,000 feet—taken on the Battle Field.

LUBIN TWO-REEL PICTURES ARE FEATURES

"HOME, SWEET HOME"

SPECIAL

Released Wednesday, July 23rd

A beautiful story of true, loving hearts full of pathos, but not a touch of sadness. John Barbour and his sweet wife, Nell, being well-to-do, did not like seeing Pa and Ma Barbour living in a humble cottage in the country with old traps while they were enjoying a luxurious mansion. So they dismantle the old folks' home and send the sticks to the second-hand shop. Pa and Ma tried to enjoy the new atmosphere, but it was not the old home and they were caught by stealth buying the old furniture back. John and Nell saw their mistake and, giving in, restored the village cottage just as before, with only one addition, a telephone.

LUBIN 5 COLOR POSTERS—One, Three and Six Sheets
From Your Exchange or A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, O.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING CO. PHILADELPHIA U.S.A

VITAGRAPH

SPECIAL FEATURE PRODUCTIONS

IN TWO PARTS

Will be Released Regularly Every Saturday, Beginning Saturday, August 2nd, in place of the one reel releases.

"The Intruder" In Two Parts, Saturday, August 2nd

Written by the well known Dramatist, George Cameron, with Maurice Costello and Mary Charleson in the leading roles.

"The Lineup" In Two Parts, Saturday, August 9th

Written by George Cameron, introducing William Humphrey, Earle Williams and Dorothy Kelly.

"The Curse of the Golden Land"

In Two Parts, Saturday, August 16th

Presenting Courteney Foote and L. Rogers Lytton.

"The Feudists" In Two Parts, Saturday, August 23rd

Written by James Oliver Curwood, featuring John Bunny, Sidney Drew and Flora Finch.

"The Call" In Two Parts, Saturday, August 30th

Edith Storey and E. K. Lincoln, in their respective parts, sustain this great Drama.

They Will Fill Your Houses with People and the People with Delight

CAUSE

VITAGRAPH

Monday, July 14th

"O'HARA AS A GUARDIAN ANGEL" Drama

Always alert to the interests of others. He protects his daughter from her husband's false friend and points the way to happiness.

"MY LADY OF IDLENESS" Society Drama Tuesday, July 15th

"Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do." A foolish young wife is saved from unhappiness by her quick-witted sister. There is a happy sequel.

"THE MASTER PAINTER" Drama Wednesday, July 16th

Through a stroke of good luck and a stroke of genius, a young artist proves greater than his master, and wins a life-long friend.

"HUBBY'S TOOTHACHE"
"SANDY & SHORTY WORK TOGETHER"

Comedies Thursday, July 17th

1. He laughs at his wife's toothache, catches it himself and their sympathy is mutual.
2. They undertake an endless job and then get together with better results.

"THE YELLOW STREAK" Drama Friday, July 18th

In violation of his trust and the confidence of his wife a dishonest man is killed while robbing his own safe.

"THE TAMING OF BETTY" Comedy Drama Saturday, July 19th

She forms a prejudice against a worthy suitor. Her brother disabuses her mind and she acclaims the worthy fellow her hero and ideal.

SIX-A-WEEK

"THE ONLY WAY"
THIS IS IT—Monday, JULY 21st.
"THE PICKPOCKET"
COMEDY—TUESDAY, JULY 22nd.
"AN ERROR IN KIDNAPPING"
FUNNY MISTAKE—WEDNESDAY, JULY 23rd.
"AN OLD MAN'S LOVE STORY"
THE RIGHT IDEA—THURSDAY, JULY 24th.
"THE TABLES TURNED"
"SCENES IN HONOLULU"
COMEDY AND TOPICAL—FRIDAY, JULY 25th.
"THE SPELL"
GRIPPING—SATURDAY, JULY 26th.

SPECIAL FEATURE, "THE DIAMOND MYSTERY," THE CONTEST STORY OF THE MOTION PICTURE STORY MAGAZINE, IN TWO PARTS; RELEASED MONDAY, JULY 14th.

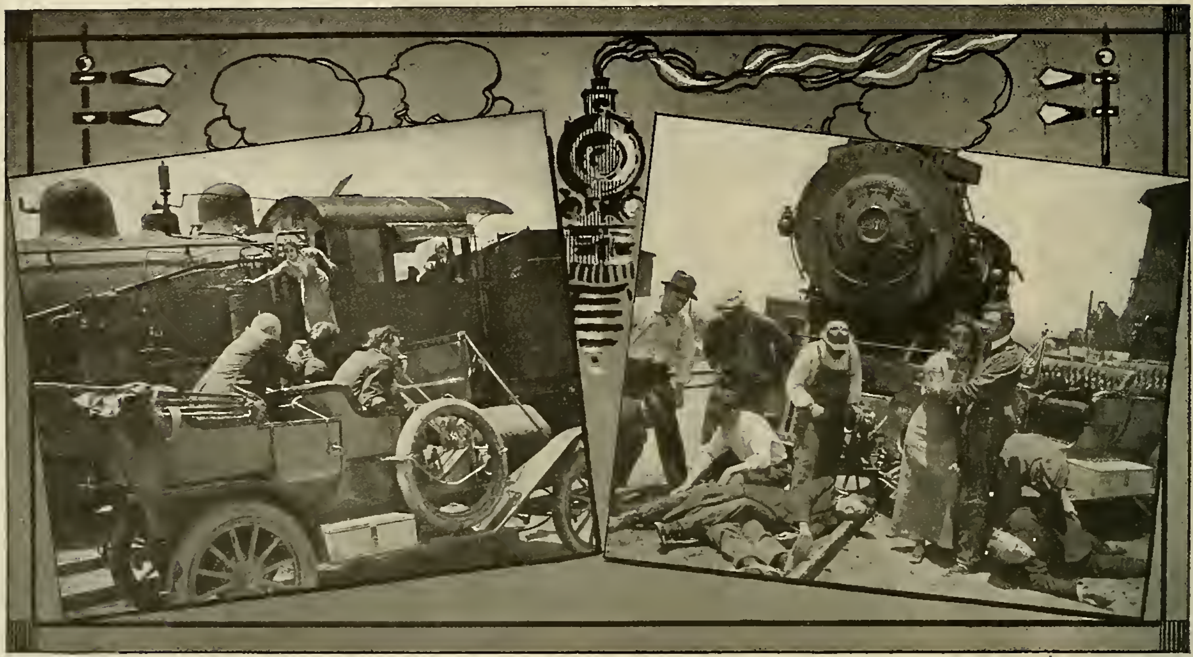
SPECIAL FEATURE, "A PRINCE OF EVIL," IN TWO PARTS; RELEASED SATURDAY, JULY 26th. SPECIAL MUSIC FOR THESE SPECIAL FEATURES

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS OF ALL VITAGRAPH SPECIAL FEATURE RELEASES.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA,
East 15th Street and Locust Avenue, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
NEW YORK, LONDON and PARIS

EFFECT

FULL HOUSES AND FULL POCKETS



The Flying Switch

Through the resourcefulness of a faithful railway employee, a daring attempt to rob an express car is frustrated.

Released Monday, July 28th Special 1, 3 and 6-sheet posters

Birds of Prey

The cupidity of an unscrupulous lawyer leads to his disbarment when he forms a plot to secure a young workman's hard-earned savings.

Released Wednesday, July 30th

Hoodooed on His Wedding Day

The groom takes drastic measures to claim his bride when her house is placed under quarantine.

(on the same reel)

The Wonders of the Briny Deep

Produced in co-operation with The New York Zoological Society.

Released Friday, August 1st

A Virginia Feud

A tragedy almost results from the bitter enmity between two families of mountaineers.

Released Saturday, August 2nd Special 1, 3 and 6-sheet posters

The Girl and the Gangster

A Powerful Dramatic Feature in Two Parts

Special Release, Monday, July 28th Special 1, 3 and 6-sheet posters

IMPORTANT NOTICE!—Beginning August 6th, Kalem will release a multiple-reel feature every Wednesday for regular service. This will replace the one-reel release. Watch for these big features!

KALEM COMPANY

235-239 West 23rd Street, New York

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.................................President
E. J. Chalmers......................Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.............Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—169 West Washington Street (Post Building), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands...$3.00 per year
Canada.. 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (postpaid)..................... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 366.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, July 19, 1913

Facts and Comments

IF all the producers now engaged in the making of feature films were to have an eye to the future they would not be guilty of giving the exhibitor a reel too much. The temptation to charge for three reels when two reels would do ample justice to the subject must be resisted or the feature programs will suffer. There is altogether too much "padding" in features nowadays, and nothing will tire the public more quickly than this waste on the screen. The producer who will stick to the standards of condensation that made the old single reel so acceptable to the public will lay foundations for the future. He will retain his prestige and the favor of exhibitor and public, while the "padder" will, after a while, look in vain for good bookings. The public are just as quick to detect flagrant paddings as any exhibitor or critic.

* * *

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, as is well known to its readers, stands opposed to a long show for little money. A decent profit is impossible where an admission of five cents is charged for an entertainment consisting of more than three reels. A lot of poor reels may be shown at such a price with a temporary profit, but the exhibitor indulging in that kind of business is not going to last long. Even where the seating capacity is large a protracted show is bound to lose money in the end. We are therefore in hearty accord with the movement to limit the number of reels at each show.

*

We are, however, very much opposed to the methods, or rather the arguments, put forward by the advocates of a limitation in the number of reels. In their ill-judged zeal these men put forward the strange contention that more than three reels at a time will, according "to the expert opinion of oculists," injure the eyesight. It seems incredible that any sincere friend of the motion picture industry wants to advance this kind of a theory in support of a shorter show. It is absurd to the point of childishness. We have had more than enough of this silly talk in the past, and we cannot imagine why it is being revived and revived by men supposed to be friends of the motion picture. When motion pictures first came into vogue a lot of cheap "oculists" attacked them on the ground that they hurt the eyes, and THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, as well as the kinematographic press in general, labored hard to refute these theories. The fact that millions of people went to moving picture shows every day in the year without any harm to their eyes finally disposed of the ridiculous yarn.

*

If four reels hurt the eye, why not three or two? What evidence is there that the human eye is favorably affected by two or three reels and injured by four and five or more? We had begun to believe that this ludicrous theory about the moving picture hurting the eye had been exploded for good. Let us all work for a shorter entertainment, but let us exercise a little more sense and discretion in the selection of our arguments, and let this talk about the harm of the motion picture to the eye drop quickly and forever.

* * *

IF the Exposition and Convention at the Grand Central Palace demonstrated nothing more than the coming of better relations among the different branches of the industry, they were worth holding. The moving picture art will indeed enter upon its golden age when the manufacturer and the exhibitor are eager for each other's friendship and good will. Evidences of an approach of this golden age are abundant and most gratifying. The division of the profits in this industry is possible on a fair and equitable basis, and no one branch will ever succeed in absorbing all the profits at once.

* * *

THE moving picture men of New York, and indeed of the whole country, have known for many years that Mayor Gaynor was their friend. They have known that he was far more than a perfunctory or lukewarm friend, not the kind that feel affection for every voter just about two weeks before the balloting takes place. We know and have known for years that the Mayor, unlike a politician, but very much like a statesman, has stood by the motion picture when it was not the most popular thing to do so. We remember how his decided stand in favor of the picture caused him to be caricatured in the yellow journals.

Men who have known the Mayor for many years and who have heard him in his chambers or in the court or upon the political platform said with one voice that the Mayor was never more in earnest and never made a better speech in his life than he did before the cheering delegates of the most interesting convention ever held in this city.

The Case of the Stage vs. the Picture

By W. Stephen Bush

ONE of the grave charges often preferred against the motion picture has been its alleged debasing influence on the legitimate stage, both here and abroad. The assertion has been repeated time and again that the motion picture had a low code of ethics, both in art and in morals, and that it threatens the high cultural mission which the stage is supposed to fulfill in every civilized country. Attention is justly called to the importance of the theater as a means of educating the public and of moulding the national taste. This opportunity of the stage to influence our daily lives and to present burning social problems of the day in a striking manner is, no doubt, greater today than it ever was before in the history of dramatic art. The higher, therefore, the standard of the stage and the loftier its themes and aspirations, the greater must be the good resulting to the community at large. An indictment against the motion picture accusing it of seeking to drag the stage and all dramatic art down to a lower level is not to be passed by lightly. Every friend of the motion picture will, therefore, be concerned in the question of whether the charge is true or false.

The charge that the picture is a "corrupting influence" and one "full of menace to the development of the best dramatic art" was first made by the theatrical press. The various publications devoted to the interests of the stage were very sure that the motion picture was an "unwholesome excrescence" and "a foolish fad" which ought to be destroyed forthwith. This sublime contempt for the motion picture on the part of the theatrical organs underwent quite a change as the advertising managers began to see a source of revenue even in the detested pictures. Abuse and condemnation stopped and presently there appeared moving picture sections. At present only those theatrical papers that cannot obtain any advertising from the film producers continue to antagonize the motion picture with plain and fancy epithets. The charge against the motion picture, however, is still repeated by a considerable portion of the daily press, which gets no advertising patronage from the motion picture and quite a generous share of advertising from the theatrical interests. The charge is likewise reiterated from time to time by social reformers, theatrical magnates and not a few critics and literary lights.

To find out whether the charge is well or ill founded it is necessary to take a survey of the dramatic and moral standards of the stage of the present day. Let me hasten to say right here, that in our own country these standards have within the last few years gone distinctly forward. To sustain a favorable comparison with the doings on our legitimate stage the motion picture cannot afford to fall below its present state of quality. It is true that there is a morbid Broadway taste for "ragtime, lingerie and crime," but that is abnormal and entirely overshadowed by the success which fine serious plays with the right kind of realism and the right kind of moral have consistently won from the American public. As far as our own country is concerned we may well be proud of the distinct improvement both on the silent and on the speaking stage. Indeed the cry against the motion picture as a deteriorating and anti-artistic influence has almost subsided here, as witness the haste of theatrical interests to ally themselves with the motion picture. All the louder is the noise made across the big water. We hear the echoes of it here with annoying regularity.

We have long cherished a belief in this country that in all matters pertaining to the stage we have much to learn from Europe, which is still regarded as the oracle of all art, modern no less than ancient. When I recently passed through the great centers of European civilization I felt it my duty to look around and investigate in order to determine whether the outcry in the European press against the motion picture as an enemy to true art had any foundation in fact. I could think of no better method than a visit to all the great theaters in London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, Naples, etc. If the famous theaters in the cities named showed a drama of high merit, clean in morals and lofty in art, with due occasional attention to the humorous and to the spectacular, much must be expected and exacted of the motion picture. If the speaking stage occupied a noble eminence in the realm of art and literature then the motion picture would never be at a loss for a standard and an inspiration.

Is the modern high class European theater such a shining temple set upon a great hill? Are the film producers a horde of wicked vandals besieging the fair city and seeking to destroy it? Is the motion picture really "a national menace," as one learned professor in Germany has put it? Are we exploring the puddles of the pigsty while the speaking stage is pursuing exalted ideals that have their source in the blue empyrean above us? Is the moving picture artist a traitor to all the nine Muses at once and is it a high crime and misdemeanor for any playwright of distinction to be found in the company of the common scenario writer? Has there been any damaging of sublime ideals in consequence of the spread of the filmed drama? These are questions that are well worth looking into.

In England it seemed to me the same pleasing rivalry exists between the silent and the speaking stage as we have it here—each art strives for higher ideals and aims to elevate public taste. On the European continent it is altogether different. There is not one play which is worthy of the best European traditions of the past. If there is anywhere a lower level of materialism and a greater degradation of artistic ideals than in the city of Berlin it must be found either in Paris or in Rome. They cannot get away from the problems of sex, and vulgarity is constantly confounded with "boldness of treatment." There is something dreadfully flat about the Continental stage of today. The hunt for the morbidly sensational is leading the playwrights into malodorous swamps. It surely is not a whit better in Italy where the reigning dramatic success of the season is "La Cena delle Beffe" (The Meal of the Mockers). This is a veritable feast of blood and dirt and after seeing it I have ceased to wonder at the cheap horrors of the Italian melodramatic film. The cup of poison, the knife, the torture, all those diabolical refinements of revenge in which the literature and the history of Italy abound are found in this play. Of course there is mixed with this Latin type of cruelty a touch of Bocaccio, but it seemed to me that even the worst tale in the original Decamerone does not quite reach the infernal depth of the plot in La Cena. Bocaccio never tears off the veil entirely but in this modern drama the pruriency is as painful as in the foul and scurvy pond wherein Thais bemoans the evils of her earthly days.

Press, Producer and Public

By Louis Reeves Harrison

NEARLY every man who has some knowledge of English, plenty of stationery and two arms has tried to write for the papers at one time or another only to shake hands with himself when he is able to make a living some other way. Men who thus congratulate themselves have become well informed as to the difficulties involved in attempting to transmit bright or original thoughts to others, and they may have even become aware that they have none to transmit. To think a "think" does not always require the highest possible concentration of the mind, but it is quite another matter to perceive and select what is of value and interest to others and shape it in such convincing form that it has a punch. I may also add that success studiously avoids a Man of the Press who is not nimble-witted enough to avoid several hundred thousand opportunities to make an error. He has to be as careful as the engineer of a train full of critics where a lot of dynamiting publicity managers are scattered along the track.

While chance plays nine high and deuce low in the profession of letters, vocation that is essentially intellectual, art that has included the greatest of human minds, more than several gentlemen have largely profited from the production of moving pictures without any particular natural qualification or especial training for the work. They have occasion to rejoice with Mr. Woolworth that ten cents is about as much as the average person can spend without giving the outlay a second thought, but the picture show screen offers abundant evidence that they have no inside information as to what the public wants. Some of those who happened to get in at the right time are such keen business men that their ideas of public taste are profoundly affected by what there is in it for the producer by way of quick money, the quicker the better. It is said that two or three of them would run a slaughter house if an occasional exhibitor or renter told them to give the people raw meat and plenty of it.

How about that Dear Public? This is some country. This is an age of marvelous invention. As long as no man or group of men controls the patent office, mechanical genius will find expression, and it is so common as to be universal in the land. Human cerebrums are being cultivated by millions, not only in the schools and colleges, but by periodicals that Men of the Press, who might be shining lights in a smaller scope, are filling from their exhaustless fountains of creative talent. Every live editor, especially if his medium circulates among millions of our common people, knows that it is a battle of brains for him to hold favor in a general intelligence that is going forward by leaps and bounds. It is to snicker when any one of the people talks about writing over the heads of the other people, and the laugh is not on them.

Uncounted millions of people will not be seen going into a moving picture show, though they may eventually get there, and there is a reason. It is not altogether pleasant and not at all profitable to have them sneering and jeering at the screen presentations, but a disagreeable fact stares at us like a sudden and truthful reflection of one's countenance in the mirror—many of the photoplays shown are eminently suited to the comprehension of primitive minds alone without an added atom of common interest.

Now men of genius, like Mark Twain, have a delightful way of crystallizing their knowledge of human affairs into lucid words that reach and charm all classes. There is, in fact, scarcely a notable screen presentation that is not derived from men of letters of these or other times. Why not utilize moving pictures to portray the grandest ideas of the age, formulated by those who know a little more than is universally known, instead of depending on writers who have only the one good excuse of their natural vanity to crave public attention? The art of making moving pictures has been brought to a high state of development, only one of the essentials to complete success is usually lacking, the modern idea.

Men of the Press realize this. That they have been discriminate in criticism indicates that they feel what is needed. That they are so prompt to appreciate the better class of productions demonstrates that they are only too glad to be of service where such productions approach what is bound to come in the course of time. That most of them have stood courageously for a principle in their reviews points to eventual improvement. But none of them has been kept busy responding to compliments from those they seek to aid. Perpetual appreciators themselves, their efforts have met with scant appreciation in return, especially from those originals who imagine that there is some underground connection between the critic and the ad solicitor.

The Man of the Press thus stands between some extreme views of the public on one side and a great deal of misapprehension of purpose on the other, with not a little intolerance on both sides. Between those who ridicule moving pictures and those who eternally recur to the touching drama of two lovers who cling to each other with lips and arms in the last scene, the Man of the Press is in sore distress to find anything that entertains or is even suited to the aims and purposes of the majority of our population. The pictures attract few, though they may be intended for the many. When there are no live features or exceptional music, the low price of admission is the sole drawing card.

I was one of those who urged the feature photodrama when the scope of the thousand-foot reel seemed too small for the unfolding of a fine story, but the first response was a mere stretching of what was tiresome in a twenty-minute presentation, or protracted adaptations from sources long run dry. What was hoped for was an array of new, bright and original photodramas from authors of today. That involved an expenditure never before considered. It is true that a producer occasionally offered from ten to twenty per cent. of the amount usually received by writers of originality and constructive ability, but the fact that high merit of product was secondary to commercial manipulation led to the release of features in name only.

A scant half-dozen met with large success because they were derived from really great works of expired copyright. The kind of a man who will write the great feature photoplays of the future is one who makes some particular subject his specialty for a period of time, gives it his whole attention and manages to express in an entertaining way one thing or another of almost universal interest. Work of this kind is not only well worth doing but will prove well worth paying for in the long run. What is most needed at this stage of the game is genius in the scenario.

No less dissonance comes from Paris, where only the occasional revival of an old classic serves to keep the theater from a final drop to the low, the stupid and the inane. I was told by men of supposed experience in matters theatrical that the musical play "Julien," at the Opera Comique, was a typical and very successful appeal to the best French taste. I had seen a charming little French comedy in the Opera Comique, refined and full of sparkling dialogue, though slightly deficient in action. In refined comedy, at least, the spirit of Moliere is still alive in France. The audience which saw "Julien" was earnest, sympathetic and enthusiastic. It was a distinguished looking audience with many ladies fashionably attired. They applauded nearly every scene in the play and followed the plot with absorbed interest.

Now what was "Julien"? Would it draw a crowd in an American theater or would it tempt a picture-maker to film it for the public? It is hard for a sane Saxon mind to follow the dramatic convolutions and the mysterious allegories of this "dream of a poet." Sketched briefly here is the true inwardness of "Julien": A long-haired poet with languishing looks and careless morals has just left his noisy company of artist friends at an early hour in the morning and returns to his "menage," his more or less domestic establishment, where an attractive young woman is reposing on a couch in moderate negligee. There is a lot of airy talk between the lady and the artist, the artist drops off to slumber and then begins his dream. There is a perfect ocean of talk, mostly monologue by the poet. He passes into a mystic temple where a lot of long-whiskered high priests tell him that life is full of disappointments and that nothing is really worth while. There are some weird ceremonies, during which the poet is supposed to pass through some sort of consecration. Here the thing degenerates entirely into an exchange of attitudes between the poet, the high priests and a lot of pleasant looking and prettily dressed young women. There is some good music and some good singing. The poet is not to be persuaded into the slightest degree of cheerfulness and starts in to tell his troubles to everybody he meets. No one seems to be able to do anything for him and in the third act he is seen standing on the shore of the tempestuous sea. In an excellent tenor solo he tells the audience that he is "going to pour his infinite sorrow into the stormy infinite sea." Lest my ear, but imperfectly attuned to this rapid utterance of French, deceive me, I buy a text book. It is really all there. One attitude and one flood of verbiage follows another.

Though there has been an awful lot of noise all through the play nobody seems to have been hurt. The whole thing was the cheapest kind of romanticism, artificial to the last degree, full of declamations and attitudes and conveying not the slightest real entertainment or nourishment to the eye or the mind. Such mawkish taste and silly sentimentality could never win on the screen. Somewhere, no doubt, some shredded thought was concealed in this play but it was hard to discover just where. It was free from the low materialism of Berlin and the vile intrigue of Rome but it offered nothing to the average mind by way of entertainment or instruction.

Verily the speaking stage of Europe has no cause to thank Heaven that it is not like the motion picture. Judged by the standard, either of art or morals, the motion picture is easily first. It is not free from flaws and it has its sins of commission as well as of omission. It does not, however, lie in the mouths of the defenders of the modern speaking stage to reproach the kinematograph. The average moral and dramatic quality of the film is clearly above the average moral and dramatic quality of the plays on the speaking stage. In a far greater degree than the speaking stage are we of the motion picture under the influence of a sound and sensible majority. It is impossible for the motion picture to corrupt and degrade or stupefy a stage like that of Germany, France or Italy. The danger or debasement, through the inferior standards of theaters, is an undoubted reality and the motion picture is constantly exposed to this danger.

I often wished that the heedless men and women who in this country still oppose the motion picture could realize to what extent the American-made picture helps to keep up high standards in European kinematography. American-made pictures invite the interference of the censor, but in the rarest of instances, and are eagerly sought after, especially by the exhibitor who caters to the best classes in the community. We must not forget that every great enterprise in film production, whether here or abroad, has aimed uncommonly high. We must bear in mind that the European manufacturer, by keeping his eye on the American market, is anxious to eliminate criminal realism, erotic irregularities and, in fact, everything which the average American audience would not want to see and could not enjoy. The lower and viler taste is driven to the speaking stage for its gratification. To speak of a malign influence of the motion picture on the stage is, in the light of the facts just cited, the height of absurdity and hypocrisy.

The truth of the matter is that the motion picture everywhere acts as a bulwark against the diffusion of lower ethical standards. The motion picture is under the constant supervision of the public. There is a degree of intimacy between the silent stage and its patrons which works well for clean and unobjectionable pictures. The plain people of the land, from whom the motion picture recruits the main part of its audiences, will not tolerate anything offensive. The husbands and fathers who take their wives and children to the motion picture theaters are pretty safe judges of what constitutes a clean and proper picture and they are not likely to lower the standards. The fact that women and children constitute no small part of every motion picture audience is a guarantee against the danger of offensive pictures. The offensive picture cannot be kept away from the screen entirely but its life will always be short. As a rule the exhibitor is jealous of the good reputation of his house. He is more directly responsible to his audience than the manager of the speaking stage. He is on intimate terms with his audience and his audience never hesitates to let him know if they think ill of a picture.

Once for all the press, which still fears the "corrupting influence" of the motion picture upon the stage, ought to allay its fears and take a good douche under the cold stream of facts.

The Real Keynote: Educational

To teach and to instruct you must get your audience into good humor and make them comfortable. Let us all admit that the promoters of the Exposition have solved that problem with consummate skill, all the more effective because it was not at all obtrusive. Could you walk through all those spacious aisles, so generous in width and could you look at the opportunities which the balconies provided without realizing what was in the mind of the promoters? They wanted to put the public in good humor. That is one of the finest of arts and one that is distinctly American. The results are a foregone conclusion. The skill of a past master in the art of running expositions was apparent at every hand.

The Children's M. P. League

Things that Happened at the First Show—Crippled Children and Little Mothers Had Seats of Honor—An Interview With Mrs. Laura Cogswell.

IN the "Jefferson," a clean, roomy and exceedingly well managed moving picture theater on Fourteenth Street just a few doors east of Third Avenue, "The Children's Motion Picture League," under the direction of Mrs. Laura Cogswell who was riotously hailed as "The Motion Picture Mother," held its first session and entertainment on Saturday, June 28th. There was a lot of dynamic excitement in the air and it was quite infectious, spreading from the delighted crowds of typical East Side children to all the grown folks present, not even sparing the reporters of the daily press who pride themselves on being just accurate recording machines without any foolish sentiment whatever. The general enthusiasm, while always decorous, sent some of its waves even into the street and thus many an uninvited but welcome guest entered to see what was going on and came out with all kinds of precious sensations surging in his breast.

The Children's Motion Picture League no doubt has its more or less informal charter and its by-laws but there was one feature of it which in practice overshadowed everything else; the poor and the crippled children could get in free and, indeed, they were there in large numbers. Three cheers for The Children's Motion Picture League for this reason alone—there is always a suggestion of the divine in any invitation to the children, especially the poor and neglected ones. From time immemorial they have been the guests of the gods. The show commenced at 9 o'clock and was still going at twelve with two pretty bits of vaudeville and pictures. Did this long show tire the children? They drank in every thing that appeared on the screen as a thirsty man tackles a cool spring on a hot and dusty day, and when it was all over groups of bright-eyed, lively and excited children swarmed around the manager's office and asked "When is it going to be again?"

Why, "it is going to be again" all the time if Mrs. Cogswell's plans do not go wrong, and that seems about the most glaring improbability of the day.

The Children's Motion Picture League has, broadly speaking, two great objects: To bring the picture to the door of every child anywhere in these United States free of charge in case of poor children, and to make the picture suit the child. Mrs. Cogswell could not have proposed two better objects to herself. After the great day in New York the movement will no doubt spread with the ease with which water distributes itself on level ground.

Let it be said right here that the motion picture fits in passing well with the modern religion of humanity, which cares more for the deed than the creed. The film producers had given all the pictures that had been wanted without the thought of any pay and it is to be greatly regretted that none of these men were at the show to see how these children enjoyed the pictures—it was a very fine picture show, to be sure, but by far the finest part of the program was the children themselves, and the men and women who were privileged to assist in this entertainment found it hard at times not to give way to the emotions called forth by these thousand eager shining faces, among them many little mothers who had brought their tiny charges with them and banished for a moment the all too early cares of life. No less generous were the managers and owners of the theater and the musicians and the operator and the choirmaster, who defied the heat, and counted themselves happy to co-operate.

The pictures were largely of a patriotic character winding up with the Vitagraph portrayal of Lincoln's Gettysburg address and with the singing of patriotic hymns. That surely was as it should have been, for such an entertainment and such a movement as this was possible only in this country where the rights of the child are recognized and respected more than anywhere else in the world.

When Mrs. Cogswell stepped in front of the great surging sea of children's faces there was an outburst of enthusiasm so manifestly sincere in its childish noisiness that the good woman could not be heard for a minute or two. She did not trust herself to do more than say a few words of welcome and then she was utterly overpowered by her feelings and sat down in tears. There was not really anybody just at that moment whose voice was entirely free from huskiness, but at last Mr. Kinney, who acted as choirmaster, made a short and informal address followed by a representative of The Moving Picture World, who read a very nice telegram sent by Governor Sulzer.

Mrs. Cogswell, who is completely absorbed in her work, said to a Moving Picture World man in the brief intervals of leisure in the earlier part of the show:

"Almost a score of organizations interested in the welfare of children are present today and you see how well filled the theater is. I wanted to distribute free tickets in the public schools, but Mr. Maxwell would not allow this. In spite of his action I distributed what I could on the sidewalks as the children left the school. From all sides I have received offers of help to extend this movement. Letters have come to me from as far as California asking me to come out there and start a similar movement. I propose to make the United States my field, but I want to complete my work right here in New York before going elsewhere. This work is supported entirely by voluntary contributions and has no commercial aspects whatever. The poor children are always welcome whether they have a ticket or not and the first three rows in any entertainment given under the auspices of this league are always reserved for the crippled children. You know in an audience of children the first rows are always counted the best even in a moving picture show. Every program will be a children's program and the grown people are, of course, invited to come along and if they want to pay we have no objections. It is worth something to see these children having a glorious time."

For that "Scroogy" feeling attend one of the shows of the Children's Motion Picture League. Ask for M. P. M. Cogswell.

Harmony in Universal Offices.

P. A. Powers Becomes a Director—Service to Powers and Swanson Exchanges to Continue Unchanged.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company, on Tuesday, declared a semi-annual dividend of three per cent. on its preferred stock. This is the first dividend the company has ever declared, and the officers of the corporation are elated over the situation. The declaration of the dividend followed but a few days the signing of an agreement between the two factions that have been contending for the control of the corporation, which settlement has been duly ratified by Judge Goff, before whom the various hearings have been held.

The board of directors is to remain as at present, five. Mrs. W. H Swanson has retired from the board and has been replaced by P A. Powers. The executive officers of the company are Carl Laemmle, president; R. H. Cochrane, secretary and treasurer The office of vice-president is not filled. The books of the company, which since the famous 'stockholders' meeting have been in the custody of the authorities, are to be returned to the officers of the corporation. These included the stockholders' minute book, the directors' minute book, the stock certificate book and the stock ledger. No record of any past transaction appearing in the books is to be altered except upon judicial determination, but the status of the books is to be open to question by any party in the action.

The Powers and Swanson exchanges are to carry out on their part all agreements with the Universal as heretofore existing, and the company pledges itself on its part faithfully to carry out all its contracts with these exchanges, upon its usual and most favorable terms, without prejudice to the rights of the parties with respect to said contracts claimed, and without discrimination in favor of any officer or director of the company. "All the directions contained in this order," concludes the stipulation, "shall be in full force and effect until the final determination of this action, and all bonds herein are hereby canceled and discharged."

"The company is now in splendid condition," said Mr. Cochrane, Wednesday. "Everything is running smoothly. Mr. Graham, the general manager, returned from the Coast yesterday and is highly enthusiastic over our big organization out there. He says it reflects credit on all who have participated in its success."

It is understood that the agreement signed before Justice Goff leaves for future judicial determination the ownership of the stock formerly held by David Horsley, and that the amicable adjustment of the other difficulties is for the purpose of permitting the company to proceed unhampered in its business of making pictures.

EDISON PLAYERS RETURN.

Charles Seay's entire troupe of Edison players has returned to New York after a delightful month in Georgia, during which they had the pleasure of meeting the governor of Georgia and the mayor of Atlanta. As a native of Rome, Ga., and the son of a prominent citizen of that state, Mr. Seay was in a position to lead his company into places hitherto sacred from the intruding camera. They were royally entertained by many prominent people in the city.

"The Heart of a Jewess"

Two-Reel Universal Feature.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

A TOUCH of pathos, a great deal of humor, fidelity of characterization and some unsparingly accurate views of modern Jewish customs in New York City all help in this interesting story. It is a pleasure to see Jewish people play Hebrew roles of comedy and sympathy, especially after so many sickening caricatures have affronted vaudeville audiences for years. This photodrama is no idealization of the Hebrew. He is presented as he is in the raw material as a beginner in a new environment. Most of the Jews who come here in the steerage are beginners, and they find it less difficult to make a living than to change their established manners and practices, but their hearts throb with the same emotions as those moving the rest of struggling humanity. "The Heart of a Jewess" is simply that of a splendid woman.

Scene from "The Heart of a Jewess" (Universal).

In this presentation of exact conformity to truth, there is plainly exhibited both the Hebrew's inability to discern progress in a change of custom and the readiness with which he adapts himself to harsh circumstances. He is a survival of severe conditions and a plucky one at that. The father of Rebecca, a girl of fine attributes, is established in an humble way when he learns that she is coming to join him. His meagre business is conducted in a cellar, which, at the same time, furnishes him with a home. It is there he receives her with enthusiastic joy. She is wholly unaffected by his comparative poverty; her fortitude immediately lights up his wretched home, and she promptly refuses to be a burden on him. She takes the first employment obtainable, that of running a sewing machine in a sweat shop.

Scene from "The Heart of a Jewess" (Universal).

All of the early scenes give the impression of being taken from actual living conditions. The sweat shop is such a perfect simulation of reality that it has a Dickens-like intensity and humor. There is visible hardship in the work and a lot of philosophical good nature as well. In the front row of the operatives is a delicious type. The busy workers give no evidence of oppression—they are all intent on making the mighty dollar. Rebecca slaves and saves for a purpose—she is affianced to Jake in the old country. When he arrives there is seen a type never presented on the stage, though he is visible enough in actual life to those who keep their eyes open. He has, however, attributes rather difficult to swallow. Soon after he is rigged out in a modern suit of clothes he enters college, and "one year later" he is a full-fledged practicing physician.

Rebecca is faithful, in spite of the fact that a finer type of lover, David, has announced his love. Jake gradually yields to the force of circumstances in the person of a "marriage broker" and becomes engaged to a lady who can bring him ten thousand dollars. On the eve of marriage with the lady of means, after he has exhibited a weak and cruel streak in discarding faithful Rebecca, perfidious and oily Jake is principal in an accident that sends Rebecca to the hospital. He deserts his bride-elect and obeys a finer impulse in following the injured girl to the ward where she lies seriously injured. He there renounces the lady he was about to wed and loses both. Rebecca turns to the man whose love is real.

Rebecca's father is impersonated by an actor of rare ability, so consistent is every feature of his work, and all the other parts are delightfully presented. Perhaps the most amusing scene is that of Jake's return to the $10,000 bride after leaving her, only to be discarded by indignant Rebecca. His reception by a number of Hebrew gentlemen in evening dress, all wearing their hats, is comic in its character revelations. The comedy is wholesome, modern, interesting and handled with skill.

"ON THE TRAIL OF THE SPIDER GANG" (Apex).

HERE is a picture that may be truly described as a thriller. It is a story of the pursuit by a detective of a band of dress-suit thieves. There are several sensational episodes running through the three reels. One is the escape by a woman over a rope suspended between two houses at a height of many feet. Another is where Hayes, the detective, following the trail of a member of the band, jumps from a moving train to an elevated structure, then to the top of a moving bus, from that to an automobile, then to another bus, from the top of which he jumps into a machine containing his prey. An aeroplane also figures in the pursuit, of which a good picture is given. Two locomotives, one of them following the other, come into collision. These are a few of the adventures which go to make a picture that is unusual on the spectacular side. Photographically there is much merit. The settings are in accord with the apparent prosperity of the lawbreakers the detective is trying to bring to justice. "On the Trail of the Spider Gang" is a tale in which action is the keynote.

Scene from "On the Trail of the Spider Gang" (Apex).

FORBES-ROBERTSON IN "HAMLET."

The Gaumont Company has succeeded in persuading Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, on the eve of his retirement, to allow his magnificent production of "Hamlet" to be perpetuated on the screen. The Hepworth studio at Bushey, England, will be used in making the scenes.

The Third National Convention

Tremendous Growth of the M.P.E.L. During the Past Year Demonstrated by the Largest Gathering of Motion Picture Men from all Quarters that ever got Together.

THE third national convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America was called to order by President M. A. Neff at 11.40 a.m., Tuesday, July 8, in the Grand Central Palace, New York. Considerable time was spent in waiting for Mayor Gaynor and Samuel Trigger, being unable to state when he could come, it was deemed best to enter upon the work of the convention at once.

Mr. Trigger in a few remarks reminded visiting exhibitors of the promise made by the New York delegation, at the national convention in Chicago last year, that New York would give a convention that could not be beaten, and he left it to the visitors to judge for themselves.

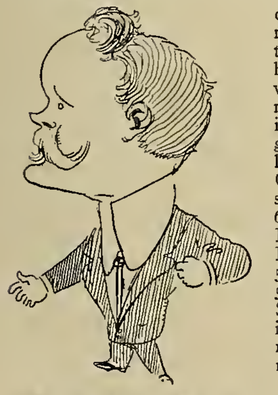
President Neff then ordered a roll call of the national vice-presidents present. Objection was made by a member that the proceedings could not continue without a national secretary, but President Neff announced that J. Howard Bennett, of Baltimore, had been temporarily appointed to fill the place of C. M. Christenson, resigned, at the meeting of national vice-presidents held in the Imperial, Monday, July 7.

The president then asked for the roll call of the members of the executive committee, and this caused numerous protests throughout the hall and the introduction of several resolutions. It was held by the various speakers against Mr. Neff's procedure that the chair had not the right to appoint this committee, but it was ruled by the chair that the constitution and by-laws gave the power.

In the midst of much turmoil, F. Brylawski, of Washington, D. C., moved that the members go into executive session, admitting all the delegates present and then determining who were, and who were not, bona fide representatives of their states to the convention.

The stand was taken by the chair that the books of the national secretary were the only legitimate records in the case, and he instructed G. H. Wiley, national vice-president from Missouri, to announce the names of those on the credentials committee. The reading showed that G. H. Wiley, of Missouri; T. P. Finnigan, of Texas; G. F. Robinson, of New Jersey; F. J. Rembusch, of Indiana, and F. Brylawski, Washington, D. C., were on the committee. G. H. Wiley then read from the national secretary's books a report showing how many delegates each state was entitled to, as follows: Illinois, 10; Pennsylvania, 8; Michigan, 6; Indiana, 7; West Virginia, 6; Wisconsin, 6; Maryland, 6; Maine, 5; Virginia, 6; Georgia, 5; Delaware, 5; Missouri, 7; Alabama, 6; Kentucky, 6; California, 8; New York, 13; New Jersey, 6; Oklahoma, 9; Nebraska, 6; Kansas, 6; Florida, 5; South Dakota, 5; Arkansas, 5; Washington, 6; Minnesota, 6. Several states not yet organized were also allowed one representative each. There was no report on Ohio.

After the reading of the list, numerous protests were again in order, and it was pointed out that states like New York and Illinois were practically unrepresented, according to the showing, considering the number of members of the league within their borders. Confusion was again threatened until Mr. Brylawski again rose and amended his former resolution by extending the duration of the executive session from one hour to two. This was finally adopted and the convention adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock.



Neff Explains the Constitution.

Afternoon Session.

On assembling about 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon, the motion made before adjournment was reconsidered, and it was decided to hold an open meeting instead of an executive session, owing to the fact that word had been received that Mayor Gaynor would arrive at 4:00 p. m., to address the convention. Until that hour the work of the convention proceeded without serious interruption or delay.

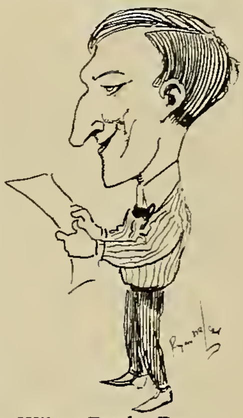
G. H. Wiley, Chairman of the Committee on Credentials, Rules and Regulations, read the report of that Committee on State Representation to the convention, which was listened to attentively, a wiser and better spirit being prevalent. It was discovered by the Committee that several mistakes had been made in the report of the former National Secretary which affected Illinois and other states. Mr. Wiley announced that the Committee had, owing to said mistakes, allowed Illinois five more delegates than formerly, in all fifteen. New York was allowed one more and slight changes were also made in the representation of other states.

Robert H. Levy, on behalf of Illinois, then announced that Illinois had decided to abide by the original allotment of ten, an example that was followed by other states.

Much discussion followed the introduction of a motion by Mr. Cory, of California, that his state be allowed a full delegate vote, although only three out of eight were present at the convention. After considerable debate, it was decided that the policy, "One vote for one man," should prevail at the convention. A motion was next passed requiring that each national vice-president should furnish the names of the delegates from his state to the Credentials Committee, on Wednesday morning.

Ovation for Mayor Gaynor.

At this time Mayor Gaynor arrived, and was received amidst a great storm of applause. The members stood on the chairs, waving hats, handkerchiefs and canes as he passed up to the platform, many of them yelling, "Our next president!" The delegates from several states took the floor in succession, when the Mayor reached his seat, and, on behalf of exhibitors at home, tendered him stirring speeches conveying their thanks. Mr. Herrington, of Pittsburgh Local, brought down the house by closing his speech with the witticism, "We wish all our mayors were Gaynors and that all Gaynors were mayors." The Mayor was then introduced by President Sam Trigger, and delivered in a happy, friendly, conversational way one of the best speeches of his life. The speech follows in part:



Wiley Reads Report.

Mayor Gaynor's Speech.

This looks more like a national political convention than anything else, he began, with its banners and standards, and your salutations of good will and wishes. I had no notion that I was known outside of the little city of New York.

Shortly before taking the office of mayor there was a great outcry in New York against the moving picture show. It had started at the beginning of, or a little while before, the election. The licenses of five hundred moving picture theaters were revoked in New York, in one day, and all for nothing.

I had noticed when judge, the opposition to the moving picture show, and had my eyes opened as all judges usually have, and, besides, I knew something about the moving picture. That outcry was baseless. It cost over $1,000,000 to rehabilitate the owners of the theaters. It was one of the most heartless clamors ever started, and was raised by some people who are altogether too perfect for this world. The quicker these people are translated the better. I know one of them who, in his imagination, lives in the sky all the time, at the northeast corner of the Milky Way, or of the Aurora Borealis. From what I know of him, his chief object in life is to meddle with other people's business. This kind of people usually get up in pulpits, but luckily there are only a few of them. The great body of clergymen is in favor of moving pictures. It was charged at the time that indecent pictures were being shown in the city. We all know that audiences composed of fathers and mothers, who went along with their little children, would not stand for such pictures.

I instructed my Commissioner of Accounts to make a close examination of the picture shows in New York, and he reported that he had not found a single indecent picture in any of the theaters. I then appointed a commissioner to frame an ordinance, and ever since we have tried to get it through the Board of Aldermen. We got it through the other day. (Loud cheers.)

Now moving picture theaters will be safeguarded. Life and safety and morals will be protected, properly not improperly. Over a year ago it was attempted to induce the Board of Aldermen to establish a rigorous board of censorship. No picture under that bill could be shown unless first looked at by this board and passed upon. When the ordinance was brought up to me, I vetoed it.

I have to say, in order to satisfy every sane person in New York, that censorship did not belong at any time to our free government. It was wiped out of existence by our government at the beginning. Why, it is not so long ago that religion was censored! Now that has all been done away with.

The Russian censorship of moving pictures is almost prohibitive, and no publisher can publish a book unless the censor says it is harmless. We have laws in New York against indecent literature, and it may be said that moving pictures are in the same class with literature. The people who are very anxious that these laws should be rigidly enforced are always anxious to be appointed censors and they want the jobs. These men might object to any kind of picture, but they did not have their way in this case.

We have an ordinance, I believe, that will be a model for all cities of the country which wish to pass similar ordinances. It is not perfect, but is as perfect as has been made up to the present time.

You people are owners of moving picture theaters. You know the kind of people who come to your houses. They are good people. If the people who have been against the moving picture theaters here had gone farther up town they would have found more ample room for censorship.

From my way of thinking, the moving picture is one of the most beneficent things that has come up in my time. It fills a great want. It has opened up pure, educating, solacing and cheap entertainment for the plain people. The results have been good. Many hearts have been solaced by the moving picture, and the hard daily grind of life has been eased and amused by the moving picture show.

There is a great cry against the attendance of children at the moving picture theater. What folly! Where do these people want the children to go? They do not want them in the streets or the parks, and even hate to see them in churches. It is a blessing that parents are able to take their children by the hand to see the pictures, to be instructed and amused at the same time. "Children must be safeguarded," these good people say; therefore the galleries must be ripped out of the moving picture theater. An amendment to an ordinance for the ripping out of galleries in these theaters was attempted by a large owner of cheap theaters in New York. He did not have his way. Why not rip the galleries out of his theater? Such an argument went through his skull; it never lodged there.

We have all noticed that everybody howls against anything new, just because they know nothing about it. The moving picture was new and it competed with other amusements and charges necessarily were preferred against them. Investigators were sent to these picture theaters and the charges fell through. Our picture shows are decent and moral all over the city of New York. I wouldn't have them done away with for anything. It would be a calamity! I saw my first picture show in London. It was a matter of wonder and amusement. It cheers one up in his business. I have had letters from people all over the United States about my vetoing of the ordinance already referred to. No immoral or lurid picture is allowed on any screen in the city. There is no fear of its being done, for the evil doer would soon be in the hands of the police. That kind of show would not live in New York.

President Neff then thanked the Mayor for his courtesy and for the great encouragement given exhibitors and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. When the Mayor left the room, a motion was passed that the national secretary shall have the speech printed from the official secretary's report and sent to every national vice-president of the league, with instructions that it be circulated in every way possible, by means of the press and through other channels.

A motion was then carried that the meeting stand adjourned until 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

SECOND DAY'S EVENTS—WEDNESDAY, JULY 9th.

The convention met in morning session on Wednesday, at 10:30, the deliberations lasting until 1:45 p.m., when adjournment was made until 10 a.m. this morning. After the roll call of national officers, President Neff appointed a press committee, consisting of the following: J. A. Maddox, Columbus, O., chairman; Frank A. Tichenor, of New York City, and L. R. Thomas, Moundsville, W. Va.

The annual report was then read by President M. A. Neff. This was followed by the reading of the letter of resignation sent in by the former national secretary, C. M. Christenson. Mr. Christenson was recently appointed Cleveland manager of the Mutual Film Corporation's branch, and this rendered him ineligible for the position. The report of the national secretary followed and was referred to the auditing committee. The report of J. J. Rieder, national treasurer, was next read and referred to the auditing committee.

A motion was made and carried that delegates and alternates in the future, during this convention, shall enter the convention hall by a pass word. President Neff then appointed as members of the auditing committee: E. A. Jefferies, Philadelphia; W. A. Cory, San Francisco, and W. R. Wilson, of Columbus, Ohio.

Neff Wants Order.

The Ways and Means Committee was also appointed by the president, with the following membership: Mr. Ramsey, Lexington, Ky.; Mr. Henry, Chicago; Otto Ludeking, Cincinnati; Mr. Joup, Detroit; Mr. McNatt, New York City, and Walter Stumpfeig, Philadelphia.

The following committee on minutes, by-laws and constitution was next appointed by the president: Mr. Levi, Detroit, chairman; A. L. Cottrell, Moundsville, W. Va.; Mr. Kohl, Cleveland; Orene Parker, Covington, Ky.; Mr. Davis, New York City; Charles Segall, Philadelphia, and W. L. Shelton, of Kansas City. These committees were ordered to report at Thursday morning's session.

A long drawn out discussion, lasting over one and a half hours, took place over the question as to when the nomination and election of officers should take place. The New York delegates declared that it was imperative that the nomination and election should be deferred until late in the week, in all justice to the manufacturers and others who have gone to great expense in placing their exhibits in the Exposition Hall. The opposition advocated following the regular order of business; that is, taking up various questions as they came to them. Ohio was prominent in calling for an early disposition of the nominations and elections; but, after much wrangling, they withdrew their opposition and the motion was carried that the nomination of officers shall take place Thursday afternoon and the election on Friday morning.

J. J RIEDER
TREAS.

Rieder Contemplates.

President Neff's Annual Report.

Following is in substance the annual report of President M. A. Neff: I would respectfully call your attention to the following facts, among the things accomplished by the League:

We are able to purchase parts, accessories and supplies at a discount of forty per cent. off the regular list price. Multiple reel subjects, or features, without additional cost is one of the advantages gained through the organization of the League.

The city and state licenses in many cases have been reduced materially.

We have defeated adverse legislation in many states and cities, and through our efforts have caused the enactment of some good laws and ordinances, which have been of great benefit to the motion picture exhibitor.

We have brought about a friendly feeling and co-operation between the exhibitor, manufacturer and exchange.

The organization of the League has been the means of the getting together and acquaintance of thousands of exhibitors, causing them to lay aside petty jealousies and working in harmony for the common good.

We have done much good in the way of reducing the number of reels, which we feel will finally be the salvation of the exhibitor and the people.

Since the Chicago convention, I have organized the states of Texas, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Colorado, Florida, South Dakota, Washington, Maryland, Delaware, Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Maine, South Carolina and Southern Illinois Local No. 1, making a total of forty states organized.

There was so much of this work to be done in a short space of time that it proved impossible for me to take care of it all at the proper time, so Mr. Wiley, of Missouri, was pressed into service, and it was with his help that the states of Oklahoma, Arkansas, Virginia and Maine were successfully organized.

Arrangements were made for conventions in the South, and Mr. Thomas, of West Virginia, was sent to organize them.

Alexander Wall, of Alabama, also helped in the work, organizing the state of Georgia.

Clem Kerr, of Dayton, Ohio, was also instrumental in furthering organization and deserves special mention. Many others not mention were of great assistance. The League is doing splendidly, and the results obtained during the past year have been most gratifying.

(Continued on page 323.)

Music for the Picture

BY CLARENCE E. SINN

FROM Huntington, Va.: "I don't suppose you often get a letter from a drummer with a score of music for the picture, but I am an exception. Although I am a drummer I also play piano, having studied it for several years. Am playing with a young lady (Miss Shirley Notter), also a good musician and picture player, so between us we pick out music for the picture; it ought to be pretty good as two heads are better than one. I would like to see 'Music for the Picture' in every week, as it is just as necessary as any other of the departments. Why don't you get after the musicians for not sending in any more 'dope'? We are playing Universal pictures and find in them a good field for good music.

"Am sending in three scores we used last week. If you think they are any good I will send in more every once in a while":

"Thus Saith the Lord" (Eclair).

Part One.

1. "The Palms," until title: "While Jesus and the Twelve Disciples, etc."
2. "Perfume" (From Suite, "My Lady's Boudoir"—Witmark), until title: "Five Wise Men and Five Foolish Virgins, etc."
3. "Thais" (Valse Oriental—Jos. Stern), until it shows virgins coming out of door; then:
4. "Bells of Seville" (Valse—Walter Jacobs), until title: "Attracted by Curiosity, etc."
5. "On a Sunny Morn" (Theo. Presser), until title: "Wedding Feast Drawing Near, etc."
6. "Shahin Shan"—Oriental Valse (Smith & Brown, pub.), until title: "Here Comes the Bridegroom."
7. "Roman Emperor March" (Sinn's Orpheum Collection), until end of reel.

Part Two.

1. "Old English Dance" (Theo. Presser, pub.), until it shows Jesus and Disciples. Then:
2. "Perfume" (From Suite, "My Ladies' Boudoir"), until title: "Our Father, etc."
3. "Oriental March" (From page 12 of "A Tragedy of the Desert"), until title: "Hallowed Be Thy Name."
4. "Barcarolle" from "Tales of Hoffman," until title: "Thy Kingdom Come."
5. Third Movement "Poet and Peasant Overture" (Allegro), until title: "Thy Will Be Done."
6. Pathetic until title: "Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread."
7. Prayer from "Der Freischutz," until title: "Forgive Us Our Trespasses."
8. Hurry—slow down with action and gradually get down to pathetic until title: "Lead Us Not Into Temptation."
9. Massenet's "Elegy," until title: "But Deliver Us From Evil."
10. Storm (No. 42, Sinn's Orpheum Collection), until title: "For Thine Is The Kingdom."
11. Heavy bass chords until title: "And After Jesus Had Finished, etc."
12. "Perfume," until end of reel.

"Slavery Days" (Rex).

1. "Old Folks at Home," until it shows colonel and wife.
2. "Maurice" Valse Lento, until title: "Colonel Called Away On Business."
3. Pathetic until title: "The Maid Takes Care of the Baby."
4. Waltz (No. 2 from "Sign of the Rose"—Vandersloot, pub.), until she brings the baby back.
5. Lullaby from "Erminie" until: "Colonel's Return."
6. Lively waltz until: "Fourteen Years Later."
7. "I'll Change the Shadows to Sunshine" (Witmark), until it shows girls and mother on porch.
8. Pathetic until it shows them out in the woods.
9. "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" (Shapiro), until title: "Robert Fails, etc."
10. "Jack O'Lantern" (Flirting Princess), until ballroom.
11. "Flo Waltz" from "Maid and Mummy" until end of reel.

Part Two.

1. "Just My Style" (From Fantana), until girl comes upon them.
2. Agitato until it shows Robert by himself.
3. Sentimental until title: "The Slave Dealer, etc."
4. Intermezzo until Charlotte sells Tennessee.
5. Hurry until Robert comes to tell them.
6. Sentimental until girl runs on.
7. Hurry's from this on; heavy chords for burning and agitato for boat race until title: "Twenty-four Hours Later."
8. Intermezzo until they come out of church.
9. "Here Comes the Bride" until end of reel.

"Crossed Swords" (Great Northern).

Part One.

1. Third movement "Raymond Overture," until inside house.
2. "Hallowe'en Valse Lento" (from "Wonderland"), until ballroom.
3. "Birds and Butterflies" (Espressivo movement), until title: "Both Love the Same Girl."
4. "When I Dream of You" (Forrester, pub.), until title: "A Serious Accident."
5. Agitato; work up into a "hurry" with action until inside house.
6. Pathetic, until title: "Experimenting With Airship's Guns."
7. "I'll Introduce You to My Father" (from "A Modern Eve"), until title: "The Proposal."
8. Waltz until ball.
9. Grand March (No. 2, C. L. Johnson's picture music), until title: "At the Club."
10. Waltz until end of reel.

Part Two.

1. Six-eight March until: "He Shows Her, etc."
2. "Jingles" Intermezzo until it shows one officer creeping after the other.
3. Mysterious—work up into hurry until man by fireside.
4. Sentimental until title: "His Great Day."
5. "Bobbing Up and Down" (Theo. Morse), until engine room.
6. "Jingles," until officer about to turn crank.
7. Agitato—work up into hurry until shot.
8. Sentimental until working guns.
9. Jingles intermezzo until inside house.
10. Waltz until end of reel.

Leo Volkenrath, Lyric Amusement Co., Huntington, W. Va.

I am sure the constituency is under obligations to Mr. Volkenrath, and we hope he will call oftener than "every once in a while."

LOOK OUT FOR A SHEET MUSIC FAKIR.

Galesburg, Ill., July 2.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—Through the columns of your paper I would like to voice a warning to nickel-theater men, particularly those of the Middle West, against a young man who represents himself as Ted Johnson, of the Snyder Music Co. Mr. Johnson is soliciting orders for professional copies of music, claiming that for two dollars a year his company will send three copies of new music weekly together with a catalogue of music arranged for moving picture playing.

Mr. Johnson cleaned up on all the Galesburg houses two weeks ago for music orders. He found ready purchasers. But since his exit no music has been received and enquiry at the office of his supposed employer developed that he was a fraud.

Mr. Johnson is of medium height, well built but not heavily, light haired, has a nervous manner and is well acquainted with the picture business. He is wanted in this city for forging the Snyder Company's signature to a check.

Yours very truly,
R. C. SCHROEDER,
Mgr. Colonials of Galesburg.

Foreign Trade Notes

BRITISH NOTES.

From our own Correspondent.

A new menace to the industry in this country has loomed into prominence this week. In Parliament the other day Mr. King, the member for North Somerset, in a question to the Chancellor suggested that the moving picture theater should be subjected to a special tax. The question was answered by a promise to give due consideration to the matter. The chief point seems to be the far-reaching effect which will be exercised by the tax, providing, of course, that such is imposed, for the revenue authorities would not be justified in isolating the moving picture show in their new scheme. The ordinary theaters, football and cricket grounds, golf courses, etc., etc., all come under the one comprehensive heading of "popular amusements" and would, no doubt, to justify the definition, have to be included. But any attempt on popular sports and entertainments would be only met with influential public opposition and particularly so in the case of the cinema, because it probably heads the list.

* * *

The practice of offering great feature films for sale by auction is on the increase. Last Tuesday the truly remarkable battle film which has previously been described in this column, and which is illustrative of the "Battle of Waterloo," was sold by auction in London at the premises of the British & Colonial Company. The bidding started at $5,000 and rose gradually to $25,000, when it was knocked down to Mr. Cloyenburg, of the Atlas Feature Film Company, on behalf of Ruffells Bioscope Company, who thus secure sole British rights. As in the case of "Quo Vadis?", which was also disposed of in a similar manner, the process of selling film exclusively to one concern is being strongly criticised by exhibitors, and particularly so in the present case which involves perhaps the most notable home produced film of the season.

* * *

The task of producing Mr. Charles Hawtrey's play, "A Message from Mars," has already been commenced by a new firm, the United Kingdom Films, Ltd. Mr. W. Waller is the producer.

* * *

The Edison films of the England vs. America polo match have just arrived here and are proving a good draw. Miss Miriam Nesbitt and Mr. Marc McDermott, the two well-known artists of this company, are over here and are already at work with others in the production of short-length dramas and comedies which the Edison Company will release about October. Wellingborough, an historic little township in the Midlands, has been the scene of their activities this week.

* * *

The hot weather does play havoc in this country with box office receipts and it is permissable for an enterprising manager to seek outside inspiration. At a northern show a manager filled a toy balloon with hydrogen, so that it rose to the ceiling and could be seen by everyone. He announced on the screen that attached to the balloon was a five pound banknote which would become the property of the person who caught the balloon on its descent. Whether there was a free fight or not, for the floating "fiver," I am not told, but probably this idea would lend itself to better exploitation in America on account of the smaller paper denominations. In England five pounds ($25) is the smallest denomination in notes, so that it would be totally impracticable to "release" a balloon every day.

* * *

Mr. Sydney Carter, a pioneer film renter of Bradford, has evidently original ideas of buying exclusives. The other day he went up to Selig's office in London and saw "Alone in the Jungle," "Law and the Outlaw," and "Wamba," each 2,000 feet in length. He was so impressed that he offered $35,000 for exclusive British rights. This is the first time Selig's have sold outright to a renter.

I mentioned a few weeks ago, that Mr. King Baggott and Miss E. Hope were busily engaged acting for Imp films in the South of England. Their first British effort will be ready for releasing soon, in the character of an aeroplane subject, entitled "Across the Atlantic." Mr. Grahame White, the famous airman, appears in the production.

* * *

Miss Florence Turner, the Vitagraph artiste, has been appearing this week at a Manchester music hall. An enterprising local cinema manager secured her presence at his show and was nearly mobbed by the crowd clamoring for admission.

* * *

Princess Mary, the only daughter of the King and Queen, wrote a short comedy script for the moving pictures, and this has been produced privately and exhibited at Buckingham Palace. Prince John posed for one of the characters.

* * *

A London moving picture theater manager has been accused by a newspaper of encouraging young girls to smoke simply because he exhibited a slide, "Ladies and Gentlemen—You May Smoke, But in the Interests of Clear Pictures, Draw It Mild!"

* * *

Most elaborate preparations are in hand for the taking of "Hamlet," by the Hepworth Company, in which Sir J. Forbes-Robertson will appear. A fortnight has already been spent on the erection of a castle on the cliffs of an ancient Dorset fishing village, Lulworth Cove. Nearly all the other scenes have already been taken and although this is only on the screen two minutes, it is the most important. It is set in a ruggedly beautiful position, and to transport the plaster castle to the cliffs a wire-rope railway had to be laid. The film will be liberated in America by the Gaumont Company in September.

* * *

The principal American films on exhibition this week at the principal theaters in London and provincial cities are: "American Princess," 1,048 feet (drama), by Kalem; "At Midnight," 1,000 feet (drama), by Rex; "Blame the Wife," 522 feet (comedy), by A. B.; "Back to the Primitive," 1,041 feet (drama), by Lubin; "Babies Prohibited," 1,000 feet (comedy), by Thanhouser; "The Deceivers," 1,023 feet (comedy), by Vitagraph; "Dublin Dan," 2,945 feet (drama), by Solax; "Food Chopper War," 1,016 feet (comedy), by Selig; "Gauntlets of Washington," 1,000 feet (drama), by Edison; "Kiss of Salvation," 1,054 feet (drama), by Melies; "Lost Dispatch," 2,000 feet (drama), by Western Import; "Mammy's Child," 960 feet (comedy), by Powers; "Oil on Troubled Waters," 2,005 feet (drama), by Flying A; "One Good Turn," 1,017 feet (drama), by Vitagraph; "Pauline Cushman," 2,460 feet (drama), by Selig; "Trail of the Itching Palm," 992 feet (comedy), by Essanay.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

AMERICAN ENGAGES FENCING MASTER.

The American Film Company, located at Santa Barbara, California, has engaged a fencing master who will coach the stock company actors in swordsmanship. It is the intention to produce a series of romantic costume plays dealing with the Fifteenth Century, entitled, "The Adventures of Jacques," featuring Warren Kerrigan.

"GRANNY'S OLD ARM CHAIR."

A very pretty, plain little play is "Granny's Old Arm Chair," to be released by Selig, July 18. It tells of an old woman who bequeathed her favorite grandson her old rocking chair while all the other relatives got handsome bequests. It later turned out that the chair was stuffed with valuable securities. On the same reel is an educational subject entitled, "A Moro Fish Drive."

CHICAGO LETTER

By JAS. S. McQUADE

(This Week's Installment by G. P. Von Harleman.)

EXHIBITORS of Chicago have been notified by the health department that moving picture theaters must take immediate measures to comply with the building ordinance passed December 5, 1910, pertaining to ventilation.

Said ordinance reads: "The air in any room used as an auditorium in buildings of Class IV (theaters seating less than 300), and Class V (theaters seating 300 and more), hereafter erected, shall be changed so as to provide each person for whom seating accommodation is provided in such auditorium, with at least 1500 cubic feet of air per hour. The air in any room used as an auditorium in buildings of Classes IV and V, constructed prior to the passage of this ordinance, shall be changed so as to provide each person for whom seating accommodation is provided in such auditorium, with at least 1200 cubic feet of air per hour. The word 'auditorium,' as used in this section in connection with buildings of Classes IV and V, shall be construed as including the main floor, balcony and galleries."

It seems that this ordinance never was enforced, and that a great number of picture houses in Chicago (it is said more than one hundred) are not provided with ventilating systems of 1200, still less than 1500, cubic feet capacity per hour. The notification from the health department came shortly before the 1st of July, which is the date when all theaters must renew their licenses. Exhibitors not having the proper system of ventilation in their theaters must now sign an agreement to install a ventilating system that will be approved by the building and health department, not later than September 1st. To comply with this ordinance, moving picture theaters must have quite an elaborate blower system with furnace. The approximate cost for such an installation is said to be close to $800.

Of course, many of the small picture houses could never afford such an expense, and realizing this, Local No. 2 of the Exhibitors' League has taken the matter up with the building and health department in order to effect, if possible, a compromise. By request of the Chicago League, Dr. Hill, in charge of the department of ventilation of the health department, was invited Monday, June 30th, to the assembly rooms of the M. P. E. L., in the Masonic Temple, to make an address to the members of the League on ventilation. This was done in order to give the exhibitors a conception of the views of the health department on this particular subject with the object, as previously mentioned, to effect a possible modification of this rather severe ordinance.

Dr. Hill spoke at length on the subject, and, among other things, assured the exhibitors that the policy of the department was not destructive, that they were not trying to confiscate any theaters, but would expect exhibitors to co-operate with the department and comply with regulations of the building code. Dr. Hill also wanted to state that the department was in no way connected with, or interested in, any special ventilating system exploited by any ventilating concern in or outside of Chicago. Dr. Hill said further, that if it was ascertained that any employee of his department was found to recommend any special ventilating concern, the department would consider this a misdemeanor.

Dr. Hill invited the exhibitors to open a discussion and ask questions, and he also suggested that the League should appoint a committee to work in co-operation with the department to consider ways and means for a happy solution of this issue without jeopardizing the interests of a great number of the members of the League.

After Dr. Hill left, a committee was appointed, with Robert R. Levy as chairman, and Louis Zahler, Charles Abrams, H. C. Krabs and D. L. Schwartz as members. The committee will take up the matter immediately after the return of the delegates from the national convention in New York City.

City Council Upholds Building Laws.

An effort to override the theater building law was defeated by the city council of Chicago, July 1st, by one of the most emphatic votes cast in several years, according to the "Tribune." The city council protected the integrity of the theater building ordinances, and to do so reversed the action of a majority of the building committee.

The building committee had recommended for passage an order for a special building permit to O. C. Hammond, owner of a moving picture theater at 3115 Indiana Avenue. If passed it would have authorized him to place twenty-eight additional seats in his theater, although it already contains the maximum number permitted by the building code.

Only three aldermen voted against it in committee, but when it was brought up for passage it was attacked by Ald. John Kjellander, Ald. Harry E. Littler and Ald. A. J. Fisher. The two latter supported Kjellander's motion to place the committee's recommendation on file. A viva voce vote was taken. There was a roar of "yeas," and not a voice responded to the call for the "nays."

"This is a dangerous proceeding," said Kjellander. "When I was a member of the building committee one of the things we watched most closely was the enforcement of the building regulations concerning theaters. Now we are asked to permit a man to install more seats than the law recognizes as safe. If we pass it, it would be only a short time before others would be in here asking for permission to install an excess of fifty or more seats. Once you step over the line where will you stop?"

This is also the opinion of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, as expressed in our Chicago Letter of July 5th, for one violation of the existing ordinance will lead to its general abuse and will tend to railroad the small theaters out of business in the long run. run.

St. Louis Motion Picture Co. Actors in Painful Accident.

From the Albuquerque "Evening Herald" we learn that Mrs. Alma Farley, mother of Miss Dot Farley, leading woman of the St. Louis Motion Picture Co., had a narrow escape from asphixiation when "Cinnamon," the moving picture dog, turned on a gas main under her bed. At some time in the past a pipe has been laid and a tap placed near the wall in Mrs. Farley's bedroom. This tap has been found to work with great ease, and to prevent it from being accidentally turned on, Mrs. Farley's bed was placed over it.

Miss Farley is the proud possessor of "Cinnamon," who has been seen several times in motion pictures bearing the "Frontier" brand. This dog is accorded the run of the house. On the morning of the day named, "Cinnamon" ran into Mrs. Farley's room and, after receiving his customary smile from his mistress, ran under the bed.

Within a short time Mrs. Farley began to detect the odor of gas, but not seeing how there could be gas in the room, she said nothing to her daughter, who was in an adjoining room. Presently, however, there came a sound from under the couch as though "Cinnamon" were having a fit. In a few moments he emerged and made for the door. Every hair of his coat stood erect, and he staggered as he walked toward the exit. Mrs. Farley called for help Miss Farley answered the call at once, and on entering the room was shocked at the odor of gas. Investigation developed that the dog had brushed against the tap under the bed and had turned it wide open.

Another member of the company, Charles Huber, about 30 years old, property man, was painfully, but not seriously, wounded by the discharge of a blank cartridge in a saddle gun which he was lifting from the scabbard on his pony.

Huber had the rifle raised high above his head by the stock with one hand, pulling it out of the sheath, holding the lower end of the scabbard near his body with the other hand. He did not recollect leaving a shell in the chamber, but the shell was there and the gun went off, the wadding from the cartridge inflicting a painful wound in his leg. Huber, it is said, will be all right in a few days.

Chicago Film Brevities.

The Chicago delegates for the New York Convention left by a special train on the Lake Shore Saturday morning, July 5th, at 10:30. About seventy-five members of the League took advantage of this accommodation. Everybody was boosting for Bill Sweeney as National President.

* * *

I have been unable to get any data about the meeting at the Sherman House, and Mr. C. A. Anderson's new independent local. I have been told, though, by a a number of exhibitors, that it was not altogether a success. Of course, they were all licensed. Please, Mr. Anderson and others, step forward, and tell us all about it.

* * *

Alvin B. Giles has resigned as advertising director of the Advance Motion Picture Co., and writes us that he is not through with the moving pictures by any means, and that he has plans in mind that will prove interesting.

* * *

We have a letter from J. M. McLaughlin, formerly of the A. H. Andrews Company's Chicago office. Mr. McLaughlin is now way up in Seattle, boosting the Andrews chairs in the far northwest.

* * *

We are told by friend Traub, of the Amusement Supply Co., that the plan of sending out a representative on a motorcycle with sidecar attachment, to call on all theaters in the Central Western States, was not a success because of the fact that the idea proved to be so popular that their representative, "Motorcycle Mac," became too ambitious and overloaded his car, with a consequent breakdown.. This news is not disturbing, however, as this company is so very enthusiastic over the success of their first week with the motorcycle that they have now purchased a 1913 Model Ford roadster and have started in more vigorously than ever. It is hoped by the management that their representative (no longer Motorcycle Mac), Mr. John McAuley, will be able to call on all Illinois and Indiana exhibitors before the summer is over. This company has also asked us to announce their new and complete illustrated catalog, which will be ready for mailing about the time this issue is mailed. No charge is made for the catalog, but the company asks that you send six cents (in stamps) to cover cost of postage and handling.

* * *

The Parisian Mfg. & Film Renovating Co. is reporting booming business. E. J. Denison, manager, states that their plant now has a film capacity of 10,000 feet and a renovating capacity of fifty reels daily. Mr. Denison claims that they have a new process which thoroughly cleans, polishes and removes scratches, if they are not too deep. Unlike so many other processes, it leaves the film soft and pliable.

* * *

Phil. H. Solomon, manager for the Chicago office of the Warners Feature Film Co., gave a private exhibition of their latest release, "Theodora," at the exhibition rooms of E. E. Fulton, on July 3rd, for quite a number of exhibitors.

* * *

The Northern Feature Film Exchange has recently purchased "In the Sultan's Power" from the World's Best Film Co., for the state of Illinois

U. S. vs. M. P. Patents Company.

Hearings Before the Special Examiner Continued—The Government Almost Ready to Close Its Case—Much of the Evidence is Cumulative and Cross Examinations Generally Futile.

The proceedings in the suit of the Government of the United States against the Motion Picture Patents Company, The General Film Company and other defendants were continued all of last week before Special Examiner Edward C. Hacker, in Room 47 of the Federal Bldg. The first witness called by the government was Hector Streyckmans, who told of numerous conversations he had with George Kleine, regarding the latter's entering of the alleged combination. According to the witness Mr. Kleine was urged by the organizers of the combination to retain Gaumont and Urban among his agencies and to drop the rest. He was instructed, the witness testified, to keep Gaumont, because Gaumont was the owner of certain patents, which might prove valuable. Witness was excused for the rest of the day and will be recalled for cross-examination on Thursday.

The next witness was a man named Thomas H. Bates from Roxbury, Mass., who had motion pictures made of his young son. The latter, only 22 months old, seemed to be a re-incarnation of Hercules, lifting, as his proud father declared, weights of thirty-six pounds. Mr. Bates testified that he could not get these pictures exhibited in the licensed houses of Boston, and that his efforts to get the pictures licensed by the Patents Company were unavailing. The evident pride of Mr. Bates in the prodigious feats of strength performed by his infant son were a source of genuine amusement to everybody and aided in relieving the tedium of the session.

In the course of the afternoon Judge Ray handed down a decision ruling against the attorneys for the Motion Picture Company on the question of whether the witness, Swaab, of Philadelphia, was obliged to answer the question as to how much money he had made in the film business after his license had been cancelled by the General Film Company.

The examination during the latter part of the week brought out very little of interest. The evidence given by the various witnesses was for the greater part cumulative and much time was taken up with futile cross-examination.

Mr. Otis J. Chaplain, who after the formation of the General Film Company conducted a licensed exchange in San Francisco, known as the Theater Film Service Company, testified that his license had been cancelled because he had an interest in an exchange which sold independent films.

Joseph Hopp, of Chicago, said in answer to various questions by Mr. Grosvenor, the deputy attorney general, that the Moving Picture Patents Company had in 1910 fined him $1,000 for furnishing licensed reels to unlicensed houses. A letter was introduced in evidence showing that the Moving Picture Patents Company allowed witness to pay this fine in monthly installments of $200. Hopp's license was finally cancelled for alleged violations of his agreement with the Moving Picture Patents Company. The cross-examination elicited nothing of any account.

Edgar Thorp, an exhibitor of Franklinville, Pa., testified as the next witness that he had shown independent features in his house and that in consequence the General Film Company had refused to supply him with any more film.

The government expects to finish its case within a day or two, after which the defense will have its innings. The defense will try to show that the defendants acted within the law under their patents and did not in any way violate the Sherman statute.

THIS WEEK'S CROP OF ACCIDENTS.

Gleaned from the Carbon Copies.

Mr. James Harrison, of the "Flying A" players, had an attack of ptomaine poisoning after a meal in a Los Angeles restaurant. Mr. Harrison should be more careful.

* * *

Mr. Ed Coxen, of the "Flying A" players, had a tooth knocked out by a fellow player while they were acting a scene. The report states that the tooth was an "incisor" but the size is not given.

* * *

George Field, of the "Flying A" players, hurt his foot in a convict scene. There is some conjecture as to whether it was the right or the left foot.

* * *

Bliss Milford, of the Edison acting company, has been suffering, recently, with sore eyes.

* * *

William Wadsworth, of the Edison acting forces, was playing the part of a patient in a scene while Dan Mason was playing a dentist. Mr. Mason forgot himself and pulled out some of Mr. Wadsworth's teeth. It is considered no more than just that the Edison Company should buy Mr. Wadsworth some new teeth.

* * *

Margaret Oswald, who in private life is Mrs. Henry McRae, both of the Universal coast company, burned her hand recently. Both lady and husband are doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

* * *

Joseph Edward Victor Fairfield Daveran Singleton and Miss Iva Shepard, both of the Universal coast company, have announced their engagement to be married.

PHYSIOC TO FIGHT.

Former Ramo Head to Claim Trade Mark and Demand an Accounting.

Monday of last week Wray Bartlett Physioc retired from the Ramo Company as the result of a series of conflictions that have extended over several months. He announces that early in the coming week he will sue out an injunction restraining the Ramo company from using the familiar trade mark which he designed and copyrighted in his own name. He also declares that he will seek to obtain a settlement with the Directors' Film Corporation, the legal designation of the Ramo Company.

Mr. Physioc, who is a member of the famous family who have made their mark in theatricals and motography, founded the Ramo company late last year. Until lately he has had full charge of the plant of the company and made the bulk of the productions. He says that an effort was made to force him to dispose of his stock holdings at a figure below par, which he refused to do.

After the injunction suit is disposed of he will seek to get the stock matter straightened out.

Mr. Physioc is a man of high artistic ideals and gave a stamp of individuality to the company's productions.

ESSANAY'S NEW STUDIO AT NILES, CAL.

The new and commodious studio of the Essanay Company, at Niles, Cal., is rapidly approaching completion. Much work remains to be done, but the spacious new quarters have been in daily use now for several weeks. Nothing will be wanting to make this the most completely equipped studio in the West as well as the most delightfully and at the same time conveniently situated. The Essanay is doing nothing by halves and has devoted as much attention to the happiness and comfort of its forty odd players as it has to the mechanical departments of the colony. Six roomy cottages, completely furnished, are fully occupied and as many more will be built in the immediate future.

NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION

Annual Meeting Held at Imperial Hotel Saturday, July 5—Officers and Delegates Elected—Next Meeting at Buffalo

A NEW wrinkle in the method of holding State conventions of exhibitors was pulled off on Saturday, July 5, by the New York State League. Heretofore such meetings have been composed of all the members of the organization, but in this case only delegates from the several local organizations took part in the proceedings and the result somewhat "flabergasted" the members of the New York local, which, though numerically much greater than all the up-State locals combined, did not muster enough delegates in the convention to control the proceedings. That is how it happened that the up-State exhibitors got away with most of the offices, and that is why there were murmurings of half concealed discontent among the New York City contingent.

H. L. Fox, of Binghamton, Second Vice-President.

John B. Friedman, of Buffalo, National Vice-President.

The State convention was called to order at 11 o'clock, Saturday morning, at the Imperial Hotel, by President Samuel H. Trigger. The delegates present were: New York Local—William Hilkemeier, G. W. Anson, Adolph Baurenfreund, Eugene Elmore, M. L. Fleischman, R. J. Macnab, A. A. Corn, Rudolph Sanders, M. Needles, J. A. Koerpel and Frank Tichenor.

Albany Local—A. V. H. Becket, Saratoga; L. C. Smith, Schenectady.

Utica Local—William Douque and Peter Karl, Utica; W. H. Linton and J. E. Reardon, Little Falls.

Syracuse Local—B. E. Cornell, M. A. Gibbons, W. J. Lowery, Syracuse; William Signor, Auburn.

Rochester Local—A. N. Wolff.

Buffalo Local—Henry Marsey, J. B. Friedman, J. F. Miller, R. C. Gettle.

Binghamton Local—H. L. Fox, Binghamton; Irving L. Davis, Elmira.

Westchester Local—Max Samuels, Yonkers.

There was but little time spent in preliminaries. President Trigger stated the purpose of the convention and after some remarks upon the growth and welfare of the organization, he introduced President M. A. Neff, of the National League, who told the delegates of the work that had been accomplished by the National organization during the past year.

Reports of committees and reading of communications were quickly disposed of and the delegates got down to the real business of the meeting—the election of officers. There was no opposition to the re-election of President Trigger and he was chosen to succeed himself by a unanimous vote. In like manner First Vice-President B. E. Cornell, of Syracuse, was re-elected.

For the office of second vice-president, H. L. Fox, of Binghamton, was elected to succeed R. M. Davidson, who was unable to serve longer.

Treasurer John C. Davis, of Saugerties, was re-elected without opposition. Secretary Rosenthal, though he showed some strength on the first ballot, which was a tie, was unable to make any gains on a second ballot being taken and lost out to William Douque, of Utica.

John B. Freidman, of Buffalo, was elected to the commanding position of National vice-president, and our old friend, Robert Whitten of New York, was re-elected sergeant-at-arms and was consequently happy.

Fifteen delegates to the National Convention was the quota allowed New York State. The five local presidents who attended the convention were named by virtue of their office. These are President Trigger, of New York local; H. L. Fox, of the Binghamton local; William Douque, of the Utica local; R. C. Gettle, of the Buffalo local, and Max Samuels, of the Westchester local. The rest were balloted for with the following result: William Hilkemeier, R. J. Macnab, Eugene Elmore, H. W. Rosentbal, Frank Tichenor, G. W. Anson, of New York City; Harry Marsey, Buffalo; B. E. Cornell, Syracuse; John C. Davis, Saugerties.

After the disposition of unfinished and new business, Buffalo was named as the place for the next annual convention, to be held on the second Tuesday of June, 1914, and the meeting was adjourned at 7 o'clock to join a number of visitors and guests at a banquet in the Rose room of the Imperial Hotel.

Assembled at this pleasant function were: Samuel H. Trigger, president of the New York League, and at his right was President M. A. Neff, of the National League. George H. Wiley, National vice-president for Missouri, was present, having arrived in New York that day. Others were W. A. Douque, Utica; W. H. Linton, Little Falls; C. W. Shults, Little Falls; Leland St. John, St. Johnsville; Robert Whitten, New York; Joseph B. Friedman, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Miller, Harry Marsey, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Gettle, of Buffalo; B. E. Cornell, W. J. Lowery, B. A. Gibbons, Syracuse; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Signor, of Auburn; John C. Davis, Saugerties; I. L. Davis, Elmira; H. L. Fox, Binghamton; Fred F. Dick, Peter Karl, Miss Lorena Niles and Miss Mabel Hudson, Utica; Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Herbst and daughter, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bomb, of Chicago; Max Samuels, of Yonkers; L. C. Smith, of Schenectady; A. V. H. Becket, of Saratoga; J. E. Reardon, Little Falls; L. R. Thomas, Moundsville, V. Va.; Clem Kerr, Dayton, Ohio; H. C. Stradford, Richmond, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Young, Brooklyn; William Hilkemeier, Grant W. Anson, Eugene Elmore, Miss Ruth Allen, Herman Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Macnab, Miss Jeanette Ehrenberg, John King, A. A. Corn, William Brandt, Eric Morrison and W. P. Eisenhardt, Adolph Baurenfreund, M. L. Fleischman, Frank L. Allen, Louis Rosenthal, Edward Valensi, Adolph Weiss, Rudolf Sanders, A H. Saunders, H. W. Rosenthal, George D. Procter of the Morning Telegraph, James S. McQuade and H. L. Hoffman of The Moving Picture World.

W. A. Douque, of Utica, Secretary.

Famous and popular Len Spencer, looking younger than ever, was director of the musical program and supplied a number of singers of merit.

When a particularly dainty menu had been properly discussed, President Trigger remarked that there would be no speechmaking as it was planned to go to Coney Island, so he introduced President Neff for a few remarks. But the National president was not caught so easily and thanked the party for letting him off.

An uneventful trip was made to Coney in sight-seeing cars and after seeing most of the sights the merrymakers returned at an early hour Sunday morning.

AN OLD TIMER.

Louis Blum, representing the Wyanoak Company, is one of the veterans of the photographic game. He has represented in the theatrical field most, if not all of the noted photographers, including the two Saronys, has been an importer of news photographs and is as well known to the art editors of the New York newspapers as any man in the game. He has gone in for more quiet occupations now and is making the photo-gelatine prints of his company the standard. His best motion picture work has been for "Quo Vadis?"

UTAH PICTURE MEN ORGANIZE.

Convention Held at Salt Lake on June 24 and Permanent League Formed.

An interesting meeting of the motion picture men of Utah was held at Salt Lake City, on June 24, at which there was a fairly large attendance of exhibitors from all over the State. It was decided to hold frequent meetings until the trade in that State should be thoroughly organized. Permanent officers were named as follows:

President, A. J. Davis, Salt Lake; vice-president, J. S. Barlow, Murray; secretary and treasurer, A. L. Stalling, Spanish Fork. The temporary chairman of the meeting was E. J. Phoad, Eureka, and the temporary secretary was George M. Blackburn, of Salt Lake.

Other picture men present were: Clifton Pierce, American Fork; John Morley, Jr., Eureka; John T. Horn, Logan; W. G. Griffith, Smithfield; W. E. Anderson, Price; George Paul, Preston; C. G. Perrington, Mt. Pleasant; G. H. Done, Payson; Charles Kent, Salt Lake; C. W. Hill, Milford; A. L. Jones, Bingham; D. L. Leveritt, Brigham; D. W. Wilkenson, Cedar; W. N. Boyden, Clearville; A. O. N. Carr, Elsinore; Nathan Cole, Ephraim; Young Bros., Fairview; A. B. Manausa, Garland; Hammond Bros., Ranchville; Power & Whitem, Goshen; S. N. Duggine, Gunnison; George Ball, Helper; G. P. Garf, Lehi; Earl McIntyre, Mammoth; Thomas Ransom, Monroe; Silas Brown, Midvale; Edgar Bradley, Moroni; Mr. Dewey, Park City; B. B. Wallick, Price; J. R. Baxter, Spring City.

PITTSBURGH LOCAL NO. 1 DELEGATION.

About fifty members of Pittsburgh Local No. 1 came in on a special car Sunday July 6th at 1:30. They had a high old time on the way, and every man looked as if he had just come in from a train-wrecking crew. H. B. Miller, of the Pittsburgh Photoplay, and A. S. Davis, of the Independent Film Exchange, furnished the boys with liquid refreshments and meals en route. F. J. Herrington, ex-national vice-president for Pennsylvania, and James Steele, manager of the Feature Film Company, Pittsburgh, were of the party.

Mr. Herrington stated to a World representative that the members of Pittsburgh Local No. 1, at the regular meeting for the election of officers for the ensuing year, voted unanimously against State censorship. It was the opinion of all present that such a measure would mean a step towards the Russianizing of America, and that it was tantamount to the suppression of free speech and a free press.

HOTALING'S NEW COMPANY.

Arthur D. Hotaling, the comedy director of the Lubin company, was in town last week engaging a new company of players. Of his former cast he has retained only Miss Mae Hotely and the Misses Frances and Marguerite Ne Moyer. Earle Metcalf, who has been playing with the Nicholls section at Jacksonville, has joined Mr. Hotaling, but the others will all be new to pictures and offer a change of faces.

Mr. Hotaling came over from Atlantic City, where he is located for the summer, in his new racing car that can make 75 miles an hour without hanging out its tongue or giving other signs of distress. He didn't get in trouble with the police in the matter of speed while in town, but the dungeon vile yawned for him when his car went up Broadway with a trail of smoke. His persuasiveness saved him, but he spent a couple of hours pretending to tinker with the mechanism until the policeman went off post.

NINETEEN "QUO VADIS?" COMPANIES IN AUGUST.

The George Kleine photodrama production of "Quo Vadis?" is breaking all records for hot weather business in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and in large Canadian cities. On August 3rd there will be two companies operating in the South, two companies in the West, two in New England, two in the Middle West, three in New York City, one in Brooklyn, one in Philadelphia, one in Boston, three in Chicago, two in New Jersey, making in all nineteen companies. This is an undisputable argument for the drawing quality of "Quo Vadis?" and a very positive indication of the influence that spectacular photodrama is going to exercise in the field of amusement in this country. It will greatly revolutionize the present order of things.

"Honor Thy Father" (Cines)

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

"HONOR THY FATHER," a two-reel special by Cines, will be released by George Kleine, July 25. The story lays bare the discords in a noble family, in which father and daughter are pitted against mother and son, and its development creates an interest that increases in intensity as the climax is neared.

The films are marked by quite a number of elaborate interior views, in which the light effects are soft and the definition excellent. The acting of the principals in the cast is meritorious, the result of careful assignment and fine balance.

The charge may be brought by some unthinking people that the animus existing between members of the same family is stretched to the point of unnaturalness in this story; but, if they are such poor students of human nature, they are referred to Shakespeare's "King Lear." There are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamt of in the philosophy of most of us.

Count Castel is a decrepit old nobleman, who lives on an estate of the same name. His chief confidante is his daughter, Marie, who loves him devotedly. The countess centers her affections on her son, Charles, a dissipated and extravagant youth, whose weaknesses frequently place him in grave financial difficulties. His father has saved him from embarrassment so often that his patience is exhausted and his parental affection chilled. Marie loves her brother through all his escapades, and has often interceded for him with his imbittered father.

An early scene in the photodrama shows Charles pleading with his mother to extricate him from one of his recurring difficulties. She, in turn, pleads with the count in his behalf, but in vain. The obdurate old man swears that no more of his money will be given to the spendthrift. Marie also pleads, but is refused. Then the countess sacrifices her jewels and Marie gives up all her savings to get Charles out of the clutches of the money sharks.

Soon after this incident the count is seized with a fatal illness. Before his death he summons Marie to his bedside and makes her swear that she will carry out the terms of his last will. When the will is read in presence of the members of the family, it is found that the estate and all other possessions have been willed to Marie, on condition that she shall never sell or part with the land of the Castel estate.

Just before her father's death, Marie had met Paul Oddie, a young civil engineer, who had rented the quarries on the Castel property. She was impressed by the young man's bearing, and faith in his worthiness grew in her heart.

The countess and Charles were madly disappointed with the provisions of the will, and wreaked all their displeasure on innocent Marie. Charles lived more extravagantly than ever, and to raise money joined in a banking scheme with an unscrupulous clique of sharpers headed by a swindler named Samuels. The bank went under, and Charles was saddled with the liabilities. In his distress he called upon Marie, accompanied by his mother. They tried to induce her to come to the rescue, but she refused. Then Samuels called, but he also was rebuffed by the ultimatum, "I cannot disregard my father's last wish."

During the year that brought to Charles such disaster, Marie and Paul Oddie had been engaged. She acquainted him with her home difficulties and profited by his advice. While visiting Paul at the quarries one day, Marie had a severe fall that confined her to bed. Her mother and Charles were notified, and, thinking the opportunity a good one, took Samuels along to assist in getting Marie to sign papers that would cover the liabilities of Charles. They found Marie well when they arrived, and as obdurate as ever in resisting their wishes. Then they resorted to conspiracy, and planned to drug her so that she would become as putty in their hands. Overhearing the conversation, Marie fled to Paul, who placed her in the care of his aunt.

The conspirators discovered her retreat, and, by ransacking her correspondence found that she was affianced to Paul. They kidnapped the latter and placed him bound in the dungeon of an old ruin. Then they carried Marie by force to her home, where they sought by violence and force to get her signature to an instrument drawn up by Samuels. Just as she was about to sign the document, Paul and his workmen burst into the room. Her lover had succeeded in making his escape, and his timely arrival with help saved the Castel estate.

Scene from Kleine-Cines Feature in Two Reels, Entitled "Honor Thy Father."

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

DESPITE the great counter-attractions presented by the arrangements for entertainment of the delegates to the third annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, the attendance at the first International Motion Picture Exposition at the Grand Central Palace, on the part of those directly interested in the motion picture business during the first two days was extremely gratifying, and the attendance on the part of the public interested in motion pictures only as patrons was likewise pleasing. The early hours of Monday night did not show a large attendance. In fact the people wending their way up the broad staircase of the great hall could be easily counted and some members of the exposition committee were inclined to feel disheartened over the prospects. But their fears were soon dispelled and before nine o'clock crowds were assembled about all the booths and waiting lines stood at the entrances to the model theaters. Tuesday night the crowds arrived earlier and the attendances for the balance of the week promise to be very large.

* * *

There have been many expositions of various kinds in the Grand Central Palace, but none to equal the one in progress there this week and those who fail to visit it will miss a rare opportunity. It is distinctly unique, interesting and instructive in the fullest sense, besides affording various forms of most enjoyable entertainment. Lovers of music find revelations there and those who cherish the "movies" are afforded opportunity to see the best that the motion picture art can produce. All the displays are most complete and the booths and everything they contain are so attractively arranged that they command admiration to far more extent than the general run of exhibits.

* * *

It is sincerely hoped that the people who have been classifying those connected with the motion picture business as a species of degenerates and assassins of public morals will condescend to patronize the exposition at least once during the week. They will be convinced of the extent to which they have deceived themselves. In passing the Grand Central Palace, Tuesday evening, one of two men was overheard replying to his companion, "Yes, this place is given over to those moving picture people this week, and we can guess how they will carry on."

* * *

Upon entering the exposition the first thing that impresses the visitor is the dignity attached to every move in the place. There are competitors in all branches of the business, elbow to elbow, in all parts of the great hall, all assiduously striving to draw attention to their exhibits, yet doing it with such courtesy to each other and with such an absence of boisterous effort that one is bound to declare the exposition one of the best conducted ever held in the big hall.

* * *

It is almost generally believed that the exposition would draw a big attendance of the picture idol seekers. No doubt this caused many of the straight-laced people to surmise that the exposition would be a convention of love-sick maidens and youths. If they have been to the hall they have not put themselves in evidence, and if they do during the balance of the week the atmosphere of superiority surrounding them will be sufficiently convincing that the favorits photoplayers in attendance are not there to indulge in frivolities. So if there are any ladies who really desire to see in the flesh their favorite photoplay actors or actresses they may attend the exposition for that purpose without the slightest fear that they will come in contact with any incident that may be offensive to them.

* * *

The newspapers have not been extravagant in the use of printers' ink in calling attention to this exposition, notwithstanding it is really an adjunct of a national convention of representatives from all parts of the country of promoters behind the greatest form of amusement ever afforded the masses and the classes. If it was an exposition under the auspices of the old line theatrical managers or players, the columns of the newspapers would be crowded with the heraldings. For some reason the newspapers cannot get away from the hole-in-the-wall idea when anything pertaining to motion pictures come up before them. "The nickelodeon people" some newspaper men call the exhibitors. To their minds no one connected with the motion picture business holds position in any representative field in the country. Well, last Tuesday evening a group of men stood near one of the booths that made the aisle in which they stood look like Wall Street. At least three of them could individually command sufficient capital on twelve hours' notice to buy out the combined theatrical interests of this city. That's going some.

* * *

Mr. Edmundson, the London motion picture magnate, was among the visitors to the exposition during the early part of the week. He arrived on the Fourth of July, and is on a flying trip to look after his agencies here. He returns next week. When asked what he thought of the exposition, he said: "By jove, but this is a jolly good idea. I'm exceedingly interested in the exhibits and the affair gives a fellow a splendid opportunity to meet all the shining lights in the business from all over the country. I'm pleased I made my trip at this time."

* * *

Two of the most active attendants at the exposition are Mr. Earle, President of the National Nassau Bank, and the Nicholas Power Company, and Mr. Nicholas Power, the inventor of the projecting machine bearing his name. They were on the go all the time, visiting all the booths and extending cordial greetings in all directions. Their beaming countenances make everybody they come in contact with happy.

* * *

Souvenir seekers crowd about the booths and nothing within reach gets by them. Some of them had exaggerated notions as to what constitutes a souvenir. One man who boasted that he was born and bred in Connecticut stopped at a booth where a projecting machine was being demonstrated and said to the young man in charge, "Say, young feller, that there machine of yourn certainly looks good to me and you have your booth done up in great style, but still you lack enterprise. Now if you gave away small working models of your machine it would be a big 'ad.' If you gave me one and I took it home and showed the people how it worked I'd get you dozens of orders."

* * *

"Oh!" exclaimed an old lady, as she entered one of the model theaters, "just look at all the picture houses they have here. By the time the show closes we can see over a dollar's worth of pictures, and the whole thing only cost fifty cents."

* * *

There was a big demand at the booth of the Moving Picture World for copies of the Convention Number. "That certainly is some number," said a delegate from Ohio.

* * *

The nearest approach to a suffragette thus far discovered in the exposition is the young woman who strolls about in a policeman's uniform. She makes a good appearance—but no arrests to date.

INFRINGING FILM SEIZED BY ECLECTIC.

On a writ of replevin issued on June 1 by Judge Day, of the United States District Court of Cleveland, Ohio, an unauthorized copy of the five-reel Eclectic feature, "The Mysteries of Paris," was seized that day by United States Marshal Sanning at the Bijou Dream Theater, Cleveland, Ohio, together with all posters that were found on the premises.

The film was to be shown at the Bijou Dream, June 2, 3 and 4, but was seized before it could be exhibited. The Eclectic Film Company, of New York, was notified of this proposed exhibition and immediately dispatched its attorney to Cleveland with orders to confiscate the picture, which has been duly copyrighted by the Eclectic Film Company. The Eclectic people have decided to fight this case with the utmost vigor to a finish and will proceed against anyone showing or advertising any other counterfeit copies of any of their copyrighted features that may appear anywhere in the country. The Eclectic Film Company wishes to assure its customers that it will give absolute protection on all their copyrighted features, and to state that buyers are assured that if anyone of its films is interfered with by piratical copies, the Eclectic Film Company will spare no effort and expense to have the infringing copies seized forthwith, no matter where they may be shown.

"The Paper Doll."

Crystal Release.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THIS is a pistol drama, with the recurrent triangle a young lady with two lovers, in conspicuous evidence. Good taste in settings, skilled handling of a commonplace theme and the attractive personality of the young lady, Miss Pearl White, contribute materially to the value of the production, but it is too obviously artificial in plot to be ranked with others of its kind, and all suspense is eliminated by a too-early display of important testimony, what is written on paper cut into a paper doll.

A preferred lover, also a jealous one, threatens the life of his rival and alienates sympathy by visiting the rival with murderous intent. He draws a revolver, one on which his name is carefully engraved, and leaves it behind him after an unsuccessful struggle with his rival. Because of the limitations of a thousand-foot reel this forced preparation may have been thought necessary, but it is jarringly artificial. Circumstantial evidence must be worked out through natural channels.

Scene from "The Paper Doll" (Crystal).

The rival had decided to commit suicide before the jealous lover arrived and had written of his intentions to his beloved. A gust of wind—there lies the force of natural circumstance—carries the account of his attention to a little girl, who cuts it into a paper doll. As soon as the disappointed rival kills himself according to censor-board requirements the rest is obvious to all but primitive minds and entirely within their reach. The jealous lover will be accused of committing murder and will be freed by the suicide's confession.

Scene from "The Paper Doll" (Crystal).

With so good a company and so much ability to publish on the screen a story of real human interest, the director should lay aside the hampering traditions of theatricalism and come into line with those who believe that the ultimate has not been reached, that the best is yet to come. Just as Wagner revolted against those who attempted to confine musical expression by set rules of composition, so must the director of moving pictures strike out into his new field with greater freedom.

There is a sense of liberty in this new art, and there are no confines for real genius. I happen to know that the director of this photoplay has both experience and quality. Experience teaches us what to avoid and quality means inherent good taste to be used in selecting and shaping a product that is superior to the general run. That is what I want to see and expect to see brought into form, entertaining to all classes, with a punch for those who like vigor and originality for those who do not love the commonplace, when the Crystal's competent director comes to his best natural form.

The Day of Judgment.

Love for Unscrupulous Woman Destroys a Great Parisian Banker in the Latest Union Feature Film Company's Three Part Picture.

By H. C. Judson.

THE best entertainment that we human beings know is to be made to live vicariously for a time the lives of other people. Good stories and good pictures carry us out of ourselves; while poor ones fail to make the emotions real to us. We have to believe a picture before we can be pleasantly transported away from ourselves and given a chance to play that we are Olympians, or a kind of demigods who can be personally interested in life, yet, at the same time, be above it.

The producer of this picture, "The Day of Judgment," plainly understands the requirements for weaving a spell above us, for entertaining us, or as the word really means, "holding us between," time and eternity. He doesn't often stumble as he carries before our eyes these pictures of human passions, fears and sorrows. Recognizing his own humanity in us, he doesn't offend us by asking us to sympathize with things that are naturally repellent to us, and, showing us crime and baseness, he brings them to justice before us in the end. Nor has he permitted, through indolence or hurry or contempt for us, much of what is plainly improbable to intrude in his scenes; for he has probably learned by experience that these things, almost as much as any other fault, hamper him in the impression that he wants to make on us.

His picture tells us the story of a rich Parisian banker who is led, by his unscrupulous secretary, a young woman, to enter upon a gigantic swindle that wrecks many confiding investors and causes much distress. The trouble begins when one of his clients leaves him a worthless gold mine. He sends a mining engineering, fiance of his daughter, to investigate it and the report is most unfavorable. But he has already started a mining company and, when the true report comes, the secretary changes it, by scratching a word, into a favorable report. (The picture was made in France and it was probably easier to change the report in its French version.) Misled by this, a friend of the banker, a retired general, puts nearly all his fortune into the mine and is made president of the company. Duped himself, he innocently helps the nefarious scheme. In the end, after the fraud has been exposed by a blackmailing journalist and the infuriated investors have wrecked the furnishings of the bank's office in their mad desire to get at the man who has ruined them, this old general is left to bear the brunt of the whole matter and kills himself. The banker and his secretary have escaped; but are followed by the police, led by the general's wife, and captured.

We think the scenes that show the wild "run" on the bank after the journalist has exposed the situation, were kept on too long and made too much of. The story noticeably drags at that point and these scenes fill many feet. They are sensational and such things, kept on too long, are apt to grow artificial. Yet these scenes are also full of good acting. The last scene of all is one of the picture's most effective moments. In it, the wife of the dead general, dressed in black and looking like an embodiment of Justice, comes into the room where the banker and his evil genius are impatiently waiting to get away from the country, and tells them that the day of judgment has come.

The story deals with the biggest things and holds the attention well. That it might have been, perhaps, even more effectively woven is a matter of no great importance. The staging of the story, the sets, etc., and the photography are excellent.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

At Last.

WE'VE waited a long time to hear someone say something about that National Program Press Club, but at last Julian L. Solomon, Jr., of Philadelphia, steps up and shows some interest. He wants to know what we have in mind.

Our idea is simply this. The national advertising is placed only with the large papers of national circulation. The advertising agency is not interested in less than 100,000 circulation and not very much interested in so little. On the other hand, many advertisers will deal with program printing concerns such as Strauss, a concern that handles so many programs of dramatic and vaudeville theaters that it can guarantee a circulation of half a million or more.

It is manifestly impossible to print the advertising for theaters, but there are publications such as the Cameraphone bulletins in Pittsburgh, the Pearce and Fichtenberg programs in New Orleans, the Isis and Angelus news and other house organs that combined could guarantee perhaps a million circulation in lots of five hundred to five thousand.

It is our idea that by combining to offer space through some central agent who would check up the numerous programs and submit the results to the advertising agency, each program could carry the national advertising, with the endorsement this would imply, where it could not, single handed, obtain the space. The idea is simply the formation of an association composed of the live hustlers who have something better than a mere program, something that is taken into the home and read. These would appoint a business representative who would offer the entire circulation in one lot to the advertising agencies, receive the single payment for the same and make return to the houses in proportion to the circulation they contribute. Here is Mr. Solomon's letter:

> For a long time I have been intending to "break in" on your Advertising for Exhibitors' page, but just about the time I had things in shape to make a splurge my father was taken ill and necessitated my discontinuing business until Fall. However, my ideas have not stopped working and I am storing up material for the time when I start up again this Fall. Meanwhile I have several questions to ask.
>
> The first is regarding the Moving Picture Theater Program Club noted in your issue of 21st. What would you consider the best method of organizing and conducting such a club? With a suggestion or two from you, I feel confident that I can handle such an organization for the benefit of several moving picture theaters (and myself, of course). There are several firms in Philadelphia who handle National advertising and my personal connection with one of the largest retail firms here could be made of service for the proper sort of introduction. While caring for my father's business I still have sufficient time to look after my personal affairs. If any of the various "editors" care to communicate with me I will be glad to take the matter up further.
>
> The second question is do you think that an electro service for the small town man would pay? That is a daily service for the man who uses the local newspaper for his ads. The idea is to have electros made up with material suitable for snappy headings. I used stuff of this character for my own ads in the Columbia (Pa.) papers and heard much favorable comments from patrons. I am sending you several carbon copies of ads which I used, but owing to a confusion in moving, my files have been mislaid. I will send you some copies as soon as the files can be located. The idea would be to send out to the exhibitor once a week enough electros for use the week following. By having the electros made up in quantity the price to the exhibitor would be less than regular composition or single electros. If any of the live wires wish to take this matter up I shall be glad to start such a service. Another point is that with a big city printing plant to draw from, one can get better type values into the work.
>
> My plans for Columbia included a house organ, using the Exhibitors' Publicity Co. electrotyped plates and later the starting of an M. P. section once a week in one of the local papers.
>
> I am enclosing a card which I used with fair success in starting up my mailing list. Brother Gunning, of the Eclair, who is a live wire, seemed to think well of it and if any of the boys wish to use it they are very welcome to the suggestion. One other line might have been added with better results from the information point of view is "Who is your favorite player?" This might even be further divided for sex.

The Other Schemes.

We scarcely think that the electro scheme will appeal to many exhibitors, certainly not a sufficient number to make the scheme profitable. Undoubtedly the catchlines set in a city printing office would offer a better display and a wider range of type, but we do not believe that the advantage would offset the cost, particularly where expressage or postage must be added. It would frequently happen that the reel itself would suggest a catchline more apt than one sent out with no particular film in mind, and the cost of composition for one or more lines is so slight that it would not figure in the matter even where the rule is not followed by charging for composition where cuts are used.

Most of the companies now offer electros of the feature subjects and these are better than display lines.

Mr. Solomon has the best mail list card that we have seen. They are given out at the performance and are to be returned to the box office where they are exchanged for a postcard of some player. One side reads:

> Which do you prefer, Independent or Licensed films?
>
> Which make of film, if your preference?
>
> What do you like to see best? Comedy, Drama, Western, War, Love, Historical or Scientific pictures?
>
> What do you consider the best picture shown at this house recently?
>
> Would you care to be put on our mailing list? If so, please fill out the blank below:
>
> Mr. Mrs. Miss...
>
> Address .... Street
>
> If your name is already on our list, please so state.

On the reverse appears this matter:

> This card will be good for a souvenir postal at the box office at
>
> DREAMLAND
>
> On Tuesday Souvenir Day
>
> Between 2 P. M. and 4:30 P. M. or between 6 P. M. and 10:30 P. M.
>
> The only requirement is that the other side be filled out. You do not have to pay another admission price to get the postal, but we will be glad to have you come in anyway.

It might be better if the words following those italicized be left out. They know they can come in if they want to, and the effect of the "you do not have to" is partly nullified by the addition of what virtually amounts to "but we hope you do."

Here, Too.

Here's a word of wisdom from Pearce's Weekly that might be copied:

> Of course, we'll all agree with the Supreme Court that motion pictures are not public utilities: but wonder what the public would do if they couldn't get 'em any more?

We are sorry to see just below comment in favor of an advertising picture school that will prepare "the average person" to write plays after ten lessons. After the "average person" gets stung, he will blame the house. The editor of an up-state paper, one of the most influential in Northern New York, told us the other day that he had lost a number of friends because he ran the advertisement of a New York school, and he did not get paid for the advertisement, either.

A late idea in their program is a business directory, just a line or two giving name and address. You can use it to catch the man who will not take a quarter page and let him get the habit gradually. He will not feel the dollar or two a month and if you can get forty names, the page will pay.

Political Note.

Editor C. T. Smithers, of the Idle Hour Educator, Aberdeen, S. D., comes out flat-footed in favor of votes for women in the last issue. We wonder how many windows the Idle Hour has.

All But the Type.

Were it not that the Yale Theater, Carbondale, Ill., cleaned out the Old English type cases of the shop where their first program was printed, we would say that it was unusually good, but Atkinson and Newsome even use it for "body type" to print the text matter in. Old English is bad enough in the larger sizes, but a closely set paragraph in ten-point is a crime. The program is well written, well planned and convincing, but it is one of the poorest looking jobs, typographically, that has come into this office for a very long time.

The program is eight pages bound with colored cord into a white embossed cover, the embossing showing the Yale pennant. It carries the announcement that "This program and a smile" will admit the holder to the opening matinee, the program being shown at the door and then retained as a "souviner," a sort of spelling that seems to go with the Old English type.

The whole program reads as though it had been written by a couple of men who wanted to do everything in their power to make their house one of the best. Almost every page carries a line or paragraph that hits the bull's eye of popular appeal. Take this, for example:

> We learn new things about the show business every day. Offer us your suggestions. We want to please.

Another page says:

> You will confer a favor by reporting any discourtesies of theater employees to either Mr. Atkinson or Mr. Newsome, one of whom will be found in the theater at all times.
>
> We have eight big doors (always open) and twenty-two windows —we have fans overhead—we will guarantee our theater to be cooler than your front yard and prove it by your own thermometer —bring it. Our aisles are extra wide and our seat rows extra far apart—we could possibly put in one hundred more chairs, but we chose to have fewer chairs and more room, comfort and aisle space for our patrons.

They make good use of the catchline "Attend Yale," but do not overwork it. There seems to be a suggestion here to others who may be tired of Bijous, Uniques and Dreamlands.

Another paragraph gives a long list of schools, colleges and other institutions that make regular or frequent use of pictures. Then comes this:

> We don't have to go far from home to get an endorsement of the Moving Picture Show. The splendid new Methodist Church at Murphysboro, Illinois, was materially aided by the Picture Shows. The ladies of the Church there gave Saturday Matinees on per cent. basis. The Ladies' Club of Murphysboro are conducting Matinees at the Tilford Theater there for fund to build a fence around the Cemetery.
>
> The Yale Theater at Carbondale is at all times willing to assist any church or civic organization.

According to the vaudeville actors, there is not much need for a fence around a cemetery, but perhaps you know of some other object a church in your town is working for. Help them out and they'll help you. It is not a new idea, by any means, and has appeared in this department several times, but we are surprised that greater use is not made of the idea.

Trading Stamps.

The Chelsea Theater, in New York, is giving trading stamps. They switched from postal cards to the stamps because they wanted Kay-Bee players and could not get them.

Each patron gets two stamps with each five-cent ticket, the manager paying twenty cents a hundred in 5,000 lots. A book is given to start the collection with ten free tickets and the tickets interchange with others given by stores. Envelopes containing the stamps, the books and posters for the front of the house are included in the cost of the stamps.

We do not strongly favor the idea of trading stamps for theater tickets. The theater, no matter how small it may be, should not be put on the same plane with the meat market and the grocery store. Postcards and other souvenir schemes are all right where they are needed to bring business, but the trading stamp starts trouble. There will be complaint if they are stopped and if an opposition house starts the stamp scheme, too, there is bound to come the "double stamps" days and all the other evils that trail in the wake of the stamp book. There is quite an active effort now being made to introduce the stamps generally. We hope that it does not make very great progress. Once the novelty wears off there will be no real draught in the idea and yet it may not be dropped without protest.

The Right Spirit.

Ralph R. Ruffner, of the Comet theater, Vancouver, Washington, has not only the right advertising spirit, but he makes advertising do good for others than himself. We are giving his letter in full in the hope that other exhibitors will be lead to follow his excellent example. He writes:

> Unlike a good many exhibitors, I was not a former resident of the city where I am located before I engaged in the picture business, but came here a stranger. It occured to me one day that it would be a good idea to give a special matinee for the benefit of the students of the Washington State School for the Deaf and Blind, which is located here. A special program of pictures and music was arranged, and at the appointed hour the pupils—boys and girls of all ages—and their instructors filed in, almost filling the house.
>
> For the benefit of the blind, I played the pipe organ and electric bells, while those who could see but could not hear, had the advantages of the screen. The entertainment was so unique, and the appreciation so manifest on their part, that I extended the invitation again on several different occasions, each time the school turning out strong, and always with the same genuine appreciation evidenced at the end of the performance, a rising vote being tendered. The first time they came the pictures were of a character to arouse all the latent enthusiasm of young Americans, and when they tendered me a standing vote of thanks, I confess I swallowed a big hard lump several times before it finally stayed down.
>
> Last Christmas, in keeping with the spirit of the season, I gave an annual pass, without any restrictions whatever, to each boy and girl student of the school; the blind and the deaf. In conjunction with the superintendent, the students prepared and printed the cards on their own press; they were then signed by that official and countersigned by me. The whole was given a great deal of publicity at the time by the members of the Board of Directors of the school, despatches headed "Special" appearing in Portland, Oregon, papers, as you will note from enclosed clippings, as well as special mention in the national paper devoted to the deaf and blind.
>
> The children are good "fans" and generally attend in large numbers at Saturday and Sunday matinees. One Saturday, while the boys of the school were down town giving a street parade advertising their big circus, which was held in the school gym., they stopped in front of the theater and serenaded me with their college yell. You can enjoy the comedy with me when I tell you they are looked upon as "deaf and dumb" by those who do not know better.
>
> Knowing as I do the hundred fold returns this little investment has brought me, I venture the opinion that there is not an exhibitor in the United States who, situated in like circumstances, would not do the same thing. My house seats but 240 and there are 178 annual passes outstanding.
>
> Not having the physical perfection of those more fortunate, they have problems to solve in their struggle for an education which we more fortunates do not appreciate, and with a pass in their pockets they are able to drop into the theater whenever they are down town and take advantage of any good they may derive from the pictures, something that might not always be possible if it depended upon the festive nickle, for we were all kids once and I, for one, have not forgotten how big five cents can look, especially when it had to come all the way from home.
>
> If I have not already absorbed too much space, I would like to close with the recommendation that other exhibitors adopt this same idea where possible, not only for the good that will accrue to the children, but to the trade as a whole. There are 88,000 such students in the United States, I understand, and a little seed sown at this time, and along these lines, has vast possibilities.

Think It Over.

The strange showman in a small town is apt to be regarded with at least some slight suspicion, and it is by just such things as this that he makes himself a public spirited citizen instead of a stranger. It takes nerve to give out so many annual passes, but we take it that there are not many in the house at one time and the possession of the coveted pass brings as much real joy to the heart of an afflicted person as to any other, and to any outsider a pass is like the gift of a fairy godmother.

If you do not want to make such a wholesale investment in pleasure to others, why not a series of visits on off nights? Why not ask the inmates of the alms house to some Friday matinee, or have the inmates of other institutions as your guests. You will be doing real good and at the same time reap a reward in the best sort of advertising you can get.

If we had a theater in a home locality we would give a free educational matinee every Saturday morning and charge the expense to advertising. It would do more to break down maternal prejudice than any other one move and by getting some school principal to lecture the films, the endorsement of the school would also be had. If you have the right sort of exchange the films need not cost more than five dollars and this with an extra dollar apiece to the house people would bring it all within ten dollars. Don't just run a theater. MANAGE it.

Dropped Us a Few Lines.

H. De Subers dropped us a few lines to tell us he knows of something about stencils for banners that he will pass along to exhibitors who will send him a stamped and self addressed envelope. We don't know what it is he knows, but we'll pass along the envelopes of anyone who wants to find out.

Some of the lines he dropped us are catchlines, which are passed along for the benefit of the craft:

> Our pictures are all new and all right.
>
> Lucky numbers 4.4.5. four reels for five cents.
>
> If a picture is good enough for us to show, it's good as can be.
>
> Tastes may differ, but good taste is a'ways marked in our pictures.
>
> Lost! A good opportunity!—will be the cry of all who fail to see ——— at ———.
>
> Here's a tip! Place your money on the window ticket ledge at ———. Sure winner.
>
> Are you fond of bright and sunny dispositions? Then take your wife and family to ——— and watch results.
>
> Put your best foot forward, and you'll come out right—in front of the picture screen at ———.
>
> You needn't be content with "one of the finest," you can have as many of them as you like—if you mean moving pictures, and go to ———.
>
> Your face is your own, of course,
> You can treat it as you like,
> But a smile you owe it,
> And you ought to show it,
> At ——— movies to-night.
>
> A party asked me for a name to give his picture house. I gave him Symbol, Charter and Pageant—he selected the latter. This question is at times a puzzler.

Works Two Ways.

Here is a paragraph from the program of the Crawford theater, Canton, Pa. The program is a little folder with advertising top and bottom of each page. On one page in very small type comes this notice:

> IT USUALLY PAYS
>
> to read advertisements. The fact that you have read this indicates that you read the other announcements in this little program. This is just what we want everybody to do, and since you have done so without asking, the reward is yours. If you will present this program at the box office of the theater on Friday afternoon July 4, it will entitle you to one free admission. Do not cut out this notice, but bring the entire program. It pays to patronize our advertisers.

This not only helps out the attendance at the Friday matinee, but it has a good moral effect on the man who pays for his advertising. He can be brought into the house to see for himself that the advertising is read.

Says He'll Come Again.

Dick Craine, of the Hiawatha theater, Willoughby, Ohio, writes that if we are interested he'll come in again. We hope that he does.

He writes to tell that in a little town of 2,000 he worked the Farmer's Matinee scheme with 43 merchants contributing, and that now he is having a full reel made of the town.

We always like to hear from hustlers like that and to see their advertising. The man who can get practically the whole of the business population of the town into a scheme must have a convincing way with him.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by Epes Winthrop Sargent

Kinemacolor Holding Scripts.

ALTHOUGH the Kinemacolor studios have been shut down, owing to overproduction, scripts are not returned to their authors, but are being held for consideration when the studio does start up, possibly in September. The company offers to return to writers their scripts, but it seems to be necessary to make the request.

We think it would be fairer to all concerned if the company would return all scripts with a printed slip suggesting re-submission when the company resumes. It is not just to the author to hold the scripts inactive for two months and more.

If you have sent scripts in and want them returned, make the request of the company.

A New Orleans Dinner.

Julian Louis Lamothe, head of the New Orleans section of the Inquest Club, writes that the circle is progressing steadily and that they are going to give a dinner on the evening of August second. Those in the vicinity of New Orleans who desire to join the club or dinner, may address Mr. Lamothe, at 841 Alexander Avenue.

Growing.

The Dexter, N. M., circle of the Inquest Club is growing. There is now a member in addition to President Edward Ray Coffin.

We note that a publication that has been published for two successive issues in the same town, announces that it is going to start circles. Unlike our circles, this one has an end; a business end. The Inquest Club is not built along those lines. Better get into a circle where the chief end is not sending scripts to the periodical godfather for revision and sale.

To Be Expected.

We said the other day that now that Chicago schools were getting to the deferred payment plan, the New York bunch would probably cut under. About the time we were pasting that item up, came a letter in which the company goes back to its old two dollar rate with the other eighteen to be paid when you have made one hundred dollars. A year ago the company sold its lesson sheets for two dollars, with never a comeback. Probably not one pupil in the hundred will pay the other eighteen under the contract, but the company used to be content with the two dollars and probably still is.

And it has revived the old Emmett Campbell Hall statement that has been retired for a while and states that this paper will support the statement. It is quite true. It is also true that at the time, Mr. Hall wrote nearly as good a script as he does today. We know, because for some time we got first chance at about all he wrote, say for about nine months of the year in question.

And Mr. Hall was never the pupil of any school and received no instruction of moment because he needed none, and at the period covered by the statement, the only instruction to be had were the Lubin, Vitagraph and Essanay form sheets and certain articles we wrote for "The Editor." There were no schools.

Script and Production.

The other day a correspondent wanted to know why some very faulty films had been produced and his passed over. The faults he mentioned were, for the greater part, faults of production. They were not contained in the script and in all probability the script would not have been purchased had the story run as it showed on the screen.

Before you tell yourself that your stories are better than those you see, ask of yourself whether the faults are structural with the plot or whether there is not a probability that the director made the changes. Of course you cannot always tell the alterations the director made, but some of the errors, such as incorrect dressing, faulty entrances and matches and the like, are not comprehended in the script.

At best, it is not a question of what a company has taken. It is a question of what they have not taken of yours, but do not blame on some unknown writer the sins of the director.

Now An Association.

The newest is a photoplaywrights' association, which has been started in Chicago, and which seems to be on more or less intimate terms with the now revived Photoplay Magazine. The association, it is announced, is not run for profit, and a membership of one dollar a year will entitle the member, from what the advertisement seems to say, to free criticism, revising and editing, charges being made only for typing, marketing and postage. The magazine will be the official organ of the association and will run a department devoted to the association each month.

It looks very much like a copy of the Clearing House scheme of the Motion Picture Story Magazine. The writer does not need a clearing house, association or any other device in order to sell his material if he can write the sort of stuff that can sell and if he cannot a Clearing House will not help him much. They are good things to keep away from. They cannot help and they may hurt.

Studying the Stories.

Here's a man who wants to know how to study the Stories of the Films, as we frequently advise. He writes:

> I would like to have a little more information upon "Studying the Stories of the Films." You have often advised photoplaywrights to study the releases in order to ascertain just what the needs of the companies might be.
>
> Isn't it true that the stories released today have been produced months ago? If so, how, by watching these releases, can we tell what the present needs of the companies are? As far as scenes go, I know they are making mostly outdoor stuff now and studio work during the winter months and that photoplays calling for outdoor scenes are given the preference, other conditions being favorable.
>
> Not more than a month ago I witnessed a release by the Vitagraph Company, featuring Miss Helen Gardner, when I knew that Miss Gardner had left that company quite a while back. How then, can we tell what they need today, tomorrow or next week?
>
> I am one of those you wrote about in a recent issue that sold a lot of stories at the jumpoff and then fell down. I'll admit I got the swelled head, alright, thought I could turn them out as fast as "doggies" coming from a frankfurter machine. I know better now. Now I put more time to study, jotting down all the plot germs that I can lay my eyes upon so that any time I need them I have them, just where I want them.

Somehow the correspondent has lost the point of the advice. The stuff released now has been made perhaps months ago, but most of it represents the average wants of that studio and the average must be struck. Do not look at a picture showing the hero going up in a flying machine and decide that the company is in the market for stories with flying machines in them. That is not their average style of production, but a special story produced under some advantageous circumstance. It is not an average story, and it does not represent the average, but if eight out of ten stories done by a certain company show only Western outdoor scenes, it stands to reason that that company is making few, if any, indoor society stories, and so you do not send them a story of New York life.

To a study of the stories of the film you must add a study of the columns of the paper generally. Just now Lubin is releasing a series of stories of Zulus. That might argue that Lubin wants more stories about Zulus, but a couple of months ago it was stated that these were part of a production made by Mr. Hotaling with a special company which had been disbanded. If you connect this paragraph with the appearance of the Zulu stories, you will not write others, because you know that you will waste your effort. If you are a careful reader you will know that Mr. Hotaling is now at Atlantic City and far from the sub-tropical environments of Jacksonville, where the stories were made. In reading the Lubin stories you discard the Zulu stuff and get the general average.

It is the same with other stories and other companies. Each company has a certain general character of production not affected by the special productions it may make. If you write staple stories, you can tell which of the companies are most likely to use that sort of story and so you send it to the most likely market first of all.

Read and study the stories of the films, but keep posted on matters likely to result in a special line of production and eliminate this from your computation. After you have shown that you can write the average story, you will be advised of the studio's special needs as they may arise. That's how the others got close to the editorial desk and how you must go about it.

Market Reports.

A correspondent asks that we institute a market report, giving the changes in demand and other information.

Almost a year ago we started this, but long before the last of the companies replied, the first of them were out of date and a market report is of no value unless it is right up to the moment. Editors know that they are welcome to make free use of this department in making known their wants, and they also know that they can reach the bulk of the real writers by this means. When there is any radical change, the fact is noted, but the market report, such as is given in many of the monthly magazines, is useless because incorrect by the time it appears in print or else it recites the standard wants of the company which may be arrived at by a glance at their list of releases.

The entire Moving Picture World is a real market report and the various items give all the real news. A special market report would be of no real assistance and in many instances it would operate as a hindrance.

Staff Writers.

One of the recent issues of the Dramatic Mirror contained a very interesting interview with Lawrence S. McCloskey. In a more recent issue, a photoplay writer takes up the subject matter to argue against the staff writer and questions Mr. McCloskey's statement that only about one per cent. of the material submitted is worth while. He thinks that this is impossible, though willing to concede that perhaps not more than one script in every hundred is a thoroughly original drama.

Another part of the interview explains to the initiated the meaning of the statement. In this other paragraph, Mr. McCloskey speaks of the correspondence schools and the work of their pupils. At best but few men and women write really good stuff, but this percentage is pulled down by the vast quantities of stuff sent out by the pupils of the schools. They have been told by the school that their stuff is good, and so they keep on sending it out. As a result the studios are flooded with the veriest drivel; most of the stories being rehashes of not more than ten master plots.

He also assails the system of employing staff writers, claiming that no man can do his best work under pressure. In this, he distinctly errs. It may be possible for him to write quickly and well, some persons are so constituted mentally and nervously that they must have plenty of time and absolute quiet. Others do their best work under pressure. It is the man and his nervous makeup, not the method that counts. Some staff writers deliver drivel because they are unable to write a better grade, but others, writing under contract or under arrangement, do their best work because they know they must. One of the most finished writers in the country is a man who was one of the very first of the contract writers. This is his third year under contract to the same company, writing one a week. His scripts are not only technically correct, but they possess the real literary quality while still conforming to studio rules and, better still, his work is versatile and accurate.

The writer suggests that the knowledge that the story must be produced, acts as a bar to incentive. This may be true in some few instances, but in a majority of cases contract writers submit more than the number called for. The contract writer above referred to expects a rejection to about every five scripts, or 80 per cent. of acceptances. Most averages run about 60 per cent., save where the author is in the direct employ of the studio and a short-sighted business management decides to save money by taking everything he writes and having it put upon the screen. Then, and then only, does the contract system become vicious.

In process of time the present staff writer will become the technician to develop into proper working scripts the ideas of others and then, perhaps, the beginner will have less cause for complaint, but it is foolish to argue that the incompetent script should be accepted because it is written by a beginner when for very little more the work of a practised writer may be obtained. The thing for the beginner to do is to keep at it until practise brings greater perfection and then get on the other side of the fence. The contract writer of today was the beginner five or six years ago; for that matter, who knows one man recently put under contract who began writing less than fourteen months ago.

Studying Leaders.

Benjamin Barondess, of the Inquest Club, has been studying leaders and sends in some interesting data with regard to recent films. He writes:

> I have often been puzzled to know whether, in writing a script, I was putting in too many leaders. Another thing which bothers me was whether I had them far enough apart. I have made a rough analysis, which I enclose herewith. I find some curious results. The average number of scenes to a reel is 35. The average number of scenes between leaders is about 5. The average number of leaders to the reel is about 7. Busts and inserts seem to run one or two to the reel.
>
> Of course I know that no analysis, however perfect, can be absolutely relied upon as a guide. The only acid test is common sense and the circumstances of the case, nevertheless, these schedules may be of some value as indicitive of the general plan of the ordinary reel and I submit them for what they are worth.

Mr. Barondess' tables are interesting, but, as he says, the real test for the use of leader is the need of a leader for that particular scene. Leader is not something to be inserted every so often into a script whether it is needed or not. It is the explanation of some matter not possible to convey in action alone.

In Wamba Mr. Barondess finds that the first reel contains 21 scenes and eight leaders, or about one to every three scenes, the actual division being this:

Leader
One scene
Leader
Two scenes
Leader
Four scenes
Leader
Seven scenes
Leader
Two scenes
Leader
One scene
Leader
Two scenes
Leader
Two scenes

The second reel is remarkable in that it consists only of 52 scenes and a bust used as a tableau at the finish. Those who saw this play will remember that the story is rather slight for a double reel, the argument being advanced in the first two-thirds of the first reel, the remaining third getting the action to the start of the suspense. In the second reel is told the story of the abduction of the child and its rescue, all of the matters being so clear in action that printed explanation is not needed.

In "A Montana Mix-up," an Essanay, this is the run of leaders:

Leader
Two scenes
Leader
Two scenes
Leader
Six scenes
Leader
Two scenes and an insert
Leader
One scene
Leader
Fourteen scenes
Leader
Twelve scenes

Barring the use of a leader before the first picture (and with the exception of the second reel of the Selig all the reels start with a leader, though the practise is one to be condemned) this Essanay is a normal development, the leaders coming in the early third of the story, leaving the latter almost unbroken by the interest destroying leader.

Those who are interested can make their own schedules from the condensations given here, the letter L standing for leader and the numbers being those of scenes intervening. Inserts are indicated by the letter I. The first table is "The Padre's Strategy," a Lubin, and shows this result:

L. 1-L-2-L-11-L-1-L-1-L-7-L-14

This gives 37 scenes and 7 leaders. The first reel of Kalem's "Battle for Freedom" gives:

L-1 B-L-4-L-4-L-2-I-2-L-6-L-3-L-2

The second reel, with the battle flashes gives 41 scenes against 24 in the first reels and only 6 leaders and two inserts against 7 leaders and one insert. The table runs:

L-1-B-L-4-L-4-L-2-I-2-L-6-L-3-L-2

There is only one real rule for the use of leader and that is to use it where the action in the scene is not self-explanatory. On the other hand we think that in the script it is better to err on the side of safety and have one or two leaders too many than one too few. It is easier to take out a leader than to add one at the last moment and the use of additional leader calls the attention of the editor to the fact that a leader may be needed at that point. If you would be very careful, put a question mark in brackets after those leaders that are not actually vital or mark these "optional."

These tables form an interesting study of the mechanical form of the script, but they should not be accepted as a rule and guide.

Inquiries

NOTE—No questions can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. A list of addresses to which photoplays may be sent will be mailed on receipt of a STAMPED AND ADDRESSED ENVELOPE.

A. F.—The subject of "punch" is rather too elaborate to be treated here. See the issue for March 1 of this year. If you have not the copy, send ten cents to the publishers, stating the date of the paper wanted.

B. D.—Jack Benson is the person you ask for.

W. M. Y.—You are a bit hasty. Give us time to reply before asking again. You were answered on your first inquiry. No company is under any obligation to tell you why it does not purchase your script. It is sufficient that it does not appeal to them.

G. C. M.—Cannot place the company. Send notification to their last address that you withdraw the script, copy the carbon and submit elsewhere. Stick to companies having known outlets for their releases.

CORRECTION—Two correspondents advise us that it was Miss Grace Cunard, and not Miss Forde, in the lead in "Stars and Stripes Forever." We apologize to Miss Cunard.

W. F. B.—When you want information, comply with the rules, and send a name and address. We know nothing against the company mentioned and our own relations have been businesslike and pleasant.

LOIS—Victor Potel is the Essanay player you ask about. How is the vacation?

H. P. S.—If you want replies you must sign your name. We do not publish business addresses in this column. Look in the advertising index in recent issues. You might have saved a stamp had you done this first.

F. H. R.—In "Rosie's Revenge," her office boss was William Russell; the rival being James Croze. Most companies make a picture with an unhappy ending now and then, but no company specializes. Try the Los Angeles companies with the Mexican stuff. Your comment on make-up opens a new line. The use of a dark powder gives a dark complexion, but we are inclined to think that the effect you notice is not directly due to the make-up. It would seem that the use of a dark tinted powder gives just enough color to the film to throw up the grain of the film base. This, greatly enlarged, would give the coarse effect you notice where the clearer film, showing the lighter complexion, would lack this color. If you will look at one of your portrait negatives we think you'll get the idea from this not altogether lucid explanation. Checked rejection slips are all right when they are properly checked, but sometimes they are hurtful, because misleading in the supposed information they give. Technique should be along in August. Do not be afraid to write in. We are more sinned against than sinning.

ANTHONY—Miss Isabelle Lamon was Violet Dare in that Lubin. Cannot answer the Pathe question. We were the original Answers Man on the M. P. S. M., and ran the department for about eighteen months. We are not related to the present incumbent. Lubin is a good company to join—if you can get in. We have tried to make you see that we are not interested in your deep but hopeless passion for the lady. We can't help you, so drop it, please, and just ask questions like a nice person, yes?

RUBEENA—Robyn Adair was Bob in "The Weaker Mind." You can address Miss Ryan in care of the company, at Nogales, Arizona. We do not answer Pathe questions, as they do not supply casts. We are not swearing, not even at the heat, honest, and it's some heat, at that. Keep the script going. You never can tell.

A. G. R.—Sorry the K-B identifier cannot locate the player for you, but he may later. A letter to the Pathe Company, accompanied by a stamped and addressed return cover, will give you the information you seek. They are at 1 Congress Avenue, Jersey City Heights.

F. M. H.—Scenes in a photoplay are not made in regular order, but at the convenience of the director. The boat landing in "The Zulu King," shown last week, was made in the St. Johns river, at Jacksonville. The next scene, showing them on the beach, was made at Pablo Beach, about twenty miles away, and on another day.

J. N. H.—Your question sounds like a joke, but we infer that you have heard the studio slang used somewhere. A "regular actor," is one who can make good in parts really requiring acting in contradistinction to parts that may be played by persons who can walk on and off the stage, but not depict a wide range of emotion. These latter are generally relatives of the players or extra people and are not "regular" actors in a double sense.

Technique of the Photoplay
First edition is completely
SOLD OUT
Kindly send no more orders or remittances for above.
Second edition in course of preparation. For publication date and price, see future notices.
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,
17 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Operating Rooms.

FOR the benefit of the various authorities, as well as operators and managers, I shall describe, from week to week, the different points relating to operating room construction. I would suggest that these descriptions be preserved, since nobody knows when they may be needed for the construction of operating rooms, or for the enlightenment of law makers. First, I will describe:

BRICK CONSTRUCTION.

In a new theater or when proper foundation can be secured, there is no type of operating room which will more completely meet the requirements of thorough fire-proofing, and at the same time be practically sound proof and reasonably cool, than brick walls, combined with cement finished concrete floors and hollow tile ceiling. But the plan for a room of this kind must ordinarily be incorporated into the plan of the building, since otherwise an adequate foundation can seldom or never be secured. The bricks should be whole and sound, well burned, and should be laid in strong lime mortar, using coarse, sharp sand, or else a lime mortar tempered with cement, the latter, being, of course, preferred, though the former will do very well.

The walls must not be less than 8 inches thick, with each 7th course a header. The necessary openings in this type of wall must be carefully located and built in. The observation ports should be 12 inches wide by 24 inches in height, the same to be covered with a sliding metal or asbestos board shutter, held in grooves and counter-balanced so that it may be readily raised or lowered. In this shutter there should be an opening 10 inches wide by 6 inches in height, and between the sliding shutter and the opening, should be the regular fire shutter, arranged to drop automatically in case of fire. This plan is fully illustrated in Figure 26, page 74, of the second edition of the Motion Picture Hand-Book, published by THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. It is described on pages 73 and 75, and the reasons for its installation are there fully set forth. The ceiling of the brick wall operating room should be of 3 or 4 inch hollow tiles laid between and on T irons not less than 2 x 2 inches, these irons to be spaced, as they necessarily must be, the width of the tile, and the tiles themselves to be laid in rich cement mortar and plastered inside and outside with cement mortar, this plaster finishing coat to be not less than one-half inch in thickness. The floor of this room must be either of 3 inch tile overlaid with three inches of rich concrete, finished with not less than ¾ of an inch of cement coating mixed, in the usual manner, or else concrete to the depth of 6 inches with a ¾ inch cement coating. The opening for ingress or egress may be either a trap door in the floor, or a regular door-way in the wall. If the former, it shall be not less than 36 inches square and shall have a frame of angle irons sufficiently strong to sustain 250 pounds weight when lying flat over the opening. This frame shall be covered on both sides with half inch asbestos mill board, the two sides being securely fastened to the iron frame, the whole being hinged to the floor of the room by suitable hinges and bolts anchored into the cement, and shall be so arranged that it can not be raised far enough up so that it will not fall shut of its own weight when released. It shall rest on suitable grooves, or rabbets formed in the cement of the floor and shall only be held open by a cord attached to the master cord sustaining the wall shutters as hereinafter described. If the opening be of the regular wall door type, then the construction of the door shall be the same as that of the trap already described, and the opening in the wall shall not exceed 2 feet in width by 6 feet 6 inches in height. The door may either be fitted into a metal frame and hinged thereto, fitted into rabbets cut in the brick work and its hinges securely bolted to the wall itself, or it may be hung on grooved wheels resting on tracks, these tracks to be set at an angle so that the door will automatically slide shut when released. It should not be permitted that this type of door be fastened open at any time. The regular hinged door should be normally held closed either by an approved type of spring or by a chain running over a pulley and attached to a weight—perferably the latter. The lens ports for the moving picture machine, stereopticon and spot light should be built around carefully located templets and should be no larger than is necessary to properly serve the purpose for which they are designed. Not more than 6 inches from the floor, there should be ventilation openings, each having an area of not less than 50 square inches connecting directly with the open air outside the theater by means of a metal or other approved non-combustible pipe or duct. There should be four of these openings.

In the ceiling of the operating room, or in the wall not more than 6 inches from the ceiling, should be an opening of not less than 288 square inches area, leading directly to the open air, preferably through the roof of the theater, or there should be two openings, each one having not less than 144 square inches area. The pipe leading from this opening, or these openings, should be brick, hollow tile, or reinforced cement construction, or else be composed of an inner pipe of No. 20 gauge galvanized iron, riveted both at its joints and seams with rivets spaced not more than 2 inches apart, and a second outer pipe of 8 inches greater diameter than the inner pipe, and of similar construction, this outer pipe to be provided with 12 openings 2 inches in diameter at or near its bottom, so that there will be a strong current of air between the two pipes, the object being to prevent the outer pipe from becoming unduly heated in case of a film fire. The vent flue or flues, must be provided with a damper, so weighted that it will normally remain open, and this damper must only be held closed, or partly closed, by means of a cord attached to the master cord of the wall fire shutter, so that when the wall shutters drop, as in case of fire, the damper will instantly swing open, thus providing ample egress for smoke and flames.

The lower ventilation openings must, on the other hand, be provided with sliding shutters attached to the master cord so that they will drop shut with the wall shutters, the idea being, in case of fire, to shut off as much of the incoming air as possible and, at the same time, provide ample egress for the smoke and flames, thus compelling what air does come in, to flow in around the crevices of the various shutters and the door, so that no smoke or evidence of fire will appear in the auditorium. In case of a new theater, the ordinary building walls, or walls of ordinary building construction will answer every purpose, but the floor should be built as directed in order to secure not only fire-proof qualities, but that absolute rigidity so essential to good projection. If, however, the building be of fire-proof type, as every theater building should be, with floors of hollow tile or cement arch construction, then that, of course, will fulfill every requirement.

The wall shutter arrangement should be as set forth on pages 76, 77, 78, 79 and 80 of the Motion Picture Hand-Book, published by THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, except that I would recommend that where the master cord goes across the spreader over the film aperture and machine box, it be cut, and a piece of film be inserted, by means of suitable clamps attached to the cord. This will insure the immediate closing of the shutters in case of fire, since the blaze will instantly sever the strip of film, thus releasing the master cord and shutters.

There could never be a fire panic in a theater having an operating room of this kind, equipped as suggested, since even though a fire occurred the audience would be none the wiser. Whole reels of film could burn and no one but the theater men themselves would know anything about it until it was all over. In this connection, I wish again to say, as I have so very often said, that, in ninety-nine cases out of every hundred it is not the fire itself which injures the audience of a moving picture theater, but the stampede—the insane rush for the exits which follows the sight of smoke or flame. My plan is to prevent the audience from catching sight of either smoke or flame. In short the audience should not know there is a fire in the operating room at all and, if this plan of construction is followed out, the wall shutters installed as directed in the hand-book, and dampers provided and hung as suggested, there will be no indication, outside of the operating room itself, that anything is wrong, even though a dozen reels of film are consumed. The audience will simply wonder why the show doesn't proceed.

Color Effects.

Many operators pay altogether too little attention to the combined use of the spot light and the dissolving stereopticon spot. As a matter of fact, it is quite possible to produce some very beautiful effects by combining the dissolving stereopticon spot with the regular spot light, the latter being provided with a color wheel. In fact, with the combination of the three lights, one can make the stage a regular riot of color, and there is almost no end to the possible combinations and effects where they are used in conjunction.

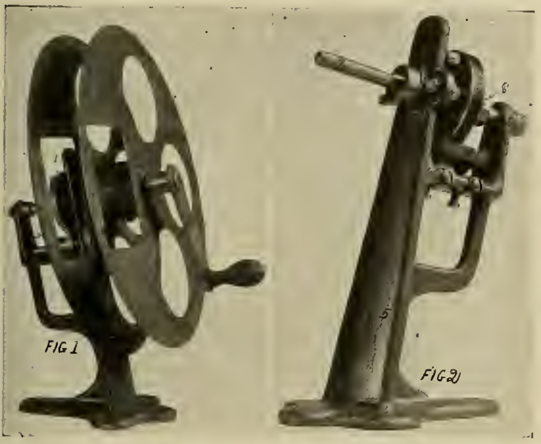
In order to secure these effects, however, it is necessary that the operator prepare for them by securing suitable slides. Some very surprising effects can be produced by the projection of light through rough glass of various patterns, such as that used for windows in offices, doors, etc. Some very pretty effects may also be had by the use of various etched patterns of glass like those used in front doors a few years ago.

To secure these various patterns the operator must visit an ornamental glass house, secure permission to go through the stock and select such glasses as he may think will be of use, remembering always that dark colors are not suitable for this work; also remembering not to get glass too thick to go in a slide carrier. Some of these slides for use in the stereopticon may be had from the Utility Transparency Company, 1733 West 9th Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and I believe they can be had nowhere else, except that the operator himself go to the ornamental glass house, select the glass and have them cut. Having secured these glass slides (which are ideal for serpentine dances also), let us follow out one of the possible effects by selecting a rough, wavy glass, cut so that the waves are horizontal, placing it in one of the dissolver carriages and projecting it to the screen, at the same time throwing your white spot on, let us say, a couple seated or standing on the stage singing. Now, in the other dissolver carrier place a slide of the same glass, but with the waves perpendicular, and slowly dissolving it into the other, at the same time throwing a color into your spot effect. After the two slides have been slowly dissolved and the perpendicular waves are on, one of the dissolver lamps will be idle and with it let us then throw a color flood. Do you see the combinations possible? They are almost limitless. The Utility Transparency Company charges twenty-five cents each for these glass slides, and if you want new and very pretty You thus produce a two-color combination with a dissolving checker-board effects, they are well worth the money.

Shipman Rewinder and Take-Up Tension Equalizer.

Mr. Ralph Shipman is the inventor of what seems to be a most excellent rewinding device and an appliance for attachment to machine take-ups, which is designed to, and undoubtedly will cause the take-up belt to exert exactly the same amount of pull on the take-up spindle, and hence upon the take-up reel, throughout the entire run. Please understand me in this latter. The take-up tension device is not designed to equalize the pull on the film itself, but to equalize the pull on the take-up spindle. In other words it performs exactly the same function that present machine take-ups perform, but seems to do it in a more thoroughly reliable way.

First, we will consider the rewinder device, and let me say in the beginning that I have tested this rewinder and find that it operates perfectly. It is simple in its construction and thoroughly dependable in its action.



In Figure 1 we see the head piece of the Shipman rewinder as arranged for hand rewinding. The construction is plainly shown and requires no detailed description, other than to say that it is geared 6 to 1—six turns of the reel to one turn of the crank. For use in fireproof magazines the crank, shown attached to the rewinder in Figure 1, is, by means of a suitable arrangement, attached to the door of the magazine, so that the closing of the magazine door automatically connects the crank to the rewinder shaft. This is quite an advantage where fireproof magazine rewinders are used, as will be readily understood. Perhaps, however, another word of explanation is due on Figure 1. The reel rests directly on the crank-shaft as shown, but it runs 6 times as fast as the shaft on which it rests. The reason for this lies in the fact that gear 1, which is attached to the crank-shaft, drives gear 2, which is on the same shaft with gear 3; gear 3 in turn drives gear 4, which latter has a pin in its face fitting into the inset in the hub of the reel so that the speed of the reel becomes, from this train of gears, six times that of the crank-shaft on which it actually rests.

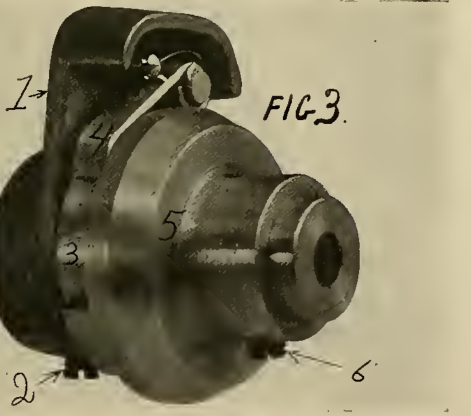


Figure 2 shows the tailpiece of the Shipman rewinder and this really constitutes the invention, at least to a very large extent. In Figure 2 shaft 1 extends through to collar 2 and carries friction disk wheel 3, which rests on casting 4, casting 5 being slanted so that the reel will remain on spindle 1 by its own weight. Shaft 1 has a bearing in casting arm 6, but has no bearing, or rather what is known as a "floating bearing," at 7. Now all this means that shaft 1 is in reality a lever, with casting 4 as a fulcrum and bearing 6 as the attached end, so that the heavier the reel placed on shaft 1, the greater will be the friction between friction disk wheel 3 and casting 4. The thing operates thus: When a full reel is placed on shaft 1 there is heavy friction between friction disk wheel 3 and casting 4, so that were you to take hold of the film and pull, you would find it required considerable strain to start the reel, but as the film is rewound the weight of the reel is gradually reducing, which in turn reduces the friction between reel 3 and casting 4, so that the reel is made to revolve more easily exactly in proportion as the weight of the reel is reduced. On the other hand, when the heavy reel is on shaft 1, Figure 2, the empty reel is on the standard shown in Figure 1, and the leverage against reel shaft 1, Figure 2, is very great, but as the reel on shaft 1, Figure 2, reduces in size and weight, and thus revolves more easily, the film roll on the reel in Figure 2 is constantly getting larger, and the leverage is being decreased exactly in proportion as the reel in Figure 2 becomes lighter, and thus an even tension on the film is maintained throughout the process of rewinding, though the crank of the rewinder will pull harder as the process of rewinding progresses, of course, since, while the same tension is maintained on the film, the leverage against the crank increases as the film roll on the reel in Figure 1 becomes larger.

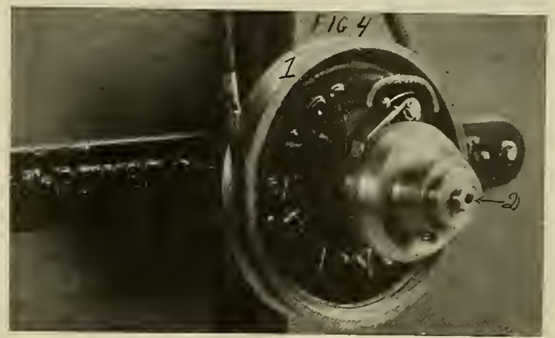
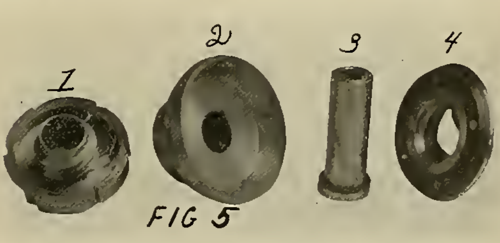
I can particularly recommend this device for motor rewinding. As far as I can see it is perfect for this purpose. The tension on the film may be made greater or less at any time by loosening set-screw 8, and sliding friction wheel 3 along the shaft. The nearer it is to bearing 6 the greater will be the tension on the film, and vice versa. Casting 4 is milled out to fit the circumference of friction disk wheel 3. The tension equalizer is shown in Figures 3 and 4 and its parts are illustrated in Figure 5.



In Figure 3 we see the device assembled ready to be placed on the take-up and at Figure 4 we see it attached to the machine.

Casting 1 Figure 3 is attached to the hub of the take-up belt wheel by means of set screw 2, and revolves with belt wheel 1, Figure 4. Part 3, Figure 3, is a brass casting shown on 1 in Figure 5. In its center is a steel screw, also shown at 1, Figure 5, and around its circumference are notches designed to engage pawl 4, Figure 3. Part 5, including part 3, Figure 3, is attached to take-up shaft 2, Figure 4, by means of set screw 6, Figure 3; and these parts, carrying the take-up reel shaft, with them revolve in one direction, independently of casting 1, Figure 3, and belt wheel 1, Figure 4; but as belt wheel 1, Figure 4, begins to revolve, pawl 4, Figure 3, engages with one of the notches on part 3, Figure 3 (also shown at 1, Figure 5), which causes the reel in the lower magazine to revolve. That is about as plain as I can make that particular part of the matter to you, and now as to the method of applying the friction or tension:



Part 1, Figure 5, fits against part 4, Figure 5, so that the face of Figure 1, which we see, and the face of part 4, Figure 5, opposite from that which we see, fit together, and between them is a very flexible spiral steel spring, one end of which is attached to part 4, Figure 5, and the other end of the brass ring which fits into part 1, and is attached thereto by two screws working in slots, the whole being held together tightly.

These two assembled parts in their turn fit into part 2, Figure 5, so that the bevel shown on part 4, Figure 5, rests against the inside of the cone shown in part 2, Figure 5, being held thereto by the action of the coil spring before mentioned. The action of this coil spring is very delicate and quite positive, although I cannot explain it to you intelligently by written word. The amount of tension supplied may readily be changed by loosening two screws on the side of part 1, not shown in the picture, and slipping these screws around in their slots.

The claim of the inventor for this device is that it not only gives an absolutely even pull on the take-up reel throughout the entire run, but that it is compact, easily attached and fool proof.

Salt Brine.

D. E. Witherell, Hartford, Wisconsin, tells of an experiment he has just made with salt soaked carbons. So much has already been published on this subject that we do not feel like giving it space this time unless something absolutely conclusive, one way or the other, can be said.

A Classic Wreck.

Mr. J. Howard Newell, Bloomfield, Iowa, contributes the following:

> Enclosed find post card showing the ruins of our theater, which was destroyed by fire Tuesday morning, May 26th. The unique feature of this fire, and the reason for this communication, is that everything about the theater was destroyed except our Power's 6A machine. The roof fell on the machine, but only smashed the top magazine. Not more than 5 feet away from the mechanism, five reels of film were burned. The wood knobs on the crank and the lamp house door, and the wooden slide carrier were burned, but, strange as it seems, we took the head off and soaked it in kerosene for about an hour, cleaned the gears, polished the tension shoes and two days later it was projecting as good a picture as it ever did, and has been doing so ever since, in our airdome. The arrow points to where the machine stood under the metal roof.

From the looks of the picture I suppose it was the operating room of your airdome that burned, and it certainly is a classic wreck all right, neighbor Newell. One would not suppose it possible that a mechanism would withstand the heat of such a fire sufficiently well to be used afterwards without extensive repairs. Usually, any considerable degree of heat will warp a machine frame and raise thunder with the gears, at the very least.

Believes in Good Projection.

Mr. James Shipton, Jr., Sherman Texas, remits $5.00 for two copies of the Handbook and says:

> Enclosed find photo of the operating room I preside over. This is my first attempt, so don't be mean with me. I have been cranking for five years now and still have many things to learn. My manager believes in good projection, and nothing else will do, so I am compelled to keep a sharp lookout and deliver the goods. This is my seventh month on my own hook, as I spent four years working under another operator. The equipment of our theater consists, as you will see, in two motor driven Edison Model B machines. The operating room is 16 x 10 feet 10 inches with a 6½ foot ceiling. Now, don't kick about the vent, as it was not in when this picture was taken. The boss is having one made, however, and it will be completed shortly. Two windows supply ample fresh air meanwhile. The other chap in the picture is the operator in the theater next door, your humble servant being the one in front. You see, our boss owns two shows. The other book is for him. I have one of the old $1.50 hand-books which Brother Day ordered for me two years ago. It's good dope too. Brother Day will be in his new place in about a month. He is some fellow all right, and sure believes in high class projection. We are members of Local 280 and, by the way, 280 voted you thanks and other things, and declared that The Moving Picture World to be the best in the country. Salaries are good here, as is also projection. Sherman operators don't have to grow whiskers on their face so the managers can use them for door mats either.

I think good salaries and good projection usually go hand in hand, friend Shipton. Glad to know that the Sherman local is doing well. Yes, Neighbor Day is quite a chap all right, but if he sends in any more letters 9 feet long, with the sheets pasted together to emphasize that fact, something will happen to him.

For Managers and Operators.

New York City shoots the following wad:—

> Will you kindly explain the why and wherefore of the heading "For Managers and Operators" in the hand-book? I am of the opinion that there is absolutely no necessity for mentioning managers, either in the hand-book or in the department. In support of my opinion, will say that I have scarcely found a single manager who desires to thoroughly understand projection. Most of them don't care to know anything about the handbooks, or to read the department, therefore why flatter the managers? If you want your name to become as popular among managers as among operators, you should change the title of the department to read, "Salary Department: How to Reduce Operators' Salaries." You can then bet your last pair of old gum-shoes you would be known quite as well among managers as among operators, for the manager's task is to increase profit and reduce expenses, and in this operation, the first item is to reduce the salary of the operator, not being bright or well-informed enough to understand that if the operator is underpaid, he doesn't pay very much attention to the excellence of his projection and the show thus suffers. The greatest difficulty is that the average manager is hardly able to judge between good and bad projection. If they would read the department and study the hand-book, they would soon learn the value of good projection, and would also absorb the idea that higher salary to the operator means better work and greater box office receipts. I admit that many letters have appeared from managers asking all sorts of information as to ventilation, film service, etc., but never about projection.

There is considerable truth in what the brother says. However, he is in error in supposing that all managers are of the bone-heado type. He is also in error in supposing that this department has had no effect on the manager. For his information, I will say that a considerable proportion of the managers do read the Projection Department, and read it very thoroughly. I can also tell him that a great many of them have, in the past, voiced strenuous objection to my taking sides with the operator and insisting on increased salaries. I can also tell him that a great many managers who formerly opposed me in this matter, have through the medium of the department, seen the light, and now recognize the fact that increased operator salaries serve to attract to the business a better class of men, who can and will produce superior results on the screen and that, as a general proposition, in the long run, $10.00 per week increase in operator salaries will return $40.00 per week in increased box office receipts. The reason of the title "Managers and Operators" on the hand-book lies, as I have said before, is the very fact, which you recognize, that the average manager is not in a position to check up the work of his operator, because he doesn't know good projection from bad projection. He cannot distinguish the difference unless the results on the screen are either very high class or absolutely rotten. Then he can tell the difference. I take the position that the operator should receive increased salary. He should receive $40 per week at the least, and more than that in high class houses, but he should be compelled to produce absolutely high class results and the manager should be able to tell whether those results are perfect or imperfect. Every manager ought to own a copy of the hand-book and study it. To prove that your contention is not altogether right, some general managers controlling several theaters, have ordered copies of the hand-book for themselves and for each one of their operators and managers. It must be freely admitted that, taking moving picture managers as they come, there is a very large percentage of them who, similar to a very large percentage of operators, know very little about their business, and don't seem to care two whoops in the New Jerusalem about learning more. Well, the dear boys will have to learn or get out. He will, in the end, eliminate himself or, putting it another way, the man who pays in the nickels and dimes will eliminate him. Slowly, but surely, the public is becoming discerning and discriminating. It is demanding better work. All these things take time and the business is yet young. Ten years from to-day, the moving picture manager will be asking the applicant for an operator's job what he knows instead of how much he will work for, and he will be in a position to check up the work of his operator and demand that shadows and other faults be eliminated from his screen. The title on the Handbook is not flattery to the manager. The manager hasn't any flattery coming to him any more than has the average operator. The title stands because the manager needs the Handbook just as badly as does the operator; in fact, in some cases, more.

Operator Vice-Presidents.

I believe that the average operator member of the I. A. T. S. E. does not know or understand that three of our present vice-presidents are operators, as follows: Fourth vice-president, Charles O'Donnell, Business Agent, Toronto M. P. M. O., Union 173. Fifth vice-president, Mike Carney, member of the Newark Local. Eighth vice-president, Charles Crickmore, member Seattle M. P. M. O., Union 154.

Operators

Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the
MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS
By F. H. Richardson

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years to come. Have you got your copy? 430 pages, $2.50.
Address all orders and remittances to
MOVING PICTURE WORLD,

Comments on the Films

Licensed

"ALL ON ACCOUNT OF A PORTRAIT" (Edison), July 2.—A little romance my Mark Swan. Mary Fuller and Benjamin F. Wilson play in it an engaged couple who quarrel and return each other's gifts, because Mary buys a portrait of a noted pianist who has very long hair. This has been worked up into a pleasing, light story which C. Jay Williams has produced in a natural, human way. It is a pretty offering and the best things in it are its scenes that are often full of charm. What humor it has rings true, except at the end, which is theatrical, though it doesn't harm the picture much. The leading characters are supported by a large cast of competent players. The photography is very fair.

"THE STRONGEST LINK" (Essanay), July 2.—The story behind this picture is weak, chiefly because it asks our sympathy for a pickpocket without giving any adequate cause of his repentance; in fact, it shows him as a scoundrel and then, merely because he is deserted by a villainess who had been his mistress, he becomes a man with a bruised soul. But, the author will protest, my intention was to show how dangerous it is to have a strong link that is evil in one's past history. The author's fault is one of wrong emphasis, he has been a bit tactless. The offering is well photographed and has some very good scenes which give interesting backgrounds. A good deal of the acting is very fair.

"THE RAIDERS FROM DOUBLE L RANCH" (Kalem), July 2.—A cow country love story with a struggle between cowmen and sheepmen as its background. It is rather loosely put together and loses something of dramatic force; but it is well acted by Ruth Roland and Francis Newberg in the romantic roles There is a prairie fire in it which, at one moment, is exciting (as a spectacle) and there are several fine pictures of herds both cattle and sheep that are well worth seeing. The photography is very fair.

"THE TIGER LILY" (Vitagraph), July 2—This three-part special offering has been reviewed at length on page 466, issue of The Moving Picture World for May 3, 1913.

"SULTAN OF SULU" (Selig), July 2.—A worthy topical offering that opens with a good portrait of one of the most interesting characters in the Philippines, the Sultan of Sulu. The film shows also some of the villages where the young Sultan lives. The subject will interest widely and the photography is very fair.

"ARABIA AND THE BABY" (Selig), July 2.—A light offering that introduces the wonderful tricks of Arabia, a trained horse that we have seen several times. The story that Arabia is made to play is pleasing and the picture will be fairly acceptable. It is pretty well photographed.

"THE SONG-BIRD OF THE NORTH" (Vitagraph), July 2.—A patriotic offering founded on the story of Mrs. John Fowle, who did good service during the Civil War by singing to the wounded soldiers. It is shown that her sweet singing of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," at a concert in Washington is also instrumental in persuading many to enlist. The story lacks dramatic quality, but it gives a well utilized chance of making thrilling, emotional scenes and the offering, as a whole, will be warmly received at this time when war anniversaries are stirring old memories. It is a commendable picture, but it needs good, stirring music to help it out. Anita Stewart plays the singer and Ralph Ince appears again in his notable role as Abraham Lincoln, and surely he makes a picture of him that will be very popular; he does excellent work. The photography is clear.

"THE PENALTY OF CRIME" (Lubin), June 30.—A sensational two-part offering well described by its name. It was written by Lawrence McCloskey and produced by Joseph Smiley. The story cannot be called a big one; but it has been produced with care and impresses one as a finished and even artistic picture. Its appeal is to the emotions, not to the intellect, and its center of interest is a girl, very charming in herself (Peggie O'Neil), who consents to be the decoy of two crooks. They set her to gaining the confidence of a jewel merchant, who is to be their victim, and she ends by falling in love with him. Afraid to have him find out her past and threatened by the two crooks, she lets the plot go on and works with them until his gems are stolen. The action of the second reel takes place on a train and an exciting automobile race follows the discovery of the robbery. This series of incidents is of the most sensational character, is clearly photographed and effective. It will be a popular picture.

"SWEET DECEPTION" (Vitagraph), July 3.—A story of a married couple who had separated, but who, when the man's mother, whom both love, is coming to see them, agree to pretend they still are happy. They set up the old home again to entertain her. She expects to stay but a few hours, then loses her train and decides to remain all night. The theme is most delicately treated; but the picture lacks vigor, is even slow. It is an offering of lovely scenes and beautiful poses more than of human passion or fates. Sydney Drew plays convincingly the man, with Anita Stewart in the role opposite to him, a part that seemed to us a bit beyond her depth at present. It is a role that calls for experience and when Miss Stewart has had a chance to watch the world a few years longer, she will have the skill to play such situations with much power. Mrs. Maurice plays the mother. The man's valet deserves notice; in fact, there is much to commend in many of the lesser figures. The photography is good. The script, by George Cameron, has been produced by Ralph Ince.

"THE LIFE WE LIVE" (Essanay), July 3.—This picture has a good, refreshing story and will be a popular offering. It has for its center of interest an elderly couple, Arthur Macley and Jane Selby, who can no longer earn a living and are facing starvation. A package of bills is lost and Arthur finds it; but after he has spent a little of it on groceries, gets "a hunch" and takes it to its owner, thereby giving a happy ending. There is a good deal of humanity in the way it is developed and, as it is unfolded, Arthur Macley does some of the best acting we have seen recently. We enjoyed it, ourselves, very much. Yet it was drawn out at the beginning unnecessarily; there was no call to show us the station master who kept the story waiting. Some of the backgrounds are full of interest and beauty and the photography is fine.

"THE RICE INDUSTRY" (Melies), July 3.—A fairly well photographed series of views that, in fact, give us the real history of Java. Java lives on its rice and here we are shown how rice is grown by Javanese and we get the whole process from the seeding to the eating. Motion pictures have been a fact for years, but we can wonder at them still and be astonished, thinking of how much they mean to us.

"THE JOY RIDE" (Patheplay), July 3.—Three pretty girls make cute, and often lovely, scenes in this farce which, in its plot, is a bit too far fetched even for a farce. It is lively, though, and there are plenty of good things in it.

"THE ANGEL OF THE SLUMS" (Lubin), July 3.—The chief trouble with this picture is weak acting, though even on this point, there are true things to be said in commendation. The gangster, Ben Hendricks, did very fairly, as did the heroine, Maibel Turner. Clarence Elmer has ability, but in this picture he tried too hard and showed his lack of experience in a way that makes his very failure a promise. Francis Carlyle seemed to be hearing the clicking of the camera and was nervous. The picture's story is well planned, but lacks punch; because it is not very novel or a very imaginative piece of work. The photography is clear. The script was written by George Terwilliger and produced by L. B. Carlton.

"IN GOD WE TRUST" (Selig), July 3.—A picture of sentiment dealing with a poverty stricken man who becomes a burglar at Christmas time. Of course, good use is made of children; the burglar has two at home who have prayed that Santa Claus might come, and when the man breaks into the rich house, a child who has come down to see his presents finds him. The story, by E. L. Summers, is interesting and wholesome, though not at all great. E. A. Martin produced it and has made a pleasing, commendable offering. The rule of burglar is taken by Hobart Bosworth, and "Baby" Lillian Wade plays the rich man's child. The photography is clear.

"FAUST AND THE LILY" (Biograph), July 3.—A burlesque comedy. Such pictures as this have to make us astonished before they can really amuse us. This does succeed in making us gasp once or twice and a good laugh follows. There is a good deal of it that is not very funny.

"AN OLD MAID'S DECEPTION" (Biograph), July 3.—A farce of comical characters that cannot be counted a big success. There is very little in it that is new and it did not make a great deal of laughter.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 29" (July 3).—Among other interesting items in the mid-week topical, we find an excellent view of the destruction caused by a terrible fire in the old city of Pressburg, in Hungary. It is interesting to get this chance to look into the insides of one of those old time foreign cities. There is, also, a picture of the opening of the Keokuk Canal, showing a Mississippi boat passing through.

"THE HIDDEN WITNESS" (Kalem), July 5.—There are scenes in this story in which the action, through its own quality, does get over briskly; but most of it is hampered, more or less, by acting that fails to be really natural. Few will be carried away by interest in it, but all may watch it closely. The situation is old without being tried and shows a governess heroine falsely accused of theft by a wholly conventional villain. The hidden witness is two children ensconced behind portieres and by them the villain is confounded. The photography is clear and the staging of the story commendable.

"HIS NIECE FROM IRELAND" (Lubin), July 5.—Tells a good story that is original and brisk and does it clearly and effectively, although, if it had been produced in two reels and care had been taken to make the causes of the Irish niece's (Lottie Briscoe) position clear early in the picture, our sympathy for her would have been heightened. This sympathy is the offering's most valuable feature as it now is. It was produced by Arthur Johnson with his usual care and finish and the sets, with all that goes in the staging of the production, are fine. While not up to this leading man and producer's best, it pleased us as well as any offering we have seen today.

"A MODERN GARRICK" (Patheplay), July 5.—A farce burlesque that made laughter. It is just a conglomeration of funny incidents with a touch of satire now and then that helps it. It is light and will, we think, please the many.

"AT THE LARIAT'S END" (Essanay), July 5.—A Western, four-cornered love story in which the village idiot and the village tell-tale (Alkali Ike) help each other make trouble. It didn't seem to move the audience greatly, perhaps because the photography is so poor in places that the faces of the actors can hardly be distinguished and this makes the story temporarily obscure. Its best scenes show an innocent fugitive chased by cowboys who want to hang him. These are followed by the sheriff, who has been told how the shooting came about, and he saves the man "at the end of the lariat" as he was about to swing.

"LOVE'S QUARANTINE" (Vitagraph), July 5.—Wally Van and Lillian Walker lead in this romantic farce, by Russel E. Smith. John Bunny and Flora Finch also have roles as the girl's parents, who dislike Wally as prospective son-in-law. The cook, Kate Price, is coerced into playing sick and Wally, dressed as a doctor, says it's smallpox. Two fake cops help out, but talk too much. It is a light offering, to make fun.

"THE MINER'S DESTINY" (Patheplay), July 5.—A special two-part picture in which there is much that will deeply interest; yet, as a whole, it is rather slow. It is a fair offering, but nothing wonderful. The story, except at the end, at the climax, is well built. It deals with life around a mine. Its hero, who has been discharged for carelessness with dynamite, is, through a train of convincing circumstantial evidence, sent to prison for life for "killing the mine foreman." We are now shown the man in prison and the fate of his wife and small son until former dies the later is a grown man. The prisoner is freed in time to save his son's wife from the vile wishes of the man who had been the real murderer. The way this is done is effective enough up to the last few moments. There are two roles that are very well acted—those of both prisoner and villain. The photography is very good and the background interesting.

"THE SORROWFUL SHORE" (Biograph), July 5.—A rather heavy-hearted tragedy dealing with fisher folk. It has three chief roles, a father, his son and a girl who is washed up from a wreck, a sole survivor. The working out of the triangle in this case brings all three to their deaths by drowning. The acting is competent, although the cameraman seemed to be a bit off the best speed in taking the scene in which the older man accuses the girl whom he has now married, of loving the son. The letter she writes is convincing, but the son's tearing of it to deceive the father, and the ease with which this is accomplished, are not strongly so. In drama, the deaths of all concerned is not the strongest way of making the situation powerful, as it really denies emotion. We are not left very deeply interested in these three people.

"THE SIGNAL" (Edison), July 5.—The French Revolution furnishes the background for this entertaining romance in costume. Most people will have seen something like it before; but the situation is full of suspense. There are characters in it that do not add anything really to the suspense and therefore hamper the story, since they are conventional. These come in the early scenes. Th author, Bannister Merwin, might have treated the theme a bit more originally. It was produced by George Lessey in very good sets with some beautiful backgrounds, seen by moonlight. The players seemed a bit too melodramatic at times, especially the leading woman; but all are competent.

"OVER THE GREAT DIVIDE IN COLORADO" (Edison), July 7.—Snowy peaks, covered with pine trees and shrubbery, clouds hanging below the path of the railroad, views of a small town perched above timber-line—these are a few features of this interesting scenic half reel. In this film the Colorado Rockies make the observer wish he could take his vacation out that way.

"WINSOME WINNIE'S WAY" (Edison), July 7.—A light comedy offering by Carolyn Wells, on same reel with above. Winnie quarrels with her lover on a picnic, but later when they are driven by rain into the cabin of the recluse, she regrets her ill feeling and they make up. The idea in this is slight, and the photography is a shade too dark, but it has an attractive society atmosphere.

"THE GLOVE" (Vitagraph), July 7.—A familiar plot, without any particularly new situations in it, is here so strongly presented that it holds the attention. William Humphrey, Dorothy Kelly and S. Rankin Drew form the inevitable triangle. The neglected wife receives much attention from the count and decides to give herself up to him. She goes to his apartments, but later repents and climbs out of the window. Her husband enters, finds her glove and becomes enraged. The reconciliation follows.

"A SEA DOG'S LOVE" (Biograph), July 7.—A farce comedy, in which Slivers forsakes his ship on leave of absence. He employs a man to rob the tavern of Widow McManus, so he can come to the rescue and become a hero. The scene in which the widow pretends to shoot the intruder and tells Slivers she has committed murder, is the best in the picture, but it is not uproariously funny. A fairly entertaining half reel.

"THE NOISY SUITORS" (Biograph), July 7.—This, on same reel with above, gets numerous laughs. Bella Donna has many lovers and is serenaded by three troubadours. The American lover intervenes and soon gets a duel on his hands. The fight at dawn is with boxing gloves and pleases the audience immensely. A good comedy number.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY," July 7.—A number full of good things. Raymond Hitchcock becoming a Polatch "Bug" in Seattle was especially amusing, and the exhibit of 12,000 letters in praise of Tacoma was an instance of Western enterprise.

"A STOLEN IDENTITY" (Kalem), July 7.—In spite of its conventional beginning and several inconsistencies, this picture gets a hold on the observer, and has an especially clever situation toward the close, where the doctor discovers that Steve is in disguise as the girl's father-in-law. We could not understand Steve's apparent bankrupt condition, and later the fact that he was able to offer the girl money, which she refused. The characterizations in this offering are very good and it tells an appealing story.

"THE MYSTERIOUS HAND" (Lubin), July 7.—This Western film tells a story that has been handled in many different ways, but which is entertaining none the less. Elsie's father saves the boy from a beating by the greaser. The latter, knowing the father's objection to Bob, in love with Elsie, takes the latter's knife and stabs the old man, throwing the suspicion upon Bob. The girl saves her lover at the last moment, when the noose is already about his neck. This situation has been done so often that it now has a tendency to provoke smiles, but escaped that fate in this instance.

"THE TRAIL OF CARDS" (Selig), July 7.—One of the best smuggling dramas we have seen in a long time. The parts of Constance, her revenue officer lover, and Wolf, leader of the smugglers, are all well taken. Particularly good is the atmosphere of the production, which gets up a nice tension and maintains it through various exciting episodes. Constance and the druggist fall into the tunnel, during the earthquake, and are carried to Smuggler's Island. The druggist had been playing solitaire and leaves a trail of cards as he is carried through the tunnel. Good adventure story.

"THE FORBIDDEN WAY" (Essanay), July 7.—An unusually strong and well acted two-part drama, featuring a gentleman thief in the leading role. The pictures of the gang's headquarters are convincing, and as the observer sees the man and girl go out and take positions in the business world, his interest increases. The gentleman thief falls in love with his employer's daughter and threatens to give up his manner of living, but is crushed by a falling wall at the last. A strong offering of its type, which gives us a more attractive view of the underworld than usual.

"SCENES FROM OTHER DAYS" (Edison), July 8.—The primary intention of this film is to give some views of the city of Atlanta, Ga.; but Charles M. Seay who made it, has produced something far more artistic than the usual travel scenic. He tells a slight story to make us journey to the place he wants to picture. He should have inserted a subtitle stating that the traveler, an old man, would have to wait for the next train all morning and so could see the city. The photographs are clear and interesting, and the story has three fine scenes (a), a very pretty window in Ohio, (b), a charming Southern dining room, and (c), the parting of the old soldier friends, Herbert Prior, whose acting is particularly fine at this point, and William West. We thoroughly enjoyed this offering and commend it highly.

"THE DAUGHTER OF THE SHERIFF" (Essanay), July 8.—A good picture by Arthur Mackley's company; it tells an interesting story clearly and, for the most part, artistically. The offering's quality comes from the acting which makes it seem natural and human. The photography is very fair.

"THE PROFITS OF THE BUSINESS" (Lubin), July 8.—With a commendable purpose of picturing how the "prophits of the business" may really be profits of the sale of humanity, this offering tells an interesting story with a good measure of dramatic suspence at the climax, and will be liked as an offering by most people. A hard man is head of a low-wage department store. This man has lost track of his nearest relative, a granddaughter, who, it happens, is employed in his store and this situation is used to show the old man up to himself. Would it not be more effective, as a lesson and as a drama, too, if it were made into a tragedy in which the heroine falls like her mates, just before her grandfather finds her?

"COUNT BARBER" (Vitagraph), July 8.—This is No. 5 in the Belinda series. Now that Ophelia Sweet and Belinda have procured beauty for themselves, the former is looking for a "match." Belinda falls in love with a barber, whom she sees at work. Ophelia falls in love with the same man whom she thinks is a count. It makes a picture full of pretty scenes with a thread of fun which is largely due to the skillfull burlesquing of the players: Norma Talmadge, Florence Radinoff and Charles Eldridge. It was produced by Bert Angeles from Mrs. Brenil's script.

"THE AIRMAN'S BRIDE" (Patheplay), July 8.—A picture made by the French company. It's feature is a very sensational climax, the spectacular rescue of the heroine from a burning lighthouse by her lover in an aeroplane. As he sails past, over head, he lets down a rope to which she clings and so is carried to safety. This is surely a startling climax and many will count it a feature incident. The story is fair and sets off the rescue scene well. It is a cleverly produced picture and the camera work is clear.

"AN UNWRITTEN CHAPTER" (Vitagraph), July 4.—A pretty story and a strong play, made so by the work of the four principals—Dorothy Kelly, S. Rankin Drew, William Humphrey and Mary Maurice. There are some stirring moments, especially toward the end of the picture.

"WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH FATHER?" (Essanay), July 4.—Comedy that for a little over the first half makes a steady hit. There is for this time a continuous ripple of laughter. Then, instead of holding the comedy down to the straight stuff, depending alone on the story to carry it, there was introduced some stop stuff, on the accelerated motion order, and the humor, thus stimulated and forced, fell. Thomas Commerford, as the old rheumatic grouch, did excellent work, and so also did Clara Smith as the sister-in-law.

"SALLIE'S SURE SHOT" (Selig), July 4.—A melodrama of the Western sort. The sure shot indicated in the title consisted of shooting in two a burning fuse which, had it been permitted to extend to its attached can of powder, would have destroyed Sallie. The shot was almost too sure to be convincing. There is a bit of comedy at the end when Fred, discovering the same powder can again hooked up with a fuse, picks up the can and pursues the desperadoes, finally hurling the can at them and stunning them with the explosion. The picture gets over.

Independent

"THE GRIT OF A GRINGO" (Nestor), July 14.—There is abundant material here for a first class film, but the hurried action spoils the suspense. There is plenty of action and the Mexican setting is good. There is a short, spirited revolution, from which the hero emerges wounded, but in spite of this later defends his flag from insult and wins the girl.

"OLD MAMMY'S SECRET CODE" (Broncho), July 16.—A three-reel war number, centering about the battle of Petersburg. The hero is engaged to Marion, but his rival, Jim, attempts to compromise him with an actress, and is at first successful. A number of letters are thrown on the screen in the course of the story, all of which were rather long and too finely written. The characterizations of Grant and Lee were hardly up to the standard. The capture and firing of the bridge were realistic, but the shooting of the negro mammy as a spy we thought an unpleasant ending for the story. The photography is very good.

"BILLY, THE WISE GUY" (Gem), July 7.—In which Billy and his friends are raided by their wives while poker playing. His wife proceeds to show his friends, later in the reel, that she is boss of the home. Not very much of a story in this.

"DUBLIN" (Gem), July 7.—Glimpses of Ireland's famous old city. The photos are not overly clear in places.

"THE PROOF OF THE MAN" (Nestor), July 7.—We got up a decided interest in this story, in spite of the fact that villains have many times substituted fake maps of mining claims and walked off temporarily with the original plans. In this case, however, the villain had a change of heart and the prospector and his wife get back the stolen map. Conventional Western drama with an entertaining story of its kind.

"THE WOP" (Imp), July 10.—Harold Shaw here gives a good characterization of an Italian laborer, sent to prison for picking up coal. We think his case would hardly have been called before the same judge who passed upon the contractors, a legal technicality worth considering. When released the Wop sets about to find his little child, who has been adopted by the judge's daughter. The leading character in this carries the story along in interest and altogether it makes a fair appeal.

"THE FRONTIER TWINS START SOMETHING" (Frontier), July 10.—A series of pranks played on a ranch by two mischievous girls. The humor of this is not very strong and the situations are not very interesting. The clear photos are the film's strongest point.

"A MODERN WITNESS" (Victor), July 11.—This little story has a unique, attractive plot and is very entertaining, though not extremely probable. The blind brother dictates a short story to his sister, and the thieving villain sets a dictagraph in order to steal the story, for which an offer of $500 has been made. The scheme is discovered and promptly nipped in the bud. James Kirkwood and Gertrude Robinson have the leading roles. An entertaining offering.

"THE PICKET GUARD" (Bison), July 15.—This fine two-reel number has a quality all too rare in pictures—charm. It illustrates effectively a well known war poem. Wallace Reid appears as the sentry on guard along the Potomac. Homesick and lonesome, he reviews the scenes leading up to his enlistment. Later he is mortally wounded in a skirmish and scenes are shown back at his home when the news is brought to his wife, impersonated by Pauline Bush. The close is tenderly pathetic. This offering is notable for its artistic effects and its appealing story. A fine production.

"OH, YOU FLIRT!" (Imp), July 12.—A rather pleasing half-reel number, in which a man flirts with a nurse maid and when the baby disappears, he is pursued and finally charged with kidnapping. Fair comedy.

"HY MAYER'S LIGHTNING SKETCHES" (Imp), July 12.—More of Mr. Mayer's excellent cartoon work, dealing with questions of the day in characteristic style. On same reel with above.

"PEARL'S DILEMMA" (Crystal), July 13.—The applicant for janitor is mistaken for a member of the Black Hand and creates much excitement for a time. Belmont, who is proving himself a man of many parts, literally and figuratively, is the suspect. He consumes a plate of spaghetti almost like a sure-enough son of Italy.

"SQUARING THINGS WITH WIFEY" (Crystal), July 13.—Brown and Green, out for a time, exchange overcoats and get their presents mixed up. The usual complications, rather well done this time. On same reel with above.

"WHEN HE WORE THE BLUE" (Nestor), July 11.—A lively little comedy half-reel, in which the hero, caught in a poker raid, borrows the policeman's cap and coat and becomes traffic cop. While this would be a serious misdemeanor in real life, it works out very well in the picture.

"FOUR QUEENS AND A JACK" (Nestor), July 11.—Eddie and the married woman try a little flirtation, but the jealous husband intervenes. A somewhat pleasing trifle, on same reel with above.

"THE LINE RIDER'S SISTER" (Frontier), July 12.—An exceptionally good offering, both in the matter of an entertaining story and good pictures. It shows what this company can do when it has a definite story to work on. There is a human touch in this, where the boys chip in to get a doctor for Rance's sister, and the river scenes were excellent.. The close could have been made much more effective if it had not been hurried so much. But the film is better than the average Western offering.

"THE TRAIL OF THE HANGING ROCK" (Eclair), July 9.—Some exquisite photographic effects in this two-reel offering and an abundance of fine mountain scenery. The story of the sacred rock is an entertaining one, with many dramatic moments. J. W. Johnston and Barbara Tennant play the leads. The adventures of Barbara's husband and his incarceration as an escaped criminal was nicely handled. The cutting of his arm with the knife was a gruesome touch which might have been avoided. A strong story, with particularly good outdoor effects.

"THE FISHERMAN'S FORTUNE" (Reliance), July 14.— Ned is a big bully of a fellow who inherits $3,000 from his uncle. Because Lucy has refused him, he commits robbery and steals his own fortune, which he generously shares with two pals. This new feature is the strongest point in this film story, which possesses a fair degree of interest.

"ASHES" (Reliance), July 12.—This two-reel story, by Marion Brooks, has many points of merit and will make a good feature for any programme. The old man, represented by Irving Cummings, spreads a plate at table for each of his former sweethearts. The story of each is enacted on the screen, he participating in each one, beginning as far back as 1861. The screen is surrounded in each case by the girl's favorite flower, and the actresses of the Reliance company all appear to good advantage. A new idea nicely presented and full of fine sentiment.

"HER ROSARY" (Reliance), July 16.—The love story of a nun, with the words of the famous song printed verse by verse. The girl was wooed by her lover in charming pastoral scenes. They stand on a bridge and she commands him to jump into the water. He does so and is drowned. Her days thereafter are filled with regret. A delicate, tender story, quite well presented.

"LOVE AND RUBBISH" (Keystone), July 14.—Ford Sterling appears in this as Mr. Fickle. He flirts with women in the park and starts considerable trouble. His rival rides down hill in a barrel into the lake. The children thumbing their noses at the close was a bad piece of business in an otherwise fairly good reel. Many exhibitors will prefer to cut this off.

"GRANDAD" (Broncho), July 9.—A two-part drama, featuring an old veteran of the Civil War and his little granddaughter. The old man drinks whiskey and this leads to his expulsion from the home. He starts out on foot and seeks work at day labor. The child follows him and an effort is made to bring him back, but he dies after attempting to do hard work. There are some battle scenes shown incidentally, and the close is a Decoration Day scene in a large cemetery. Quite an appealing story and nicely handled.

"AN ERRAND OF MERCY" (Thanhouser), July 11.—A rather obvious story is this, telling of a doctor who becomes jealous of his wife, and is brought back later by a hurried call from his own child. It seemed to us the doctor had good cause for jealousy when he discovered his wife at the piano, with a man's arm resting about her shoulder. This opening feature weakened the observer's sympathy with the wife.

"HEART THROBS" (Broncho), July 16.—A characteristic war drama in two reels. The girl refuses to wed Groves, who was her mother's choice. She falls in love with John, who becomes a rebel. The mother will not forgive the girl and sends her from the house. War scenes intervene and both John and Groves are shown amid the raging battle. John is shot and dies with his newly born baby in his arms. It is years after the war that the mother relents and takes the girl back to her. Not quite as strong as the average Broncho production.

"FOR THE MAN SHE LOVED" (Thanhouser), July 8.—Quite a pleasing story is this, telling of a girl who dropped her bracelet in a canyon. Her lover goes down with a rope to get it. The rival pulls the rope up, leaving him there to die. But the girl discovers him and goes down, puts the rope about him and pulls him up with the aid of her horse. It looks impossible, and the chances are it never was really done that way, but it makes an interesting picture.

"A CREPE BONNET" (Thanhouser), July 13.—Rather grim humor to fill a house with mourners for a man who is really not dead, but this is brought about so naturally that it is very laughable. The children, pretending to bury a dead doll, tie crepe on the door. Naturally the friends suppose poor John has died, as he was sick, and crowd into the house. The picture winds up by the kids getting spanked. A funny situation in this.

"THE INGRATE" (Majestic), July 12.—This is the familiar story of a man befriended by another, who pays back the debt by robbing his benefactor. The first scenes are laid in the desert country. Later the two men meet in a Wall street crash and the first man gets his revenge by trapping the ingrate. The love story was simply tacked on at the close. A fair offering.

"ONE OF THE FINEST" (Majestic), July 8.—A policeman falls into a cellarway and is stunned. His rival, wishing to injure him, leaves a whiskey bottle near him. He loses his place on the force, but after a realistic fire in which he played the hero, is reinstated. The police force of Los Angeles is shown drilling in this film.

"THE SHADOW OF THE PAST" (Majestic), July 6.—A pretty love story helps this film along very much. The girl, to escape the unwelcome attentions of a theatrical manager, goes to the country, where she finds a lover. The love scenes are natural, and when he learns of her past life he refuses to give her up. Quite pleasing, though not new.

"TO ERR IS HUMAN" (American), July 17.—The baby drops rodent poison into the well, creating much sickness. Steve is suspected and is in serious danger when the baby tells how the accident happened, and the girl goes to the rescue. An obvious plot and not very strong.

"AT THE HALF BREED'S MERCY" (American), July 19.—There is a fine lot of action in this, which would be more effective if built around more convincing situations. The child and man start on foot and cover the same distance as the horseback riders, going at full speed. The scenes are Western and generally pleasing in character.

"TRUTH IN THE WILDERNESS" (American), July 14.—Warren Kerrigan again gets into action in this number, which possesses considerable interest. He goes to Mexico for two years, leaving Helen. When he returns home she has forgotten him and married another. He goes back to Mexico and finds happiness with the girl who had helped him in his work there. The gun work in the saloon was interesting, but not entirely convincing.

"RED MASK" (Kayhee), July 18.—Here is also a film story in which it impressed us that the leading man did not quite look his part, though we have liked him very much in some roles. There is plenty of action in the story; the bandit is shot toward the close and dies, leaving the girl he loved to mourn him.

"FOR THE MAN SHE LOVED" (Eclair), July 16.—A two-reel offering, with a rather vague beginning, but which works up into an entertaining story. It should have been made clear, however, that the girl was planning a revenge upon the scheming fellow who had her lover imprisoned. As it stands now, the heroine's motives are not clear and until the close of the second reel she appears merely as a foolish girl, who has accepted favors from Dave and generally compromised herself. The windup would be stronger if the observer knew more about her intentions. A subtitle of an appropriate character would remedy this.

"THE TALE OF A HAT" (Nestor), July 18.—A half-reel with a unique little comedy idea in it. Three women try on the same hat, and are kissed behind a screen by their lovers, with complications that may be imagined as a result. Good photography.

"WHEN HIS COURAGE FAILED" (Nestor), July 18.—This, on same reel with above, shows us a men's club and a woman's suffrage meeting. One poor husband, locked out of his own home, gets inside a clothes hamper to get inside the house. Somewhat amusing.

"WINNING A PRIZE" (Great Northern), July 5.—This film was made in Copenhagen and the players are probably Norwegian. The couple quarrel in a restaurant and tear a lottery ticket in two, each taking half. Later the ticket wins and they draw a baby carriage as a prize. The girl was rather pretty and the man had a good comedy manner. The story is not entirely new, but pleasing.

"AS THE BELL RINGS" (Solax), July 11.—The minister's brother is a weakling and pretends to marry a girl while the minister is away. Five years later he abandons her, but the minister sends for him and makes him support the girl and her child. A fairly good offering of a somewhat conventional type, with Darwin Karr in the lead. The character work is commendable.

"REUNION OF THE BLUE AND GRAY AT GETTYSBURG, (Special Event Film Co.), ———— A very thorough series of views of the famous battlefield, recently the scene of a great reunion. The veterans are seen greeting each other fervently; various monuments and places of interest are thrown on the screen; also views of President Wilson and other prominent visitors. This gives an idea of the great scope of the reunion and its historical importance.

"THE SILENT HOUSE" (Ramo), July 23.—A mountain feud story, which carries a strong, primal atmosphere with it. Zeke is a typical feudist and will brook no interference with his love affairs. He is shot by revenue men, but his mother thinks Jim killed him. The gun fighting between men and women on both sides was well shown. The picture closes with an effective picture of the old house and the mother kneeling beside her dead son. Better than the average offering of this type.

SELIG SAYINGS.

By Cyrus Pippin.

W. N. Selig last week was gratified to receive from his traveling representative, Dr. E. V. McDowell, who has been in the Far East for three years past, exclusively in his interest, three beautiful types of royal Bengal tigers, each eight months of age.

* * *

In the same shipment came a dwarf, African elephant, "Anna May;" which stands four feet high and is the cutest little pachyderm that ever came over. Three new trained leopards, an American mountain lioness and a pair of bear cubs are among other acquisitions of the menagerie that will go forward in the special animal car next week.

* * *

Supt. Thomas Persons, of the Selig Polyscope Company, will personally conduct a number of the leading people of the stock organization to California on July 15th. Among those listed for the journey are: Charles Cleary, Wm. Stowell, Harry Lonsdale, William Walcott, LaFayette McKee, Ralph Murallo, Miss Pierce, Harriet Notter, Lyllian Leighton, Joe Hazleton, Hardee Kirkland, Messrs. Carson, Newman, Walker, Steiner and Allen.

* * *

The brothers Farnum, during the coming week, will begin work on the big pictorial version of Rex Beach's masterpiece, "The Spoilers," which will be produced in elaborate fashion by the Selig Stock Company in California.

* * *

Harriet Notter, the new ingenue of the Selig Stock Company, has easily stepped into sudden favor. She was formerly associated with the Singer and Askins light operatic attractions, and had a singing part in "The Girl at the Gate."

* * *

William Walcott, late of the Cohan's "Broadway Jones" Company, has joined the Selig Stock Company.

* * *

Oscar Eagle, the leading producer of the Selig Polyscope Company, has completely recovered his health and declares he never felt more fit.

* * *

Chas. H. France, a big boy now, son of the late Sid C. France, who was one of the liveliest factors in his time in melodrama, is no longer associated with the Selig Polyscope Company as a producer. He has concluded his vacation at the Hotel Grant and gone East with the view of joining one of the wheel circuits. Mr. France's ability as a producer while with the Selig organization was confined strictly to comedy lines. He has not announced his plans for the future.

* * *

Miss Winnifred Greenwood, late leading lady with the Selig Stock at Chicago, last week delivered moving picture lectures at South Bend, Ind., and nearby towns, with a signal success. She lectured on the films of "Pauline Cushman, the Federal Spy," and "Belle Boyd, the Spy of the Confederacy," in which she assumed the title roll with distinction. The idea of a picture-stage heroine lecturing herself was something unique and proved to be enormously popular. Miss Greenwood has several offers and has gone East, where she will probably close for the season.

EDISON ECHOES.

By the Edison Publicity Expert.

The Edison Company announces another "Mary" series entitled "Who Will Marry Mary?", which is to be run for six months. The first story, "A Proposal from the Duke," released July 26th, tells the story of "Mary's" adventures with an impecunious duke. As she is now a millionairess it is natural to suppose that she will be sought after by men of various stages and ages—the duke is the first. Mary Fuller, to whose personal charm the "What Happened to Mary" series owed a great measure of its success, continues in the leading role, with many prominent Edison players in support.

* * *

Another Edison series called "Kate Kirby's Cases," has been launched with every prospect of success. Laura Sawyer, in the role of Kate Kirby, a girl detective, has an opportunity to do some very convincing work.

* * *

Miriam Nesbitt and Marc MacDermott write that they are having the time of their lives. A week spent on the beautiful Thames gave Marc ample time in which to recover from that awful trip over, but he swears that he will never forget it. He is now busy trying to organize a British company to build a subway from London to New York, so that he can return without repeating the same harrowing experiences.

* * *

Frank McGlynn, fresh from his tremendous success in the Chicago production of "Officer 666," has joined the Edison players with whom he won wide popularity a year or so ago. Possessed of a virile personality, he has the faculty of "getting over" very forcibly on the screen, and from now on will be seen in a wide range of characters.

* * *

Another important acquisition to the Edison ranks is Dan Mason, famous as the character comedian in "The Man From Mexico," "Why Smith Left Home," "The Prince of Pilsen," and numerous vaudeville successes, who has already scored a big hit as Professor William Nutt in the film of that name.

* * *

William West has returned from his trip to Georgia as a member of Charles M. Seay's company.

* * *

Charles M. Seay persuaded the Governor of Georgia and the Mayor of Atlanta to let go the helm of public affairs to pose in the Edison film, "Scenes of Other Days."

* * *

Herbert Prior, who appeared with both of the celebrities, when asked how they impressed him as photoplayers, said that he believed politics really held out a more promising field of endeavor for them both.

F. G. BRADFORD TO MANAGE AMERICAN GAUMONT.

During his recent trip to America, Mr. Leon Gaumont, among other things, was busy making arrangements for a successor to Herbert Blache, general manager of the American Gaumont Company, resigned. Mr. Gaumont's selection was Mr. T. G. Bradford, a well-known film man of Canada. The new general manager brings to his new position an extensive experience dating back to the early days of motion pictures.

He first had a number of picture shows touring Canada when it was a pioneer country in the exhibition line. Later he took charge of the Keith picture interests in Eastern Canada. In conjunction with Mr. P. L. Waters he afterwards was occupied for a period establishing Kinetograph film exchanges and ultimately sold his interest in them to Mr. Waters. When the General Film Company began operations in Canada Mr. Bradford became identified with that organization, with which he remained until quite recently. His long and varied experience fits him well for his new duties, upon which he has already entered.

WARNER HAS A CONVENTION.

Taking advantage of the big gathering of motion picture exhibitors in New York, Abe Warner has called in his branch managers for a little convention of his own. On Monday those who reported at the home office on 45th Street were C. W. Slater, of Dallas, Texas; Ben Abrams, of Philadelphia; Harry Charnas, of Cleveland, who brought Mrs. Charnas with him, and Jerome Abrams, representative for the Southern District.

Third National Convention.

(Continued from page 302.)

I recommend a shorter program, not to exceed four reels, regardless of price.

I recommend that on the twelfth day of September, 1913, the third anniversary, each member of the League contribute one dollar.

I recommend that a special session of this body be devoted to the discussion of the Censor question.

I recommend that all future conventions be under the supervision of the Executive Committee of the League.

Taking into consideration the conditions under which we have had to work, including a lack of funds, we have, indeed, made remarkable progress. Some plan should be devised whereby a sufficient amount of money should be in the treasury to pay the running expenses of the League.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, as it stands today, represents millions of dollars, and is fast becoming one of the most powerful organizations in this country. The financing of the League will, undoubtedly, be provided for in the future.

I am pleased to report that harmony and good feeling prevail throughout the organization. We are thoroughly organized on a fine basis. We are co-operating with many societies for the uplift of our business; also with manufacturers of films, film exchanges and others interested in our line of business. There is no strife existing between the film manufacturers or exchanges and the Exhibitors' League. As evidence we point to the large attendance and the states represented at this splendid exposition of the arts.

THIRD DAY'S EVENTS—THURSDAY, JUNE 10.

The convention was opened Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, and the first motion carried was to the effect that the wives and children of visiting exhibitors be allowed to remain in the hall during the proceedings, except at the nomination and election of officers. A roll call of delegates was then in order, after which the following telegrams to president Neff, from Gov. Jas. M. Cox, of Ohio, and ex-Senator Jos. B. Foraker, of Cincinnati, were read:

"It will be impossible now to leave Ohio. We are in the midst of the work of exposing fraud on the referendum. Must remain here, and I am determined to prosecute it to the bitter end.

"JAMES M. COX."

"In all probability will be in New York to address convention. "JOSEPH B. FORAKER."

It was announced by the chair that all other telegrams received during the convention would be read in due course, later.

The Auditing Committee, by motion, was given thirty minutes' extra time to make its report, which was then approved and accepted by the convention. The report of the Committee on By-Laws, Minutes and Constitution was next read and accepted, and this was followed by the reading and acceptance of the report of the Ways and Means Committee.

Considerable time was devoted to the discussion of the good will and welfare of the League. Mr. Boss, of Norfolk, Va., advocated 2 reels for 5 cents and 4 reels for 10 cents; Mr. Joseph, of Detroit, favored 3 for 5 cents and 5 for 10 cents; Mr. Herbst, of Washington, the elimination of airdomes, on the ground that the exhibitor who presents pictures the year round should be protected. Mr. Herbst read a resolution, approved and adopted by the Washington local, to the effect that no pictures be shown except those passed by the National Board of Censors. F. J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Ind., advocated 2 reels for 5 cents and 3 for 10 cents; Mr. Phillips, of Milwaukee, stated that his nearby competitor ran 6 reels for 5 cents, but that he had refused to run over 4 for 5 cents, regardless of competition. W. A. Corey, of California, informed the convention that when the League was organized in that State, some exhibitors were running 7 reels of pictures and 3 acts of vaudeville for 5 cents, but that 3 reels are now being run for 5 cents, and 5 for 10 cents, owing to the influence of the organization.

Sam Segall, of Philadelphia, stirred the convention by the announcement that in one section of the city as many as 20 reels were offered for 5 cents, in a continuous program. Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, said that the local organization had brought about better conditions by means of the Exhibitors' Co-Operative Film Exchange, and that no less than 57 theaters in the city are owned by the Exchanges! Mr. McMann, of Connecticut, stated that Boston programs are changed only twice weekly, while in Maine three changes weekly are made. Mr. McMahon, of Connecticut, was inclined to blame New York State for some of the existing evils prevailing among exhibitors in certain sections of the East, but Mr. Friedman, of Buffalo, offered evidence in defense. It is expected that the convention will take up the question, for solution, sometime before closing.

Thursday Afternoon Session.

Thursday afternoon session was taken up by the nomination of national officers, and lasted from 3:00 p. m. until after 6 o'clock. Before entering on the set program, the convention passed a motion limiting all nominating speeches to eight minutes and the seconding speeches to three minutes.

Lem S. Miller, a delegate from Cincinnati, whose modesty has kept him in the background throughout the preceding sessions of the convention, showed his forcefulness as a speaker in his nominating speech for the re-election of M. A. Neff. It follows, in part:

Nominating Speech for M. A. Neff as President.

The greatest facility offered for the education and edification of mankind has come through the medium of moving pictures. They accurately record and preserve history so that in the distant future our posterity can see with their own eyes the events of the past. They bring all of the world within the vision of the humblest for a modest price. The most resourceful minds have thus far produced nothing more beneficial for the common good of humanity, and their possibilities are not yet fully developed.

When we think of the enormous wealth invested in producing and exhibiting motion pictures and the vast expanse of these United States, with its millions of people, who are daily attending moving picture shows, we can, in only a limited degree, comprehend the greatness and power of the industry.

As we look over this assemblage and see representatives present from practically every state, organized and united into concerted effort, working in harmony for a common cause, we are profoundly impressed with the master mind that made this organization possible. And that is a greater and more monumental tribute to that man of genius and executive ability than thought or words can portray.

This League, crowned with its vast achievements, demands a man who has proven himself worthy in the past, and who is equal in the present to be its leader of the future.

The man whom I have the pleasure of nominating is personally known to every member of our League. His fame alone is not of things written or said, but of the greatness of things done.

We should not be unmindful of his unselfish and untiring work; of the great personal and financial sacrifices on his part, and of his earnest and fervent devotion to our cause. Ohio places in nomination the man who has been weighed in the balance and been found not wanting—M. A. Neff.

Mr. Robinson, president of the New Jersey League, seconded Mr. Neff's nomination.

Samuel S. Trigger, president of New York City Local, named J. L. Phillips, of Fort Worth, Tex., for National President, and Mr. Phillips was seconded by Mr. Stern, of New Jersey. Mr. Phillips is known in the Lone Star State as "Happy Jack." His cowboy costume, worn at the Imperial Hotel and on the street during his present visit to the city, has excited considerable attention. In an able speech, Mr. Chamberlin, of Minnesota, next placed in nomination Wm. J. Sweeney, national vice-president of Illinois, and Mr. Phillips, of Milwaukee, was the second speaker in his behalf.

There are two candidates for National Secretary—H. A. Sherman, of Minneapolis, and G. H. Wiley, of Kansas City. F. J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, placed the former in nomination, and F. J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Ind., named the latter candidate.

J. J. Rieder, of Jackson, Mich., the present National Treasurer, was nominated to succeed himself by W. A. Pittis, of Ohio. Dr. J. M. Rhodes, of Indianapolis, and J. Howard Bennett, of Baltimore, are also candidates, the former being nominated by F. J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, and the latter by Dr. Wm. Herbst, of Washington, D. C.

After the nominations were concluded, the president appointed Julius Alcock, president of Chicago Local, No. 2, to fill the place of J. M. Kauffman, of California, in the Committee on Constitution and Bylaws. In addition to Mr. Alcock, there are at present on this committee: Mr. Phillips, of Milwaukee; Mr. Finnegan, of Texas; Mr. Blumenthal, of New Jersey, and Mr. Rembusch, of Indiana.

During the election of officers, at Friday morning's session, a motion will be introduced by Peter J. Jeup, Detroit, to elect a First Vice President of the National League. This will be done in order to create a head for the League, should the president die or meet with serious accident.

The First International Exposition

Splendid Showing Made by the Various Branches of the Motion Picture Trade and Contributary Interests

IT was something of a venture on the part of the promoters of the First International Exposition of Motion Picture Arts when they suggested the project. As has been frequently observed in these columns, conditions in the trade were not favorable to such an undertaking, but that fact did not deter the promoters, the New York City Exhibitors' League. They framed their plans very carefully and toiled with great industry for the ultimate success.

Whether conditions of the trade changed to please the promoters of the exposition, or whether it was their energy that overcame adverse conditions, the fact remains that the exposition was a huge success. The big hall of the Grand Central Palace was tastefully laid out, the booths were artistically designed and decorated, giving the exposition a fairyland aspect when illuminated by the thousands of incandescent lights.

It would be impossible to publish all the complimentary remarks expressed by visitors, but they were enthusiastic to the last degree, and well they might be, for it seldom happens that a trade exhibit at Grand Central Palace is more comprehensive and attractive than this. A careful review of the displays follows:

Cameras for exhibitors are commanding unusual attention. It will not be long before many exhibitors will have their own camera and outfit and add the always interesting local attractions to the run of photoplays. A freight wreck just at the edge of the town, with only a few box cars in the ditch and no one hurt, is a bigger money getter than a thousand feet of some smash-up with a loss of life sufficiently serious to command national attention.

Eberhard Schneider has the most elaborate display of cameras and equipment and his booth is made doubly interesting by the showing of many relics of the experimental days, and courteous attendants seem to take as much pleasure in lecturing the relics as in calling attention to the new devices. The Schneider camera is pretty well known to most exhibitors, but he also shows a most compact developing and finishing outfit at a moderate price. There are all sorts of printers and perforators, as well as polishers, but few of the exhibitors will court brain fever trying to perforate film when the perforated stock is to be had so cheaply. Even if you are not ready to put in a camera yet, the Schneider relics will be found of interest. The booth is close to the main entrance and quickly located.

Back toward the west end of the hall the Frese camera, a California product, is located. It is an excellent box with a unique feature in that the film may be run down or up without changing gears. This is not a feature that will interest the exhibitor much, since it is mostly used in dissolves and other trick work, but the camera is mechanically sound and the double swing tripod is a pretty piece of work.

The frame makers seem to be given to crowding their space. The Newman Company has so large a stock on hand that it overflows the booth and runs well down the hall. It is lucky for the Newman Company that the adjacent space is not taken, or they would have to hang some of their product out of the windows.

The most attractive line is a triple enameled brass frame with tile instead of cardboard letters. A light wiping with a damp cloth is all that be required to keep the frame in bright condition. There are no polishing powders or pastes required and with the most casual care the frames look always as good as new.

No matter how carefully they are handled, the cardboard letters will get dirty through fingering even when placed behind glass, but the tile letter cannot stay dirty and a damp cloth is all that is needed. A font of 250 letters is supplied with the frame and lost letters may be replaced at seven cents each.

Another novelty is a three wing revolving poster stand for the display of six one sheets, with provision for appropriate reading matter above, if desired. A small motor, consuming less current than an incandescent lamp, keeps the posters revolving and supplies the motion that always catches the eye more quickly than a still display. The device is surmounted by a light globe, which can be lettered with the name of the house, and the entire device occupies a space less than five feet square.

There are samples of brass rail, posts, elbows and "Ts" galore and many other things in brass for the picture playhouse. The frames are in infinite variety in burnished brass, nickel, oxidized copper and what one of the assistants opulently describes as "gold and gun metal," which is a better description than the official designation. It is a damascened effect in brass on a brown lacquer base that is rich and effective, fitting in well with a dark toned lobby or foyer effect. There are frames on easels and others that are self-supporting, that swing from rods, hang on the wall, and it would not be surprising to find that they even have them to nail on the ceiling. The Newman booth is at the east end of the hall back of the main stairway.

Menger and Ring, down at the other end of the hall, make a display of wood frames many of which are self-contained, the back, when the two part frames are closed, serving as a shipping case without further crating. This is a money and labor saver for States rights and feature men generally. The styles range from the plainest molding to carved paneling and display lettering.

The Novelty Slide Company is over in the northeast corner of the building and displays a line of glass and metal slides in large variety. They have coming slides for all brands, with a space for lettering in the titles and player slides for most of the stars.

They make "coming" slides for all features in two or more parts which are sold singly or on standing order, and they show a very complete line of brass announcement and general slides. These are stencil cut and are light and unbreakable.

One of their leaders is a brass and glass clock face slide with movable hands which can be set to show the hour. This is to be had in stock only with the clock face and a legend over the top, but they can be altered to carry an announcement as well at a small charge and the clock-announcement slide may presently be put in stock. They also show several hundred glass announcement and advertising slides.

The Edison Kinetoscope, model 1913, was shown by Walter W. Evans, Jr., of the sales department. Also on exhibition was the home machine. The fact that there is a forthcoming series of Edison films entitled "Who Will Marry Mary" is plainly set forth here. There is a large painting of Thomas A. Edison in this space. Mr. Evans reports business good, that he has had several very good prospects; in fact, the outlook for sales at the exposition is very satisfactory.

The Nicholas Power Machine Company has one of the largest displays in the exposition, its space being 20 by 40 feet in area. It is featuring its 6A motor-driven machine and its double-dissolving lantern. Also on view are the Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 machines, these in themselves forming a demonstration of the growth of the projector. The company is distributing to operators a finely printed and bound "Hints to Operators." The book is profusely illustrated and contains blanks for memoranda. In charge of the booth is Will C. Smith, assistant general manager of the company, and he is aided by A. L. Raven, F. W. Swett and Bert Bohannon.

One of the completest exhibits of all appliances for the manufacture and exhibition of moving pictures on the floor of the convention, is that of the Whyte-Whitman Co. On display here are to be seen cameras, printers, perforators, cleaning machines, cementing machines and a new drying system. This firm is exclusive importer of and agent for Williamson's machines. S. Baker is in charge of the exhibit.

One of the most complete is the device that forms the main exhibit of the National Cash Register booth. It has not yet been named, but the device is fully developed. The machine forms a part of the counter of the booth, a set of keys rising from the table. One row carries the denominations of the tickets sold, while a second row carries the numerals from two to five. Pressing the five cent key will deliver one ticket. Pressing the same key and one of the others in the second row will deliver two tickets, or three or four or five, as may be desired. If the wrong key is depressed through error the machine is turned to blank and may be reset correctly. Strip tickets are not used, the ticket being printed on the blank at the moment of delivery.

But one color of paper may be used at a time, though five colors can be threaded through and any color used as desired, though but one color may be used at a time for all denominations. One advantage of the color scheme is found in the rush hour. After the house is filled a change may be made from white to red tickets and after a certain number have been sold another change is made to blue or yellow or green. As the house empties the tickets first sold are given preference over the more recent arrivals and one fruitful source of complaint is avoided. The machine contains a totalizer and the results show under a locked panel. There is a second register that may be set on the last sale of the day before and a simple process of subtraction gives the day's sale. The manager may let the machine run for a week or more without attention and yet have an accurate count that may not be falsified by any employee.

Another machine is found in the booth of the Picture Theater Equipment Company, the Ticket Selling and Registering Machine. This delivers but one sort of ticket, but the cost is so low that the two or more required where the admission is not uniform is not as great as a single larger machine. The tickets are delivered one at a time and are counted automatically, the register being provided with a lock and key that conceal the figures. This gives accurate count and yet prevents a competitor from getting the volume of business down through the purchase of tickets with betraying serial numbers. The parts are simple, are not likely to get out of order and is fool and meddle proof.

Mr. Edwards' booth is typical of his "department store of motography." He handles everything but films and gives his clients the benefit of a comprehensive display, and yet with several kinds of machines and all sorts of sundries, his booth does not look overcrowded, though a glance shows the wide variety of his assortment and hints at the orderly system that makes for efficiency as well.

For those who prefer it there is the automatic coin cashier, which takes coins, makes change and registers the admissions. It is intended as a substitute for a ticket machine, but with one of these and a ticket delivery the operation of selling tickets becomes automatic. If a quarter is dropped in the proper slot and two admissions asked for, the machine passes down a dime and a nickel and registers two admissions, all in one movement, passing the crowd along without delay and leaving the lobby man free to move through the crowd and keep it lined up.

The Box Office Ticket Machine Company offers a device that prints and delivers tickets with one movement. A quick drying ink is used on the roller that prevents the fingers or even white gloves from becoming "smudged."

Just across the aisle from the big Wurlitzer instrument, that makes more noise than the band, the Dramagraph effects machine has to get in when the Wurlitzer man has a heart, but the novelty of the machine holds the crowds. It is a compact collection of drummers' traps and effects self-contained and supplemented by the usual bass and snare drum. The bass pedal has an arrangement whereby the cymbal or drum may be operated independently of the other or in unison. The other has a lever device for throwing off the snares and converting it into a tom-tom. Cranks, pulls and handles work all sorts of bells and a series of tubes work the whistles, and other pneumatic effects. There is a phonograph for use where the piano is absent, and an organ run by a crank for church scenes. A typewriter key effect has its accompanying bell, and the demonstrator claims that not a single sound asked for yet has not been replied to. The jokester who asks for "a noise like a nut" is given the laugh by the operator tapping his assistant's head.

Scott and Van Altena have their display in running order and show a collection of slides that it would be hard to beat anywhere. They are all straight photographic effects in combination instead of crude drawing, and some of the colorings are unusually effective. You are missing an eye treat if you go past this booth too quickly. The interior is darkened and a glass screen shows the effect of some of the numbers in the lantern.

Phonoliszt Violina is a pretty large mouthful of name. It belongs to one of the most unique musical instruments on the floor, a combination of two violins and piano. While there are four instruments for each violin, each violin using but a single string, all are completely strung and the combination of the eight give the full effect of two good instruments, the bowing being done by a circle bow and the stopping by mechanical fingers. Apart from the novelty the tonal effects are really good and the piano accompaniment leaves nothing to be desired, being neither obtrusive nor lacking in volume. Perforated paper rolls are used, these being made in Germany. There is another instrument giving a combination of piano and organ, a pleasing effect, and there is a pipe organ with effects for those who desire something of greater volume, all of them being handled by Ernst Bocker. There is more than plenty of music in the air, but it is good music.

The United Electric Light and Power Company has a finely equipped booth 20 by 30 feet in area. The company is showing a motor generator, mercury rectifier and rotary converter, demonstrating the transfer of alternating current to direct. Also there are on exhibition cooking utensils, sign flashes, ozonator for the purification of air in theaters, electric radiator, window whirlers, and time clock. There is a finely equipped operating booth, which contains a Power's 6A projector. At the opposite end of the space is a screen shielded from view when not in use by very artistic glass doors. Twelve electric fans keep the air in the booth moving. Other objects on exhibition are a vacuum cleaner and an electric cigar lighter. There is a full equipment of Deagan's bells. A. F. Berry is in charge of the exhibit, and he is aided by J. R. Hunter and J. R. Sweeney.

The Typhoon Fan Company, of New York, which has an exhibit at the left of the main entrance, is the company responsible for making more comfortable the temperature of the exposition hall these days. Besides many smaller fans there are four six-footers. The fans are silent in operation. There is a unique exhibition in the booth. This is an electrically driven sixteen-inch fan blowing on a four-foot apparatus, and working the larger fan as a windmill.

For the twenty-six hours ending at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon the Mortimer Film Cleaner Company had sold 134 outfits, a pretty good record. The apparatus cleans a film as it is rewound. These cleaners have been sent as far as Manila. The demonstrator has his indorsements right on file in the booth—some half a thousand of them.

The Spray Ozone Company is demonstrating a disinfectant, Spray Ozone, a germicide which kills germs and leaves in the air the odor of pine. The ozone has been introduced into many theaters, into commercial establishments and into homes. The company holds a patent, which was issued July 8, for an attachment to an electric fan, enabling the theater man automatically to purify the air in his house. A. H. Avery is the manager of the company.

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company occupies spaces 327 and 328. The exhibit is in charge of Bernard M. Corbett and Fred A. Clark of the sales department. They are showing the latest model Motiograph, both hand and motor driven; stereopticons, and accessories. Mr. Corbett was a close friend of the founder of The Moving Picture World, and in a chat with the writer expressed his admiration for the sterling qualities of J. P. Chalmers.

The Precision Machine Company, manufacturer of the Simplex machine, is situated in spaces 319 to 322 and exhibits various types of projectors, both hand and motor driven. The company is showing a seventeen-inch magazine, which carries 2,500 feet of film. Also is shown the evolution of the Simplex from 1896 to 1913 and the various parts entering into the making of the projector. The company is distributing a book of technical value to operators. The booth is in charge of J. E. Robin. He is assisted by David F. Cowan. Present in the evening were F. B. Cannock, the inventor of the Simplex, and H. B. Coles, general manager of the company.

The Wyanoak makes a fine display of gelatin prints for lobby work, showing some of the Quo Vadis work and much theatrical stuff. They were up and ready at the opening.

Right next to the booth of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, a Bausch & Lomb show a general line of lenses and stereopticons, but their most attractive exhibits are two machines more or less closely related. The first of these is a double dissolving Balopticon with a moving picture head. Through the use of a reflector, the light of the projection lantern can be instantly shunted over to the lower stereopticon instead of moving the entire lamp. The arrangement for accomplishing this is simple and effective. A most important point is that this device permits the use of two sets of condensers, instead of requiring the stereopticon side to get along with the condensers best suited to the projection head. Any standard head can be fitted without being sent to the factory. Still more unique is the Universal Balopticon with a projection head. In this form, the throwing of a lever and tilting the lamp-house diverts the light from the projection machine into the stereopticon overhead. A table below the mirror enables the operator to project any printed or written matter. Glass emergency slides are done away with as any matter on any opaque or transparent base may be projected through this machine with equal ease. Considering the universal usefulness of the machine, the price, $375, which includes an Edison or Power's projection head, is very low. The entire exhibit is worthy of attention, but these two machines should not be overlooked.

"Frames that last" is the slogan at the booth of the Theater Specialty Manufacturing Co., facing the main entrance to the left. Substantial construction is a fad with G. W. Armstrong, and yet he offers his frames at most attractive prices. Some styles of frame construction require the use of some soft wood, but Mr. Armstrong will have none of these. He uses only hard woods and 22-gauge brass, and yet he offers frames as low as five and six dollars. His regular line starts at about seven dollars and runs up, but not so very far, at that. He makes everything, from half-sheet frames up, to say nothing of combinations, and one of his most useful numbers is a frame holding two one-sheets, one above the other, with an opening in the center for an announcement card or the usual run of strips supplied by the advertising companies.

All backs are compo board, strongly and scientifically braced, and not even the three and eight-sheet frames will warp. Mr. Armstrong is in charge of the exhibit himself, and his enthusiasm and sincerity have made him many friends with the exhibitors.

One of the ticket-handling devices that is attracting attention is the pedal machine of the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Machine Company. E. S. Bowman, local manager, is in charge, with D. Harold Finkelstein, state manager, to help him out. The machine sets flush with the ticket desk, save for a set of pins which extend about a quarter of an inch above the shelf. Pressure on the proper pin will set the machine to deliver from one to five tickets, and a pressure of the foot upon a pedal delivers the tickets while the cashier is making the change. As many sorts of tickets may be sold as desired, and a correct register is kept of each sort under a locked plate. A large number of sales have been made during the exposition.

The Bell & Howell Company are showing several new model machines. A rapid perforator has been sold to the Kinemacolor Company, to be delivered Monday, and they are showing a continuous printer that overcomes the slippage that has brought this type of printer into bad odor. In place of the adjustable light, or the use of ground glasses, the light is adjusted to the negative in hand by a slot device that may be opened or closed, as the negative may be dense or thin.

They also show a camera that is a departure from all models. Instead of focusing on the film, the lens is thrown over to a focusing device at the side where the focus is obtained on a ground glass, the lens, of which there are several mounted on a circular-turned plate, being then thrown back to the camera. Where very exact registration is required, as in close-up work, the camera may be shoved over in focusing and returned to the exact position occupied by the focusing device. The light traps of the magazine are automatically opened by the closing of the camera, this and the arrangement of the aperture plate doing away with much of the friction provocative of static. Another interesting feature is an automatic dissolving device, whereby the shutter, instead of the diaphragm, is opened and closed to obtain the effect. It requires no attention from the operator, as it automatically stops when the shutter is either completely closed or opened. The blades of the shutter can be set from the outside of the camera and at any time. The magazines will carry from two to four hundred feet.

Of course, every new model is the last word in projection machines, but Eric Morrison is showing the "next word" in his 1924 Model Standard, which will be placed in the market in the fall or early winter. All of the bearing points are provided with ball bearings and the lamp-house is a delight to the operator. It is provided with a friction drive motor and the condenser lenses may be focussed the same as the projection lens. The base is exceptionally heavy, doing away with the need for elaborate anchoring, and the entire machine is dolled up with brass trim that makes it look like the star locomotive on the limited. It is pretty enough to go in a glass case, but looks are merely incidental to efficiency. The magazines will hold 2,000 feet of film.

Over at the Radium Gold Fibre Screen booth they are bragging that they have the only daylight screen that is being used for projection purposes in the brilliantly-lighted hall. A stereopticon keeps a picture on the screen and the picture keeps the crowd around the booth. They supplied the screen to the General Film Theater, where it is to be seen in operation all day.

The one thing that can make the Wurlitzer organ weary is the Yerkes bells mounted on the balcony railing and operated from a booth close to the entrance. Next exposition, it is rumored, they are going to put all the musical instruments in a special

The Amateur Contest.

Ryan Walker

J. B. Smith, Oldest Cameraman.

MIRROR SCREEN
Ryan Walker

Frank Manning,
The Man Who Laughs.

Ryan Walker

Bernard Corbett.

hall and let them fight it out, but the bells are holding their own well, and are attracting attention. They have other music makers, but the bells lead the rest.

Down at the west end of the hall the Lang Manufacturing Company declare that they have sold more rewinders than all the other companies combined. They have an all-metal reel, and, to keep things moving, you can get reels free — if you buy a rewinder. Dust-proof oil-cases insure good lubrication, and careful workmanship does the rest.

The Kinemacolor booth, just across from the entrance, is one of the centers of attraction. To most people, the entire machine is a novelty, and to those familiar with the machine, the color screen corrector is a novelty, enabling the operator to instantly reverse the screens in case of a misthread or other mishap.

Although not an exhibit, the splendid display of the Eastman Company deserves a special word of mention. The handsome sepia enlargements attract universal attention and the most favorable comment.

It isn't necessary to talk much about the Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra. It speaks for itself and in no uncertain tones. Every time it starts up—and it starts up about ten minutes after it runs down—the crowd hustles over and the only person in hearing who does not seem to like it is the man who tries to sneak in a demonstration of the Dramagraph each time they change a tune.

The W-H-J has to hustle some to live up to two hyphens, but it makes it every time and with plenty to spare. The Wurlitzer people might have filled that end of the hall with their various styles of instruments, but they centered on the Unit Orchestra and the band lost its job after the opening night, just as many orchestras have been replaced by one man at the W-H-J console. The best thing about it is that having only one man, a good man may be engaged, since he is the director over a mechanical instead of a human orchestra. The regular Wurlitzer catalogue lists machines all the way from $375 up, but no one ever discovered that they had more than one standard of excellence though a score of degrees of elaborateness.

The Berry-Wood people, at the other end of the hall—and have you noticed how these automatic players run to hyphens—have three instruments on display and many more in their catalogue.

The Lithograph people have been making a good display, but they have mostly been leaving the exhibits to take care of themselves. The Hennegan booth shows but a small portion of the large catalogue, most of the instrument going to the new pennant signs which offer a veriety of readings and a permanent banner in the shape of a long frame with eighteen-inch letters that can be changed at will. The frame is infinitely superior to painted or printed banners and a deal cheaper in the long run. This is one number that no exhibitor can afford to overlook if he uses banners. It takes less time to make a new sign than it would to hang a cloth banner, and it presents a finished appearance that a cloth banner can never give.

The Rex Film Renovating Company, nicknamed "the Troy laundry," takes the rain out of commercials and makes as much noise, if less music, as the Wurlitzer. It has a comparatively limited appeal to exhibitors, but it does show them that there is no excuse for unlaundered film.

The Miner exhibit is as deserted as an orphan child in a foundling asylum as to attendants, but they show a fine line of paper, some of it in frames loaned by the Newman Company.

The American Slide Company offers a wide choice of legends in a compact display, covering the ground as fully as any in the choice of readings. It offers mostly cartoon and sketch subjects.

The Electric Light and Power Company has a most tasteful display with tea and coffee pots as a side line to motor-generator sets and other more weighty trifles. They have a completely equipped booth, the only one in the main floor, by the way, and occasionally throw some industrial films on a daylight screen, but most of the time the screen, which is closed off by stained glass doors from the rest of the exhibit, is interrupted by the doors being in use. There is a constant procession of employees in and out of the doors until the belief has become current among the regulars that they were operating an opposition to the place downstairs where they charge ten cents a glass for very ordinary beer, but the manager explained that it was a storage room as well as screen box, and those who were willing to take a chance on a blind tiger on the proposition that it could be no worse than downstairs were disappointed.

Haywood Brothers and Wakefield and The American Seating Company have the only displays of chairs. The American Seating Company has a fine showing of seats from the cheapest to the best. They are built on comfortable lines and the display is intelligently arranged.

The Mirror Screen Company contents itself with its reputation and several samples of screens. Wednesday they got a hustle on and built up the display with signs, but the regulars all know the screen and need only to see just what it looks like close to.

The Famous Players' exhibit was rendered complete on Wednesday by the appearance of B. P. Schulberg. The B used to stand for Benny, but now it stands for Benedict, as we can prove by a whole stack of postal cards showing Niagara Falls from every conceivable angle save the middle of the river. A sign announces that they will make three releases a month in the fall and some fine frames display Mrs. Langtry in "His Neighbor's Wife," Mrs. Fiske in "Tess, of the D'Ubervilles," Miss Pickford in "A Good Little Devil," and, of course, their past successes, "Queen Elizabeth" and "The Prisoner of Zenda." The booklet is one of the best souvenirs of the exhibition.

EXHIBITORS REGISTERED AT M. P. WORLD BOOTH.

D. M. Naughton and Mrs., Manheim, Pa.; J. F. Fairman, Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly, Brooklyn, N. Y.; S. L. Rotenberry, Herrin, Ill.; H. F. Jackson, Springfield, Mass.; Jas. Cochrane, Vice-Pres., M. P. E. of Am. Mil. Local, Milwaukee, Wis.; D. M. Sachter, Sheffield, Pa.; W. L. Younger, Durham, N. C.; W. L. Joy, West Toronto, Ontario, Can.; D. P. Wine, Harrisonburg, Va.; B. D. Eagan, Ronceverte, W. Va.; M. E. Commerford, Scranton, Pa.; Omer F. Dowd, Chicago, Ill.; Chas. H. Pyatt, Elmhurst, Long Islang, N. Y.; I. Picker, Bronx, N. Y. City; Chas. O. Brown, Middlesboro, Ky.; Mr. Bell, Boston, Mass.; H. F. Jackson, Springfield, Mass.; B. R. Tolmas, Utility Folder Co., N. Y. City; W. J. Hanley, Kinemacolor Co., N. Y. City; John Cooper, Sterling Economizer Co., Warren, Ohio; Wm. H. Bishop, Everett, Mass.; S. A. Lambert, Fayetteville, N. C.; William Fox, on board of the Mona-Belle; Jacob W. Loeb, Riverside, L. I.; Howard Milchrest, N. Y. City; Francis Wald, N. Y. City; Willard Howe, Brookland, D. C.; B. D. Deagen, Ronceverte, W. Va.; Joseph Abel Washington, D. C.; Mr. Nixon, Bausch and Lomb Optical Co., Rochester, N. Y.; W. T. Koch, Nat'l Vice-Pres. Ga. M. P. Exhibitors' League, Augusta, Ga.; Jas. Seiden, Royal Feature Film Co., N. Y. City; Jeff Dolan, Sedeg Feature Film Co., N. Y. City; Alvin B. Giles, Advance Motion Picture Co., Chicago, Ill.; Ben Zerr, Reading, Pa.; G. C. Miller, Lyric, Plymouth, Pa.; F. E. Simmons, Cleveland, O.; J. P. Heim, "Luna" Danville, Pa.; Chas. C. Spinks, "Star A Shop," Chicago, Ill.; B. C. Hoyng, West Union, W. Va.; Jas. C. Rathbone, Exeter Opera House, Exeter, N. H.; Harold C. Jenkins, Exeter Opera House, Exeter, N. H.; K. W. Linn, Eclectic Film Co., N. Y. City; J. W. Brown, Cambridge, Ind.; H. G. Catton and wife, Fort Worth, Texas; R. M. Brown, Shelbyville, Ky.; W. A. Cory, Nat'l Vice-Pres., and Mrs. Cory, San Francisco, Cal.; W. L. Shelton and wife, Kansas City, Mo.; Fred J. Maher, New Haven, Ct.; Louis Benesck, Excelsior Theater, Baltimore, Md.; H. R. Ashbrook, Exhibitors' Feature Film Corporation, Toledo, O.; Wm. B. Short, N. Y.; Harry F. Grelle, Pittsburgh, Pa.; John Winslow, New York; R. H. Karnes, Huntington, W. Va.; W. J. Miller and Son, Glens Falls, N. Y.; Mrs. William Fort, Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. A. Anderson, Baltimore, Md.; Jim B. Wilson, Sherman, Texas; S. Kresh, N. Y. City; A. P. Tugwell, Los Angeles, Cal.; Bender and Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.; C. Fred. Ruhlman, Trenton, N. J.; Abr. Seligman, Lafayette Theater, New Orleans, La.; Frank White, Bronx, N. Y. City; H. H. Durgin, The Spa, Pittsfield, Mass.; A. J. Paul, Mgr., Royal Theater, Galion, O.; E. F. McAttee, Family Theater, Mahanoy City, Pa.; Geo. Millet, Whitehall, N. Y.; L. J. Schulman, Buffalo, N. Y.; J. P. Schulman, Brooklyn, N. Y.; M. W. Jordan, Laninsburg, N. C.; Fred B. Howe, Ithaca, N. Y.; Chas. L. Harner, Ithaca, N. Y.; F. J. Merklein, Brooklyn, N. Y.; John M. Fitzgerald, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Williamson Buckman, Trenton, N. J.; Chas. Weigel, Cincinnati, O.; T. M. Eastwood, Washington, D. C.; Chas. A. Nasse, Orpheum Theater, Toledo, O.; E. O. Griffith, Tampa, Florida; T. E. Yeum, Du Quoin, Ill.; W. Rayner, Dreamland Theater, Dayton, O.; S. H. Mendenhall, Pastime Theater, Greenville, O.; Geo. H. Moore, Mgr. Orpheum Theater, Chicago, Ill.; I. Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.; Lem S. Miller, Local No. 2, Cincinnati, O.; A. P. Tugwell, Rose Theater, Los Angeles, Cal.; Maurice Davis, Washington, D. C.; A. C. Vale, Dennison, O.; J. P. Morgan, Princess Theater; Washington, D. C.; Wm. R. Storm, Lancaster, Pa.; D. R. Sablasky, Pickwick Theater, Wilmington, Del.; Automatic Coin Cashier Co., Hamilton, O.; Daniel Donahue, L. I. C.; Meredith F. Staub, Frederick, Md.; Wray B. Physioc, Ramo Films, N. Y. City; C. Fisher, Newark, N. J.; J. Henkel Henry, Empire Theater, Winchester, Va.; Jeff Dolan, Sedeg F. F. Co., N. Y. City; L. A. H. Laidman, N. Y. City; J. S. Phillips, Odeon Theater, Fort Worth, Texas; W. H. Wood, Pastime Theater, State College, Pa.; E. R. Graff, Plaza, St. Augustine, Fla.; Dr. W. Widor, Ronfort, Rudolph Wurlitzer, Harry A. Flynn, N. Y. City; A. A. Beecroft, Photo Machine Co., N. Y. City; G. H. Callahan, American Theater, Curtain & Supply Co., N. Y. City; E. E. Oliver, Oliver Moving Picture Supply Co., Cleveland, O.; L. A. Wagner, Standard Amus. Co., Kansas City, Mo.; A. Bendsler, Waltham Theater, Waltham, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Masters, Elite and Columbia Theaters, Bowling Green, Ky.; John Bunny, Vitagraph Co., N. Y. City; Jack W. Leyland, St. Johnsville, N. Y.; O. L. Jarodski, Colonial Theater, Danville, Ill.; Robert C. Whitten, Sergeant-at-Arms, N. Y. State League; Walter J. Brackin and wife, "The Grand," Bainbridge, Ga.; Chas. Cecil Smith, Rep. "The Thespian," Kansas City, Mo.; Frank Himmellberg, N. Y. City; Chas. E. Bowles, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. Mortimer, Mortimer Film Cleaner, Portland, Me.; H. Spencer, N. Y. City; Wray B. Physioc, N. Y. City; M. E. Comerford, Scranton, Pa.; John Nelson, Sudbury, Ontario, Can.; Mussgnug, N. Y. City; F. L. Duntton, N. Y. City; Abram Lott, Brooklyn, N. Y.; G. D. Briggs, Jr., New England Unv. Exc., Springfield, Mass.; Marshall P. Wilder, N. Y. City; Delbert E. Seymour, The Peerlees, Schaghticoke, N. Y.; Edmund Reid, Palace Theater, Millergeville, Ga.; W. L. Joy, Wonderland Theater; Henry Bishop, Hoboken, N. J.; I. H. Gorley, Uniontown, Pa.; F. C. Monaghan, Uniontown, Pa.; O. M. McClosky, Uniontown, Pa.; J. E. Robin, Precision Machine Co., N. Y. City; F. W. Peters, Houston, Texas; Edward A. Jeffries, Pennsylvania State Branch No. 3; J. A. Maddox, Columbus, O.; Thos. Furniss, National Vice-President, Duluth, Minn.; Eric Morrison, American Moving Picture Machine Co., N. Y. City; Chas. Segall, Philadelphia, Pa.; John F. Miller, Buffalo Sunday Times, Buffalo, N. Y.; G. D. Briggs, Jr., New England Universal Film Exc., Springfield, Mass.; Abram Lott, Motion Picture Story Magazine, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Pop Rock was early on the job Monday, but Pop Lubin did not show up. A convention without the two Pops is no convention at all and only half a convention with Pop Rock. The word "Pop" has no allusion to paternal dignities, but refers to the sound made by the extraction of a champagne cork.

Jeanette A. Cohen, Chairwoman.

Irene C. Buggie.

Dorothy Kingdon.

Mrs. Robert Lee Macnabb, Vice-Chairwoman.

MEMBERS OF THE NEW YORK LADIES' RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

First Day's Entertainment Feature.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company's Trip Across the Hudson to the Eclair Studio a Big Success.

MONDAY, July 7, was Universal Day with the delegates to the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and universally it was voted a grand success. The weather man, to square things with the poor train-tired delegates from the West, who had traveled through broiling heat, provided his best brand of summer resort weather. It was a perfect day for an outing and Joe Brandt conducted a party of four hundred delegates, their wives, families and friends, to the Eclair studio at Fort Lee, New Jersey. The party left Grand Central Palace at two o'clock in eleven special double-decked busses, besides a number of touring cars. The route was north to 50th street and then on Broadway to 42d street, to the ferry. While passing the Mecca Building, 1600 Broadway, some one, looking up, caught sight of Carl Laemmle's smiling face at one of the windows. He shouted a greeting and, at once, was a waving of the little Universal Film flags with which everyone had been supplied.

The heavily loaded busses after crossing the Hudson began the climb to the top of the bluff at Weehawken. Not a few delegates owned to feeling a bit shaky inside. The first busses took the slope easily; but, toward the end of the long climb, on account of crowding, there was some seeming hesitation; a buss would stop and give back a bit till the brake held. Those who had nerves began to imagine an immediate return, backwards and not safely. Every buss negotiated every obstacle in perfect order. The last one, on one of the small rises, well up on the top of the ridge and well toward the middle of the journey, did balk a bit; but after several attempts managed to crawl over.

Just before reaching the Eclair Studio, the road is but a country lane through an oak forest, with branches hanging low over the road. It was, "everybody duck" and "here comes a low branch, look out." Perhaps those on the front top seats would get safely by, and again perhaps they would have to lift the branch up so that it would come down on the middle seats like a whip, but at all times these incidents were but a cause of laughter and added to the fun and enjoyment too.

It was a jolly, good-natured crowd that reached the Eclair Studio. Here Joe Brandt and Eclair Gunning had their hands full trying to get everybody's picture and then to show off the fine plant. The great attraction was a scene which was being taken with pretty Barbara Tennant in the chief role. There were other scenes also being filmed and these the crowd watched with rapt attention.

On the way home, Joe Brandt had the busses up in the Palisade Amusement Park and saw to it that everyone had a long strip of tickets to every amusement that the big pleasure park offered, including some kind of a dinner. Here the scribe left them. A good time was beginning; but the "pape" had to go to press.

ALL ABOARD WITH THE EDISON COMPANY.

Mr. John Hardin, an affable gentleman, wearing a gray suit of clothes and a very pleasant smile, was a conspicuous figure in front of Grand Central Palace all day Tuesday. Mr. Hardin passed out little blue tickets to some six or seven hundreds of convention delegates, entitling them to a sight seeing trip about the city as guests of the Thomas A. Edison Company.

It is not known whether Mr. Edison invented the joy ride among his other accomplishments for the good of humanity, but everybody who took that day's ride agreed that it was very pleasant and profitable in every way.

The sight seeing trip extended from Grand Central Palace, up Fifth Avenue, past the homes of New York millionaires, each of which was pointed out to the visitors by a special announcer in the cars. A special stop was made at Grant's tomb, and the return trip was made via Riverside Drive and Broadway.

ROYAL WELCOME TO CINCINNATI VISITORS.

A contingent of visiting exhibitors numbering about seventy, chiefly from Cincinnati, arrived from Albany, N. Y., on an Albany Day Line steamer, at the foot of West 42nd Street, Monday, July 7, at 5.30 p.m. Two bands and auto-omnibuses were in waiting for the party, while quite a showing of Ohioans and members of the entertainment committee were on hand to welcome them. After registering at Mrs. W. Brandt.

Ruth Albew.

Mrs. F. Marion Brandon.

Agnes Cameron.

Miss Henrietta Bauernfreund.

Mrs. L. F. Blumenthal.

Miss H. Barthel.

Mrs. Rosa Markowitz.

MEMBERS OF THE NEW YORK LADIES' RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

the Imperial Hotel, the visitors were taken out to Palisades Park in auto-omnibuses by the Universal Company, in charge of the indefatigable Joe Brandt. President Neff and Samuel Trigger were among those who received the visitors at the dock. In Cleveland the party was entertained royally by representatives of the Wurlitzer Company. Another delegation from Ohio arrived by train Tuesday morning.

Among the arrivals were: Louise C. Schmitz, Cleveland, O.; W. Rayner, Dayton, O.; C. L. Passmore, Dayton, O.; G. W. Hill, Cincinnati, O.; J. A. Madder, Columbus, O.; W. T. Stilwell, Dayton, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Otto Luedeking, Cincinnati, O.; F. L. Emmert and wife, Cincinnati, O.; Edward Kohl, Cleveland, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Humbach, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Slim, Cleveland; J. Maddox, Cleveland; W. C. Kunzman, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Trosk, Cincinnati; J. M. Rhodes, Indianapolis; A. C. Zaring, Indianapolis; C. Ferguson, Indianapolis; C. Lipps, Alexandria, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Bott, Centre, O.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Teuhundfeld, Centre; H. G. Nolan, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Scholtmeller, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Weigel, Cincinnati; H. Heimlidinger and Carl Mechlenburg, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Popp, Cincinnati.

PLAYERS' RECEPTIONS.

Popular Members of the Various Producing Companies Hold Receptions—Vitagraph Co. Makes Greatest Showing.

One of the interesting features of the exposition was the nightly receptions held by players from the several studios in and near New York. Each company was allotted a night, and the booths were the center of all the youth and beauty that could be assembled. On these occasions, souvenirs were distributed to the crowds and the more curious were favored with introductions to the players. John Bunny, of the Vitagraph Company, was kept busy writing his name for the autograph collectors whenever he poked his head into the exposition hall.

They were standing from three to thirty deep in front of the General Film Booth Tuesday evening, in contrast to the night before when Gus Pixley was the sole Biograph visitor. It was Kalem night and all of the Eastern Kalems were there with the exception of Miss Alice Joyce, who was too ill to be present. Of course Frank Marion and Samuel Long were there and William Wright. Of the players there were present Misses Helen Lindroth, Miriam Cooper, Marguerite Courtot, Ethel Phillips, Alice Hollister, and Anna Nilsson, Mrs. Lawrence, Adelaide Lawrence, the clever little child player; Hal Clements, Kenean Buel, Robert Vignola, Jack Taylor, Guy Coombs, Henry Hallam, Storm V. Boyd and Harry Millard. The photoplay department was represented by Phil Lang and Harry O. Hoyt. The Kalemites came early and stayed late, and if they miss their audience when they play to the camera, there was no lack of audience in front of the booth all the evening.

While all the companies made creditable showings on their respective nights, the Vitagraph Company's players carried off the palm. Fully one hundred and fifty of that company's players were in the hall on Wednesday evening. It seemed as though all the beauty there was in picturedom had been assembled for the occasion. "Pop" Rock was there to chaperone his children, assisted by Sam Spedon, the Vitagraph publicity man. Many handsome souvenirs of the evening were distributed, and everybody seemed to have a good time.

Film Fellows Foregather

THREESCORE film publicity men were the guests, on Wednesday evening, of the staff of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD at a dinner at the Taverne Louis. Old friendships were renewed, and many new ones were formed. Jim Hoff picked out the speakers, and Epes Sargent made it a point to start something in case any of the orators became serious. Sargent has been making a close study of the sound-effect cabinets at the exposition during the week; the result was an improvised noise factory, the chief ingredients of which seemed to be broken glass and tin pans. Several things happened to make the diners sit up and take notice, things as unexpected as they were unannounced. Chief of these was the highly successful effort of Joe Farnham, aided by a sufficient number of co-conspirators, to get the goat of the Goat Man As the reviewers say, it was a strong scene; there were several tense situations; not the least of these was when a man, to all intents and appearances a policeman from the street, entered and unceremoniously hustled the big disturber from the room. There were many sighs of genuine relief when Joe, a few moments late, joined the gathering, bowing and smiling. He was greeted with enthusiastic applause. It was real drama.

There was some informal speaking. Stan. Twist, from Seligville, started off, as he had to start off to get back on the job at the exposition. John Wylie, business manager of the WORLD, said that one of the objects of the gathering was to furnish a little recreation to the publicity men from the hard work of the convention. On behalf of the family of the late Mr. Chalmers, the founder of the World, the speaker expressed appreciation for the loyalty of the support of those gathered about the tables and for the support of those they represented. He also testified to the importance of the work of the publicity men in the development and uplifting of the moving picture business. Ed Mock, of Motography, tried to talk, but things happened. What he said may not be long remembered, but no man present will ever forget the fact that he spoke. Joe Farnham returned just as Mock finished his interrupted speech. When he recovered his breath Joe expressed his gratification at his return to the ranks of the newspaper fellows. W. Stephen Bush extended greetings to the men who make public the virtues of pictures. He declined to add to the punishment which he feared might be meted out to the diners by other members of the staff, "no matter how richly you may have deserved this. You are our guests; justice sheathes her sword," he concluded. "I can only repeat our hope that this little gathering will stay as a pleasant recollection in the minds of all who have done us the honor to assemble here tonight."

Hugh D'Arcy recited "The Face on the Floor." Harry Raver related some experiences he had encountered in the show business. His mention of his association with James McQuade in this connection and his failure to complete the story made it necessary for McQuade to take up the yarn where Harry quit. It had been evident for several minutes that McQuade was awaiting with ill-concealed impatience a chance to be heard. There was much laughter when the Chicago correspondent dictated the final chapter. A. J. McKinney was called on as a representative of the war correspondents. This reference to the "late unpleasantness" in the Universal camp was greeted with laughter. Mr. McKinney expressed his pleasure for an opportunity of making so many pleasant acquaintances. William Wright ("Bill Kalem") was in a reminiscent mood—that is, when he was not being interrupted by the jokesmiths—and told many incidents of earlier days in film making. He spoke of the valuable services of the trade papers to the men who made and exhibited films.

Other speakers were John F. Miller, of the Buffalo Times; "Pop" Hoadley, Calder Johnstone, R. R. Nehls, of Chicago, and Benny Schulberg. The latter, just before the occasion was brought to a close, was joined by his bride of a few weeks. She was given a hearty greeting.

The last speaker was James P. Chalmers, the father of the founder of the World. Mr. Chalmers expressed his appreciation for the presence of the publicity men.

THE PATHE EXCURSION.

One of the most enjoyable features of the program of entertainment was the excursion up the Hudson River given on Wednesday by Pathe Freres. The palatial Hudson River boat, Adirondack, was chartered for the occasion and left pier 32, North River, at 10:45, Wednesday morning, with more than a thousand visitors on board. The party was a happy one and enjoyed every moment of the trip. A most elaborate luncheon was served. There was a great abundance of delicious viands tastefully arranged and daintily served.

A band of music enlivened the occasion and gave the young folks a chance to dance to their heart's content. The boat went to Newburgh before turning for the return trip and the party was landed in New York about 7 o'clock.

Motion pictures for Pathe's Weekly were taken on board the steamer, much to the delight of everyone who got in it—which was nearly all hands.

Great praise was expressed by the visitors because of the perfect arrangements for their comfort and the attention shown them by the Pathe management during the trip.

KALEM ENTERTAINS IMMENSE THRONG.

Cliffside Studios, Bright with Bunting and Chinese Lanterns, Gives Picnic to Eight Hundred Amateur Players.

TUESDAY afternoon was Kalem Day at the big convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and the Kalem Company entertained eight hundred delegates and their friends on the lawns of the Cliffside Studio, at Weehawken, N. J. The path leading in from the entrance to the outside studio was decorated with red, white and blue bunting and with Chinese lanterns, whose bright colors fitted in most appropriately. The spirit of the whole gathering taking its cue from the warm-hearted hospitality of the hosts was like the sunshine that fell around them, and it was a day when the sunlight was as welcome as the shade under the big trees.

From the start gaiety and smiles were the order of the day, though every picnic has its little mishaps and this was no exception. The guests were met at the Forty-second Street ferry by William Wright and a corps of able assistants and were conducted across the Hudson, where special cars carried them speedily to the grounds. They were all expecting a good time and one heard several rousing cheers for "Bill Kalem" on the way out. At the entrance Mr. Long and other officers of the company welcomed them and made them to feel at home. In a brisk way, almost eagerly, the chairs were taken up close around the platform of the open-air studio and this filled the place with pleasant animation. Everybody felt at home, everybody did just what he or she wanted to, which shows that the Kalem people are as good in hospitality as in making entertaining pictures. But this is not astonishing. The two go together; the same spirit is shown in both.

When the majority was seated, Mr. Marion brought the leading players of the Kalem stock company up on the low platform and introduced them, and they circled about, shaking hands and making new friends of many who long had admired them from afar. Miss Neilson, Irene Boyle, Guy Coombs, the two little Hollisters and their charming mother, and others. Then there was music from a stringed orchestra while a bounteous and very good luncheon was opened. Some, it must be confessed, were a bit too eager to get to the tables and, for this, others had to wait; but eventually everyone was well served with refreshments, liquid and otherwise, and all who smoked had a good cigar.

Director R. G. Vignola's turn came next. He is making a big political picture and here was just the crowd that he needed. It was just the crowd that wanted to be in a moving picture, that thought it could act, that had scolded at players who stared at the camera. There was no lack of enthusiasm, or cheers at the political meeting that he organized; but, at first, there was a marked tendency to watch the camera rather than the young mayor who, in the story, was running on the reformed ticket. There were several "retakes" before it was just right and then it seemed as though the crowd had begun to think it really was at a political meeting and an enthusiastic one. The cameraman was watching them and smiling as he ground the scenes into his machine; but just in the middle of it, Alice Joyce came and the director lost his bearings. Good natured but hoarse, he got a megaphone and shouted, "Hey, you actors, come back and finish this scene; we want to get our mayor elected."

Shortly after this came the first mishap. Someone was heard calling from the platform for a doctor to attend a delegate who had fainted. The unfortunate man was A. Bauernfreund, treasurer of the New York City Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. Mr. Bauernfreund has been working very hard for the Exposition and is not in the best of health. He is a man past middle age and the sunlight and the excitement brought on an attack of temporary heart failure. There was no doctor among those present, but a call was sent for one at once and Ephraim Hellstern, M. D. of Hudson Heights, N. J., responded. In the meantime, James F. Fairman, of Kinemagraph Weekly, an ex-hospital orderly of the United States Army, gave first aid treatment. Dr. Hellstern brought Mr. Bauernfreund around in a few minutes and he was able to remain seated in the shade till the party returned home.

Another announcement was made that pickpockets were at work in the crowd. Secretary Bauernfreund, early in the afternoon before he became sick, had found that he had lost a purse with $75 and a check of $50. And later another also found that his pocket also had been picked. The announcement was by way of warning to the rest to watch their valuables. The friends of Secretary Bauernfreund, led by George P. Plain, of the Maryland State League, took up a collection to replace his loss and it netted $70.

There were other songs and more music. The beer and ginger pop and sandwiches were still on tap under the trees. The company walked about, made friends, laughed and cracked jokes. At about four o'clock, the first signs of homeward turning were noticeable and a little later the special cars were carrying a happy and well satisfied company of enthusiastic Kalemites back to the Metropolis. The Kalem Company had made good again and Mr. Wright has a right to know that his entertainment was a most decided success.

LADIES' ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE.

One of the Potent Elements in the Plan of Arrangements for the Convention and Exposition.

It was a happy thought of some one to enlist the services of the ladies to further the general plan of entertainment of visitors to the third annual convention and first exposition. It is believed that the idea originated with Chairman Hilkemeier of the Entertainment Committee and he worked it out well. The ladies rose to the occasion and have been doing their level best to see that everybody had a good time. The members of this committee are: Miss Jeanette Cohen, chairwoman; Mrs. Robert Lee Macnabb, vice-chairwoman; Miss Jeanette Ehrenberg, Mrs. L. F. Blumenthal, Miss Edith Berry, Miss Rena Doliva, Miss Margaret Norvell, Mrs. R. Markowitz, Mrs. William Brandt, Mrs. R. Sanders, Miss Dorothy Kingdon, Mrs. J. E. Robin, Miss Ruth Allen, Miss Ermel, Miss Marion Brandon, Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb, Miss Forster, Miss Helen Barthell, Miss Henrietta Baurenfreund, Miss I. Buggie, Miss Adeline Beldnar, Miss May Weston, Miss Sydelle Fish, Mrs. R. Watris, Mrs. I. Leatherberry, Mrs. Agnes Cameron, and Mrs. A. A. Corn.

KALEM MULTIPLE REEL RELEASES WEEKLY.

Beginning Wednesday, August 6th, the Kalem Company will release a multiple-reel headliner every week to take the place of the regular Wednesday one-reel issue. This innovation will be watched with great interest as there is a constantly growing demand by exhibitors for multiple-reel plays and Kalem intends to meet this requirement. Several new companies have been organized and a number of Kalem's most noted producers in different parts of the country will give their exclusive attention to multiple-reel subjects. It is understood that Kalem will continue to release an occasional special, but the new policy will enable the exhibitor to secure an unusual feature of extra length in the regular service.

"Shipwrecked," a spectacular drama in two parts, which Kalem releases on Wednesday, August 6th, is a striking example of the class of productions which this company will select for multiple reels. Three Kalem companies combined to produce this play on the tropical coast of Southern Florida. Some startling effects are presented. There are many vivid scenes of sea life which seem to defy the limitations of the motion picture camera and a large cast of Kalem stars appear in the leading roles. Special one, three and six-sheet lithographs in four colors will be provided for all of Kalem's Wednesday features.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"A VIRGINIA FEUD."

A Powerful Kalem Drama With Gripping Situations, Using the Blue Ridge Mountains as a Background.

The Kalem Company recently sent a special organization of artists into the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia to secure correct atmosphere for a powerful drama entitled "A Virginia Feud." The production is said to be a notable one, not only through a thrilling dramatic story, but because superb photography has lost none of the beauties of the magnificent scenery.

Scene from "A Virginia Feud" (Kalem).

The play, which is decidedly novel in theme, deals with a deadly feud which for many years has existed between the McDonalds and the Mosbys. A strange fate brings Frank Mosby and Rose McDonald together and at the betrothal a truce is declared. But the rugged mountaineers find it no easy matter to forget the hatred which past years have developed. The bride's father and the groom's brother are unforgiving and a terrible catastrophe is narrowly averted on the wedding day.

Henry Hallam and James B. Ross as the two fathers bring a powerful interpretation to their roles. James Vincent appears as Frank Mosby and Alice Hollister as Rose McDonald. The production was directed by Robert Vignola and a large cast of Kalem stars lend admirable support to the central characters.

"A Virginia Feud" is scheduled for release on Saturday, August 2nd. Special one, three and six-sheet lithographs in four colors, which depict sensational scenes in the drama, have been provided.

"THE JOLLY RECRUITS" (Great Northern).

This jolly story of life in a militia camp is easily one of the funniest that has been turned out by the Great Northern Company. It is a story of simplicity and inasmuch as the three principal, rotund and jolly comedians of the company are pressed into service, it may be taken for granted that the offering is one out of the ordinary. The entire plot hinges about the reluctance of Jack to enter into the spirit of a militiaman. He is sluggish and refuses to enter into the military spirit, but after his companions, Chris and Fred, take him in hand they succeed in making him "somewhat of a soldier." By dint of the use of white mice, little "property snakes" and other nerve racking contrivances, Jack is made to understand that a soldier's life is not one of all pleasure. He is not permitted to enjoy himself as he had expected and the "camping" game is not all that it is purported to be by this valiant son of the soil.

He is chased from pillar to post and made to undergo all sorts of trials and tribulations, and in the end Chris and Fred come to the conclusion that they have made a soldier out of him. The comedy is splendidly staged and acted and it is sure to prove a laugh provoker to those who know what the Great Northern releases mean in the way of quality.

"HER ROSARY" (Reliance).

This beautiful picture is one of the best efforts of Reliance. Staged with fine dissolve effects, it will be remembered by those who see it for a long time. The beautiful words of the well-known song, "The Rosary," are introduced through the picture, which is the story of a nun who, kneeling in her cell, sees again the days when she was young and happy. She had a lover then and he gave her a string of rosary beads. Leaning over the bridge, the beads fell from her neck into the water. She insisted that he dive for them, but he could not swim and so refused. Seeing her heart set upon it, he dove off the bridge, but he never came back.

Scene from "Her Rosary" (Reliance).

The tide carried his body down the stream and there the girl found him, and in his cold hand the tightly clasped rosary. Later, she could not bear to leave the cemetery and one day the Mother Superior came and took her out of the world into the cold, gray convent. And each night she says her prayers on the rosary that cost the life of the man she loved, learning at last to "kiss the cross." Irene Howley does some beautiful work as the nun, Irving Cummings plays the boy, and the picture was directed by Oscar C. Apfel with even more than his usual ability and skill.

"WITH HONOR AT STAKE."

A Two-Reel Gaumont.

A two-reel release of more than ordinary interest, containing an abundance of novel situations.

Mrs. D'Arcy W. Martin's adoring husband learns that his wife is suffering from heart trouble and the doctor advises that she avoid all excitement. At the Horton's reception in Paris, Mrs. Martin unexpectedly meets George Molyneaux, a sweetheart of youthful days, for whom she yet retains a lingering affection. Molyneaux has a packet of Mrs. Martin's early love-letters, and she asks him to return them. He writes her a note expressing his willingness to hand them back, but asks her to come in person to receive them. Mrs. Martin, knowing his honorable nature, agrees and we see her in George's house. He goes to fetch the letters, but hearing a cry of pain, rushes back to her, to find Mrs. Martin prostrate. He thinks Madeline is dead, and his only thought is now to find some means whereby the honor of the woman he loves can be sustained. The hours drag on, Molyneaux's only recourse is to lovingly and tenderly inter the body in a leafy sepulchre in the nearby woods.

Scene from "With Honor at Stake" (Gaumont).

Meanwhile Mrs. Martin's husband has become alarmed at her long absence, and when he hears from the police commissioner that his wife's handbag has been discovered on the person of a thief, he jumps to the worst conclusion, and accuses the alleged thief of killing his wife for purposes of robbery. When Molyneaux gets back to the house, he is overjoyed to find the woman whom he thought dead has returned to life, and had suffered only a sudden heart attack. Mrs. Martin examines her watch and finding how late the hour is, hurries off home to her distracted husband and baby. Mr. Martin is in great delight to see his wife alive and well, and promptly telephones for the release of the suspect, while Mrs. Martin allays all suspicion by informing her husband that while taking a walk in the woods she was suddenly seized with a heart attack, which excuse amply accounts for her long absence.

GETTYSBURG GOING STRONG.

The Battle of Gettysburg has just closed a house packing engagement at Cohan and Harris' Grand Opera House, New York and is at present playing to enthusiastic and record breaking audiences in the larger cities of the United States.

* * *

The Empire brand consisting of two and three reel Naval and Puritan pictures, will be released by the N. Y. Motion Picture Corporation beginning Sept. 1, 1913. Famous for their spectacular and massive productions of the Kay-Bee and Broncho films, Kessel & Baumann, owners of the N. Y. Motion Picture Corporation, promise that this new brand will eclipse all their former efforts in the feature line.

* * *

"Heart Throbs," a two reel Broncho Feature, to be released Wednesday, July 9th, brings Hazel Buckham to the front as an actress of sincerity and emotion. She portrays the winsome, light-hearted girl of the South, and later the broken-hearted and bereaved widow and mother with rare tenderness and pathos and her acting surely shows the touch of the true artist. Incidentally this film is one of the prettiest and most touching turned out by Mr. Ince and the scenic backgrounds are a joy to look upon.

* * *

Richard Spencer, scenario editor of the N. Y. Motion Picture Corporation and a well-liked gentleman, both East and West, will be in New York the latter part of July on a brief vacation from the Coast. He is one of the best informed editors of the silent drama and has to his credit many of the feature successes of the past year.

"A TROMBONE MARATHON" (Gaumont).

Aesop's fable of the frog who tried to swell himself to the dimensions of a bull is about the only parallel which comes to mind when viewing the efforts of Max, solo trombonist at the Grand Theater. Max has seen tidings of a strange bequest: $25,000 is awaiting the musician who can play "The Maiden's Prayer" for twenty-four hours without stopping, and Max resolves to win that bequest or die in the attempt. Only two more days and the time limit expires; Kiki, his sweetheart, urges him on to win the prize, as otherwise her obdurate guardian will not entertain his suit for Kiki's hand. "Win, or burst," and he goes to it with a will and vim. What twenty-four hours of continuous tromboning can produce can be much better seen than described in language. Max, with protruding eyes and distended cheeks makes a funny sight indeed; more than once he is literally at the last gasp, but love supports him until twenty-three hours and fifty-nine minutes have clapsed—at which point the neighbors rush in with murderous intentions. The lawyer waked from the stupor which the soloist's unending blast has brought about, and when it is known that Max, now limply hanging about his fiancee's neck, has won the coveted $25,000, the applause is great.

Scene from "A Trombone Marathon" (Gaumont).

UNIVERSAL ACTORS ENGAGED TO WED.

Joseph Edward Victor Fairfield Daveran Singleton, the big Australian, is one of the parties, and Miss Iva Shepard is the other to a charming romance that has unfolded through their joint work in a series of Universal pictures. The blushing Joseph recently announced his forthcoming marriage to Miss Shepard and the event is expected to occur in the near future.

JUDGE RIZOR AS PHOTOPLAY STAR.

Judge E. A. Rizor will portray the trial judge in Wm. Hamilton Osborne's dramatization of the serial story of "The Scapegoat," a two reel "Flying A" subject to be released July 14.

THE VERY BEST VAUDEVILLE SERVICE
W. S. CLEVELAND, Mgr.
Fidelity Booking Offices
THEATRES, PARKS, FAIRS, CLUBS, CABARETS
Knickerbocker Theatre Building 1402 Broadway, N. Y. C.

Talking Pictures

THE TALKAPHONE

We can book you a 3 Hour Talking Picture Show at a Reasonable Rental or Sharing Terms.

No 250 feet of Film, but a continuous bill of Talking Pictures only.

Our subjects consist of the following stars and productions which other Concerns cannot duplicate for years to come.

Eva Tanguay
Alice Lloyd
Trixie Friganza
Stella Mayhew
Clarice Vance
Blanche Ring
The Deceased Mabel Hite and Mike Donlin
Mlle. Dazie
Raymond Hitchcock
Vesta Victoria
Bessie Wynn
Quo Vadis in One Act
Pinafore in One Act
Amateur Night
Abraham Lincoln Sketch
Trial of Robt. Emmett
Chimes of Normandy in Three Acts
Mikado in Two Acts
And Eight Hundred Other Subjects

Downtown Amusement Co.
No. 4 St. Marks Place, New York City

ERNEMANN A.G. DRESDEN

CAMERAS
FILM
TRIPOD

Erneman Kino A and B—Empire
Williamson—All Models
Call and see new model not yet catalogued
Austin Edwards Film—Positive and Negative

Write today for circular of Cameras

Photo Cines Co., 24 E. 13th St., New York

Richardson's Handbook

For Managers and Operators of Moving Picture Theatres.

The Best Book of the Kind
$2.50 per Copy
Postage Paid

Moving Picture World
17 Madison Avenue New York City

FRESE CINEMATOGRAPH

CAMERAS
and TRIPODS

have been viewed at the Exposition by scores of expert cameramen who have without exception given them the highest praise.

Write for descriptive circular

RICE & EINSTEIN
1932 Center Street Berkeley. Cal.
E. M. EINSTEIN
Temporary Address Hotel Woodstock, New York

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 14th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—A Gambler's Honor (Drama)
EDISON—A Pair of Foils (Comedy)	1000
KALEM—The Lost Diamonds (Drama)
KALEM—The Mermaid (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Apache Kind (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 32 (News)
SELIG—The Only Chance (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—O'Hara as a Guardian Angel (Com.-Dr.)	1000
VITAGRAPH—The Diamond Mystery (Special—2 parts Drama)	2000

TUESDAY, JULY 15th, 1913.

EDISON—In the Garden (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—Something Rotten in Havana (Comedy)
ESSANAY—When Ignorance is Bliss (Comedy)
LUBIN—His Better Self (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Denizens of the Deep (Zoology)
PATHEPLAY—Port of Marseilles, France (Scenic)
SELIG—The Tree and the Chaff (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—My Lady of Idleness (Comedy-Drama)	1000

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th, 1913.

EDISON—The Dream Fairy (Drama)	1025
ESSANAY—The Great Raymond (Novelty)	1000
KALEM—A Thief in the Night (Drama)	1000
KALEM—The Fight at Grizzly Gulch (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
PATHEPLAY—The Snowy Egret and Its Extermination (Zoology)
SELIG—Sweeney's Dream (Comedy)	1000
VITAGRAPH—The Master Painter (Drama)	1000

THURSDAY, JULY 17th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Sweat Box (Comedy)
BIOGRAPH—A Chinese Puzzle (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Heart of a Gambler (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—The Wiles of Cupid (Drama)	1000
MELIES—The Poisoned Darts (Drama)
MELIES—A Chinese Funeral (Topical)
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 33 (News)
PATHEPLAY—Easy Money (Comedy)
SELIG—Put to the Test (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—Hubby's Toothache (Comedy)	500
VITAGRAPH—Sandy and Shorty Work Together (Comedy)	500

FRIDAY, JULY 18th, 1913.

EDISON—To Abbeville Courthouse (Drama)	900
ESSANAY—Every Thief Leaves a Clue (Drama)	1000
KALEM—What the Doctor Ordered (Comedy)
KALEM—The Concrete Industry (Industry)
LUBIN—The Hidden Bank Roll (Comedy)	400
LUBIN—When Mary Married (Comedy)	600
PATHEPLAY—Jiu Jitsu (Sports)
PATHEPLAY—Beautiful Catalogne (Scenic)
PATHEPLAY—The Secret Formula (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
SELIG—Granny's Old Armchair (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Yellow Streak (Drama)	1000

SATURDAY, JULY 19th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—Doing the Round-up (Drama)
EDISON—On the Broad Stairway—Second of the Kate Kirby's Cases (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—The Two Ranchmen (Comedy-Drama)	1000
KALEM—The Smuggler (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—Jim's Reward (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—The Friendless Indian (Drama)
SELIG—The Ne'er to Return Road (Special 2 parts-Drama)	2000
VITAGRAPH—The Taming of Betty (Comedy)	1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 21st, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—Pa Says (Comedy)
BIOGRAPH—While the Count Goes Bathing (Comedy)
EDISON—A Tardy Recognition (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—Tapped Wires (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
KALEM—A Bolt From the Sky (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—An Actor's Strategy (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 34 (News)
SELIG—The Short-Stop's Double (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—The Only Way (Drama)	1000

TUESDAY, JULY 22nd, 1913.

EDISON—A Great Metropolitan Newspaper (Edu.)	960
ESSANAY—The Rose of Sharon (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—The Benefactor (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—In and Around Scutari After Its Capture (Scenic)
PATHEPLAY—In Weird Crimea (Scenic)
SELIG—The Senorita's Repentance (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—The Pickpocket (Comedy)	1000

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23rd, 1913.

EDISON—A Knife of Fire (Industry)	400
EDISON—At Midnight (Comedy)	600
ESSANAY—The Dance at Eagle Pass (Drama)	1000
KALEM—The Tenderfoot's Luck (Comedy)
KALEM—Historic Savannah, Georgia (Scenic)
LUBIN—Home, Sweet Home (Special—2 parts—Dr.)	2000
PATHEPLAY—A False Accusation (Drama)
SELIG—The Unseen Defense (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—An Error in Kidnapping (Comedy)	1000

THURSDAY, JULY 24th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Mirror (Drama)
ESSANAY—The Browns Study Astrology (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Building the Chattanooga Light and Power Dam (Engineering)
LUBIN—Coffee Industry in Jamaica (Industry)	400
LUBIN—Zeb, Zack and the Zulus (Comedy)	600
MELIES—Javanese Dances (Manners & Customs)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 35 (News)
PATHEPLAY—Opportunity and a Million Acres (Ind.)
PATHEPLAY—The Island of Tonga (Scenic)
SELIG—Two Artists and One Suit of Clothes (Comedy)
SELIG—In the Moro Land (Scenic)
VITAGRAPH—An Old Man's Love Story (Drama)	1000

FRIDAY, JULY 25th, 1913.

CINES—Honor Thy Father (Special—2 parts—Drama)	2000
EDISON—The Meadow Lark (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—Making Good (Comedy)	1000
KALEM—Baffled, Not Beaten (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—The Exile (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—Vipers at Home (Zoology)
PATHEPLAY—A Trip to the Grottos of Baume (Scen.)
SELIG—The Acid Test (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—The Tables Turned (Comedy)	850
VITAGRAPH—Scenes in Honolulu (Scenic)	150

SATURDAY, JULY 26th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Coming of Angelo (Drama)
EDISON—A Proposal from the Duke (Being the first story of "Who Will Marry Mary?"), (Drama)	1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the Schoolmam's Sweetheart (Drama)	1000
KALEM—The Moonshiner's Mistake (Drama)	1000
LUBIN—The Price Demanded (Drama)	1000
PATHEPLAY—The Mad Sculptor (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Spell (Drama)	1000
VITAGRAPH—A Prince of Evil (Special—2 parts—Dr.)	2000

Send Us Money Order or Draft for $2.00 and we will send you 12 large photographs (11 x 14) of Licensed, Mutual or Universal Stars postage prepaid, or 500 post-cards your own selection of over 250 different players, at least 100 of each player; or 24 stock 1 sheets, assorted; or 50 To-day's Program 1 sheets; or 15 3 sheet poster frames assorted; or 14 Licensed Photoplayer 1 sheets, postage prepaid; or 350 1 sheet strips, assorted.

EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO.
Arthur D. Jacobs, Pres.
30 Union Square, New York

DID YOU SEE US?

We were there with bells on

Could there be any more convincing argument than our display at the big show?

"You want what you want when you want it." Don't you?

Well, didn't our display of frames, photographs, posters, banners, etc., prove to you that "We have what you want when you want it"?

Our advertising matter is just as important to you as the films you run. It grabs the people and tells each one your message so that they don't forget it.

At any of these offices we'll look out for you

71 West 23rd Street, 440 Fourth Avenue, New York; 121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 1022 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; 7th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio; Equity Building, Detroit, Mich.; 218 Commercial Street, Boston, Mass.; 122 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; 737 Broadway, Albany, N. Y. Slide Dept., Bakewell Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

General Film Company, Inc., Poster Dept.

Formerly Photoplay Advertising and Specialty Co.

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co. Current Releases

SUNDAY, JULY 13th, 1913.

CRYSTAL—Pearl's Dilemma (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—Squaring Things With Wifey (Comedy)
ECLAIR—It Is Hard to Please Him (Comedy)
ECLAIR—The Catholic Mission (Educational)
REX—Through Strife (Drama)

MONDAY, JULY 14th, 1913.

IMP—A Possibility (Two parts-Comedy-Drama)
NESTOR—The Grit of the Gringo (Drama)
GEM—Little Buster (Comedy)

TUESDAY, JULY 15th, 1913.

101 BISON—The Picket Guard (Two parts-Drama)
CRYSTAL—In Death's Shadow (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th, 1913.

NESTOR—The Operator and the Superintendent (Dr.)
POWERS—Why Rags Left Home (Comedy-Drama)
ECLAIR—For the Man She Loved (Two parts-Drama)
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly No. 71 (News).

THURSDAY, JULY 17th, 1913.

IMP—Her Nerve (Drama)
REX—The Wrong Road (Drama)
FRONTIER—The Smallpox Scare at Gulch Hollow (Comedy)

FRIDAY, JULY 18th, 1913.

NESTOR—The Tale of a Hat (Comedy)
NESTOR—When His Courage Failed (Comedy)
POWERS—The Awakening (Drama)
VICTOR—Nihilist Vengeance (Two parts-Drama)

SATURDAY, JULY 19th, 1913.

IMP—Binks Ends the War (Comedy)
IMP—In Cartoonland With Hy. Mayer (Novelty)
101 BISON—When Sherman Marched to the Sea (Three parts-Drama)
FRONTIER—The Half-Breed Sheriff (Drama)

Advance Releases

SUNDAY, JULY 20th, 1913.

CRYSTAL—The Hallroom Girls (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—How Men Propose (Comedy)
ECLAIR—Through the Telescope (Comedy)
ECLAIR—Sacred Gazelles (Educational)
REX—His Weakness Conquered (Drama)

MONDAY, JULY 21st, 1913.

IMP—The Yogi (Drama)
NESTOR—The Ranger's Way (Drama)
GEM—The Life Savers (Comedy-Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 22nd, 1913.

101 BISON—The Lawbreakers (2 parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—The Broken Spell (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23rd, 1913.

NESTOR—Behind the Gun (Drama)
POWERS—Bobby's Magic Nickel (Comedy)
ECLAIR—The Greater Call (3 parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—The Animated Weekly No. 72 (News)

THURSDAY, JULY 24th, 1913.

IMP—The Last of the Madisons (Drama)
REX—The Fallen Angel (2 parts—Drama)
FRONTIER—The Frontier Twins' Heroism (Comedy)

FRIDAY, JULY 25th, 1913.

NESTOR—Their Luck Day (Comedy)
POWERS—The Actor (Drama)
VICTOR—Marooned (Drama)

SATURDAY, JULY 26th, 1913.

IMP—Baron Binks' Bride (Comedy)
IMP—Summer Caricatures by Hy. Mayer (Novelty)
GREAT NORTHERN—The Governor's Daughter (2 parts—Drama)
FRONTIER—The Toll of the Desert (Drama)

Mutual Film Corporation Current Releases

SUNDAY, JULY 13th, 1913.

MAJESTIC—Impulse (Drama)
THANHOUSER—A Crepe Bonnet (Comedy-Drama)

MONDAY, JULY 14th, 1913.

AMERICAN—Truth In the Wilderness (2 parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—Love and Rubbish (Comedy)
RELIANCE—The Fisherman's Fortune (Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 15th, 1913.

MAJESTIC—A Japanese Courtship (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—Tannhouser (3 parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th, 1913.

BRONCHO—Old Mammy's Secret Code (3 parts—Dr.)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 29 (News)
RAMO—A Dog-Gone Baron (Comedy)
RELIANCE—Her Rosary (Drama)

THURSDAY, JULY 17th, 1913.

AMERICAN—To Err Is Human (Drama) 1000
KEYSTONE—A Noise from the Deep (Comedy)
MUTUAL—(Title Not Reported)
PILOT—Granny (Drama)

FRIDAY, JULY 18th, 1913.

KAY-BEE—The Red Mask (2 parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—No release this date.

SATURDAY, July 19th, 1913.

AMERICAN—At the Half-Breed's Mercy (Drama)
MAJESTIC—His Way of Winning Her (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—Gold Creek Mining (Engineering)
RELIANCE—The Strange Way (Drama)

Advance Releases

SUNDAY, JULY 20th, 1913.

MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported)
THANHOUSER—Brethren of the Sacred Fish (Com.)

MONDAY, JULY 21st, 1913.

AMERICAN—Jealousy's Trail (Drama)
KEYSTONE—The Peddler (Comedy)
KEYSTONE—Love and Courage (Comedy)
RELIANCE—A Hospital Romance (Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 22nd, 1913.

MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported)
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Reported)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23rd, 1913.

BRONCHO—(Title Not Reported)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 30 (News)
RAMO—The Silent House (Drama)
RELIANCE—Maria Roma (Drama)

THURSDAY, JULY 24th, 1913.

AMERICAN—Tom Blake's Redemption (Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Reported)
MUTUAL—(Title Not Reported)
PILOT—The Sure Tip (Comedy) 500
PILOT—The Bug Professor (Comedy) 500

FRIDAY, JULY 25th, 1913.

KAY-BEE—Flotsam (2 parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—Title not reported.

SATURDAY, JULY 26th, 1913.

AMERICAN—She Will Never Know (Drama)
MAJESTIC—Title not reported.
RELIANCE—The Higher Justice (2 parts—Drama)

Exclusive Supply Corporation Current Releases

MONDAY, JULY 14th, 1913.

DRAGON—The Organist (Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 15th, 1913.

GAUMONT—With Honor at Stake (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16th, 1913.

SOLAX—Cooking for Trouble (Comedy)
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 71 (News)

THURSDAY, JULY 17th, 1913.

GAUMONT—The Tiny Troubadour (Comedy)

FRIDAY, JULY 18th, 1913.

SOLAX—The Intruder (Drama)
LUX—Fate and the Man (Drama) 987

SATURDAY, JULY 19th, 1913.

GREAT NORTHERN—A Country Cousin (Drama)

Advance Releases

MONDAY, JULY 21st, 1913.

DRAGON—The Pride of the Sea (Drama)

TUESDAY, JULY 22nd, 1913.

GAUMONT—Palmistry (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23rd, 1913.

SOLAX—That Dog (Comedy)
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 72 (News)

THURSDAY, JULY 24th, 1913.

GAUMONT—When the Cards Were Shuffled (Drama)
GAUMONT—Through Mountains Majestic (Travel)

FRIDAY, JULY 25th, 1913.

SOLAX—As Ye Sow (Drama)
LUX—Pat's Fancy Dress (Comedy) 492
LUX—You Never Can Tell (Comedy) 492

SATURDAY, JULY 26th, 1913.

GREAT NORTHERN—A Spot in the Dark (Drama)

Mutual Film Corporation

Executive Offices: 60 Wall Street, New York City

EVERY DAY IS FEATURE DAY WITH THE MUTUAL PROGRAM

The Mutual Program Is the Greatest Feature Program in the World

Every exhibitor visiting the Exposition should make it a point to visit the Mutual Theater and compare the wonderful films shown there with other programs.

Other manufacturers have advertised that they would show "a picked selection of reels." The Mutual Film Corporation will show only regular releases,—the same kind of films that are released every day and every week.

SEE THESE MUTUAL FILMS and then compare them with the carefully selected productions of competitors and form your own conclusions.

The Multiple Reel Features listed on this page are the greatest collection of money-getters in the world.

Five Reels Every Day—Every One a Feature

Exclusive Agent in the United States and Canada for the following popular brands:

THANHOUSER, KAY-BEE, BRONCHO, MAJESTIC, RELIANCE, AMERICAN, KEYSTONE, MUTUAL EDUCATIONAL and MUTUAL WEEKLY.

KAY-BEE	"Flotsam"	July 25
BRONCHO	"Granddad"	July 23
RAMO	"Man and Woman"	July 23
BRONCHO	"Old Mammy's Secret Code" (3)	July 16
THANHOUSER	"Tannhauser" (3)	July 15
GAUMONT	"With Honor at Stake"	July 15
AMERICAN	"Truth in the Wilderness"	July 14
RELIANCE	"Ashes"	July 12
KAY-BEE	"The Banshee"	July 11
KAY-BEE	"The Crimson Stain" (3)	July 4
AMERICAN	"Quicksands"	June 30
RELIANCE	"The Tangled Web" (3)	June 28
KAY-BEE	"The Seal of Silence"	June 27
BRONCHO	"The Transgressor"	June 25
GAUMONT	"The Demon of Destruction"	June 24
KAY-BEE	"The Failure of Success"	June 20
BRONCHO	"From the Shadows"	June 18
THANHOUSER	"The Snare of Fate"	June 17
AMERICAN	"The Soul of a Thief"	June 16
RELIANCE	"Half a Chance" (3)	June 14
KAY-BEE	"The Boomerang" (3)	June 13
KAY-BEE	"A True Believer"	June 6
BRONCHO	"A Dixie Mother"	June 4
RELIANCE	"The Master Cracksman"	May 31
KAY-BEE	"A Child of War"	May 30
BRONCHO	"Drummer of the 8th"	May 28
THANHOUSER	"Carmen" (3)	May 27
AMERICAN	"Ashes of Three"	May 26
KAY-BEE	"The Miser"	May 23
BRONCHO	"The Sea Dog"	May 21
KAY-BEE	"For Love of the Flag"	May 16
BRONCHO	"A Slave's Devotion"	May 14
RELIANCE	"The Big Boss"	May 14
THANHOUSER	"The Marble Heart"	May 13
MAJESTIC	"Children of St. Anne"	May 6
KAY-BEE	"A Black Conspiracy"	May 2
RELIANCE	"The Bawler Out" (3)	Apr. 30
BRONCHO	"Bread Cast Upon the Waters"	Apr. 30
AMERICAN	"Oil Upon Troubled Waters"	Apr. 28
KAY-BEE	"Will o' the Wisp"	Apr. 25
BRONCHO	"Retrogression"	Apr. 23
BRONCHO	"A Southern Cinderella" (3)	Apr. 16
RELIANCE	"Held for Ransom"	Apr. 16
KAY-BEE	"On Fortune's Wheel"	Apr. 11
BRONCHO	"The Grey Sentinel"	Apr. 9
KAY-BEE	"With Lee in Virginia"	Apr. 4
BRONCHO	"The Sinews of War"	Apr. 2
RELIANCE	"The Judge's Vindication"	Apr. 2
THANHOUSER	"Cymbeline"	Mar. 28
BRONCHO	"The Iconoclast" (3)	Mar. 26
BRONCHO	"The Pride of the South" (3)	Mar. 19
RELIANCE	"The Vengeance of Heaven"	Mar. 19
KAY-BEE	"The Sergeant's Secret"	Mar. 14
BRONCHO	"The Sins of the Father"	Mar. 12
KAY-BEE	"The Lost Despatch"	Mar. 7
BRONCHO	"The Barrier"	Mar. 5
RELIANCE	"The Man from the Outside" (3)	Mar. 5

LICENSED FILM STORIES

LUBIN.

AN ACTOR'S STRATEGY (July 21).—John Moore, a miner, leaves his wife and daughter for a prospecting trip to the Altar district. Successful beyond his expectations, he locates a rich placer mine and leaves for Altar to file his notice. His good fortune is known to Pedro Huerta, who has spied on him, and following Moore, Pedro does away with him, appropriates his claim and inserts his own location papers in the place of those of Moore. Sanchez, a renegade Mexican, has witnessed the crime and, accusing Pedro, demands hush-money.

Six months elapse, and hearing no word of her father, Dollie leaves her mother and goes to the Altar district in search of him, carrying a letter which introduces her into the home of the sheriff. Here she meets Bob Shaw, an actor, who has been stranded in Altar, and has accepted a position with Pedro, now a prosperous mine owner. Dollie goes to Pedro's mine to make inquiries concerning her father, and learning her name, Pedro is filled with apprehension, but finding that Dollie has no suspicion, he offers his services in the search. In the meantime, Sanchez continues his blackmail, threatening Pedro with exposure, and Pedro, who is infatuated with Dollie, pays him liberally for his silence. All is well until Bob Shaw, the actor, following Pedro into a saloon on business, accidentally overhears Sanchez threatening Pedro. Bob conceives an idea to frighten Pedro into confessing his crime and restoring the mine to Dollie. Decoying the murderer to the home of the sheriff, with a note from Dollie, Shaw appears before him, made up in an exact image of John Moore. Pedro, thinking it a ghost, makes a full confession, which is taken by the sheriff, who then arrests Pedro for the murder of John Moore. For consolation, after the exciting affair, Dollie turns to Bob Shaw, who has shown his loyalty to her.

THE BENEFACTOR (July 22).—Boris Kreshnef is a young socialist with strong ideas regarding the equal distribution of wealth. His greatest target is Jonathan Gedney, a millionaire. Gedney's son, Donald, has married Faith, against his father's will, who, in a fit of rage, disowns him, Donald and his wife try to make their own way. They succeed but illy and finally are forced to take humble lodgings. The room they engage is next to that of Boris, who does not know their identity, but learns that Donald can get no work and that they are without food. He takes his bread, cheese and cheap wine, and leaves it at their door and they cannot guess where it came from. Meanwhile Boris' wrath stores up against Gedney. One day Gedney's butler notices that one of his master's suits needs repairs and as he is about to take the package to the tailor's, he sees a vagrant prowling around the mansion, and dropping the package, gives chase. Boris passes, and not seeing anyone to claim the package, takes it home. On examination he found a wallet of money in the coat pocket. When the young people go out next morning to look for work, Boris steals into their room and leaves the suit with the wallet in the pocket. Gedney has a detective take up the case and gives him a sample of the cloth his suit was made of. Donald and Faith return and find the suit, also the money. He puts on the suit to replace the frayed one he has. He discovers the tailor's mark, with his father's name on the lining of the pocket. He immediately thinks that it is his father's way of suggesting a reconciliation and with the suit on, starts out to see the old man, while Faith takes the wallet and goes marketing. The detective runs across Donald and soon has Donald before his irate father. The old man accuses his son of being the thief. Donald tries to explain, but the men only laugh at such a fairy story. They decide finally to go to Donald's lodging. When they get there Faith has returned. The welcome dies on her lips when the old man pounces on the wallet and reiterates his assertion that Donald is the thief. Then Donald thinks his father has done this as a trick to compel him to give Faith up. He turns on him and accuses the old man of trickery. Boris, in his room, hears the altercation and deems it time for him to get into the game. He enters and explains. Then he learns that Donald is the old man's son. That gives Boris an added argument and he scathingly lays out the old man for his treatment of his son. The detective steps forward to arrest Boris, but the old man stops him. He dismisses the detective and forgives his son, taking the young wife to his heart. Boris is called back when he would quietly exit, and the old man offers to make him his secretary.

COFFEE INDUSTRY IN JAMAICA (July 24).—A very interesting educational picture showing cultivating, gathering, drying, packing and shipping of the coffee berry. The work is all done by the natives, who seem to enjoy their job. They work very rapidly and wear little beyond the perpetual smile which is noticeable in the negro race. The pictures were taken on one of the largest plantations in Jamaica.

ZEB, ZACK AND THE ZULUS (July 24).—Zebidiah Jackson and Zachariah Johnson, two colored missionaries, who have been sent out by the African Mission Society, arrive at the African port and start for the interior. They sit down to rest when some Zulus happen to see them. The Zulus chase Zeb and Zack, capture them, and drag them by the feet to the king. The king decides to eat them, but as one is not quite fat enough, they are to be held for a few days. The king appropriates the coats and hats of the two and is quite taken with a pair of specks belonging to one of the unfortunates. While he is trying to decipher what they are, the missionaries make a bolt for liberty. They are, however, recaptured and put in a cage and guarded by several Zulus. Having some tobacco, and wanting to soothe their nerves, they decide to take a chew. While they are so doing, the guards see them, and thinking that the tobacco is something good to eat, they take it away from Zeb and Zack and eat it. Naturally they get terribly sick. A Zulu, who, happening to pass the cage and seeing the condition of the guards, rushes to the king's hut and bursts in while he is in conference with the counselors. After the Zulu tells his story the counselors decide that the two men are evil spirits and should be rid of. The medicine man is informed and all the tribe is assembled at the incantation. When this ceremony is over they march off to get the missionaires. When they arrive at the cage they are astonished to find that Zeb and Zack have charmed the guards who were placed on duty to replace the sick ones, and have persuaded them to let them out of the cage. This was accomplished by singing the popular song, "Everybody's Doing It," and dancing the trot. When the king and the tribesmen arrive on the scene they are at first inclined to be angry, but the harmonious singing of the missionaires, accompanied with the peculiar movement of the body performed by Zeb and Zack, has the same effect on all, and the two captives lead the Zulus on a joyful dance through the village. While the Zulus are all engaged in the song and dance, Zeb and Zack make their escape to the beach, where a yawl from a ship lying out at sea has been put in for water. They tell the sailors of their plight and the good-hearted seamen take them in the boat and all hurriedly pull out, glad to escape with their lives.

THE EXILE (July 25).—Tom Wilson, a young man of social position, but of small means, is in love with Katherine Smythe. He has a wealthy rival, Jack Melrose. Wilson is seen coming from church with Katherine and her mother. Melrose subsequently meets them on Fifth avenue, and Katherine shows a decided preference for Wilson. Melrose proposes, but she frankly tells him that she loves Wilson. Tom asks Katherine to marry him and she tells him to get her father's consent. Katherine's father interrogates Wilson, learns he is not able to provide for his daughter, and suggests that he go West to better his financial condition. Wilson leaves for the West and Katherine promises to wait for him.

Melrose visits Katherine and presses his suit, but to no avail. Wilson strikes it rich in the West, prospecting. He has visions of New York and of Katherine. Mary Watson, a little Western girl, hovers about Wilson always. She loves him, but Wilson does not encourage it. Wilson and the girl go on horseback trips. Wilson is hurt one day and the girl nurses him and hovers about him at the bedside. News of Wilson's accident has reached Katherine, the account stating that he was killed (the message having been given by a miner to a Colorado City paper). No news reaches Katherine and she accepts Melrose's proposal. Wilson leaves for the East. The Western girl is brokenhearted. Wilson arrives in New York just as the wedding is taking place. Tom recognizes the bride and groom as they leave the church, but says nothing to them, though bowed with sorrow. He sees Katherine's father next day and gets an explanation. Wilson asks him not to say anything to Katherine or Melrose. Wilson goes to Central Park, sits on a bench and sees a vision of the Western girl on the ranch, as she on the ranch sees a vision of him. Tom returns to the West. He is met by the Western girl; they embrace and he puts an engagement ring on her finger.

THE PRICE DEMANDED (July 26).—Through the instrumentality of Roger Van Buren, Snake Sykes, a criminal of the lowest type, is apprehended, sent to the penitentiary and swears vengeance. Roger is engaged to Rose Delane, and in his happiness gives no thought to the supposedly closed incident of the Snake. Just before the date set for the wedding, Roger is called away from the city by urgent business. He manages to return one evening before he had hoped, and at once telephones his fiancée that he will call. Rose has planned to accompany her parents to the opera, but upon receiving her sweetheart's message, determines to remain at home, insisting, however, that the others continue their original plans. This change of program is made after the servants have left the house, having been given an evening off, and the butler is already hurrying to the headquarters of a gang of thieves to inform them that the isolated house will be deserted and that the wedding presents would make a valuable haul. At the thieves' den the butler finds only Snake, who has escaped from prison. Snake decides the chance is too good to be lost, and undertakes to pull off the job alone. Meanwhile, Roger has joined Rose. The girl leaves him alone in the library while she goes to array herself, at his request, in her bridal costume. Snake enters the house, stumbles upon, captures and securely ties up Roger without having recognized him. Rose returns to the library and bravely attacks Snake with a revolver, which she takes from a drawer, but the ruffian seizes her wrist in such manner that she cannot bring the gun to bear upon him. As she struggles, however, she realizes that the revolver is pointed squarely at a small automatic fire alarm, of the type requiring only the breaking of the glass face to give an alarm, and pulls the trigger. A moment later the revolver is wrested from her. Snake now enforces silence by threatening death to both, and examines the wedding presents. From an announcement card he learns the identity of Roger and is filled with savage triumph. His first thought is to murder the helpless man in cold blood, then a more fiendish revenge occurs to him. He tells Rose that she may save her lover's life by giving herself to him. The girl determines to make the supreme sacrifice, and first, in heartbroken agony, removing the ring from her hand, allows the brute to take her in his arms. At this instant, the police and firemen, responding to the alarm, hammer upon the outer door. Thinking he is to be balked of his revenge, Snake furiously seizes his revolver and attempts to shoot Roger, but the girl seizes his arm and the shots go wild. Hearing the shots, the police burst in. Snake makes a desperate effort to escape, but his flight is not so swift as a deadly bullet from an officer's revolver. A moment later Rose is sobbing out her happiness and relief in the arms of her lover she has saved.

HOME SWEET HOME (Special—2 parts—July 23).—Success had come to John Barbour and his wife, Nell. The new home had been furnished. One idea had been always in their minds—ma and pa, John's parents, were to live with them. Nell was as eager for this as her husband. They were a dear old couple who had lived in the little town before John was born. Every stick of the old furniture was dear to them. When they visited John and Nell they drove into town with old Sal, the mare, hitched to the surrey. John and Nell thought they could make them happier. Their arguments at last prevailed, so the old furniture was packed up and taken away by Uncle Sol, the second-hand man. It was hard to sell old Sal, but a neighbor guaranteed she would have a good home. Ma slyly concealed a "God Bless Our Home" motto under her coat and pa smuggled the cat into an empty grip. Dicky, the canary, ma openly avowed she could not part with. A "For Sale" sign is put on the house and ma and pa landed at their new home. The chairs were monsters of stuffing and comfort. Ma shook her head at the twin beds remarking that "one would be plenty, if it were a little wider." John and Nell did everything they could to make ma and pa happy. But somehow the spirit of home was lacking. They longed for their old easy chairs. Somehow those big roomy things didn't fit. One day ma suddenly announced that she was going to call on her old neighbors. The trolley landed her at Germantown and soon she had bargained with Sol for pa's old easy chair, to leave it there until called for. Ma had hardly left Solomon's place when pa entered cautiously and purchased ma's rocker. During the weeks that followed more of these mysterious trips were made. John and Nell got suspicious that something was going on and resolved to investigate. One day they followed. They saw pa and ma separately and stealthily enter the second hand store and as separately and stealthily go back to town. John and Nell called on Solomon. He confessed. Nearly all the furniture of ma and pa's old room had been bought. A great light burst in. "John," said Nell, "we thought we were making those dear old souls happy and we're just killing them." In a few minutes more every stick of furniture that had once belonged in ma and pa's home had been rebought and paid for. In another half hour, the man who purchased old Sal and the surrey had been visited. The "For Sale" sign had been torn off the old cottage, orders had been given to expressmen to be on hand the next morning. The next day John and Nell drove away early in the morning. Ma and pa stayed home. For two or three days this continued. Suddenly they resolve to go together. They arrive at Solomon's store; all the furniture had been sold to another party, paid for and taken away. Solomon says, "You didn't pay for it, I had a good chance for cash." Old Sal is hitched at the post and with the surrey behind her. John and Nell hustle the old folks into the seats and Sal starts off, and they are hustled into the house. What a picture. Everything as it used to be. The only addition is a telephone. Nell says, "Call us up every night and say good-night."

VITAGRAPH.

THE DIAMOND MYSTERY (Special—2 parts—July 14).—Jonathan Moore, who has labored for over twenty years on a formula for the making of artificial diamonds, becomes mentally unbalanced from the strain, and in this condition believes he has achieved his ambition. He writes to Bloodgood, the president of the International Diamond Syndicate

"THE BATTLE of GETTYSBURG"

Special
Release
In Five
Reels

Produced by
Thos. H.
Ince
Managing Director of
Kay-Bee
and Broncho
Films

The Greatest Motion Picture In The World

Successfully playing the big theaters of the country

BOOKED INDEFINITELY AT RIVERVIEW PARK, CHICAGO

PLAYING THE JAKE WELLS CIRCUIT

Now being exhibited as the sole attraction at the Keith houses—the Crescent Theatre, Brooklyn, and the Bronx Theater, New York City. The first time in the history of these houses that a photodrama has been shown exclusively.

Special Terms and Bookings Can Be Had Exclusively Through the Offices of

THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION

New York Motion Picture Corporation

Long Acre Bldg. 42nd St. and Broadway New York City in London, telling him of his invention. Bloodgood, becoming interested, cables to Rollins, the New York agent of the firm, to call upon Moore, look into the invention, but to make no definite stipulation for the purchase of it until he himself has arrived and examined it. Before Bloodgood arrives, however, Violet Moore's two suitors have become deeply interested in the invention, and one of them, Phelps Firestone, the son of a diamond merchant, realizing that if the invention is practical, his father will be ruined, appropriates the essentials of the formula and gives them to his friend, Bill, who later takes him to a counterfeiter's den, where he sells the formula for a large sum of money. With the money thus gained he is able to pay back the money which he borrowed and which he lost in betting. When the counterfeiters begin to put the formula to use they discover that it is inadequate, and send Bill to bring Phelps to them. Bill, who is entirely unaware of how Phelps gained knowledge of such a formula, is greatly surprised to learn, upon arriving at Moore's home, that Phelps has stolen the old man's ideas. Bill accuses Phelps of theft, which accusation is heard by Violet and Firestone, Phelp's father, who had come to the house to be present at the examination of the machine by Bloodgood and Rollins. Bill returns to the counterfeiters and tells them the true story.

A day or two later as Violet herself was in the act of trying to make a diamond with the machine, her father, who had been sleeping on a couch nearby, tells her that he will make one for her. She watches him carefully and is astonished to observe that he places a diamond in the machine before pretending to make it. This act convinces Violet that her father's mind is deranged. That night a person dressed all in black, comes through the laboratory window and places a dynamite fuse under the machine. A moment later there is a terrible explosion and Violet, who has rushed into the room, is horrified to find that her father is missing. The next day the police learn that Moore had blown up his own machine and had been taken to the counterfeiter's den, where he had been forced to sign a paper, the contents of which he was not aware of. It was later learned that the paper was one authorizing Bill to negotiate for the purchase of the machine. Bill, Phelps and the two counterfeiters are arrested, and the shock sustained by Moore results in his regaining normal sense. Before they leave the cellar, Olin, Violet's other suitor, and who has been an apprentice to Moore, takes Violet into his arms. Mrs. Moore, who had all the time entertained an adverse opinion of her husband's invention, is glad that it is all over.

THE ONLY WAY (July 21).—Having become tired of society, Agnes Temple and a party of friends go slumming in the poorer sections of the city, where they come upon a mission hall. The regular organ player being away, Agnes fills the vacancy, and in this way becomes acquainted with Alfred Wallace, a mission worker, who later takes her to the home of Bill Thomas, whose little daughter, Annie, is afflicted with hip disease. Agnes learns that the father has no money to pay for an operation, so she takes the child to her beautiful home, where, just as the operation is to be performed, Bill, who, unknown to any one has become a burglar, and who is not aware of the presence of his child, enters the house intent upon stealing Agnes' beautiful necklace. He is discovered by Agnes whose screams awaken the child. Bill, recognizing her voice, and observing how good Agnes is to his child, confesses what he really is. She hides his infamy from his mother, who is by this time at the bedside of his child, and Bill is thereby converted. Agnes later becomes the life partner of Mr. Wallace.

THE PICKPOCKET (July 22).—When Patrick McQuire returns home one night he finds that his suffragette wife has left nothing for him but a cold supper, so he decides to get "square" with her. A day or two later McQuire gets two theater tickets, which he leaves on his desk. During his absence from the office, his wife comes in, finds the tickets, extracts them and in their place she puts two pieces of paper the size of the tickets, thinking that her husband will not look into the envelope before he arrives at the theater. But Patrick has seen everything, he having quietly opened the door. A few minutes later he comes in as though he had seen nothing and gives his wife the ten dollars she asks for. When she has left, McQuire tells his friend what has happened and he buys two more tickets, telling the ticket taker to look out for the stolen tickets and to have the bearer of them arrested. Soon Mrs. McQuire arrives and she is arrested. When the show is over, McQuire goes to the station house where his wife is, and after extorting a promise from her to resign from the suffragette club, he has her released.

AN ERROR IN KIDNAPPING (July 23).—Edith Smith and Stella Smith are twins, and as Stella is the more studious, she is sent away to a boarding school, while her sister remains at home with her parents. One day at a social function, she meets Billy Jackson, who falls head over heels in love with her. When Billy asks her father if he may keep company with his daughter, he meets with a cold rebuff. Parental ire does not hinder Billy, and he and Edith keep many a clandestine meeting. When he asks her to elope with him she refuses, and Billy then hits upon the idea of abduction. On the night that he has his friends lying in wait for Edith, Stella comes to pay her parents a visit, and the boys abduct her, thinking that she is Edith. She is placed in an automobile, and her screams attract the attention of a motorcycle policeman, who soon reaches the machine and has Billy and his friends arrested. When Stella reaches home she tells her parents and sister what has happened and Edith gives the scheme away by laughing and confessing to her father that she has a hand in it. The party then go to the police station where matters are explained.

AN OLD MAN'S LOVE STORY (July 24).—Although their means are limited, the Marshams put on a great show of wealth, but skimp themselves in real necessaries in order to keep up appearances. Mrs. Marsham is rather a cold, hard woman, and looks to her daughter Ethel to make a rich marriage and so help out the family. Neither she nor her husband look with favor on the suit of Cyril Blythe, a young man without prospects, but with whom Ethel is very much in love.

The Marshams are visited by James Graythorne, an old friend, who has made a large fortune in East India trade, and who has recently retired. He very much admires Ethel and when he asks her parents for her hand they are greatly pleased. They coerce Ethel into accepting his proposal and pack Cyril off about his business.

Greythorne had no idea that Ethel was not absolutely willing, but her manner leads him to suspect that something is not right. Meeting Ethel in the woods one day sobbing over a letter from Cyril, who says he is going to America, he asks her to confide in him as a friend and tell him what is the matter. She does so, won by his gentleness, and he tells her to be of good cheer; he will help her. He feels that it would not be right for him to marry Ethel against her will and decides that, although he loves her, he will give her up in favor of the man she really loves. He goes to London and hunts up Cyril. Finding him all right, he offers, as he is without kith or kin, to adopt him as his son and heir. Then, writing to Mrs. Marsham, he says that he has come to the conclusion that he is too old to marry her daughter and suggests that his adopted son take his place. Eager only for money, she readily consents to the new proposal.

Mr. Marsham is greatly surprised when he sees Cyril, but his objections are quickly silenced by his wife, who does not care whom Ethel may marry providing it is someone with money. Greythorne sees the happiness of the young people with a smile of joy intermingled, however, with sighs of regret for his own lost youth. He finds contentment in the thought that he was able to bring happiness to the young people instead of plunging them into life-long misery and regret.

THE TABLES TURNED (July 25).—Several months of waiting hand-and-foot upon invalid Aunt Mary, brings the Stone family to desperation. She always wants something and they can never even get a meal in peace. In despair they send for a nurse, who, finding that the aunt is really a fake invalid, declines to stay, packs her traps and departs without even giving her reason. Mrs. Stone, the "sick" woman's sister, herself becomes ill and all the work falls on the shoulder of Betty and Marie, her two daughters. Aunt leads them a dreadful life and drives both of them nearly crazy.

One day Betty enters the invalid's room to fetch something she had left behind and finds Aunt Mary missing. Presently she finds her having a good feed in the kitchen while everyone else is supposed to be out of the way. Betty waits for her aunt to get back into bed and then sets the mattress on fire. In double quick time Aunt Mary is out of the house, yelling "fire!" at the top of her voice, much to the alarm of Marie and her mother, who are in the garden. After a short consultation, Mrs. Stone and the two girls plan to turn the tables on their deceitful old aunt. They all fall sick simultaneously and keep Aunt Mary continually on the run supplying their many wants. When in due time, they get about again, it is found that the erstwhile invalid has become completely changed and is now one of the most docile and obliging women imaginable.

SCENES IN HONOLULU (July 25).—An interesting and beautiful reproduction of life in the South Sea Islands as it is today. Marvelous evidences of progress and prosperity can be seen as far as the eye can reach.

THE SPELL (July 26).—A young doctor, named John Walthol, proposes to Mary Chalmers, and is accepted. A few days later, when a "medicine show," the principal feature of which is hypnotism, comes to town, Mary and her chum, May, go to see it. The hypnotist introduces himself to the girls, and finally extracts a promise from them to call upon him the next day and have their fortunes told. The doctor remonstrates against their doing any such thing, but none the less, they go. While May's attention is attracted, the hypnotist puts Mary under his influence and has her write her fiancé a letter telling him that he need not look for her any more.

Several weeks later the doctor meets May on the streets and upon inquiring for Mary learns that she left with the hypnotist while under his influence. She shows him a letter from Mary saying that while she would like to get home she can't, as she is under the influence of the hypnotist. The doctor leaves at once for the town where the show is and sees Mary, but she

PICTURES
CHANGED DAILY
TO DAY
THE FRENCH SPY
THE DREAM
TO MORROW
PATHES WEEKLY
THE MANIAC

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.
We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.
Don't fail to visit our complete Show Rooms at
101 - 103 FOURTH AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y.

Write for Catalog
Established 1882

The Newman Mfg. Co.
715-721 Sycamore St.
Cincinnati, Ohio

PHOTOGRAPHS FOR LOBBY DISPLAY

size 8x10 of all 2 and 3-reel FEATURES of the following: KALEM, EDISON, THANHOUSER, LUBIN, BRONCHO, KAY-BEE, RELIANCE, PILOT, MAJESTIC, AMERICAN.
SET of 12, $2.00. SET of 6, $1.00.

KRAUS MFG. CO., 14 E. 17th St., N. Y.

DISTRIBUTORS WANTED IN CANADA, FAR WEST and SOUTH for our PHOTO PLAYERS POST CARDS, Association and Independent, 200 different players.

MAKE MOVING PICTURES
WITH
Our Ideal Motion Picture Camera

Excellently constructed, beautifully finished, simple to operate, fitted up with a B. & L. Zeiss Tessar Lens, I. C., F 3-5, one of the best and fastest lenses in the market; holds 200 feet stock.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue
PRICE COMPLETE $75.00
Motion Picture Camera Co., Inc.
Dept. A 5 West 14th Street, New York

TO THE TRADE
Negatives Developed. 1c per ft.
PRINTS MADE ON
Eastman Stock .... 4½c per ft.
(In quantities over 5,000 feet)
Including Tinting and Toning
TITLES, 8c per ft.
Prompt deliveries. All work guaranteed.
Commercial Motion Pictures Co., Inc.
103 W. 101st Street. New York City
Telephone, 6724 Riverside

Stop the Leakage
Use Corcoran Tanks.
No. 6 price list is a money saver.
A. J. CORCORAN, INC.
11½ John Street New York City

THE SIMPSON SOLAR SCREEN
The only Metallic Screen without seams, patented. Buy the real thing. Beware of imitations
ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.
No. 113 W. 132nd St., N. Y. City

Broncho Headliners

OLD MAMMY'S SECRET CODE

Three reels, July 16

A massive military production, in which an old negro woman uses a pre-arranged code of wearing apparel on a clothes line to apprise the confederates of the union operations.

SPECTACULAR AND AWE-INSPIRING SCENE AS A BRIDGE IS BLOWN UP WITH A HUGE CHARGE OF POWDER

Terrific Artillery Fire—Sensational Infantry Charges—Thrilling rescue of the defeated southern army by the cavalry, which hurls itself upon the advancing enemy.

Pathetic death of the negro woman as she pays the penalty of her loyalty and is condemned as a spy.

Broncho Motion Picture Co.
Long Acre Bldg., 42d St. and Bdwy.
NEW YORK CITY
MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

Keystone Comedies

A NOISE FROM THE DEEP

1 reel, July 17

Mabel falls into the water. Her sweetheart rescues her while the man her father favors runs for help. A boy is bribed to blow into a hose, the other end of which is concealed under the water. While the rescuers are diving for the body which is supposed to lie under the bubbles, Mabel and her lover are married.

THE PEDDLER

On split reel, July 21

The peddler is roughly treated by the cowboys. He returns disguised as a bandit and has things his own way until his identity is discovered.

LOVE AND COURAGE

On Split Reel, July 21

Mabel loves her big, fat admirer, who has ludicrous encounters with his little rival.

KEYSTONE FILM CO.
Long Acre Bldg., 42d St. and Bdwy.
NEW YORK CITY
MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

Kay-Bee Features

FLOTSAM

2 reels, July 25

Thrilling Rescue of a Child—the Sole Survivor of a Wrecked Vessel—from the Angry Waves.

Capt. Wells and his lifeguards fail to shoot a line over the ship which is being dashed to pieces on the rocks. The passengers and crew are drowned, with the exception of Mildred, who is carried on a mountainous billow. Capt. Wells dives from the top of a cliff and saves her. Years later he married the girl, now grown to womanhood, though she loves a handsome artist but feels under obligations to the Captain. After her marriage the artist comes into her life again, and she yields to his entreaties and elopes. However, she comes to a realization of her duty, and turns back just as the suspicious Captain had started in pursuit.

N. Y. Motion Picture Corp.
Long Acre Bldg., 42d St. and Bdwy.
NEW YORK CITY
MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

does not recognize him. He returns to his room and spends the night studying works on hypnotism. The next day he visits the show, takes a seat in the audience, concentrates his mind on the hypnotist and soon has him under his influence. Mary is brought back to her senses and the hypnotist is arrested.

A PRINCE OF EVIL (Special—2 parts—July 26). —Part One.—The leader of a band of smugglers, Prince Dalamere, an unprincipled adventurer, learns that more money is needed to finance his enterprises, and seeks for a rich and beautiful wife. Meeting Josephine Chester, he at once conceives an ardent admiration for her and determines that at any cost and by any means, she shall be his bride. When he proposes to her, Josephine tells him that although she is free, she will not for a moment think of marrying him. She instinctively distrusts the man and dislikes even to have him near her.

Georgia Rivers, the sister of Josephine, and wife of James Rivers, a prominent business man, is obsessed by a passion for gambling, which has so run away with her that she is heavily in debt. She determines to offset her previous losses by a bet on a horse race, and telephones to a friendly bookmaker, who promises to keep her informed of the progress of the race. While she is talking to him over the telephone, the prince calls at her house, and as he is a frequent visitor there, he is not announced by the maid. As he is about to enter the room he overhears the conversation over the 'phone and hides behind the portieres of the room. The horse upon which Mrs. Rivers has placed her bet loses and she is in despair. Being a woman of somewhat weak character, she dare not tell her husband of her losses.

As soon as she has hung up the receiver, the prince enters and sees her in tears. She tells him of her difficulty, and he offers to help her out, proffering her a check large enough to pay all her debts. At first she declines to accept the check, but he tells her it is nothing to him and she consents to take it.

Josephine is sought by another wooer, Richard Trent, whom she greatly favors over the prince. Seeing this the prince determines to force her hand. He goes to her, and showing her the check, which has by this time been returned to him by the bank, he tells her that unless she becomes engaged to him within a week, he will show the check to her sister's husband.

Trent proposes to Josephine the next day, but she tells him that although she loves him, they cannot become engaged. She tells him that there is an obstacle that unless removed, will prevent their marriage, and so puts off the matter until she shall have solved her sister's difficulties. She accepts, however, Trent's invitation for her to attend the Rockwood Ball with him and looks forward to the evening with the greatest anticipation.

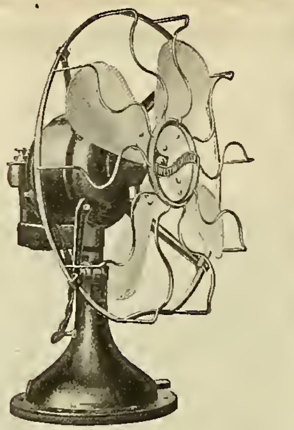
When she asks her sister about the matter, Josephine learns the whole truth, but Georgia begs her to do all she can to avert discovery of the matter by her husband. Although horrified at her sister's conduct, Josephine promises to do all that she can to help her.

Part Two.—Delamere does not wait until the end of the week before taking further action, as he sees that Trent is making great headway with the young woman, and fears that the end of the week may see the announcement of Josephine's engagement to his rival instead of to himself.

The night of the Rockwood Ball he telephones to the ball room, telling Josephine that her sister is at his rooms, and that unless she at once consents to the engagement he will call her husband, so ruining Mrs. River's reputation. Thinking to be able to save her sister, Josephine at once leaves the ball room and rushes to Delamere's apartments, where she finds that the message had simply been a ruse to get her there and that her sister is nowhere to be seen. While she is on her way to his apartment, Delamere causes a telegram to be sent to Trent, telling him that if he wishes to know the character of the woman he proposes to marry he must at once hasten to the rooms of Prince Delamere. On receiving the message, Trent, who has already noticed Josephine's disappearance, rushes for a taxi, and is whirled as quickly as possible towards the prince's apartment.

Josephine attempts to leave the room, but is prevented by Delamere, who, hearing a step on the stairs, thinks Trent has arrived. He seizes Josephine in his arms, where she is seen when the door is opened. It is not Trent, however, but Detective Manners, who has come with a warrant for the arrest of the prince, as leader of the smuggling gang. While he is talking to Delamere, Josephine steps behind him and takes his revolver from his side pocket. Stepping in front of the two men she threatens to shoot the first that mentions her presence in the room. Just as Trent enters the room, she steps behind the window curtain and so is not seen by him. After Trent has bowed his apologies and withdrawn, Delamere attempts to take a revolver from his drawer, but is forestalled by the detective, who pins his arms and soon has him securely manacled. When the detective moves the curtains he finds that Josephine has escaped through the window.

The woman succeeds in getting back to the ball room before Trent's return, and when he comes in she begs him to take her home. Going to her sister's room, she tells her the story of the events of the evening and asks how it is all to end.



16" Oscillating Fan

Most breeze for the least money is only one reason why Electric Fans for your Theatre should be

Westinghouse

Another reason is the long life of the Westinghouse Fan, making it cost you less per year.

Another reason is the splendid construction of the Westinghouse fan, making it unnecessary for you to touch it from the beginning of the season until the end.

Buy Westinghouse fans and "divide the cost by the years they last."

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
EAST PITTSBURGH, PA.
(Sales Offices in 45 American Cities)

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
Moving Picture Machines and Films.
Theatre Brokerage Exchange,
440 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

$3.50 CRYSTAL WHITE
$4.00 SILVER FINISH
Curtain Coatings
PREPAID
ALFRED C. STANGE, 15 S Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

THE CATALOGUE OF
BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
contains much that is valuable about electric lighting in general, and moving picture work in particular. Send for it.
THE CHAS. A STRELINGER CO.
BOX MP-2, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

ATTENTION!
LET US DO YOUR
Developing and Printing
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
BY OUR YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

WE ARE MAKING
FILM TITLES and
ANNOUNCEMENTS
For All the Reel Exchanges and Film Renters
Let Us Make Yours
3 Feet for 25 Cents
In Any Length

GUNBY BROS., Inc.
199 Third Ave. New York City

Their conversation is overheard by Rivers, who has silently entered the room, and he bitterly reproaches his wife for her distrust in him. His first act is to write a check to Delamere for the money lent by him to his wife, and then to congratulate Josephine on the high courage she has shown.

When Trent calls at the house the next day, Josephine, in answer to his renewed proposal, tells him that there is now no further objection to their engagement, which is promptly announced to the world at large.

ESSANAY.

THE ROSE OF SHARON (July 22).—Randolph Hastings and Althea Warren, friends since childhood, loved eath other, but when the Civil War broke out, Randolph's sympathies being for the North, Althea's father, Mr. Warren, would not hear of their love, as he was for the South. At the last moment Randolph writes Althea a letter telling her that if she loves him to wear a Rose of Sharon the next day. The letter is misplaced and there are two broken hearts. Twenty years afterwards, at a reunion, they meet again. The letter is found and brings joy to them both.

THE DANCE AT EAGLE PASS (July 23).—Jim Barton, a cowpuncher, is in love with Florence Wessel. Florence's father is not in favor of Barton paying attentions to his daughter, and wants her to marry Joe Scott, the postmaster. Unknown to everybody, Scott is a gambler and plays the races. A horse on which he bets all of his money loses, and he decides to rob the post office safe. Florence's father, the sheriff, hears the sound of the explosion and goes to investigate. Scott shoots the sheriff and leaves evidence to blame the crime on Barton. The doctor probes for the bullet and it is found not to fit Barton's gun, but Scott's. Scott is taken away and Barton is left with the girl for the termination of a pretty romance.

THE BROWNS STUDY ASTROLOGY (July 24). —Mrs. Brown receives a circular, "Do You Know Your Husband?" She sends for the book. Mr. Brown receives the same circular and he also sends for the book. The screamingly funny incidents that happen will cause a riot.

BUILDING THE CHATTANOOGA LIGHT AND POWER DAM (July 24).—This wonderful dam, when completed, will have cost $10,000,000. At the present time, the work of construction is about three-fourths done, and the cost so far is $8,000,000. The picture gives one a very fine and sensational view of the bee-hive of activity, the cameraman having photographed the scene from one of the swinging buckets, some three hundred feet above the river level.

MAKING GOOD (July 25).—An unusual comedy showing the interior workings of motion picture art. Scenes are shown explaining the actual rehearsing of the scenes, and then the complete picture is shown for the benefit of the character who portrayed it. In the completed film "After Dark," Stine is roughly thrown from his boarding house for lack of funds. He explains his troubles to his friend, who, under pretext, gets the key to Stine's room, who under cover of darkness, is to slip back and get his belongings. Then the fun commences. Stine is taken for a burglar and in the general mix-up which ensues, both he and his friend are sadly battered up.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE SCHOOLMAM'S SWEETHEART (July 26).—Marjorie Wayne, the new school-teacher, comes to town and boards at the same ranch where Broncho Billy is foreman. Broncho Billy falls in love with her winsome ways and proposes to her. She tells him she does not love him, but expresses a wish that they be good friends. Her sweetheart from the city comes to the ranch and she marries him, much to the chagrin of Broncho Billy. Not long after the wedding, Steve gets into bad company and is persuaded to join in stealing some horses. He is captured by a posse, who are about to make short work of him, when Broncho Billy, through his love for Marjorie, holds up the posse and allows him to escape.

THE FORBIDDEN WAY (Special—2 parts—July 7).—As Helen Alden goes into the library of her father's mansion, she discovers Phil Masters, a master crook, and his pal, Red. The former is about to strike Helen, when the latter, realizing that she is a beautiful young woman, knocks him down and then escapes. Red is arrested and at the station house he squeals on his confederates. Another member of the notorious gang, a newspaper reporter, learns of Red's squealing and informs the gang. Masters suggests that they separate for a year and live an honest life. The members of the gang agree, and just after the booty has been divided they hear the police trying to break down the door. Masters and Cora exit through a secret passage that leads into a sewer and escape. The police, not finding any visible trace of the secret passage referred to by Red, disbelieve him and take him to jail. Meanwhile, Masters forges a fake recommendation and secures a position with the Alden Mfg. Co. Cora is a stenographer with a reputable concern. One day Alden gives Masters a package of valuable papers to deliver to his home and the crook again meets Helen. This errand is executed without the temptation of stealing enter-

ANOTHER MASTERPIECE

JUST received from Europe. Another illustrious addition to the Motion Picture Hall of Fame. An Educational Feature. Note the distinction. Some pictures are educational and some pictures are features but in this we have the genuine Educational Feature, so much desired by Exhibitors. A true incident of Roman history, known as:

NERO AND BRITANNICUS

(COPYRIGHTED)

A State Right picture in three reels, depicting the betrayal of the youthful Britannicus by his foster brother Nero, at a time when the Emperor had reason to believe that Britannicus would be put upon the throne. An intensely interesting subject that is

BEAUTIFULLY HAND COLORED

NOT TO FORGET OUR GOOD OLD STANDBYS, WE MENTION

THE MYSTERIES OF PARIS and LES MISERABLES

These two tremendous features are creating a furore wherever shown, and every state right buyer has reason to feel satisfied with his purchase

---

ECLECTIC FILM CO.

110 West 40th St. New York City

ECLECTIC FILMS
TRADE MARK
PARIS-NEW YORK

"THE CREAM OF THE EUROPEAN MARKET SELECTED FOR AMERICA"

Telephone: Bryant 302

PLEASE NOTE OUR NEW ADDRESS

ing his brain, and when Cora, who is handed a large sum of money to deposit, calls him up on the wire and tempts him to help her steal it. He refuses and says that he is going to adhere to his promise not to steal.

Red is released from prison and with revenge in his heart, starts out to find Masters. Just about this time the gang meet and Masters vows that he is not going back to his former life. As he leaves the rendezvous, Cora follows him to the home of Helen and as he is proposing to her, Cora rushes in and tells of Masters' past life. Masters tells Helen that it is true and the poor girl is heartbroken. Red enters and is about to take the life of Masters, when the latter tells him that he is going back to his old life. Cora takes Masters and his confederates to her old place of business and as the master crook is working at the safe, Cora, in a spirit of revenge, telephones for the police. The newspaper reporter calls up Masters as he is bending over the safe and informs him that Cora has squealed. He escapes, enters a manhole and the street caves in. Cora discovers Masters under a pile of debris and he dies in her arms.

TAPPED WIRES (Special—2 parts—July 21).—Two young men, Mike and Sam, telegraphers, in the employ of the Affiliated Press, are bitter enemies. Each time they meet there is a rough and tumble fight. There is a mystery in the office of the Affiliated Press, for each time they get a scoop, their rival, the Coast Service Company, is sure to get it also. One night after the boys' work is finished, they again happen to meet in the corridor, and this time the fight is more severe than heretofore. They burst into the office of the Coast Service Company and Sam knocks Mike senseless over a telegraph table. Sam, believing that he has killed his rival, goes to the water front and contemplates suicide.

Mike, coming to his senses, hears the instrument ticking. It is an Affiliated Press call and he wonders how it comes over the wires of his company's rival. He takes the message, which is being sent by a reporter of the Affiliated Press. The Waverly express has been wrecked. It is the train his sister has gone on to visit her aunt. He is greatly excited when he learns that his sister has been killed, but keeps on taking the message. Before leaving the Coast Service Company's offices, he cuts the wire, but in doing so he has also severed the connection in his own office. He goes to another office and takes further information down over the long distance telephone. He is found there by Sam, who has returned, and by Red Keogh, the chief operator, and the manager of the company. When he is accused of cutting the wires his explanation acquits him, and his anguish of mind is relieved when he later learns that his sister was only slightly hurt. It only needed a little touch of human nature for Sam to realize that Mike is his dear friend.

BIOGRAPH.

THE SWEAT-BOX (July 17).—Bridget's husband, Isidore, had a slight attack of skinflintis. According to Doctor Sweatum, there was only one cure, and he proceeded to demonstrate it by enclosing Isidore in a steaming sweat-bath. There he left him, hotter than tobasco, until a violent explosion relieved Isidore from his plight. He sought the cooling waters of the river. There was much excitement on the way, but he was cured.

A CHINESE PUZZLE (July 17).—One might almost declare his soul aflame, he was such a fiery lover, but mother thought he was a potpourri of heavenly virtues. Her youthful daughter thought otherwise. That was where the Chinese puzzle came in. The phoney chink cook ran off with the daughter to be married. It created a horrible scandal, but it was all right in the end. What is more, the fire of a fiery lover was quenched.

A GAMBLER'S HONOR (July 14).—The brother at cards failed to make up the shortage at the express office, but the gambler determined to save him. His intention, however, was misconstrued until the sheriff's investigation brought the truth. The gambler then awoke to the justice of the girl's plea against his previous life and the tragedy of a dead brother's weakness was lightened.

DURING THE ROUND-UP (July 19).—Called away on a deal, the ranchero left the foreman in full charge of the round-up. That was the opportunity the stranger and his accomplice were seeking. The girl's determination to recover the money at all costs resulted in a daring rescue on the part of the young foreman, who registered another triumph at the final round-up.

PA SAYS (July 21).—First pa said Theodore was a lizzy-nizzy. He let that go, but when pa said he was too sporty because he spent a nickel for a ticket for a voting contest for the fairest girl in town—pa's daughter, of course—then Theodore decided to settle pa. He played at being a lady. Then pa said he might not be as young as he used to be, but ma came along. So pa said all on the sly, "Go to it, Theodore."

WHILE THE COUNT GOES BATHING (July 21).—The surf bath! To the count it was the one big rapture. So Billy and his friend, the day of the wedding, hied him hither. While the count bathed, Billy ran away with the lady, whom he didn't propose should marry a count.

THE MIRROR (July 24).—The girl's lessons from the young station agent on the manipulation of the telegraph code served her in good stead. By it, hemmed in on all sides at the lonely farm house, she was able to save both herself and her father's money from desperate tramps—an experience which is grippingly illustrated in this biograph melodrama.

THE COMING OF ANGELO (July 26).—Young Theresa was thought to be much favored in the love of Gudio, the leader of the Italian colony. Then Angelo came. Theresa, though aroused by her first real love, strove to keep her vows to Gudio, but life's big law overcame her. Gudio prepared a death feast for himself, then summoned Angelo. Why should he die for another's happiness? But Angelo lived.

MELIES.

JAVANESE DANCES (July 24).—(Taken at Djokjakarta, Java, Dutch East Indies.)—A highly interesting and instructive reel of the odd, symbolic dances that prevail on the Dutch East Indian Island of Java. Nowhere in the world are dances just like them to be seen. They are motion to rhythm, and as such are unique and novel. They are performed by skilled professionals in the art of Javanese symbolic dancing. First is the quadruple "Tanda," a dance principally of the arms, but graceful and interesting.

Next comes the dance of the "Abduction of the Princess," in which the Princess, being repulsed by the haughty Black Knight, takes to arms. There comes to her defense the chivalrous White Knight and the long-haired God of the Mountains, but both being defeated, the haughty Black Knight claims the Princess as his prize. She, having been once repulsed, now refuses, and the Black Knight attempts to obtain her by force. The White Knight comes once more to the rescue, has a set-to with the Black Knight, wherein he proves himself victor, and wins the Princess as wife. The "Kitihoging," or Monkey Dance; the "Tjetilan," or Horse Dance; and characteristic dances by a company of road dancers who travel from town to town throughout Java, are interesting features on this reel

PATHEPLAY.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 29, 1913 (July 3).—Tottenvillo, N. Y.—The new Cossey Dry Dock, built to support a weight of 240,000 tons is so enormous that it has to be launched in sections.

Peekskill, N. Y.—The members of the National Guard, State of New York, are being supplied with new equipment. Here we see old and new equipment.

New Rochalle, N. Y.—The memory of Jacob Leisler, founder of this city, is perpetuated by a monument unveiled by Mrs. Montgomery Schuyler. Harry Chatonet and Chas. Garrigues, special representatives of Rochelle, France, attend.

Vienna, Austria.—Prince Leopold of Bavaria is received at the railroad station by the Emperor Francis Joseph I. and Archduke Francis Ferdinand.

Pelham Bay, N. Y.—L. A. Vilas makes nine spectacular flights with a passenger in his new Curtiss flying boat.

New York, N. Y.—The New York Yacht Club's 66th annual regatta develops an interesting and exciting race in the class for sloop yachts. Grayling winner.

Pressburg, Hungary.—A terrible fire destroys a large part of this city, leaving hundreds homeless.

Editorial Section.—The value of the American Life Saving Society is clearly demonstrated in the life saving exhibition in the waters of the Hudson River.

Washington, D. C.—Fred. Reed, Boy Scout, receives the message from President Wilson to Mayor Harrison of Chicago and starts on the first mile.

Elizabeth, N. J.—The new fire boat for New York harbor service is launched and christened "Gaynor" by Miss M. Gaynor, in presence of Commissioner Johnson.

Keokuk, Ia.—Keokuk Canal locks are put into use for the first time. Filling the lock. Upper gate is lowered and steamer Emily passes into Lake Cooper.

Paris, France.—Night caps—dainty lace and ribbon—are very much in vogue.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 30, 1913 (July 7).—Seattle, Wash.—The new Chamber of Commerce 8,000-mile excursion in Alaska, conducted by the Alaska Bureau, leaves with many distinguished guests, including Seth Mann, the personal representative of President Wilson.

Tacoma, Wash.—Twelve thousand letters in praise of Tacoma and Tacoma publicity methods are hung in the street that "all who run may read," including Mayor Seymour.

Vienna, Austria.—The Emperor Francis Joseph attends the horse show.

Denver, Colo.—The Turners' Societies of this State, assembled here, march in an imposing allegorical parade depicting the history of Germany from the middle ages to the present day.

Brandon, Vt.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, delivers an oration at the unveiling of

ON THE BORDER LINE
EASEL

IT PAYS
to make an attractive
LOBBY DISPLAY
Our Photo and Poster
Frames are it
Best Quality { Brass
Compoboard
Glass } Used
Hanging Frames - $4.00
Easel Frames - - $5.50
Write for our Prices on other styles
Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co.
355-9 W. 42d Street New York

HIGH GLOSS
POST CARDS
Of Association Moving Picture Players
Best and Highest Quality Made. 60
Different Kinds. Send for Samples
$2.50 Per 1000. Per 1000 $2.50
Assorted any way you want. We pay Express
Charges on all Orders
The KEYSTONE PRESS
12 East 15th Street, New York

Junior Professional Camera
and Film Making Outfit, simplest method, none better. World's greatest productions made with this camera. Expert advice and guarantee. Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Perforators, Raw Film, Lenses. Developing done, whole building to the business Write for catalogue.
Eberhard Schneider, 219 Second Ave., N. Y.

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
130 Kearny St., San Francisco. Cal.

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
Send for Booklet C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

SOUTHERN FILM SERVICE
Every Motion Picture Accessory.
Distributors Nicholas Power Products.
Phone, Preston 3162.
Southern Pacific Building :: HOUSTON, TEXAS

WRITE FOR COMPLETE LIST
of our features.
Booking "ZUKON" now,
also other big productions
M. & F. FEATURE CORPORATION
716 W. Washington Street Chicago, Ill.

The Strelinger catalogue of
BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
tells why direct current is very much better than alternating current for moving picture shows.
Send for it.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

EVERY MONTH

A FEATURE THAT IS A FEATURE

Watch these pages carefully for full particulars of our next Big Feature.

?

AMBROSIO

A Two Reel Release Every Saturday

JULY 19th
The Triumph of Strength

JULY 26th
The Missionary's Sister

Two "Rare" and "Refreshing" Subjects

Few states yet open for

"In the Claws of the Vulture"

A big thrilling production in three reels
Tons of publicity. Wire at once

Ambrosio American Co.
15 East 26th Street

the statue of Steven A. Douglas, who was born here.

Casseyville, Mo.—Four cars of a Vandalia passenger train are derailed at this town, injuring a score of passengers, two seriously.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—On the occasion of the 225th anniversary of the landing of the Huguenots the scene is re-enacted with the "Half Moon."

Woodmere, Long Island.—The dog show here brings out some fine specimens of collies, pomeranians, pekinese, fox hounds and bull terriers.

Comic Section.—Mutt fixes Jeff's automobile and has several pieces left over. Drawn by Bud Fisher.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 31, 1913 (July 10).—New York, N. Y.—The Abernathy kids, Louis, 13, and Temple, 9 years old, abandoning horses, arrive in this city on motor cycles, from Frederick, Okla.

Editorial Section.—In order that the thousands of children who are now prohibited to go to a motion picture theater without a guardian, Mrs. Laura Cogswell has founded the Children's Motion Picture League, enabling them to see good pictures under the most favorable conditions. Governor Sulzer sent a telegram commending this movement on the opening day.

New York, N. Y.—The Evening Sun starts its representative, John Henry Mears, on a trip around the world with instructions to "make it in 35 days."

Canton, Ohio.—The Bible class of the First Christian Bible School, which has grown from a membership of 200 to 5,000 in eleven years, poses for Pathe's Weekly. Attendance on the day this picture was taken, 3,241.

New York, N. Y.—The ship "Dina," with the Crocker Land Expedition on board, sails on a three-years' cruise of the Arctic.

Bath Beach, N. Y.—A novel craft, known as a "bathing boat," which is said to be absolutely unsinkable, theratens to become exceedingly popular.

Newport, R. I.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt is the guest of honor at the anniversary gathering of the Progressive National Service.

Bayonne, N. J.—A spectacular fire damages the Standard Oil plant to the extent of $350,000.00.

Comic Section.—Jeff writes a bee-u-tiful proposal and tries it out on Mutt. Drawn by Bud Fisher.

IN AND AROUND SCUTARI AFTER ITS CAPTURE (July 22).—A remarkable picture in and about the fortified city of Scutari, captured after a long seige by the Montenegrins in the late Balkan war. The hills of Tarabosch and Bardagnoll are shown, dotted here and there with abandoned cannon, in positions eloquent of the haste with which the Turks evacuated their posts. The dead lying in ghastly groups on the ground tells us of the terrible struggle. Within the city it is evident that the shells have done terrible damage and the starving children in the street bespeak of the horrors of the long seige.

IN WEIRD CRIMEA (July 22).—A view of this ancient country shows among other things a view of the abandoned city that was inhabited by the Skiffs about two thousand years ago. Monasteries cut from solid rock are perched on seemingly inaccessible points on the cliff and the scenery of the country as shown in the picture is wild, rugged and interesting.

A FALSE ACCUSATION (July 23).—In this picture of a mining camp in the West, a dramatic story is woven around a young miner and his desire for revenge, and a little Indian boy whose parental instinct is stirred by the sight of a pale-faced child's doll. In his anxiety to have a doll for his own, the little redskin appropriates a baby and the crime of kidnapping is fastened on a discharged miner. Just how the latter is captured and acquitted and what happened to the baby and the Indian boy make a mighty interesting picture, with many unusual features.

OPPORTUNITY AND A MILLION ACRES (July 24).—This picture is fascinating in its exposition of the vast possibilities of the enormous tract of land in Harney County, Oregon. The Central Oregon Railroad, constructed by J. J. Hill, the empire builder, to tap the fertile valleys of Oregon, has its terminus 150 miles away from this beautiful valley shown in the film. Homesteaders trailing in with old-fashioned prairie schooners, and taking up their homesteads, are shown, as are many views of the great waterway of Harney County, the irrigation canal, which took fifteen years to build and will make it possible for 20,000 families to live here and get rich.

THE ISLAND OF TONGA (July 24).—This little gem in the Pacific Ocean is the only independent monarchy left in the South Sea Islands. This picture gives us many interesting views of the life here in all its simplicity. The natives are very hospitable; they were warlike at one time, but now follow peaceful pursuits. The old dances, the manners and customs of the people, the way they live and the many interesting sidelights are all shown.

VIPERS AT HOME (July 25).—This is an excellent picture of a species of snake, the proper name for which is Viviparous, which means that they give birth to living young rather than hatching their young from eggs, as do other snakes. The vipers are always poisonous and usually have flat, triangular heads, thick bodies and stumpy tails. The effects of a viper bite vary in seriousness, producing nausea, unconsciousness and sometimes death. The catching of these snakes, the treating of the wounds, and the snake's habits are clearly shown, with clear, interesting sub-titles.

A TRIP TO THE GROTTOS OF BAUME (July 25).—This picturesque part of France is beautifully shown in this colored Patheplay. The marvelously interesting grottos attract the tourists from all over France and their far-famed beauties are shown with fidelity and naturalness peculiar to Pathe productions.

THE MAD SCULPTOR (July 26).—Mrs. Paul Wilbur, the wife of a famous sculptor, meets with a shocking accident. Grief unbalances the mind of the artist, and his cousin, Howard Ingraham, takes advantage of the sculptor's sad condition. Mrs. Wilbur recovers but is mourning her husband for dead when chance leads her to the spot where he has hidden and fate then deals a death blow to the plotting Howard Ingraham.

KALEM.

THE FIGHT AT GRIZZLY GULLY (Special—2 parts—July 16).—Wentworth, a young trader, bidding his wife and child good-bye, goes to the Indian camp, where he trades tobacco and trinkets for skins. When the trading is finished, Wentworth and the Indians are startled by the incantations of the Medicine Man. Upon inquiring, Wentworth learns that Starlight, the daughter of Chief Lone Hawk, is seriously ill, and realizing that the fanatical supplications of the Indians to the spirits will not do the sick girl any good, he ministers to her wants by giving her some of his medicine. This is observed by the Medicine Man, who vows that he will wreak vengeance upon the tribe if Wentworth is not gotten rid of. Whereupon, the Indians make the trader a prisoner. During the incarceration of Wentworth Starlight rapidly regains her strength, and one day she liberates him. Knowing that the tribe will seek revenge against her, she flees with the trader. They become separated on the desert, and Starlight manages to reach the post. The pursuing Indians are held in abeyance, and Starlight, full of gratitude for Wentworth, brings his wife and child to safety.

In the meantime, Wentworth meets a party of settlers, and as he is telling them his experience the Indians put in another appearance. They are again routed and Wentworth escapes. He makes his way to Fort Wilcox, where he informs the commander of the impending attack of the Indians. The troop is about to start out to quell the outbreak when Starlight and Wentworth's wife and child are sighted. The women are cared for. The Indians, who have returned home are rejoicing, when their festivities are interrupted by the troops. Starlight has followed the soldiers, and from a neighboring hill she sees how the tribe is wiped out and the wigwams burned. She goes back to the fort, where she begs the Wentworths to make her their servant, as she is without a home.

THE SMUGGLER (July 19).—The Federal authorities receive advices concerning the operations of a clever diamond smuggler and Jim Meyers is instructed to make an investigation. A foreign dealer comes under the detective's observation, but Meyers is unable to fix definite suspicion on any of the customers. Meyers does not permit himself to become discouraged and embarks on an ocean vessel, which, he is led to believe, has the smuggler as a passenger.

While promenading, he notices a porter shining a young lady's shoes. A peculiar accident brings to his notice the fact that the heel of one of the shoes has an unusual appearance. Determined to follow every possible clue, he bides his time and locates the girl's stateroom.

Later Meyers succeeds in entering the room and discovers the shoes. His suspicions are confirmed when he finds several large diamonds concealed in one of the heels, but the unexpected entrance of the fair passenger's maid causes him to change his plans and he pretends that he has entered the room by mistake.

The maid, who is the real smuggler, becomes suspicious and cuts her mistress' shoe. Discovering the condition of the shoes, Ethel gives them to the maid. This is just what the smuggler has anticipated and she secures the jewels, only to fall into a trap which the resourceful Meyers has prepared.

A BOLT FROM THE SKY (July 21).—Jack Towers, a young and prosperous broker, receives a call from Walter Prentice, an old college chum whom he has not seen for years. Walter informs Jack that he is now the manager of the Prentice Detective Agency. That night Jack goes to visit his sweetheart, Wynne, the daughter of Carter, a noted scientist. She gives him the answer which he has long awaited, but informs him that he must ask the father, who at that time is strolling about the lawn, lost in meditation.

The butler has asked for an hour to go and visit his aged parents. As he passes out of the grounds he sees Jack and Carter engaged in a spirited altercation. The father does not wish to give his daughter in marriage and also resents Jack's interruption.

Jack returns to Wynne and bids her a curt goodbye. She goes into the lawn to seek an

OUR NEXT RELEASE will be

THE FALLEN STAR

in 4 parts

The most pathetic story ever filmed appealing to every audience.

DON'T MISS booking
all our big WINNERS

KARAMBO
5 parts

GENISSAR
4 parts

IN THE DAYS of
KING SOLOMON
4 parts

THE JAIL BIRDS
3 parts

REMEMBER that all the above can be booked
ONLY through

Feature Film
Company

127 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.
108 East 12th St., New York

Helen Gardner
in
The Wife of Cain

An Original Romance of the Primal, in three parts

Copyrighted by Helen Gardner 1913. All rights reserved.

Written and Directed by
CHARLES L. GASKILL

Sold Only On State-Right Plan. Wire for Particulars

Everybody who has exhibited "Cleopatra" has made big profits. Everybody who exhibits "The Wife of Cain" will also make big profits. Don't delay a day if you are interested—the history of the sale of "Cleopatra" rights is a history of nine who waited and one who acted.

Helen Gardner
in
"A Sister to Carmen"

A brilliant story of Carmen. Plus
Will be ready for delivery July 15

The Wife of Cain

PRODUCED BY THE Helen Gardner Picture Players in Miss Gardner's Studio at Tappan-on-the-Hudson New York, U. S. A.

Chas. L. Fuller Company

Sole Selling agents for the
HELEN GARDNER PICTURE PLAYERS
472 Fulton Street Brooklyn, N.Y., U. S. A.
Telephone 758 Main

explanation from the old gentleman and is horrified to find him stretched on the ground—dead. Controlling herself, Wynne telephones to Jack, knowing he was the last person with the scientist. The butler returns and discovers the young couple carrying the body into the house. Believing his suspicions to be confirmed, he secures an officer and demands Jack's arrest.

The young broker begs for time and summons his old friend, Prentice, who establishes the fact that the old scientist was struck by a meteoric fragment.

THE TENDERFOOT'S LUCK (July 23).—Jim, newly arrived from Maine, informs the miners that he has come to find gold and declares he will stay on the job until he makes good. Pete, Steve and Hoover, three rough westerners, resolve to put one over on the newcomer. They visit the store and secure a bottle of gilt paint, with which they make some nuggets (?). The fool gold is placed on Jim's claim, where he will be sure to find it.

The practical jokers have the time of their lives at Jim's expense. Each has at some time proposed to Jean, the belle of the mining camp, and each has been refused. The fact that the newcomer is also a suitor brings them further satisfaction.

But Jean is not an ordinary village belle. Not she! When Jim brings her the fool gold and paints a vivid word picture of his future, she goes to the claim to point out his mistake and locates the richest find in the history of the camp.

HISTORIC SAVANNAH, GEORGIA (July 23).—This visit to the famous southern city, Savannah, Georgia, proves an interesting one indeed. We see the mansion at the Hermitage, owned by the McAlpin family since 1819, and the old slave huts; Fort Oglethorpe; revolutionary guns, buried during the Revolution and resurrected in Civil War times; the old hospital destroyed by Sherman in 1864; Christ Church, the original Sunday school of John Wesley—the home of Methodism; Sherman's headquarters on his famous march to the sea; St. John's Church, where President Wilson was married; the shipping of cotton and many other interesting sights.

BAFFLED, NOT BEATEN (July 25).—Harold Baker, assistant city attorney, is in love with Claire. Richard Carlton, her father—the president of the United Traction Company, objects to the match and tells Harold that he will have to prove his worth before he can expect to win the girl's hand. He promises to consent to their marriage on the day that Harold wins his first big case. Several days later action is brought against the traction company by the city and Harold is assigned to prosecute the case. Carlton is alarmed, as it may mean the loss of the franchise and he engages a clever but unscrupulous lawyer to defend him. Harold writes to Claire telling her of his case and says that he will carry all important documents on his person. Claire misses the letter and immediately notifies Harold. He will not take any chances and prepares a dummy package which he puts in his pocket, placing the important papers in the safe.

Carlton's lawyer has secured Claire's letter and determines to gain possession of the papers. He hires a number of thugs who assault Harold and carry him away in an automobile. They throw him from the moving machine after obtaining the dummy package which they think contains the valuable documents.

On the day of the trial Harold finds himself weak and bandaged in a hospital. He insists upon dressing and leaves against the doctor's advice. He rushes to his office, finds the papers intact and reaches the court room just in time to save the day.

Although Harold has defeated him, Carlton proves himself a man of his word by consenting to the marriage.

THE MOONSHINER'S MISTAKE (July 26).—Bud, a mountain youth, operates an illicit "still." Myra, his sweetheart, objects to his mode of earning a living and pleads with him to give it up. Bud laughs at the girl and tells her that women know nothing of the sterner affairs of men. She loves him dearly and when she finds that she cannot dissuade him from his illegal work, she determines to destroy the "still."

Dick Hartley, an author, is roaming through the mountains in search of local color. He takes lodgings at Myra's cabin and Bud, jealous of his sweetheart, immediately becomes suspicious. The young man quickly allays his suspicions, however, and gradually wins his confidence and respect. The gift of a fancy fishing outfit firmly cements the friendship.

Myra steals away one afternoon carrying an axe. She goes to the "still" and smashes the large retorts and demijohns of contraband liquor.

Bud promises to show Hartley how to make moonshine. They start out through the woods together. While some distance away Bud suddenly halts, quickly raises his rifle to his shoulder and fires. He has seen the dim figure of his sweetheart in the distance, breaking up his plant and mistakes her for a revenue officer. The two men run forward where the mountaineer discovers to his sorrow that he has shot Myra. Full of remorse, he carries the girl to her mother's cabin, with Hartley's aid.

Myra is only slightly wounded and gladly forgives Bud when he promises to seek a legitimate way of earning his living.

Picture Theatres Projected

Rochester, N. Y.—Vincenzo Pieroni, 400 State street, will soon start work on the remodeling and additions to his three-story moving picture theater, to cost $8,000.

San Diego, Cal.—San Diego Railway Company will make improvements to their Mission Cliff Gardens. The work includes an organ recital building, to cost $50,000, and an open air theater, to seat 1,500 people.

Topeka, Kan.—L. M. & Roy Crawford, 106 East 8th street, have completed plans for the remodeling of their theater and additions to the stage to cost $6,500.

Waukesha, Wis.—G. Fullson & Son have plans under way for a one-story theater, store and office building, 60 by 150 feet, to cost $30,000.

Detroit, Mich.—Avenue Theater Company will remodel the entrance to their theater to cost $2,000.

Detroit, Mich.—H. B. Clemens, 608 Sun Building, will remodel a commercial building into a theater, to cost $20,000. It will have a seating capacity for 300.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Capital City Amusement Company, 914 Hume-Mansen Building, have completed plans, and will build, by days' labor, a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $10,000. It will have seating capacity for 600.

Canton, O.—Bocklus Realty Company, 410 City National Bank Building, have plans under way for a one-story theater and store building, 185.7 by 66.11 feet.

Cuyahoga Falls, O.—Schippacassee Brothers, proprietors of the Heidelburg Cafe, Main street, Akron, O., have received estimates for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 100 feet, to cost $6,000. It will seat 600.

Baltimore, Md.—Garnett Y. Clark, 1009 Calvert Building, and others interested in the project, have plans under consideration for the erection of a one-story moving picture and vaudeville theater, 33 by 160 feet.

Lewisburg, Pa.—Dr. S. S. Kosen, Market street, has completed plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 32 by 87 feet, to cost $5,000.

Red Lion, Pa.—This borough will take bids shortly for the building of a two-story theater, 70 by 120 feet, to cost $20,000.

Chester, Pa.—Mr. Conness, Wilmington, Del., has plans under way for a one-story moving picture theater, 90 by 142 feet, to cost $25,000.

Brackenridge, Pa.—B. Herskoortz, Tarentum, Pa., will build a three-story theater, store and apartment building, 40 by 132 feet, to cost $28,000.

East Orange, N. J.—East Orange Realty Company, Thomas Hicks, treasurer, has received estimates for a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 50 by 100 feet, to cost $20,000.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—H. B. Welsh, Echo avenue, contemplates building a one-story moving picture theater on Rose street.

New York, N. Y.—Raffaele Marrazzi, 408 East 116th street, will shortly receive bids for alterations to the Liberty Theater, to cost $8,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Sauer & Hahn are preparing plans and specifications for a moving picture theater to be built on York road, below Lycoming street. The building will have a capacity of 500 persons and will measure 30 by 30 feet.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Bertram Ireland, Bartlett Building, has completed plans and is receiving bids on a three-story brick, granite and bluestone theater and apartment house, 46 by 150 feet, to be erected on Arkansas avenue for Frank Ruffu. Estimated cost, $50,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—H. D. Prettymen and H. Shetzline are preparing plans and specifications for exterior and interior alterations and additions to a moving picture theater, 2214 South Broad street.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Smith, Hardigan Company, are estimating on plans and specifications for alterations to a moving picture theater at 1211 Market street, for Masthaum Bros. & Fleisher.

MAKE YOUR OWN SLIDES
WITHOUT AID OF PHOTOGRAPHY
From Newspaper Cuts, Post Cards, Etc. Announcement Slides, Advertising Slides, Slides from Political Office Seekers' Cards, just the thing for elections. Slides can be made in a few minutes, plain or in colors. Where colored picture is used, colors will appear on slide same as in original. Complete outfit and directions, $1.00.
MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO.
313 Ramge Bldg. Dept. W Omaha, Neb.

KLIEGLIGHT ARC LAMP
Universally recognized as the best light producing apparatus for taking motion pictures.
Universal Electric Stage Lighting Co.
Kliegl Bros., Props.
240 West 50th Street - - New York

MAILING LISTS
17,000 Moving Picture Theaters, United States, Canada, Panama, Manila and Hawaii, $40.00 or $3.50 per thousand by States.
547 Film Exchanges, U. S. and Canada..$3.50
52 Moving Picture Mfrs. and Studios.... 1.00
536 Moving Picture Theaters, Foreign Countries 8.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries... 2.00
Ask for detailed specification and "Silent Salesman" showing over 2,000 other Mailing Lists; Free. Send check with order.
Trade Circular Addressing Company
Desk B 166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880. Phone: Franklin 1182-1183.

We have a Catalogue of full line of Moving Picture Machine repair parts ready to put in your machine at reduced prices. We make them, and for that reason can sell them very low. We also sell Stereopticons for $12.00; Calcium Jets, $3.00; 100 Carbons, $2.00; Condensers, 55c; Arc Lamps, $2.25; Stereopticon Lenses, 50c.; Slide Carriers, 25c; Moving Picture Objectives, $3.75; Jackets, $1.75; Ticket Holders, 75c.; Rheostats, $4.00; 50 Candle Power Stereopticon Lamps, 75c.
L. HETZ, 302 East 23rd Street, New York City

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US!
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176 N. State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

SHERLOCK HOLMES SERIES
Eight subjects to choose from—two reels each. Territory in Indiana, Kentucky, Wisconsin (south of Green Bay), Illinois (north of Springfield).
Almo Feature Film Co. (Inc.)
D. W. McKinney, Mgr.
36 W. Randolph St. Chicago
Phone, Randolph 2345

ELECTRIC EXHAUST FANS
Twenty-four-inch, $80. Thirty-inch, $110. New 16" Straight Alternating Current Fans, $12.50 each. All General Electric make and for alternating current, 1 phase, 60 cycle, 110 volt.
GEORGE BENDER
82 Centre Street, New York City

STATE RIGHT BUYERS "THE FORTUNE HUNTER" DON'T WAIT —WIRE NOW
IN FIVE PARTS
The highest interest is maintained throughout this film by hair-raising races between automobiles, trains, airships, boats, dynamiting of a bridge, etc. We have a fine line of advertising. 1, 3 and 6 sheet posters.
ROMA AMERICAN FILM CO., 145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

What, yet something new? Yes! and something you cannot afford to miss — Look here: —

3 REELS THE MISSING WOMAN 3 REELS

Featuring Miss Margaret Henblee, of New York, who takes the dual role of The Missing Woman and her twin sister.

This production is one of outstanding interest, and in combination with the special nature of photography makes this a thrilling picture full of true life and punch.

STATE RIGHTS — 1, 3 and 6 Sheet Posters, Photographs, Heralds, &c. — STATE RIGHTS

ALSO

3 REELS PIERROT'S LOVE 3 REELS

A beautiful story and one of unbounding interest — full of real life, keeps one spellbound until the finish.

STATE RIGHTS — 1, 3 and 6 Sheet Posters, Photographs, Heralds, &c. — STATE RIGHTS

Watch our page week after week for the following Manufacturers' Productions for which we are Sole Agents for U. S. A. and Canada:

Danish Kinographen Film, Royal Films, Vienna Kungst Films, Tyler Films, Cosmo Films, &c., &c.

NOTE 3 FEATURES PER WEEK 3

FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA, Inc.

110-112 West 40th Street Telephone 3095 Bryant New York City

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

NESTOR.

THE RANGER'S WAY (July 21).—Carl is a ranger. He would wed the ranchman's daughter, Dorothy, only her father tells him that he must wait until he can properly provide her with a home. Carl comes across some smouldering ashes and a broken branding iron excites his suspicion. He soon afterwards receives a dispatch telling him that the rustler, Tramo, and his gang, are in Carl's district, and that $5,000 is offered for their capture. In the meantime, Dorothy has accidentally stumbled upon the rustlers, who take her to an abandoned shack and bind her to a chair, leaving men to guard her, so that she cannot give them away until they have escaped. Tramo sets out to reconnoitre. He sees Carl and fires from the shelter of the bushes, wounding the young ranger in the leg. He scribbles a note, calling for help, and ties it to the latigo of his saddle and starts his horse off. Carl is captured and taken to the shack, where he is surprised to see Dorothy bound.

The rancher and some rangers see the horse, and knowing it is Carl's investigate. They find the note and set out to rescue him. Tamo sits in the shack and taunts Carl, who, getting an idea, begs the rustler to give him a cigar he has in his pocket. Tramo laughs and putting the cigar in Carl's mouth, lights it for him and goes to prepare for his departure. Carl gets it well alight, and putting it against the cords which bind him, gradually burns the strands. He springs up and grapples with Tramo, who enters to get his belongings. As they struggle the rancher and rangers see the rustlers, and after a brief struggle capture them. Carl overpowers Tramo and cuts Dorothy's bonds and the rancher is bound, perforce, to agree to the young people's union, especially as Carl is entitled to the reward.

THEIR LUCKY DAY (July 25).—Hall rooms are not cheerful, even when one's rent is paid and one has dined, but when the landlady stares you in the eyes and your middle zone is vacant, hall rooms are unbearable. Our two actor friends' long experience had taught them to smile, even at misfortune; so braving the ogress in the hall, they descend to the street, smiling. At the corner of Broad street the boys almost collide with Hal Bland, who very enthusiastically tells of his engagement at the Savoy. An engagement! Ha! that's what the boys want. Forthwith they storm the Savoy, but the manager says "Cast is full just now." The boys' hearts sink as they picture the landlady in the hall waiting. But the manager says, "The leading man I'm afraid won't quite do, so leave your address with me in case of a change." Bowing politely the boys leave. The landlady, backed by a burly janitor, forbids their entrance to their room, so with knowledge born of many similar experiences, the boys climb up the fire escape. "Eats" they must have, and Jimmie is dispatched with their last valuable to gain the sinkers and coffee necessary to existence. Mac determines on a bath—a luxury which may not be in reach soon again—and disrobing, seeks the tub.

Meanwhile, the landlady enters the room with her janitor, and loads all the clothing—Mac's included—into a trunk and decamps. Mac appears to investigate the noise, and finds the only costume left him is his bathrobe. The phone rings at this crisis, and the Savoy manager demands his instant appearance for rehearsal, as the leading man. Jimmie, doing second-story work, via the fire escape, enters, but poor Mac cannot eat for worrying. Suddenly an idea comes—Jimmie has clothes. To be sure, Jimmie is 5 ft. 6, and Mac is 6 ft. 2, but the change is made, and with the addition of gauntlets, puttees and a crop, Mac sallies into the Savoy looking very sporty. Jimmie, in bath robe, is startled by a key turning in his door, and dashes into the bathroom. The landlady now enters with two gushing girls. These she establishes, and to Jimmie's horror, they begin to unpack.

Meanwhile, Mac has made good at rehearsal, and is invited to lunch with the leading lady. Now, remembering his short sleeves, Mac affects a mannerism and refuses to remove his gloves. Jimmie's last stronghold—the bathroom—is assaulted by the girls, who call the landlady and janitor to assist them. Seeing escape impossible, Jimmie drops out the window, almost on top of a burly policeman, who, when he recovers from his surprise, pursues the already fleeing Jimmie. The leading lady and Mac rescue Jimmie from the law and a "touching" appeal to the manager puts all things right, even to the reinstatement of the boys in the first floor bedroom by the landlady.

IMP.

THE YOGI (July 31).—Chinn Achma Chewat, real name Jim Morrisey, has been reaping a fat harvest from credulous women who have arrived at the dissatisfied age. He learns of the death of William Curten, the steel magnate, who has left an enormous fortune to his widow, well known for her interest in spiritual matters. One of the fakir's cults knows the widow and she is thus brought under the fakir's influence, he using the wiles of his kind, and by the aid of a niece gets the rich widow completely under his control, she being especially affected by supposed messages from her dead husband.

The widow's son, left in charge of his father's business, has fought in vain to cure his mother of her belief in the fakir, but is forced to stand helpless, and watch his mother give large sums of money to the man. The niece of the fakir, who is heartily ashamed of her share in the trickery, meets the son and an affection grows between them. Learning later in the game that it is his mother that is being so terribly duped, she confesses her shame to the man she has grown to love. With her aid the widow is shown the utter ridiculousness of the fakir's claims to the supernatural by a materialism of her own son who calmly steps out of the supposed thin air and exposes the whole cheap machinery to his mother. The fakir has not even needed to use the clever illusions used by stage magicians, and she shamefacedly realizes that she has been the most gullible of dupes. Her son takes the girl away from her tricky uncle and aunt, and his mother is persuaded to look favorably upon the young couple's imminent marriage. The fakir, given twelve hours to leave the city, is forced to close and with his accomplices, seeks new fields of somewhat honest endeavor.

POWERS.

BILLY'S MAGIC NICKEL (July 23).—Gordon and Billy are rivals for Betty's favors, and vie with each other in bestowing attentions upon her. During the school hour, Gordon sees Billy give Betty some candy, and not possessing any material sweets, he sends her a note of the "roses are red, violets blue," etc. Gordon does not toss the note far enough, and unfortunately it falls upon the floor. The teacher, attracted by the mirth of the children, finds the note, and as a punishment for the misdemeanor, Gordon is kept after school. He sees the fickle Betty walk away with his rival, enjoying the sweetmeats he gave her. The teacher lectures Gordon and sends him home.

Upon coming out of school, he immediately looks for Betty but cannot find her. He is sore and jealous and walks along kicking his toe on the ground. He kicks up a nickel, and realizes with the nickel he has a chance to win Betty back. He rushes up to the school children, asking for Betty, but they merely laugh at him. He foregoes the longing to spend the nickel for sweets, and decides to postpone his conquest until the next day. He is put to bed that night and goes to sleep still holding the nickel. Gordon dreams that his nickel is a lot of money, and that he is going to spend it all on Betty. He buys a pony and cart and goes to her home. He takes Betty for a drive, telling her of his good fortune. They come to where the children are playing soldiers, Billy being the captain. Gordon tells the children of his good fortune and invites them all to ride with him and have a good time. The children take the sword away from Billy and give it to Gordon, signifying that he is now their captain. They all march off behind Gordon, leaving Billy alone, sulking. They arrive at a push cart with fruit. Gordon orders a charge and they do, upsetting the fellow and the fruit all over. They scramble for the fruit while the man calls a policeman. When the policeman arrives, Gordon bribes him. The policeman lets the children escape, and arrests the fruit vendor. They next make a raid on a bakery store. The children swoop down upon a tray of fresh tarts and pies, while Gordon pays the damages. Billy trails behind and steals a pie from one of the little girls.

Gordon takes them to a toy shop, where he orders them all fitted up as Indians and cowboys, purchases tepees, wooden horses, and a camp outfit. Gordon pays and they leave. One youngster, straggling along alone, is caught by Billy, who takes the horse away the child is riding, and follows the rest, having purchased an outfit with a bill Gordon dropped outside of the toy shop. They start their Indian village, and during Gordon's absence, Billy rides in, scatters the tribe and struggles to carry Betty away. Gordon hears her screams and rescues her. At this point he wakes up, realizes it was only a dream, but finds his nickel still tightly clutched in his hand, and goes back to sleep. The next morning Gordon encounters Betty and Billy together, and as he bows low to her, they laugh and start away. Gordon shows Betty the nickel, and the fickle little miss immediately deserts Billy for his rival. The two repair to the nearest soda fountain where they order "one vanilla with two straws," while the angry Billy watches them through the window.

MENTAL SUICIDE (July 25).—Neilan, an architect, young and ambitious, having graduated with honors, procures a position as assistant in the city architect's office. Although hearts are willing, his love affair with Toddles seems hopeless owing to Toddles' sense of duty as a sister to Pauline, an invalid. Neilan calls upon Toddles and presses her for a definite answer to his proposal. Toddles refuses, telling him she cannot marry while her sister lives. Pauline suffers a relapse, due to her mental agitation, and the doctor advises Toddles that the only hope of prolonging Pauline's life is the South American climate. Toddles, in despair, appeals to her lawyer, and he informs her that their inheritance is nearly exhausted. When Neilan calls she tells him of their difficulties and he generously offers all the money he possesses, but to her dismay, she finds that the funds will not be sufficient to cover the expenses of such a trip. Neilan returns to the office, too despondent to work. When his clerk brings in two bids on a city contract for him to inspect, he lays them aside and broods over Pauline's illness. Kirkland, one of the contractors submitting a bid, calls upon Neilan and offers five thousand dollars for an acceptance of his bid. Neilan indignantly orders him from the office, but later, thinking it over, sees a chance for sending Pauline to South America and himself and Toddles happy. He runs after the contractor and tells him he agrees to accept the bribe.

Kirkland immediately goes to his hotel and passing Reid, the other contractor, at the entrance, laughingly sneers at him. Reid is suspicious of Kirkland's attitude and follows him. He sees Kirkland seated at one of the hotel desks near the window, writing. Reid enters the hotel and comes up just as Kirkland is leaving. He sits down at the desk Kirkland has just vacated, still perplexed and suspicious, and finds the blotter which Kirkland had used. On it is an imprint of the check Kirkland had drawn, payable to Neilan. Reid takes the blotter and hurriedly leaves.

Pauline, in the meantime, weighed down by her hopeless illness and feeling herself a barrier to Toddles, is sinking rapidly, and Toddles hurriedly sends for the doctor. Neilan, in his office, receives the check which Kirkland sent by messenger, but very shortly thereafter Reid calls and confronts Neilan with the evidence of the blotter and succeeds in convincing Neilan that he is doing wrong. Neilan tears the check up, whereupon Reid also tears the damaging evidence against him. Later, when Kirkland calls for the acceptance of his bid, Neilan hands him the torn check. When the doctor arrives at Toddles' urgent calls he finds Pauline dying and sends Toddles from the room. When Neilan comes to tell Toddles of his failure to raise the necessary money for Pauline's trip, he meets the doctor coming from the house, who informs him of Pauline's death.

BISON.

WHEN SHERMAN MARCHED TO THE SEA (3 parts—July 19).—Mrs. Margaret Oswald, a wealthy widow, lives on her plantation near the seacoast at Savannah, Georgia, and with her are her two grown sons, Robert and Jack, and her daughter, Gertie, the latter being aged seven years. Henry Bennett is overseer of the negro slaves on the plantation. Robert is opposed to slavery and announces his intention to go north and fight with Lincoln's men. Jack denounces Robert's sentiments. Overseer Bennett treats the slaves cruelly, and Bob thrashes him, incurring Bennett's hatred. Jeff Davis calls for more volunteers to strengthen the rebel army. Phyllis, daughter of a widow living near the Oswald plantation, is betrothed to Robert, but condemns his Union sentiments and returns the engagement ring. Bob goes north and enlists in the Federal army. Jack joins the Confederate troops. Overseer Bennett travels north and joins the Union forces and acts as a Confederate spy.

Three years then elapse. Jack is shown serving in the Confederate army Secret Service, and is given a message by General Hardee to take to General Brown, advising Hardee that Sherman's "bummers" are nearing Savannah. Sherman's camp is shown, where Robert is a Union officer and is sent by Sherman to destroy a bridge across Turner's Bay near the Oswald home. Robert's brother, Jack, carrying Hardee's message, arrives at the bridge when Robert and his soldiers begin putting powder under the timbers. Phyllis and Gertie, on an outing, arrive at the bridge. Robert meets Jack and demands the message. A fight follows. Jack is arrested and led away. Union and rebel troops arrive and fight a battle on the bridge, the Unionists being victorious. The retreating rebels are reinforced and return, whereupon Bob gives the word and the bridge is blown up, the structure and the rebels being wiped out. General Sherman, when Jack is brought in as a prisoner, orders him shot as a spy. Bennett, serving in Sherman's army as a secret aid to the Confederacy, determines to help Jack escape and make it appear that Robert, who once thrashed Bennett, aided his brother Jack to get away. Gertie leaves home and makes her way into Sherman's camp to aid her condemned brother Robert. Bennett steals Robert's coat and hat out of his tent and gives them the guard's attention and Jack escapes. Bennett falsely accuses Bob and the latter is sentenced to be shot. Bennett, later, is mortally wounded and tells Sherman that Robert is innocent, obtaining Robert's exoneration and release from custody. Robert and a detachment

Gaumont Regular

RELEASES

JULY 9	Gaumont Weekly, No. 70.	1 Sheet Posters
JULY 10	A Trombone Marathon.	“ “
JULY 15	(2 Reels) With Honor At Stake.	1 and 3 Sheet Posters
JULY 16	Gaumont Weekly, No. 71.	1 Sheet Posters
JULY 17	The Tiny Troubadour.	“ “
JULY 22	Palmistry.	“ “
JULY 23	Gaumont Weekly, No. 72.	“ “
JULY 24	When the Cards Were Shuffled. Through Mountains Majestic.	“ “ “ “

ALL UP TO GAUMONT'S USUAL HIGHEST STANDARD

FANTOMAS No. 1, Released July 15th. Get This!

RELEASES

Gaumont Co.

FLUSHING, N. Y.

AKC AKC

“LET US HEAR FROM YOU”

AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION

Present the Great Two Reel “Peerless” Drama:

“FROM OUT THE DEPTHS”

Describing a faithful wife's successful redemption of her erring husband from a life of crime

Boost with our Magnificent Paper, 1's, 3's 6's, Heralds, Slides, Cuts, 10 Set Photos, Etc.

AKC are now copyrighting a magnificent Hepworth Three Reel Historical Feature

“THE LOVE ROMANCE OF ADMIRAL SIR FRANCIS DRAKE:
The Gallant Sea Dog who defeated the Spanish Armada in 1588”

AMERICAN
KINETO
CORPORATION

Telephone No.
BRYANT
4276

1018 LONGACRE BLDG.
BROADWAY AT 42ND ST.
NEW YORK CITY

AKC AKC

are sent on a scouting trip. They learn that a rebel troop train is coming and plant powder under the railroad track. When the train is over the powder, the fuse is ignited and the explosion destroys the locomotive, cars and the rebel troops. Sherman orders his cavalry scouts to patrol the ocean shore near Fort McAllister. Jack and fifty rebel cavalrymen stop on the seashore beneath a cliff fifty feet high, when the tide waves roll against the base of the cliff. About sixty of Sherman's mounted soldiers, including Robert, meet the rebel cavalrymen at the cliff shore and a thrilling, spectacular battle ensues in water four feet deep. General Sherman, on top of the cliff, directs the fire of artillerymen on the rebels below. Many of the warring cavalrymen are shot off their horses and their bodies toss in the surf. The Union cavalrymen finally win the battle. Phyllis arrives, sees her brother wounded in the surf, and wades out and rescues him. Jack dies on the shore rocks, Robert arriving at his side in time to hear his brother's last words of forgiveness.

CRYSTAL.

THE BROKEN SPELL (July 22).—Bob's father dies, leaving his entire estate to Bob. The young man, immensely wealthy, is looked upon by everybody in the county in which he lives as a very desirable husband. Bob and Mary, the pretty country miss, are sweethearts. Valerie Monroe, a worldly woman from the city, is out automobiling in the country and stops for refreshments at the farm of Mary's people. There she meets Bob, and upon being informed that he is a very wealthy young man, designs to get some of his fortune. She leaves and Bob sees her to her automobile. She invites him to visit her in the city and he seems to have fallen to her charms. Later he determines to visit the city and try and see a little of life outside of the hum-drum country existence he has always lived. He visits Valerie and, being smitten with her beauty, falls in love with her. She works a game on him and writes a letter to herself which informs her that the mortgage on her father's homestead is due and about to be foreclosed unless two thousand dollars is paid at once. She shows Bob the letter purporting to have been written by her father to her and he offers to give her the money. She demurely refuses, but eventually accepts. She managed things so that upon each of Bob's visits her child Rose has been absent from the house and he never suspects that she is a married woman and has a growing child. Bob, walking along the street the next day, saves a child from being run over by a runaway horse. He then continues on his way to Valerie's home. Previous to this he had written Mary that he liked the city exceptionally well and telling her he did not think that he would return to the country. The poor girl is nearly heartbroken. Bob arrives at Valerie's house and does not mention anything about the runaway. The child returns while Bob is there, and, upon seeing him, informs her mother that Bob saved her life. Valerie thanks Bob as only a mother can, but the poor boy, enamoured as he was, only to discover that the recipient of his honest intentions was a married woman who has used him as a plaything to extort money from, rushes from the house. Just as he is about to leave, Valerie's maid arrives and gives him a letter from Valerie. She writes that she is more than grateful for his action in saving the only being on earth that she really has any love for, and returns his money. Bob hastens home and finding Mary still waiting for him, clasps her in his arms and vows never to leave her or his country home again.

COLLEGE CHUMS (July 27).—Chester Barnett and Joe Belmont are two college chums. Chester invites Pearl to go with him to the concert of the Glee Club, to be held Saturday afternoon. Charlotte, who is Joe's girl, receives the same invitation from Joe. Saturday the girls are all dressed and await their respective sweethearts. Chester meets Joe on the street and Joe suggests a ball game as the proper place to go to while away the time until their appointment with the girls. They go and become so interested in the game, which is exciting, that they forget all about the girls. Meanwhile the girls await them, waxing angrier every minute. Late that afternoon the boys visit their girls and each is accorded a very warm reception and is shown the door. They meet and tell each other of their misfortune. Joe lights upon a scheme. He telephones Pearl that Chester has been run over by an automobile and is badly hurt. Pearl buys some flowers and visits Chester, whom she finds in bed, with a leg greatly bandaged and with Joe attending him. Chester telephones Charlotte the next day that Joe has met with an accident and that he is stopping at his house. Charlotte buys a large basket of fruit and calls on her beau. She finds him in mortal pain, and makes up with him. After she leaves the boys dance around and sing. Pearl arrives and meets Charlotte as she is leaving. They return and find the boys in the midst of their revelry. Their villainy being exposed the girls leave them and refuse to talk to them any more, going home to sympathize with each other as best they can and leaving the boys in more of a dilemma than before.

BELMONT STUNG (July 27).—Belmont and Violet are friends. He pays her attentions after having quarrelled with Ethel. Ethel, though a great friend of Violet's, still likes Belmont and is jealous of his attentions to Violet. Belmont visits Violet, but before arriving there, stops at a drug store and seeing an advertisement of a hair restorer, buys a bottle, his hair having begun to fall out. Violet, who had a slight growth of hair on her face, had bought a hair remover and was showing it to Ethel when Belmont arrived. Violet leaves the former sweetheart alone while she goes out to make lemonade. Belmont turns his back to Ethel and reads a book. Ethel determines to get even, and excuses herself for a few moments. She takes the two bottles with her and, putting them in water, removes the labels from the bottles. She then pastes the hair remover on the hair restorer bottle and puts them back where they were before she took them away. Belmont leaves, taking his bottle with him. That evening he applies the supposed hair restorer and before he knows it, he is totally bald. Violet uses the hair restorer on her face, thinking that in the morning when she awoke her face would show no more signs of hair. The next day Belmont awakens and looking in the mirror is given the shock of his life. He rushes to Violet's house and shows her his bald pate. His surprise is greater, however, when she turns toward him and he sees her face is adorned with a full growth of beard, both bottles having performed their mission. Belmont takes one look at the girl of his dreams and faints dead away.

We buy and sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines

WESTERN FILM BROKERS

538 S. Dearborn Street Chicago, Ill.

SLIDE MATS

Standard Size

1000	$2.50	10,000	$22.50
5000	12.00	20,000	42.00

5000 Binding Strips $3.00. Cash with order

Heese Printing Co. 1320 Main Street Kansas City, Mo.

Changeable Illuminated

PROGRAM SIGN

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

ZENITH MFG. CO.

Box 252 Cincinnati, Ohio

Motion Picture Annual and Year Book for 1912

contains, among other things, a Business Directory and Complete Alphabetical List of Films released during 1912. Paper Covers, $1.25. Postage Free. MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., N. Y. City.

FULTON'S A-to-Z LIST

Pocket Edition 120 Pages

Illustrates, describes and prices everything used in or about the Motion Picture Theatre and in the allied industries. Costs you nothing. Worth its weight in gold.

E. E. FULTON —152— W. LAKE STREET CHICAGO

Motion Pictures To Order!

Our work is Conscientious and Painstaking. Printing and Developing for the trade. Our Laboratories are thoroughly equipped.

Duhem & Harter Motion Picture Co.

652 Oak Street San Francisco, Calif.

THE B and H STANDARD FILM REEL

11 in. diameter, 5 in. core, metal bushed thimble, accurately made of high grade material. Relieves extraordinary strain on film, saves 50% of operator's time in rewinding.

BELL AND HOWELL COMPANY

217 W. Illinois St., Chicago, Ills.

DO YOU WANT YOUR THEATRE TO BE POPULAR?
DO YOU WANT YOUR PATRONS SATISFIED?
DO YOU WANT A COMPLETE PROGRAM?
DO YOU WANT YOUR RECEIPTS DOUBLED?

THEN BOOK

SATAN, or The Drama of Humanity

IN FOUR PARTS

We own the following States:
New York, North and South Dakota and Minnesota.
Wire, write or phone for open time. Get busy.

The SUPREME FEATURE FILM CO., 64 E. 14th St., New York City

Decorative Material

For use in Theatres, Cafes, Restaurants, etc.

French Landscape and Figure Subjects
in Natural Colorings

Reproductions of Grecian and Pompeian Processional Friezes

Lin-O-Wall
An imperishable wall decoration in solid relief

Aerochrome
A novel wall decoration in multi-color blends

Panoramic Friezes in Great Variety

Illustrations in color with quotations upon request. Plans or Suggestions free of cost.

NEW YORK
890-892 Broadway

Henry Bosch Company

CHICAGO
521-527 S. Wabash Ave.

Did You Read our big ad in the Convention Number? Well, here we are again to tell you, Mr. Exhibitor, that the best investment you now can make in this hot fall-off-of-business-season is to get a set of

DEAGAN'S

Marvelous Musical Novelty Instruments

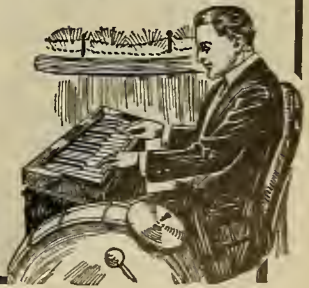
OPERATED BY ELECTRICITY—PLAYED FROM KEYBOARD LIKE A PIANO

Deagan Class "A" Musical Electrical Bells
Price, $48 per set and up. Old style Bells, $42 per set and up.

Deagan Swiss Electric Bells Price, $70 per set and up.

Deagan Electric Cathedral Chimes
Price, $48 per set and up.

Deagan Electric Marimbas
Price, $100 per set and up.



SEND FOR CATALOGUE "F"

J. C. DEAGAN, 1770 Berteau Avenue
CHICAGO, U. S. A.

REX.

THE FALLEN ANGEL (2 parts, July 24).—In the strife of a great city two sisters take different paths, one a humble home with honest hearts, the other, a gilded life of luxury and ease, without the holy name of wife. At the opening of the story the contrast of their lives is shown—Tom and Alice, although poor, find much to be thankful for and are happy with their family of four small children. One night the husband, while in faithful execution of his duties as night watchman, discovers burglars at work upon his employer's safe. He unfortunately reaches the scene the moment the safe explodes and is killed by the heavy door. The next morning his dead body is found and taken to the home of his wife.

Helen, while taking her chocolate in bed, reads of the disaster that has befallen the home of her sister. Being deeply touched, she dispatches a message, offering assistance, which is firmly resented by the widow, together with her offering of flowers. Alice, unprovided for by the death of her husband, secures employment. Helen, penitent of her sins, goes to the humble rooms of her sister to ask forgiveness. She finds Alice absent, but her call is made agreeable by the children, who mistake her for the mission worker. While fondling them the mission attendant arrives, and is dismissed by Helen, who decides to assume the care of the children under the guise of a mission worker. This deception is practiced for a long time, much to the pleasure and enjoyment of the children, but to the discomfort and suspicion of Phil, who, upon one occasion, follows her to ascertain the cause of her habitual absence in the afternoons. Helen, in her leave, picks up a half finished letter to the mission workers in which her sister expresses her appreciation and thanks to the angel that has made here household so happy. The thought of giving up the children fills her with pain as she goes away.

Instances of the life which had heretofore tempted and pleased her are now repulsive and fail to satisfy and she is deeply moved to shame. Phil, unable to appreciate the awakening of her soul, is silent to her appeal for the right to be called "wife." Unable to forbear any longer, she leaves the home of luxury and seeks refuge in the sanctuary of the mission workers, where she is received kindly and made one of them. Her sister, upon availing herself of her chance to personally thank the mission workers, calls and nearly encounters Helen.

Phil, upon learning of Helen's leave, is deeply moved and love finds expression in a note he pens, offering any concession if she will again come back. He decides to leave it with the children, who had occupied so much of her time. Helen, who in the meantime, having resumed her calls, unexpectedly encounters Alice, who orders her from the house. She goes to the mission where she unburdens the bitter truth to an old minister, who, in sympathy, requests that she return with him. Phil, in the meantime having arrived at Alice's home, is told by the children that their angel would come no more. Alice enters, and upon learning Phil's relation with Helen, demands that he leave. They are, however, interrupted by the arrival of the minister with Helen, who quotes from the Bible—"that likewise joy shall be in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance." Alice is awakened to a fuller understanding, and the minister is called upon to perform the marriage between the repentent Phil and Helen.

THE ACTOR (July 27).—Lloyd Warrington, a stock actor, is with his wife and family in the West. He notes an article in a theatrical paper to the effect that Western actors are receiving more recognition in the East. Despite his wife's protests, he decides to go and try for a part in one of the Broadway theaters. He leaves home and goes to New York. Several unsuccessful weeks elapse. Lloyd fails to get employment and as a last resort applies at the office of Charles Lohman, a big producer, who refuses to see him. As he turns to leave he meets Gilbert Light, an old friend, who has made good, and through Light's influence he is given an interview with Lohman and makes a favorable impression. Lohman shows him a part in a new play and promises to give him a chance at it. Lloyd leaves the office delighted.

In his little hall bedroom he is reading over the part he is to play when a letter from Lohman arrives saying that the management is afraid to try him out. He is heartbroken when his friend Light comes in. Light is shown the letter and suggests a plan to convince Lohman and the author of his ability.

Lloyd and Light dress and go to the club, where Lohman and the author are spending the evening. They speak to them as they pass and sit down at a nearby table to play cards. As they play, Lloyd picks a quarrel with Light, which is seen by Lohman and the author. The quarrel results in Lloyd's rising and shooting Light in the presence of all the club members. Lohman is panic stricken at the cold bloded murder and almost overcome by the excitement. Lloyd makes his escape from the room, leaving Light to be taken care of by the attendants.

A few moments later when Light is somewhat revived and the author has recovered his nerve, Lloyd re-enters the scene and explains that he was simply staging the big scene from Lohman's play to convince him of his ability. Lohman is again overcome and realizes Lloyd's ability, giving him a contract on the spot. The night of the opening performance witnesses Lloyd's triumph, surrounded by his family.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 70 (July 9).—Historical Pageant.—The early history of New York state is re-enacted in historical and legendary pageant at New Rochelle, New York. The arrival of the "Half Moon."

Remarkable Flight—Count Zeppeline makes his first successful flight in his new airship, the "Sachsen," landing at Vienna, Austria.

Dogs Have their Day, at the first annual dog show held by the Long Beach Canine Society, Long Beach, L. I.

Departure of Troops—There is an unusual movement of the United States Troops from San Francisco to the Hawaiian Islands.

The Suburban Handicap—The classic of the American turf is won by "Whisk Broom," who creates a new World's record, traveling the distance of one and a quarter miles in two minutes flat. "Whisk Broom," Notter up.

The King's Birthday is celebrated with a grand review of the Royal Guard at Manchester, England.

Unique Race—Members of the Fort Bliss Troops participate in a unique horse race at El Paso, Tex.

The Weekly Fashion Hint is a classy lot of cool summer frocks and the latest bathing suits. (Posed and shown by courtesy of The Ladies' Home Journal Pattern Company.)

Safe and Sane Fourth—Various Fourth of July celebrations in honor of Uncle Sam's one hundred and thirty-seventh birthday. "The Spirit of '76." National salute of forty-five guns. Colors. Night Illuminations.

Procession at Berlin—Members of the German Union Societies parade through the streets of the German capital.

The Gettysburg Reunion—The heroes of the blue and the gray meet again on the famous battlefield at Gettysburg, Pa.

The Lord Mayor opens the extensions to the Spa at Harrogate, England.

Who's Who in Pictures—Barbara Tennant (Universal).

ECLAIR.

IN THE NIGHT (July 6).—This subject centers about the misunderstanding between a man and his wife, due to his having seen a stranger enter his home under cover of night through a rear gateway, in company with his wife, who had met him there. Following into the house the husband found the stranger reading from some letters, which he thought to be love letters, and he was just about to shoot them both when his wife saw the revolver pointed at her heart and screamed.

An explanation followed which convinced the husband that his wife had not only been true to him, but had at that moment been talking to a man from whom she had borrowed money to aid her husband in his recent illness. She had borrowed the money secretly, and had been unable to repay it promptly, and so the stranger had come to learn when he might expect payment.

HOW DIAMONDS ARE MADE (July 6).—The diamond, most brilliant of jewels, is, like coal, a piece of pure carbon, except of a different crystallization.

At last the production of artificial diamonds has been achieved by the French scientist, Moissan, but the resulting jewels are so small that it is impossible to set them, their dimensions being but one-tenth of a millimeter.

To produce them, terrific heat is brought to bear on carbon of sugar; 600 amperes intensity and a tension of 55 bolts are required. After fusion at a temperature of 3000 degrees, the cast substance is run into a melting pot and plunged in cold water Enormous compression causes instant solidification of the cast metal and the carbon assumes crystalline form.

Successive baths in various acids dissolve the mass and liberate the diamonds. After several weeks, the continued treatment terminates in a final cleansing bath of methylated fluid treated with iodine, and at last the jewels are free.

IT IS HARD TO PLEASE HIM, BUT IT'S WORTH IT (Newlywed Series—July 13).—Da! Da! What does 'ittle Snookums want now? Nice man is coming down the street with big, bright balloons. Muvver must get him one.

Now, home, for nursie to see it. Poor, fat nursie must add another accomplishment for Snookums' benefit. She puffs and pants, and puffs and pants some more to keep the balloon blown up for Baby dear.

"Pshaw! It's done busted," says nursie, at which Snookums bursts forth with the preliminary "Wow" which his fond mother knows as the overture to his vocal entertainments. Mother is not in a musical mood, so she telephones Dada to come right home and bring some toy balloons for Precious.

Dada comes home, and he and nursie and mother are well nigh exhausted keeping the balloon blown up for baby dear, when it occurs to Dada to let the old bicycle pump do the work. But 'ittle Sugar Plum is no longer interested; he drops off into the sleep of innocence at mother's feet, and his devoted subjects sigh with relief as he is carried off to bed.

A CATHOLIC MISSION IN CHINA (July 13).—The poor of China are blessed with progeny in inverse proportion to the store of their earthly possessions, and make no bones of abandoning the excess infants.

Hordes of such foundlings have been rescued through the work of the Catholic Missions in China, which give a reward for each infant brought to them.

The waifs are given a comfortable home, motherly care—even affection—and when old enough embrace the religion of their kind friends.

THE WITCH (3 parts, July 2).—Selectman Marsh, a miserly elder, is in love with Mary Martin, daughter of Widow Martin, but she resents his attentions. Governor Brent, a stranger in the village, comes across her in the woods as she is trying to evade Marsh. He carries her basket and together they walk to the widow's cottage. The governor is called away to a distant conclave so suddenly that Mary, who has not even learned his name or where he has gone, is grieved. In order to carry out his plan of getting Mary married to him, Marsh resorts to a strategem and accuses the widow, who dispenses remedies to her neighbors, of witchcraft. When a little girl neighbor, who has been eating too many green apples, becomes sick, the widow is accused of her ailment. She is at once placed in jail. Marsh comes to extend his sympathy and says that he will use his influence in getting her out if she will consent to have her daughter marry him. She refuses and appeals to the acting governor, who, although willing to help her at first, is at length frightened into neutrality by the wrath of the villagers. The day of the execution has arrived, and, as the villagers are getting ready to burn the widow, Mary desparingly offers herself to Marsh, and they are married. Marsh fears the fury of the enraged people in freeing the widow, and Mary, unable to withstand the suspense, hurries home.

On her way she meets Governor Brent, who has returned. He learns of Mary's trouble and with a guard he rescues the widow. He brings her to her cottage, followed by the angry villagers. News is brought that the little girl is well and that she has confessed as to the cause of her illness. The people will not believe this and trouble is averted by the retinue of the governor, who learns with sorrow that she is married to the miserly Marsh. Mary tries to be a dutiful wife, but finds that his caresses are obnoxious and that he cares more for his gold than for her. Brent cannot forget Mary and in going towards her home sees her husband about to attack her for trying to save a little boy who has stolen an apple. Marsh reminds Brent that the law permits of a husband chastising his wife if he wishes to and Brent leaves. He finds that his admiration for Mary is very strong and he again calls upon her. He observes that Mary is alone, her husband being in the cellar gloating over his gold. He kisses the bruises inflicted upon her. Their loud talking is heard by Marsh, who ascends just in time to see Brent about to embrace his wife. He angrily attempts to strike Brent, but the latter leaves in time.

Some time later, Marsh, who has long coveted a piece of government property near his home, threatens to make his wife and Brent objects of scorn if Mary does not influence the governor in granting the land to him. Brent, although surprised to learn of Mary's mission, acquiesces to her request. During the absence of Mary, Marsh has descended into the cellar where he keeps his gold, but has forgotten to shut the secret door to the hiding place. Mary returns and Marsh, knowing now that she knows of his hiding place for the gold, runs after her with a big stick. At her mother's gate she meets Brent, who intercedes in her behalf with Marsh. Brent is knocked down. The widow tells Marsh that he has killed Brent. In a frenzy of fright he rushes to his cellar for the bags of gold. But the weight of them is too much and just before he reaches the top of the stairs he falls and kills himself. The villagers arrive at the Martin's cottage with the news that Marsh has been killed, and now Mary and Brent are left alone in their new-found happiness.

THE TRAIL OF THE HANGING ROCK (2 parts, July 9).—The foster-father of Migonne is given much concern by the wanderings of his adopted daughter, for she has now grown to womanhood. On one occasion she wandered down to the stream to get some water. Leaving her hat on the bank she strolls away only to find upon returning a man's pipe. The hat had been picked up by Constance, who had gone in search of its owner. Not finding anyone in the immediate vicinity, he returns to the place where he found the hat. He is surprised to observe Migonne holding his pipe, and after exchanging their finds, they go and pick flowers. It is twilight when Migonne invites Constance to her dwelling. She haloos joyously for her father, who hears the call. In nearing the cabin, Victor, the foster-father, misinterprets the shadows of his daughter and Constance silhouetted against the window, for those of strangers. Hastily opening the door he shoots, but the course of the bullet is diverted from Constance by the quickwitted Migonne and it strikes her mother's picture. When the misunderstanding is

DON'T!

DON'T rest and rust! There's something going on all the time, and if you are not up and doing it's apt to come off without your being in on it. Bit slangy, perhaps, but trite and true.

KINEMACOLOR thrives beautifully now on 35 amperes.

DON'T PROCRASTINATE!

KINEMACOLOR COMPANY

NEW YORK, 1600 Broadway.
CHICAGO, 538 So. Dearborn St.
CINCINNATI, 132 E. 4th St.
PROVIDENCE, 509 Westminster St.

RAMO
Copyright 1913 Wray Physioc

RAMO ◎ FILMS

The New Film of Quality

Our Sixth Release

A DOG-GONE BARON

A Roaring
High Class
Comedy

COMING RELEASES

July 23rd—THE SILENT HOUSE (Drama)
" 30th—I SHOULD WORRY (Comedy)
Aug. 6th—CHECKERED LIVES (Drama)
" 13th—LOVE AND GOLD (Drama)
" 20th—MEN WHO LABOR (2 Reels)

RAMO PERFECT STUDIOS, 102 W. 101st St. NEW YORK

cleared, Victor makes amends by offering his hospitality.

A few days later Constance and his guide strike gold at the foot of the Hanging Rock. They are just about to begin digging when Victor, who has happened by, stops them. He tells them that over twenty years ago his sister and he settled in this wilderness. He fell in love with Annie St. Leger, who later married Pierre. After a year of married life, a child was born of their union. She was given the name of Migonne. Their happiness was soon marred by financial trouble and Pierre left to seek a fortune. He met with disastrous results in a very unconventional way and was compelled to spend many years in a dungeon. After seven years Annie consented to be mine, and we had scarcely settled in our home when we were informed that Pierre (who had been released from jail, the real criminal being apprehended), learning of the marriage of his wife, shot himself. We buried him at the foot of Hanging Rock, and before another season had gone Annie passed into the Great Beyond. She, too, was buried beside Pierre. Victor, after finishing his story, then leaves the spot, overcome with the poignancy of resurrected grief. He is followed by Migonne, Constance and the guide.

A few days later Migonne turns to her foster-father, saying that she does not want him to be her daddy any longer, but her husband.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

MAJESTIC.

THE SHADOW OF THE PAST (July 6).—An old clerk, whose age had told against him in the battle of life, found himself unable to obtain employment. At last, driven to despair, he heard of a dance hall where waiters were wanted, and applied for a position there. He would have met with another rebuff, but the proprietor took a fancy to the old clerk's pretty daughter, who had accompanied him, and offered him a position if he would let the girl sing in the chorus of the company which entertained the patrons. The old clerk indignantly refused, but his daughter, realizing their need, persuaded him to accept the offer.

The environment of the dance hall was offensive to the girl's refined nature, but she bore it bravely for her father's sake, for she knew he would have difficulty in obtaining work elsewhere. The proprietor forced his attentions upon her, but she met his advances with such dignity that his admiration deepened into respect and he asked her to be his wife. She refused him and he threatened to discharge her father. But the threat soon lost its force, for that very evening the old man died and the girl was left alone in the world.

She left the dance hall and obtained work in a department store, while her former employer searched vainly for her. After a while she was discharged from the position and was in danger of privation, but a motherly old country woman, who was visiting the city, took pity on the girl and brought her to her country home.

Love came into the girl's life in the person of her benefactor's son, a manly young farmer. She returned his affection gladly. Then one day the shadow of the past fell across the girl's life, for the dance hall proprietor chanced to come through the little country town in his automobile and recognized the girl for whom he had always cared. He told her that if she did not marry him he would tell the farmer that she had been a singer in a dance hall. She refused and sadly waited for the blow to fall. The next day the farmer received an anonymous letter containing a picture of the dance hall, showing the girl in dancing dress, and telling him that this was the way she had earned her living, but to the girl's surprise and joy, she found that the farmer loved her far too well to believe any evil of her.

ONE OF THE FINEST (July 8).—The factory girl had two suitors, one a policeman, the other a workingman. She preferred the former, and the disappointed lover, swayed by jealous rage, vowed to be revenged upon the young officer. His opportunity soon came. The young patrolman, while on duty, met with an accident, and was rendered unconscious. His rival, finding him in this state, by an ingenious deception, made it appear that he was drunk, and the patrolman was convicted of being intoxicated and was dismissed from the force. His former comrades ignored him, for they considered him unworthy of respect, but his sweetheart was loyal and believed in him.

The young workman felt conscience-stricken at the wrong he had done and bitterly regretted yielding to his jealous impulse, but did not have the moral courage to tell the truth.

A fire broke out in the tenement where the workman lived. Everyone got safely out except the young man's mother, who, overcome by the smoke, lay unconscious in the kitchen. She would have perished but for a brave man who fought his way through smoke and flame and staggered back with her to safety. It was the disgraced officer. The son witnessed the heroic deed, and recognized in his mother's preserver the man whom he had so cruelly wronged. Then and there he told the truth and his confession cleared the young officer and restored him to the police department.

The patrolman was awarded a medal for heroism, and soon afterwards led to the altar the girl who had been loyal to him when he was not "One of the Finest," but a discredited police officer.

THE INGRATE (July 12).—A New York broker was caught in one of the financial flurries for which Wall Street is famous, and lost his fortune. Like many others before him, he left the East to seek wealth in the gold mines of the West. Success did not come to him and he would have starved if a young prospector had not taken pity upon him and made him his partner.

A claim was located and gold discovered. The miner was taken ill, and his treacherous companion, taking advantage of his partner's helpless condition, took the gold and left his benefactor to die in the desert. The sick man was found by prospectors and nursed back to life. He discovered other rich claims and became one of the mining kings of the West, but cherished a strong hatred for the ingrate who had treated him so heartlessly.

Many years later, the rich mining man received a report from a detective, stating that his enemy was now a prominent Wall Street broker, and was conducting a fight for the control of certain railroad properties owned by an elderly capitalist. The ingrate, the detective said, was sure to succeed unless the miner chose to interfere.

And the miner did. The elderly financier, harrassed and exhausted, received a visit from a grim man from the West, who placed his immense fortune at the other's command, for the purpose, as he expressed it, of "crushing that snake." Money is all-powerful in the world of finance, and after a few days of fierce battle on the "Change," the treacherous broker came to the office of his elderly opponent to plead for mercy. He received none, and left a ruined man, but not before he saw the man who had waited long for the day of reckoning with the miner whom he had so shamefully treated.

The robbery of the desert had been avenged on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

IMPULSE (July 13).—Angelo has gone out on strike and cannot find a job. His wife and children are starving. Nerved by their suffering he goes into the better part of town and begs of passers-by. They shun him. One complains to a policeman, and Angelo desists and slinks home. On the way he passes a rag dealer who is doing a thriving business in the tenement district. Angelo's eyes glitter at the money which pours from the rag dealer's sack into his bony palms. Angelo endeavors to borrow enough for a little food. The rag dealer refuses to lend any.

Angelo's wife, desperate by now, persuades Angelo by threats and caresses to kill the rag dealer, and forces a butcher knife into his unwilling hand. But as he begins to force the door he hears a cry from the next room; a burglar has entered and is choking the feeble old rag dealer to death. Forgetting his own plans and dropping the knife, Angelo bursts into the other room, grapples with the rag dealer's assailant and holds him while his wife brings a policeman who marches the would-be murderer off to jail. Angelo and his wife then address themselves to the rag dealer, who lies unconscious across the bed, his money clutched in his hand, and bring him back to life. He is so pleased at their timely aid that he gives them some money. Returning to their own quarters Angelo and his wife find the knife forgotten on the floor and are horrified at the memory of what they intended to do with it. They cross themselves and thank heaven for their deliverance.

A JAPANESE COURTSHIP (July 15).—Fred is in love with Miyo San. She tells him that to show his love he must wear her national dress and her first gift is a kimona and all fixings. Fred is too much in love to refuse; he wears the dress and has all sorts of trouble with it. Then Miyo writes him to come quickly as she has a surprise. The surprise is that she is returning his compliment by wearing the tightest sort of a tight American skirt, and Fred faints.

HIS WAY OF WINNING HER (July 19).—Fred is very much in love with Gladys, but her father does not look with favor upon him as a prospective son-in-law. He telephones the girl that he will come to the house at midnight, ready to elope with her. The father overhears the plan and locks his daughter in her room. When Fred arrives he is greeted by a fusilade of rolling-pins, flat-irons, bricks, etc., and beats a hasty retreat. The parents decide that they need a chaperon for their disobedient daughter, so they advertise for a stern governess. Fred dresses up and gets the position and is looked upon with favor by the parents. He elopes with Gladys and they are married before the parents find out how they have been fooled.

GOLD CREEK MINING (July 19).—Fred and his pal are hard up and all they have in the world is some worthless mining stock. They put up a job to raise some money on the certificates. Fred drops them on a park bench where several men witness the act, and his friend, disguised as a tramp, picks the stock up. Fred offers a reward for the stock, claiming that it is very valuable, and several men offer the supposed tramp large sums of money for the certificates. The stock is disposed of, and then the two pals hear that the mine has suddenly become very valuable and that the certificates are worth a good deal of money. After much difficulty they finally succeed in buying back the certificates, and then discover that the news was a mistake and that the bonds are still worthless.

THANHOUSER.

FOR THE MAN SHE LOVED (July 8).—The ranchman's daughter had two suitors, both her father's employees. One was a clearcut, intelligent young cowboy, energetic and ambitious; the other, capable in his way, but sullen and revengeful. The girl liked the first of the two, and as her father was quite content with her choice, the course of true love seemed to be running smoothly.

On one occasion, while the girl and her father, escorted by the two cowboys, were off on a business trip, they camped on the summit of a mountain. The girl was standing at the edge of a cliff. Her bracelet fell off, and as all supposed, rolled thousands of feet into the chasm below. She agreed with her father, however, that search for the jewel would be useless.

The favored cowboy planned a surprise, however. Part way down the cliff a ledge of rock jutted out, and he figured that perhaps the bracelet was lodged there. One day when work permitted, he rode away from the ranch and halted at the cliff. He tied a rope to a tree, lowered himself down to the ledge, and there made diligent search, being finally rewarded by finding the bracelet. Unfortunately for him, his rival had noticed his departure from the ranch, and followed him. In jealous rage the vengeful cowboy pulled up the rope, leaving his rival to die of exposure and starvation.

When her sweetheart failed to return to the ranch that night, the girl was worried, and intuitively suspected that the rejected suitor was to blame for the strange disappearance. The next morning she saw him ride away and followed. He went to the edge of the cliff to hurl taunts at his helpless victim, and then rode away. The girl, who had been in concealment, emerged after he had departed, and single-handed rescued her sweetheart, who was unconscious and near death. When he had been revived he returned to the ranch, there to confront his enemy, who at first believed him a ghost, but realized, when the hand of the law fell upon him, that his plot had failed through the girl's devotion to the man she loved.

AN ERRAND OF MERCY (July 11).—A little American girl, returning home from Europe, where she had been studying art, met a young doctor on the steamer and fell in love with him. They were married soon after the steamer reached New York. Her parents, who lived on a farm in the West, were unable to attend the wedding, but the bride wrote them enthusiastically, telling them how happy she was.

And she was happy for more than a year after the marriage. Her husband was devoted to her and their baby, but in spite of his many good qualities, he was of an intensely jealous disposition and resented the admiration which his pretty wife excited. Quarrels were frequent and finally the girl left him with her baby and returned to her parents, leaving a note in which she said that she would never see him again, and that she and the child were provided for. The husband believed that she had gone away with another man and plunged into the practice of his profession to forget a wife whom he deemed unworthy.

The young mother and her baby were tenderly received by her parents. The girl told them of the jealousy of her husband, whom they had never seen, and her indignant father told her that she must never return to him. In a short time the young wife died, and the little girl was brought up under the loving care of her grandparents.

The child's father, who had prospered as the years passed, and was now a famous physician, left New York for a tour of the country. But success had not brought him happiness, for he was a lonely man. The train stopped at a little Western town and the physician noticed the conductor talking to a little girl of ten, just the age his own child was, he thought sadly. The conductor entered the car and told the doctor that the child's grandfather was dangerously ill and there was no medical help available. The famous physician left the train and accompanied the child to her home, arriving just in time to save her grandparent's life. He did not expect any reward for his errand of mercy and yet he received one, for he discovered that his little guide was none other than his little daughter.

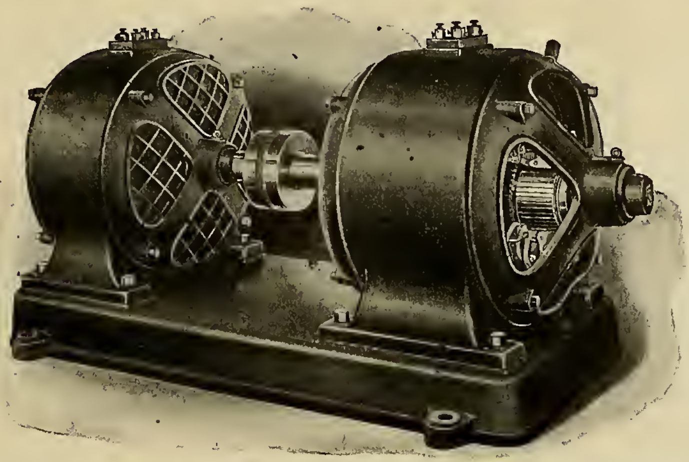
A CREPE BONNET (July 13).—The young husband was a very "tired business man," but instead of hurrying to the gay lights of Broadway, he remained at home in bed and worried the life out of his patient wife. His little daughter was a very active youngster and the noise made by her, assisted by her little playmates, drove him almost frantic. Sympathetic friends called and gravely decided that he had only a short time to live.

The children were cautioned to be very quiet, so as not to disturb the sick man, and they tried very hard to obey the command. A doll, belonging to one of the little girls, was broken, and the children decided to have a funeral.

"But where can we find the crepe?" a little girl exclaims in dismay. Willie Jones, who was present, looked mysterious and told them not to worry. He hurried off and soon reappeared with the bonnet of his mother, a widow. The crepe was removed from the bonnet, placed over the door bell, and

I Am The Much Talked About Hallberg A. C. to D. C. Economizer

Did you see me working in the booth of United Electric Light & Power Co. at the Exposition?



Did you get one of my "I should worry" catalogues? If not, write, and on request one will be mailed free of charge.

SOME LIGHT, EVEN IN DAYLIGHT

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWERS, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS.

I Equip Theatres Completely

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 Pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 E. 23rd Street, New York

THE DAY OF JUDGMENT

(IN THREE PARTS)

THE SENSATIONAL STORY OF A GIGANTIC SWINDLE.

PAPER WITH A PUNCH

WRITE OR WIRE IF YOU WANT TO BUY OR BOOK TO

UNION FEATURES

225 W. 42nd ST., N.Y. CITY

the doll funeral wended its way from the house to a convenient back yard, where the doll was solemnly interred.

The head of the family gradually felt better and began to take an interest in life. In the meantime his friends noticed the crepe on the door and sadly concluded that he must have passed away. Soon a solemn procession made its way to the house and asked to see the wife. The servant thought they were crazy, the wife was sure of it and called her husband. The visitors cowered behind chairs when the husband appeared and disgustedly asked what was the matter. Then explanations ensued and irate parents sallied forth, seized their offspring and visited summary punishment upon them.

TANNHAUSER (3 parts, July 15).—Elizabeth, niece of the Landgrave of Thuringion, a pretty prince who reigned during the middle ages, was noted for her beauty and goodness. In those days, when chivalry ruled the world, minstrels were held in high repute and great nobles sang to their lady loves and competed in minstrel tournaments for their favor.

A minstrel tournament was held at the Landgrave's castle. There were many competitors, but all conceded that Wolfram, a young noble, would surely win the prize. And he would have succeeded if another contestant had not entered at the last moment, the young knight, Tannhauser, a stranger to the Thuringion court. Great as was Wolfram, Tannhauser was his master, and he received the laurel crown of victory from Elizabeth's fair hands.

Love came to Elizabeth and Tannhauser, but the Landgrave had other plans for her, and betrothed his niece to Wolfram. Tannhauser, broken-hearted, wandered away from court.

In the forests he met the pagan goddess, Venus, who ruled in her dominion beneath the earth. She cast a spell over the young knight and conducted him to her kingdom, where for a year he lived, charming Venus and her nymphs by his wonderful singing. Finally he grew weary of the life, prayed Heaven for forgiveness, and in a moment found himself in the forest which he had left a year before.

Tannhauser made his way back to the court, where he found that Wolfram, discovering that Elizabeth loved Tannhauser, had freed her from the betrothal. Arrangements were made for the early marriage of the two lovers when Tannhauser, under the magic influence of Venus, praised her in song, and was accused of blasphemy. The only way that he could secure pardon was to journey to Rome with a band of pilgrims and implore forgiveness from the Pope.

The Pope was a kindly man, but when he heard the sin of which Tannhauser was guilty, he wrathfully refused absolution, declaring that not until his staff should bloom would Tannhauser's lost soul be saved. Tannhauser, heart-broken, fled into the wilderness.

News was brought to Elizabeth of Tannhauser's plight. She fell ill, but constantly prayed for him, and a miracle was wrought, for leaves appeared upon the Pope's staff. He recalled his words and sent a messenger to find Tannhauser and deliver his pardon to him. Tannhauser was found, and joyfully hastened to Elizabeth with the news.

His joy changed to sorrow when he arrived at the castle and found that Elizabeth had died, praying to the last for him. Overcome by grief, the minstrel knight fell lifeless beside the body of his loved one.

RELIANCE.

THE FISHERMAN'S FORTUNE (July 14).—Ned Duncan, a worthless young fisherman, is in love with his cousin, Lucy Duncan. But Lucy's father, knowing well his nephew's evil tendencies, objects to his attentions. A quarrel ensues. His heart full of hatred and revenge, Ned makes his way to the water's edge, where he meets three shady looking strangers landing from a fishing smack. "Where is the nearest tavern?" Ned willingly agrees to show them and is invited in. Good fortune is at hand for Ned in the shape of a Westerner, who is directed to the hut of Ben Duncan, for whom he carries a letter from his brother, asking him to assist the bearer, a trusted friend, in locating his son, Ned, now grown to manhood—and handing over to him all the deceased's goods, amounting to $3,000. The amazing news inclines Duncan to forget the quarrel, and all might have gone well for Ned but for his own folly. Drink arouses him and he makes for Duncan's hut. Peering in he sees the stranger and his bag of gold. He sees Duncan hide it in an old stove, leaving Lucy on guard. The two men depart on their quest for the watcher, who little dreams the gold is his own. Vengeance is forgotten for greed. He hurries back to the tavern, tells them of the gold, and easily secures their assistance. They go to the hut, Ned hides outside while the others enter and steal the money. Hidden by sea cliffs, Ned divides his own fortune into four parts, and well satisfied, bids farewell to the strangers. Duncan and the Westerner wait at his door for him. Duncan insists upon making friends, and drags his puzzled nephew home, where the terrible truth is learned. Then Ned learns of his overwhelming folly. Lucy spies the strings of the money bag hanging from his pocket, and pulls forth the evidence of his complicity. From their sight, Ned rushes to the sea, where, far in the distance, he despairingly watches the boat carrying off his well merited loss.

HER ROSARY (July 10).—A nun, dreaming in a convent cell, her rosary between her fingers, thinks of a day now passed, when she and her boy lover roamed the fields. Throughout this picture the beautiful words of the world-famous "Rosary" are introduced at appropriate intervals.

While on the lake, she drops her necklace into the water and pleads with the boy to get it. He says he cannot swim; she accuses him of cowardice and he dives. But he does not come to the surface of the water, and in answer to her cries the peasants recover his lifeless body, which is laid reverently upon the bank of the stream. The girl flings herself on her knees beside him and finds the necklace clasped in his hand. After visiting the boy's grave, the girl goes to the convent, knocks upon the gate and is admitted. Time passes and alone with her rosary, she sees this dream each time she tells the beads.

"I kiss each bead and strive at last to learn to kiss the cross!"

THE STRANGE WAY (July 19).—Edith Willis, a society girl, tired of that unending round of pleasure that her life affords, wishes that she might get a chance to go away from it for a time. On her way to her fashionable summer home, she steps out of the parlor car to pick some flowers. A rough looking tramp accosts her and as he grabs for her purse, Steve, a Knight of the Road, who had been stealing a ride on the freight car, comes to her aid. The big tramp almost gets the best of Steve in the fight that follows, but Edith, seeing her rescuer's danger, comes to his assistance and strikes the tramp over the head. By this time Edith's train has drawn out. A sudden shower comes up and Steve carries the girl, who has fainted from shock and exposure, to the deserted station, where he watches by her side until the storm clears. Then he trudges with her in his arms to the nearest farm-house, where he begs the farmer and his wife to take her in. They feel that they cannot do this for nothing, and as Edith has no money, Steve offers to work to pay her board.

And, while detectives are scouring the country for the missing heiress, Steve, the tramp, works in the fields that she may be cared for. She recovers, and not wishing to leave her new free life, she does not tell who she is. But Steve, who has learned to love her and to feel that she loves him in return, sees a picture of her in the papers and an account of her disappearance. Heartbroken at the thought of losing her, he sends a wire to her aunt, and then going to her, says good-bye, for she will not need anyone to care for her longer. But she convinces him that love means more than money, and that the heiress cares for him, just as she did when he thought she was a poor waif.

AMERICAN.

JEALOUSY'S TRAIL (July 21).—The miner, Jim Moore, finding his claim does not yield paying results, goes in search of a new claim. His old claim is taken up by a new comer, Jack Larkin, who, by more diligent methods, secures better results. Mrs. Moore does the weekly washing for Larkin and is paid for her labor in ore. Moore returns to his home and is beset with jealousy. The young miner, Larkin, offers to go into partnership with Moore but is repulsed. The success of Larkin rankles Moore and he becomes sullen and morose, harboring distrust against his innocent wife. In a jealous rage he attacks her with fatal results.

A neighbor, Louis Roland, who in his kindly manner has been wont to comfort the unfortunate woman in her troubles, comes upon the handiwork of the jealous husband and the shock bereaves him of his reason. Young Larkin next learns the news and reports it to the sheriff. The neighbor's pipe, found on the premises, threw suspicion on him and a posse find him wandering in the forests, bereft of reason and unable to throw light on the situation. A chance circumstance enables Larkin to solve the apparent mystery and bring the guilty husband to justice.

TOM BLAKE'S REDEMPTION (July 24).—In the little railroad town known as Wynola, Cal., was the modest home of Mrs. Blake, a widow, and with her lived her only son, Thomas, so named after his father. Young Thomas had become an engineer and the pride of his heart was old No. 19.

One afternoon he receives a hurry call to make a special run. He takes a hurried leave from his mother and his boyhood sweetheart. When near the round-house, he finds he has time for just a little drink, so turns into the saloon. Temptation gets the best of Tom and he has more liquor than is good for him, but not only that—he is late as well. The yard superintendent is patiently waiting. Time flies and still Tom is not there. When he finally appears he is reprimanded for his tardiness, and when his inebriated condition is apparent, he is ordered not to make the run. Tom grows abusive and is taken home. His discharge from service is only a matter of course.

Tom leaves home and appetite for liquor grows apace with the discouragements he encounters in a cruel world. His downward course goes unchecked from bad to worse, when an old woman, bittering and in rags, brings to him visions of his own aged mother, patiently waiting for the return of her wayward son. His latent manhood receives a jolt and he resolves to return to home and friends. Without money he is obliged to "beat" his way and we see him sneak between the baggage car and No. 19.

On the same train is seen another character, whose object is apparent when, shortly after the train starts, he is seen to creep up and level a gun at the engineer and fireman. The train has aboard a large shipment of gold bullion—there is also attached the private car of the president of the road. The train has already slacked its speed, when Tom creeps up over into the engine, a sharp, quick struggle follows, the bandit is subdued and it is Tom's hand that again opens the throttle of the engine. She leaps forward at her old speed and the confederate bandits are left disappointed at the side of the track where it had been planned to hold up the train. The momentary anxiety of the president at the slackening of the train's speed is allayed when the train reaches her destination, the lone bandit is turned over to the minions of the law, and Tom is to be rewarded by a gift of money, which he refuses, stating that he wants only one more chance to run an engine.

The mother's unfaltering faith in her boy is rewarded by the press reports of his bravery. Tom is given work again and when six months later he is married to his sweetheart, one of the most cherished gifts is the reinstatement as the pilot of old No. 19, and a check for $1,000 payable to order of Mrs. Thomas Blake.

SHE WILL NEVER KNOW (July 26).—The old adage of "Be sure your sin will find you out," is well exemplified in this drama of the life of Gracia Snow, whose father, in his effort to acquire wealth becomes an incendiary. His crime is detected—he deserts his child and leaves for parts unknown. A guilty conscience gives him no rest and he becomes a knight of the road.

In later years he comes back to his old home under adverse circumstances. His identity becomes known, through a misdeed, but only to the lover of his daughter. Pride will not permit him to face the girl he took in her infancy and he continues his aimless wanderings.

The news of the father's return was the basis of a surprise for the daughter, but when the lover finds the man has again left he keeps the secret to himself and the already disgraced daughter never knew to what depths her wayward father had fallen.

KAY-BEE.

FLOTSAM (2 parts, July 25).—A storm is raging on the coast, and a vessel is dashed on the rocks. On shore Captain Wells and the life guards try in vain to shoot a line over the wreck. A lifeboat is launched from the sinking ship, and the captain's wife and child enter it. The huge breakers crush the frail craft and the occupants are precipitated into the water. All are drowned with the exception of the little girl, who is carried on the crest of a mountainous wave, and is about to be hurled on the rocks, when Captain Wells, casting off the detaining hands of his men, dives from the cliff, and after a furious battle with the ocean is helped to shore with the unconscious girl in his arms.

The survivor is about fourteen years of age. She is tenderly cared for by the woman, and, after she has fully recovered, Captain Wells learns that she has no living kin. Moved to pity, the big-hearted captain adopts Mildred. Five years elapse, and Mildred has grown to be a beautiful young woman. She keeps house for the captain, carrying his lunch to him every day.

A handsome artist comes to the seacoast town and Mildred poses for him. It is not long before the two fall in love with each other, of which the captain is ignorant. One day he sees Mildred with the artist, and he suddenly realizes that his love for her is more than paternal. To Mildred's consternation he proposes marriage, and she, feeling deep obligation to him, accepts him. She tells the artist that she must part from him, though she loves him. He pleads with her but she remains firm in her determination, though it grieves her sorely.

Captain Wells and Mildred are married, and the artist goes away. A year later, finding he cannot forget her, he writes her a letter asking her to meet him just once, for the sake of old times. She yields to his plea, and when he sees her he overwhelms her with protestations of love, and begs her to come with him. With her old love rekindled by his presence, Mildred finally agrees, and leaves a note for her husband. While on his way to the meeting place the artist passed Captain Wells, and the latter recalled his fears of a year before. While at his work he has a premonition that everything is not right, and he starts for home. An obliging neighbor tells him that his wife and the artist have gone out, and he rushes in the direction indicated. Meantime, Mildred has come to her senses, and she realizes what she is doing. She tells the artist she must go back, and refuses to be moved by his entreaties. She rushes toward home, leaving the artist in rage and mortification. A girl who had secretly admired the artist on his previous sojourn in the locality happens by and stops to talk to him. Captain Wells comes rushing up, and is astonished to find the

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO.

U. S. COPYRIGHT

COMING COMING
THERESA - THE - ADVENTURESS
42 East 14th St. New York City

Film Manufacturers Spend Fortunes for talent to portray their stories before the camera.

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

prove the best lens equipment to throw these pictures upon the screen exactly as they were acted. Not an expression missed, nor a gesture distorted by fluctuating light—just clear, brilliant, sharply defined screen images.

The Bausch & Lomb objectives and condensers make for success and true economy. They increase your business and make your house noted for the best pictures.

The Edison and Nicholas Power Machines are regularly equipped with our lenses. They can be procured also through any film exchange.

Our free booklet will prove of interest and value. Write for it today.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.
566 ST. PAUL STREET ROCHESTER, N. Y.
New York | Washington Chicago San Francisco

EASTMAN

motion picture film—the acknowledged standard the world over.

Manufactured by

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

USE
Warner's Features

artist and his companion. Believing he has been unjustly jealous he goes home and finds Mildred there, preparing dinner. She has destroyed the note, which had not reached the captain's eyes, and is trembling at her narrow escape from wrongdoing, and she joyfully greets her happy husband.

EXCLUSIVE FILM CORPORATION

GAUMONT.

GAUMONT WEEKLY, NO. 70 (July 9).—International Congress of Women.—Minister of Foreign Affairs holds reception for delegates on occasion of Paris meeting.

Building a Railroad in Hawaii.—New railroad lines on Pacific islands scene of rapid construction work.

French Naval Maneuvers.—Warships meet in annual practice on the Mediterranean.

Millionaires Build Road.—Two hundred and fifty Redlands, Cal., business men reconstruct Mill Creek highway.

Russian Church Head Honored.—Patriarch George IV. is the subject of sacred ceremony at Moscow. "Let 'Er Buck."—Frontier Day is celebrated with big round-up at Stockton, Cal.

The German Boat Race.—Motor craft in exciting contest at Plauer Lake, Germany.

Moving a Bridge.—Fifty-ton structure is lifted at Vancouver, Wash., in order to permit building's removal.

King George Has a Birthday.—A London fete in honor of the British monarch.

Gettysburg—Fifty Years After.—Grand Army of the Blue and Gray meet for last great reunion on America's bloodiest battlefield.

HIS MASTER'S DOUBLE (July 8).—Joseph is an ideal valet, but objects to his employer's stay-at-home proclivities. Poor Joseph has no time to himself at all, and samples the contents of the wine-cellar at imminent risk of discovery. An invitation from a long forgotten aunt, who returns from abroad with a charming niece, looks suspicious. Joseph has sacrificed ambition and accepted the prospect of a quiet life. He desires no rise in the world, still less does he contemplate marriage. An inspiration seizes him; he wants his employer to fall victim to a fair enchantress; he will accept the invitation, but will go made up as Mr. O'Malley. In the long ago Joseph had starred on the 'ten-twent-thirty-time," and it takes him but a few moments to apply grease-paint and moustache. He plays his part to perfection, the luncheon is a great success, and Suzanne is desperately smitten. So far, so good. The next invitation following quickly upon the first, is permitted to fall into O'Malley's hands, and although he is at loss to understand it, the employer decides to investigate the extraordinary damsel who has seemingly become enamoured of him. Joseph's disguise leads to Mr. O'Malley's cordial reception, but his formal manner causes some embarrassment until Suzanne decides that it needs the conservatory to make things run smoothly with this very backward suitor. Suzanne's charm soon sets O'Malley at his ease, and ere long he entirely succumbs to her fascination. Returning home in a puzzled frame of mind, he seeks explanation of the mystery from Joseph, who for answer, goes out of the room, returning a moment later in his disguise, asking the pertinent question: "Do you recognize yourself, sir? The astonished employer easily perceives that Joseph has prepared the way for his conquest, but having found such a sweet companion in Suzanne, he finds it easy to forgive his deception.

THE MAKING OF TAPESTRY (July 8).—This series of pictures was taken in one of the largest establishments at Tours, the great textile centre of France, and gives an interesting description of the processes employed in present-day manufacture of tapestry. The design to be embroidered is first planned on paper and afterwards reproduced on a material by perforation. The subject is then cut out and stuck on a carpet or other foundation, and the design embroidered by machinery. The making of the tasseled fringe, which is sewn around carpets, is also illustrated, and the film ends showing the great shuttle machines at work.

SOLAX.

THAT DOG (July 23).—That dog was a very wise dog. Snap was her name, and everywhere Tim Babcock went, Snap was sure to go. Tim was a farmer and one evening about seven o'clock, he suggested to his wife that he go and get some matches from the village. Mary consented on the condition that he would not be gone more than an hour, so off he went to the village with Snap. At the village tavern and store, however, he met a number of old friends and the time glided smoothly and pleasantly away, and when the hour was up, Snap, who as before mentioned, was a very wise dog, looked at his master's watch, and decided that his time was up, and went in to fetch him. After some argument with her master, she failed to overcome the persuasion of his friends; then he decided to remain just a little longer. This disgusted Snap, who besides being a very wise dog, was a very honest and truthful dog, and she therefore decided to drive the buggy home and tell her mistress all about it. Mary is astonished and wrathful on finding that her husband did not come home with the buggy and Snap and she therefore awaited him on the porch with a rolling pin. All went well until about twelve o'clock, when Tim finally came home and found his wife and Snap asleep on the doorstep. Carefully, he wended his way to the kitchen window and entered his home in this way, in order not to disturb the repose of his wife. Snap, however, hears a noise and wakes Mary, who, hearing strange noises proceeding from the kitchen, concludes that a tramp has entered through the window. She picks up Snap and sends her to arrest the tramp, and Snap being a very obedient dog, proceeds to arrest him. Tim passes a very disagreeable and painful five minutes with Snap hanging on behind, but is finally rescued by his wife, and promises that he will never stay out late at night again.

AS YE SOW (July 25).—Jeannette, the pretty daughter of a hard-working family of the tenement district, envies other girls with good clothing. She loathes the dinginess of her own neighborhood. Jeanette has made the acquaintance of a girl in the neighborhood named Carrie—considered rather fast. Carrie happens in one evening and invites Jeanette out with her for "a good time." Jennie remembers her lack of pretty dresses, but Carrie overcomes the objection by offering to fit her out. The parents demur, but finally consent, with the admonition, "I will wait up, so do not stay late."

Arrived at Carrie's room, which is very elaborately furnished, Jeanette is surprised at the display of finery and remarks, "I don't see how you manage it on $6 per week." Fully arrayed, they set forth and meet a couple of young men with whom Carrie is acquainted, and they go to a restaurant and are cajoled and laughed at, Jeanette drinks her first glass. A once beautiful woman enters bedecked with silks and jewels, and she is the cynosure of all eyes, especially Jeanette's. The woman orders a drink, and falls to gazing at the crowd; her eyes finally rest on Jeanette, and she understands. A conflict of emotions seems raging in her breast as she watches and listens, and when the escort of Jeanette's speaks in aside to the waiter, and asks Jeanette to follow, she gets up also and arrives at the door in time to see the fellow almost forcing the girl into a cab. She knocks him down, and takes Jeanette under her protection. Arrived at her room, she shows Jeanette what a terrible fate she has avoided by telling her a story of her own life. Jeanette realizes and wants to go home to mother—who sits there patiently and anxiously awaiting the daughter's return. But Jeanette, ashamed and afraid of the wrath of her father, hesitates. The woman writes a note, and gets Jeanette's promise to deliver it to her parents, then calls a cab and bids her farewell.

Jeanette arrives home to her anxious parents, and, unable to explain, hands them the note.

"Dear Friends:—Do not chide your daughter. But one out of every thousand returns unsullied from where she has been tonight. She has seen, she has heard, she has had her lesson. I, one of the vilest, was once pure as she, but I took the fatal step, and no voice spoke the one word that meant my salvation—Mother."

LUX.

FATE AND THE MAN (July 18).—The wife of Richard Stonn was a woman who seemed to think that they were born with luck against them. Her husband had been for some time engaged in nefarious practices, till at last finding the police were hot on his track, he determined to abandon his wife and flee from the country. Left penniless, the unfortunate woman obtains employment at the home of a chemist abroad to take charge of his little girl, a child of some ten years of age. Madam Stonn is exceptionally talented, and in the course of years becomes a capable assistant to the chemist, who has not the faintest idea that her husband is still alive. Eight years pass and the little girl has grown into a beautiful woman, whilst her friend and teacher has grown to secretly love the man who has proved so good a friend. One day, the girl confides in her friend the fact that she has fallen in love with a man whom she met whilst out for a walk, and promises to introduce him to her on the morrow. On the following day an explosion takes place in the chemist's laboratory, and the eyes of the assistant, Madam Stonn, are injured by the flames. When, later, the elder woman is brought face to face with her pupil's sweetheart, she seems, with her injured eyes, to recognize dimly the man's features. She listens to his voice, and is at last convinced that the suitor is none other than the man who basely deserted her so many years ago. Turning on the scoundrel, she declares her intention of exposing him unless he immediately leaves the country. Stonn flings himself onto his horse, which maddened by the spurring of its rider, runs away. Rider and steed approach a precipice, and, unable to stay their mad flight, are dashed to death on the rocks below. Every cloud has its silver lining, and through the strenuous efforts made by the chemist and his medical friends, Madam Stonn recovers the use of her eyes, and when the curtain rings down we are left with the conviction that the scientist will be as good a husband in the future as he has been a friend in the past.

PAT'S FANCY DRESS (July 25).—When Pat accepts an invitation to take part in a fancy dress ball at Countess Hikiks, it never enters into his wildest dreams that he is to be let in for the most weird experience that has ever fallen to the lot of mortal man. Pat visits a costumer, and wishing to be something quite out of the common, obtains a dress fashioned out of a leopard's skin, with a leopard's head as mask. When he appears in this, the ladies have several fits, each stronger than its predecessor. Pat thinks this high old fun, and so it is, till a real leopard appears on the scene. At first the animal is a bit taken back, and thinks his last drink must have been something stronger than water. Then he pulls himself together and starts a close inspection. Pat seeks safety in flight, and only gets it after having covered several miles, with the leopard clinging on to the most tender parts of his anatomy. He approaches a river and dives beneath its inviting waters, then he strikes for home. But his troubles are not over, because he has the most violent of nightmares, awaking to find himself doing valiant battle with a hearth rug made from a leopard's skin.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL (July 25).—Mrs. Woodland has two weaknesses, one for a handsome young man of the name of Jack Hunthard, and the other for stray cats. Hubby does not share in these infatuations. His remarks concerning pauper cats tend to be of an incandescent nature, and as regards Jack, well, it is a case of "where ignorance is bliss." Hubby arranges to go shooting, and starts out with his better half's blessing, for that somewhat flighty young lady has invited Jack, and is looking forward to a good time. On the field of action, the opposing forces being an aged rabbit, who is on his way to the post office to draw his old age pension, and a blind sparrow, our noble sportsman does not distinguish himself, and meeting a boy who is carrying a recently killed hare, buys it up and sends it to his wife as a proof of his prowess. Little does he dream that this very hare is on the way to his house from Jack, accompanied by a loving epistle, and a handsome sum for the Home of Indigent Cats as conscience money for having gone shooting instead of having kept his appointment. The parcel is untied in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Woodland, and the cat is out of the bag, to say nothing of the bunny.

PILOT.

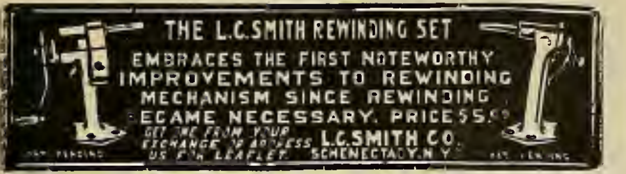
SANITARY GULCH (July 10).—Cliff Cole, agent for the Klos-Shave safety razors, finds business very dull in Cemetery Gulch. He can make no sales at all, so wires his manager in Chicago to send the emergency squad to the town at once. Priscilla Long, a stenographer in the office, and Mildred Shaw, another one, are dispatched to aid Cliff.

They arrive in the town. Priscilla is slightly disguised as a maiden aunt, and Mildred is supposed to be her niece. When the heavily bearded men try to show Mildred some attention, Priscilla repulses their advances with an atomiser, containing a powdered disinfectant, explaining that whiskers are lurking places for germs. Two of the more interested men decide to shave, and arouse the French barber from his lethargy of "no-business." They are cordially received by the women then, and the other men note their progress and decide to do likewise. The barber is shortly overwhelmed with business, which he is unable to take care of and Cliff persuades the men to buy his safety razors and shave themselves. Aroused by the idea of cleanliness, the men reform the town and change its name from Cemetery Gulch to Sanitary Gulch, posting the name over the railroad station. A vigilant committee ropes the men who will not shave and compels them to do so, even requiring that the hair be taken off "wooly chaps" which some of them wear.

The men make great progress in their attentions to Mildred and Priscilla, the barber grows fat off his earnings and Cliff sells many razors. When they decide finally that they have milked the town, the conspirators go to the depot to depart. As they wave an ironical goodbye from the rear of the train, the men realize how they have been tricked. There is just time for the now abhorred barber to make it. They shoot at his feet and he beats it for the train, while the men throw away their safety razors and take a solemn oath to never shave again.

GRANNY (July 17).—Eileen is a wealthy orphan who attends a fashionable boarding school for girls, where she is a great favorite, and frequently gives them midnight lunches and parties, to the chagrin of the teachers. When the other girls go home for their vacations, Eileen has to remain at school, and during one of her lonely spells, she writes to her aunt that she is going to move to their town, buy a home and adopt one of her family, which consists of Molly, Beth, Jack, the baby and an old granny, who spends most of her time in an attic room, almost neglected by the rest of the family.

Eileen shows her a great deal of attention, much to the surprise and displeasure of the others, who have no time to waste on the old lady. The day comes for Eileen to make her choice. The mother has dressed the children in their best and hopes that the baby will be the favored one, but Eileen brushes by the family and ascends to the old granny's room, and makes the dear old soul the recipient of her bounty. When the granny is comfortably installed in the beautiful mansion that



THE L.C. SMITH REWINDING SET EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00

GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET.

L.C. SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

MACHINES REPAIRED

Powers 5 and 6 also Edison machines repaired. Have pleased customers for years. Write and see what others have to say regarding my work. Call and see my equipment. Repair kits, improved actions, three wing shutters, etc. Ship that flickering head to me at once.

E. W. LAVEZZI, 2940 Herndon Street, Chicago.

Wanted for New Film Studio

Artists for comedy and drama, director and assistant, property man, electrician, mechanician, stage carpenter, scenic artist, etc. We want the very best experienced people in all lines, also learners with ambition. We want a high class camera man and assistant, only honest energetic people to work amid healthy, beautiful, artistic surroundings. We know real talent when we see it. This is to be an ideal studio, and is a good proposition if you can fill the bill. Apply personally before eleven, mornings, or by letter in confidence to Jacobi, Art and Technical Expert, 5 East 30th St. No extra people wanted at present.

CRYSTALLIZE YOUR SCREEN

SATEEN

A crystallizing water color. Makes a pure white Satin Finish. Produces a clear, soft, mellow picture; free from glare or flicker. Fifty per cent. whiter than Alabastine. Two cans cover a curtain 12 x 15. Price, $1.50 per can.

A. G. THOMAS, 1705 Fairacrae Ave. Pittsburgh, Penna.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

J-M Transite Asbestos Wood Booths

Absolutely fireproof. Prevent noise of machine from disturbing audience. Cannot become electrically charged or grounded.

J-M Booths conform to all the requirements of state and municipal regulations, insurance authorities and inspection departments wherever ordinances compel the use of a fire-proof booth.

Furnished in portable and permanent types. Write our nearest Branch for "J-M Theatre Necessities" Booklet.

H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO.

Albany
Baltimore
Boston
Buffalo
Chicago
Cincinnati
Cleveland
Dallas
Detroit
Indianapolis
Kansas City
Los Angeles
Louisville
Milwaukee
Minneapolis
New Orleans
New York
Omaha
Philadelphia
Pittsburgh
San Francisco
Seattle
St. Louis
Syracuse

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY

(Incorporated)

50 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines Repaired by Expert Mechanics. Genuine Parts Only Used

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens
Chairs
Tickets
Pianos
Bio & Electra Carbons
Special Gundlach Lenses
Condensers
Edison Transformers
Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Asbestos State Booths
Asbestos Wire
Switches
Plugs
Spotlights
Gas Making Outfits
Limes
Film-Cement
Branch General Disinfectant Co.
Scenery, Stage Effects
Theaters Bought, Sold, Rented

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches

"Made On Honor."

Absolutely Reliable. Safeguard Against Panic Disasters.

Approved by New York Board of Underwriters, City of New York Bureau of Buildings.

Applied on thousands of Buildings in more than 500 Cities in the U. S. A. and Canada.

Send for Catalogue No. 10 D.

VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO.,
General Distributors.
Indianapolis, Ind., U. S. A.

Can you afford to be without them?

Safe Exit Is a Universal Demand

LOOK—HAVE YOU OUR NEW COMPLETE CATALOG?

EVERYTHING FROM SCREEN TO BOOTH—UNDER ONE COVER.

MONEY BACK, if not satisfied, with every purchase you make from us. That's OUR GUARANTEE. We specialize in all makes of moving picture machines. GENUINE REPAIR PARTS, and everything new and modern that can be used in the Moving Picture Theatre.

Our Second-Hand Machine Department is a new departure, in that we guarantee every machine to be exactly as represented or Money Back.

Did you read about "Motorcycle Mac"? Well, he is dead, so far as a Motorcycle is concerned. He could not carry enough supplies in a side-car attachment to his motorcycle. Mr. McAuley will soon call in his new AUTOMOBILE. He leaves July 5th to cover Illinois. Hold your orders.

Come on now—LET US HAVE A CHANCE—to prove our claims.

THE AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY, 160-A North Fifth Avenue, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Eileen has bought, the children come to ask forgiveness, and do not depart empty handed, as the generous old lady shares with them the money she has gotten from Eileen.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE JOLLY RECRUITS (July 12).—When the time arrives for the annual militia encampment, Chris and Fred arrive in the best of spirits, but their old companion, Jack, puts in an appearance in bad temper and does not take kindly to the army routine that is mapped out for him. Instead of getting the sympathy of his friends, the latter decides to take some of the laziness out of him and plan a number of pranks for his especial edification. As soon as they arrive in the camp they are greeted by their comrades, but as Jack is in bad humor, he declines to enter into the spirit of their frivolity. He decides to go to slumber in the straw and after partially disrobing, wraps his army blanket about him and lies down to pleasant dreams. The fun starts at this point. Chris and Fred discover a nest of white rats and proceed to place them in the trousers of the slumbering Jack. The result may readily be imagined and when Jack is aroused he runs from the barracks and seeks rest elsewhere. Then it is that his tormenters scare him with "property snakes." Again there is a mixup and Jack decides to desert for good and makes all speed across the wild sweep of the wheat fields. Again he tries to fall asleep in a hay stack and a blundering farm hand this time foils him by setting fire to the harvest. When Jack is finally captured and returned to his quarters he is a wiser and sorrier man and the entire company, of which he is a member, greet him with shouts of joy and derision.

FEATURES

KINETO.

FROM OUT THE DEPTHS (2 parts—Feature Subject).—Nellie, who is returning home, is accosted by Harry Foster, a crook. As he is attempting to steal a kiss, Jim Warren, the sweetheart of Nellie, who happens to be in the immediate vicinity, witnesses the malignant intent of Foster, and going to the rescue of his sweetheart, knocks the evil doer down. Taking Nellie gently by the arm, they stroll down the lane as Foster, figuratively speaking, hurls insults and curses upon their heads. Some time later Nellie and Jim are married, and as they are emerging from the church Foster stands outside frowning his maledictions.

Time passes and Jim and his wife open a little flat. Jim is a hard working laborer, but the allurement of the bar is too strong for him and he falls from the pedestal of sobriety to that of a drunkard. On one occasion his wife goes to the saloon to bring him home and succeeds in getting him outside when the taunts of his fellows that he is compelled to hang on to his wife's apron strings, determines him to stay at the bar. Hours afterward he staggers home and in a quarrel with his wife, he throws her heavily against the floor, where she lies motionless. Believing that he has killed her, he rushes away. Starvation stares him in the face and he steals a loaf of bread. He is caught and sentenced to jail.

Meanwhile, his wife, who was only temporarily stunned, regains consciousness, and in order to support herself after her savings have been spent, she is compelled to sell the furniture. She subsequently obtains a position as maid in Lord Everdale's country mansion, and it is here where she meets her husband, who, having been released from jail, reluctantly accepts a proposition from Foster to rob the place. Nellie awakens when she hears the noise, and, going to investigate, discovers her husband. There is instant recognition and the husband leaves his plunder, promising his wife to write to her in a few days, when he will have a nice home ready for her. Two days later Nellie receives a letter from Jim, and as the film ends we see the young couple reunited in their new home.

MISCELLANEOUS

KINEMACOLOR.

WHEN LOVE GROWS UP (2 parts).—Two kings desire that their children marry, thereby combining the kingdoms. One is a prince, a little too young to consider marriage seriously, while the other is a sweet girl, who is not disposed to give up her toys and dolls just yet. The king of Joyland dispatches his son, the prince, with a letter.

To the king of Youthland:—We desire the hand of the Princess Caritn for our heir, Prince Donatella. We will consider this marriage as a treaty of peace between our kingdoms. Alverido, King of Joyland.

In the meantime the king of Youthland has ordered that the princess shall marry, and to the queen's plea—"Let her stay a child a little longer," the king answers—"She shall be wed within the year." Consequently the arrival of the young prince at Youthland is agreeable to the king, and he at once dispatches the queen and the ladies in waiting to bring the princess before him.

The princess is playing with her dolls attended by the nurse when the queen enters. Sending the nurse away she gently takes the doll from the child and exclaims—"Playtime is over Darling," so they proceed to dress her in court costume. She is then hurried into the throne room and presented to the prince, her husband to be. Timidly she recoils and at last rushes into her mother's arms. The prince in pity exclaims—"I cannot wed a frightened child. I will stay and be her playmate until her heart grows up." The queen pleads so the king consents, consequently they at once become playmates, indulging in games such as "Blindman's Buff," etc. The prince even goes so far as to join in her play with her dolls and toys, and throughout the following month the two are inseparable; but as the month has passed the prince despairs for he has learned to love her devotedly and exclaims—"Will nothing awake her?" How he succeeds is best told by the pictures.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—About August 1st, experienced operator, Mass. state license, would accept position anywhere in New England. Address THOS. O'HARE, 887 Cherry Street, Fall River, Mass.

AT LIBERTY—A-1 Operator, 7 years' experience, Mass. license. Best of reference. Can manage theater if desired. Address E. A. HALL, 50 Columbia St., Swampscott, Mass.

CHIEF OPERATOR—Wants position in North Carolina. Address W. A. BYERS, Oelawny and Elm Theaters, Greensboro, N. C.

EXPERIENCED MANAGING OPERATOR—Desires position. Satisfactory service guaranteed. Location no question. Very best references. Address J. P. CHAPMAN, Elmore, Ala.

AT LIBERTY—Cameraman with his own Camera. Ready for work at short notice. Anywhere, any time. Five years' experience. Address MOVING PICTURE, Huguenot Park, N. Y.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED, EXPERIENCED LECTURER AND MANAGER—About Sept. 1st, for six-reel state right feature playing Opera House time in Utah, Idaho, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota. Give experience and salary expected. Bond required. Address BOX 402, Kemmerer, Wyoming.

REPRESENTATIVES REQUIRED—In every city in the WORLD with a population of 3,000 people or over, to secure "LIFE PICTURES" of PROMINENT INDIVIDUALS. $2 paid for GOOD NEGATIVES—$5 paid for EXCEPTIONALLY MERITORIOUS NEGATIVES—3 NEGATIVES of each individual required. For particulars address DIXON & LICHTIG, 6416 Jackson Ave., Chicago, Ill., U. S. A. No attention paid to replies unless self-addressed stamped envelope is enclosed.

WANTED—A live manager for Photo Play Theater in largest seashore city on the Atlantic coast. Must be a hustler and able to produce results. Advise full particulars, experience, etc., first letter. Address H. S., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

MECHANIC OPERATOR WANTED—Steady job, winter and summer, six days a week. Must be reliable and sober, either Yankee or Italian. Married man preferred. Address, giving all the particulars and references, to A. E., care of The Moving Picture World, New York City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY.

FOR SALE—An established film cement business. Good opportunity for one or two hustlers now selling the best exchanges and manufacturers throughout the United States. Business will bear investigation. Will instruct purchaser in secret of manufacture. Address or call, J. LATIN, 73 Bowery, New York City.

I WILL BUY anything from a second-hand roll of tickets to a theater. I sell machines, chairs, pianos, etc., of long ago, or up-to-date. Have also a few picture theatres for sale. Address TRIGGER, 212 Third Ave., near 18th St., New York City.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—One Johns-Manville Booth. Asbestos Transite Board Construction. Cost $100 new. In good condition. First $50 takes it, also 200 chairs. Titusville Elastic Wood Chairs with arms, in sections of fours and fives. Fifty dollars for the lot. Address JOHN GUTHRIE, Grove City, Pa.

WILL SACRIFICE—450 opera chairs in good condition, cost $1.50 each. Make an offer. Address N. KORNBLITE, Bioghamton, N. Y.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANTED, TO BUY OR RENT—First class picture theater in Ohio or Middle West. State all in first letter. Address EDWARD CARLISLE, Yellow Springs, Ohio.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

PATHE CAMERA, 1913-A MODEL—Four magazines, carrying case, special Voightlander XXX lens—brand new, $325. Also panoramic tripod, $70. Call or address, J. W. HARDING, 151 West 42nd St., New York City.

CAMERAS—All standard makes: Urban, Warwick, American, Gaumont, Ernemann, etc. Tripods, developing apparatus. Lumiere film. Address MORTON H. POWERS, First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE — Schneiders Junior Professional Camera, 200ft., 4 retorts, case, 50 mm original Zeiss lens, tilt, panoramic tripod. Brand new. Bargain. Address MUNSON, 176 Park Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FILMS FOR RENT.

TEN DIFFERENT REELS—Entire Italian-Turkish War, perfect condition, great attraction, profitable rental or percentage. Write for program and particulars. Address SANSEVERIN, 63 5th Ave., New York City.

FILM FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Good Feature Films, cheap. Must sacrifice account health. Address MRS. M. SMITH, 1422 Grant, Denver, Colo.

FILMS—$2 to $5. Features, $40 to $100. Machines, $50 to $100. Address INTERSTATE FILM & SUPPLY CO., 32 Nassau Bldg., Denver, Colo.

FOR SALE—500 single reels with paper to match. We also buy, rent and sell, two, three and four-reel features. Call, write or wire for our price list. Don't miss these bargains. Address ROYAL FILM CO., 21 E. 14th St., New York City.

HUNTING IN AFRICA—3 reels, $35. Homer's Odyssey, 3 reels, $30. Napolian, 1 reel, $20. Antonia, double reel, $15. All well worth double the money. Except close offer. Inquire STEEL, 1101 American Trust Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

FOR SALE—500 reels of film with posters to match, all in good condition. Many subjects practically new. Address McINTIRE & RICHTER, 23 E. 14th St., New York City.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Best equipped little picture theater in State of Michigan. Seating capacity, 200. Powers 6-A, with motor drive, Ft. Wayne Compensarc. Everything practically new and as good as money can buy. Good town, 2,000, practically no competition, and making money. Will be sold for cost of installation, as owner has other important business. Many other valuable features not mentioned here. Wire or write for complete information. Quick action necessary. Address C. S. PYLE, Owner, Quincy, Mich.

FOR SALE—Strictly modern exclusive picture house seating three hundred; town of eighteen thousand; state of Arkansas; only opposition, one other house; five-year lease; location best in city; ten-cent admission; matinee daily. Making big money; will prove it to a buyer with the cash. Price, forty-two hundred dollars. Will bear strictest investigation. Address THIRTY FORTY-TWO WEST ONE HUNDRED THIRD ST., Cleveland, O.

FOR SALE OR RENT—In Texas health resort, 5,000 population, visitors all year round, first class moving picture theater, with large stage for vaudeville, 500 seats, now running and doing good business. Reason, other business. Will sell building with equipments or rent for term of years. Address OWNER, care of Moving Picture World New York City.

FOR SALE—Vaudeville and picture theater, city of 5,000. Only show house. Seating 400. Good opportunity to man with little capital. Theater now running pictures. Will sell at bargain. Address J. ODENTHAL, Batavia, Ill.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INCREASE YOUR PATRONAGE—Lecture your features. Can supply five clients weekly with keyed lectures — Mutual — Universal Multiple releases. Name subject desired—$1.00 each. Address F. HATHAWAY, NARRATOR, Alhambra Theater, Utica, N. Y.

LARGE THEATERS AND AIRDOMES—Bookings now solicited. Perfect Talking Pictures that will make good: "Quo Vadis?," "Eva Tanguay," "Alice Loyd," and 100 other subjects. Call or address THE PHOTO-PHONE, 10 E. 15th St., New York.

PERFECT TALKING PICTURES—7c a foot, with Records: "Farmer Boys' Fun," "Eva Tanguay," "Quo Vadis?," and 100 different subjects. Can furnish anything pertaining to Talking Pictures, Expert Advice, etc. J. HILBERT, care of Photo-Phone, 10 E. 15th St., New York.

TRY US

For Printing, Developing and Titles

The quantity of work we are getting is the result of THE QUALITY of work we do.

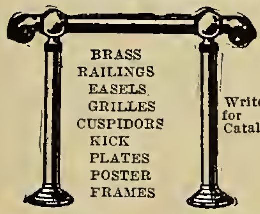
Prices right. Prompt Delivery.

SPECIAL

Films Renovated by our Special Process, which thoroughly cleans, polishes and softens the film.

PARISIAN
Mfg. & Film Renovating Co.
4940 Wentworth Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.

MoKENNA



BRASS
RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS
KICK
PLATES
POSTER
FRAMES

Write for Catalog.

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH

From the Patrons View Point

What Causes People

to continually patronize one Picture Theatre in preference to another? Of course, location, appearances, films, etc. have a great deal to do with it, but quality of the picture is what builds up a steady patronage that makes the business profitable.

This depends largely on your light and if you are using any other device than a to step down your current you are not getting best results.

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC

With our machine you can produce a clear, white, steady light that won't worry your "house" by continuous flickering and will surprise you with the difference it makes with the films.

It is the only device that can be changed instantly to any of the three intensities without breaking the circuit between adjustments.

But this is not all. We will guarantee that our Compensarc

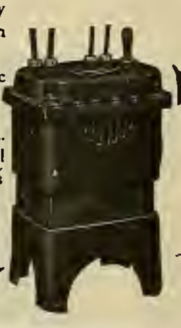
Will Cut 65% from Your Light Bill and we'll send you one on 30 days' free trial to prove it.

We have a little 22 page booklet that explains all the reasons why. If you want a better light at ⅓ your present cost, send for it today. It's free.

FT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
of GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Ind.

C5



REUNION of BLUE and the GRAY

A Feature in Itself
Photography Perfect

This Picture Includes the Living Veterans and All Historical Points on Gettysburg Battlefield.
1,000 Feet, at 8 cents per foot.

Special Event Film Manufacturing Co.
248 West 35th Street.

HIAWATHA
In Four Parts

BLANCHE WALSH in RESURRECTION
In Four Parts

EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS FOR GREATER NEW YORK

THE FORTUNE HUNTER
In Five Reels

Exclusive Rights for New York, New Jersey and New England States. Write, Wire or Phone.

UNIQUE FEATURE CO.
590 Eastern Parkway Brooklyn, New York
Telephone, 8263 Party J, Bedford.

BARGAIN SALE OF FEATURES

These films, in splendid condition, are offered for sale subject to being unsold on receipt of inquiry. Send cash with order and avoid disappointment. Lithographs for every feature.

Spectre of the Sea	2250	Messter	$120
The Gypsy Girl	2000	Eiko	70
Hypnotism, or Dark Power	3200	Savoia	150
Vengeance of Edgar Poe	1800	Lux	75
For Her Love	3200	Savoia	80
Sent Adrift	3200	Deutche Biog.	120
Red Rose of the Apache	2750	Pasquali	75
Frontier Child	2000	K-B	60
Child of War	2000	Broncho	100
Altar of Death	2000	K-B	100
The Fire Bug	8000	Dansk	100
Life's Game of Dice	2800	Messter	60
The Diamond Miniature	1950	Pathe	60
Kings of the Forest	1800	Selig	80
Great Mine Disaster	2000	Eclair	50

2,000 reels, first-class films, no commercial quality, all complete from title to tail piece, sprockets unimpaired.
Everything in stock from a camera to a bottle of cement.

G. W. BRADENBURGH
231-33 N. 8th St. Phila., Pa.

EYE COMFORT LIGHTING System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium..............................
Ceiling Height..............................
Width of House..............................
Name..............................

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
Chicago
229 W. Jackson Blvd.
New York
505 Fifth Ave.

KINEMACOLOR ADOPTS

July 1, 1913

R. G. HOLLAMAN, Esq.,
Eden Musee, W. 23rd St., New York City

Dear Sir:

In confirmation of our conversation of this afternoon, I hereby wish to place an initial order for 100 Simplex machines at the price quoted in Mr. Cannock's letter to me under date of June 25th, with the understanding that you include color reversal attachment which has been omitted in your quotation.

We intend to adopt your machine exclusively for use in Kinemacolor projection all over the world.

Thanking you for past favors, and trusting that I may see you again before I leave for Europe, I beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

(Signed) W. H. HICKEY, General Manager,
NATURAL COLOR KINEMATOGRAPH COMPANY, Limited
LONDON, ENGLAND

Exhaustive tests prove that Simplex projectors are the best of all American and European made machines for Kinemacolor projection. When run at normal speed, 32 pictures are projected every second as compared with 16 pictures per second of the ordinary kind. This double strain, wear and tear is successfully withstood by Simplex, the peerless projector. Another wonderful achievement is the fact that Kinemacolor pictures can now be successfully projected with 35 amperes D. C., where 70 amperes D. C. were formerly required.

SIMPLEX PROJECTORS

When the world's greatest motion picture projector is available for your use, why be satisfied with anything else?

Place your order now and be sure of getting the Simplex in time for the fall trade.

We have unfilled orders now for over 300 machines, and this is supposed to be the dull season.

Don't hesitate. Act today

Catalogue A fully describes the Simplex.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO.

317 EAST 34th STREET :: :: :: NEW YORK

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS............312
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES........334
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES....336
CASE OF STAGE VS. PICTURE, THE..........296
CHICAGO LETTER 305
CHILDREN'S M. P. LEAGUE, THE............299
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)........319
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent).....320
"DAY OF JUDGMENT, THE" (Union Feature).311
FACTS AND COMMENTS.......................295
FIRST INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION, THE. 324
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES.......................304
HARMONY IN UNIVERSAL OFFICES..........209
"HEART OF A JEWESS, THE" (Universal)....300
"HONOR THY FATHER" (Cines)..............369
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES................350
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.............368
INQUIRIES 315
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....................338
LICENSED RELEASE DATES..................370
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES 331
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE....................303
NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION............307
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN......310
"PAPER DOLL, THE" (Crystal)...............311
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 314
PRESIDENT NEFF'S ANNUAL REPORT.......302
PRESS, PRODUCER AND PUBLIC,
by Louis Reeves Harrison.................297
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 316
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)...........338
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)........350
THE THIRD NATIONAL CONVENTION........301

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E............................... 372
KIEWERT, L. C.............................. 375
REISINGER, HUGO........................... 375

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO...................... 361
BELL & HOWELL............................. 352
BENDER, GEORGE............................ 348
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO....................... 361
DETROIT MOTOR CAR CO.................... 376
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO................. 363
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO..................... 371
HALLBERG, J. H............................ 357
HOKE, GEO. M............................... 348
KLEIGL BROS................................ 348
LAVEZZI 361
MOORE HUBBLE CO.......................... 372
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO....... 377
SCHNEIDER, E............................... 344
SMITH, L. C. & CO.......................... 361
STRELINGER, CHARLES A...............342-344
WESTINGHOUSE ELECT. MFG. CO.......... 342
WHYTE-WHITMAN 375

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.
ALMO F. F. CO............................... 348
AM. KINETO CO.............................. 351
ARAB AMUSEMENT CO...................... 284
AMBROSIO F. CO............................ 345
BLINKHORN, A............................... 372
DUHEIM & HARTER M. P. CO............... 352
ECLECTIC FILMS............................. 343
FAMOUS PLAYERS........................... 373
FEATURE FILM CO........................... 346
FEATURE FILM CORP....................... 373
FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA.............. 349
FULLER'S CHAS. L. DISTRIBUTING CO..... 347
GENERAL FILM CO.........................288-289
GT. NORTHERN SPECIAL F. F. CO......... 359
ITALA FILM CO.............................. 376
KINEMACOLOR CO........................... 355
MILLER BROS. 101 RANCH................. 374
MONOPOL FILM CO......................... 280
MOORE, F. E................................. 375
NEW YORK FILM CO....................... 377
ROMA FILM CO............................. 348
SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO.................. 363
SUPREME F. F. CO.......................... 352
THE FAMOUS F. F. SERVICE............... 373
UNION FEATURES.......................... 357
UNIQUE FEATURE CO...................... 363
VIVAPHONE CO............................ 372
WARNER'S FEATURES...................... 359

FILM DEALERS & IMPORTERS.
WESTERN FILM BROKERS.................. 352

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
TRAINER, C. W............................... 344
H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO................ 361

FILM EXCHANGES.
BRADENBURG, G. W......................... 363
EXCLUSIVE FILM SUPPLY CORP........... 367
FULTON, E. E................................ 352
GUNBY BROS................................. 342
HETZ, L....................................... 348
LAEMMLE FILM CO.......................... 369
McINTIRE & RICHTER...................... 373
M. & F. FILM SERVICE..................... 344
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION............. 337
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE.... 376
SOUTHERN FILM CO......................... 344

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN 281
BRONCHO FILM CO.......................... 341
GAUMONT CO...............................279-351
KAY-BEE 341
KEYSTONE 341
MAJESTIC 378
N. Y. MOTION PICTURE CO................ 339
RAMO FILM CO............................. 355
RELIANCE 298
SOLAX 282-283
THANHOUSER 274
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURERS....276-277

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON 290
ESSANAY 275
KALEM 294
LUBIN 291
MELIES 379
PATHE FRERES 286-287
SELIG 285
VITAGRAPH 292-293

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LOMB............................ 359

MISCELLANEOUS.
AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO...........
BOSH & CO.................................. 353
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS............ 362
CLEVELAND, W. S...........................
COMMERCIAL M. P. CO..................... 340
CORCORAN, A. J............................ 340
DOWNTOWN AMUSEMENT CO.............. 333
EASTMAN KODAK CO....................... 359
HEESE PTG. CO............................. 352
JACOBY 361
KEYSTONE PRESS........................... 344
KRAUSE MFG. CO........................... 340
McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO................ 363
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO............ 340
NATIONAL TICKET CO...................... 368
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO......... 363
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO.. 363
PHOTO CINES CO........................... 333
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO..................... 372
REYNOLDS & CO............................ 376
RICE & EINSTEIN.......................... 333
SARGENT, E. W............................ 373
STANGE, A. C............................... 342
THEATER BROKERAGE CO.................. 342
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO........ 348
VONNEGUT HDW. CO....................... 361
ZENITH MFG. CO........................... 352

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON 290
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO................... 377
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH.................... 380
SIMPLEX 364-365

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER SALES CO....... 344
DEAGAN, J. C............................... 353
SINN, C. E................................... 373
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH..................... 372

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO.................... 376
ANDREWS, A. H............................. 376
BENNETT, GEO. W.......................... 376
HARDESTY 376
STEEL FURNITURE CO...................... 376
WISCONSIN SEATING CO................... 376

POSTERS & FRAMES.
A. B. C....................................... 366
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO........... [illegible]
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO....... 334
GENERAL FILM CO.......................... 335
NEWMAN 340
THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO............. 344

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATRE CURTAIN CO......... 374
GENTER, J. H............................... 374
MIRROR SCREEN CO........................ 372
SIMPSON SOLAR SCREENS................. 340

SONG & ADVERTISING SLIDES.
MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY.................. 348
THOMAS, A. G.............................. 361
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO............... 361

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.................. 373

THEATRES, are you booking the Lubin special
"ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG?"
If so, Order your POSTERS OF US AT ONCE. We have attractive ONE SHEETS Ready now.

Also ONE, THREE and SIX SHEETS for Lubin's two reel special
"HOME, SWEET HOME" Released July 23rd

And KALEM'S Saturday Release (July 26th)
"THE MOONSHINER'S MISTAKE"

A. B. C. COMPANY, Cleveland, Ohio

Exclusive Feature Program

— 4 —
Features of Three or More Reels

Every Week

— 7 —
One and Two Reel
Regular Releases

THE MOST POPULAR EXHIBIT AT THE INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION

Standards of Our Program

Gaumont
— 2 —
Three Reel Features
Each Month
— 3 —
One and Two Reel
Regular Releases
Weekly

Great Northern
— 4 —
Three Reel Features
Each Month
— 1 —
Comedy
One Reel Each
Saturday

Solax
— 2 —
Three Reel Features
Each Month
— 2 —
One Reel
Regular Releases
Weekly

Itala
— 2 —
Feature Releases of Three Reels
Each Month

Lewis Pennant Features
— 4 —
Feature Releases of Three Reels
Each Month

Dragon
— 1 —
Regular Release Weekly of one or two reels

Eclectic
— 1 —
Stupendous Production each
Month, four to nine reels

Coming—Before September 1st

All Star Features
— 1 —
Great Play with Noted Stage Favorites
To be produced monthly under the personal direction of
Mr. Augustus Thomas

Ammex
— 1 —
Big Western Drama of the Popular kind, One or two productions of three or more Reels
Every Month

We have the only complete Feature Program of Standard Brands in America

Communicate with us regarding Open Territories and Wholesale Contract Prices

EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORPORATION
220 West 42nd St.
NEW YORK

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

July 10—The Foreign Spy (Drama)..............1000
July 12—The Song of the Soup (Comedy).......
July 12—A Garden City in California (Scenic)..
July 14—Truth in the Wilderness (2 parts—Drama) 2000
July 17—To Err is Human (Drama)...........1000
July 19—At the Half-Breed's Mercy (Drama)..1000
July 21—Jealousy's Trail (Drama)............
July 24—Tom Blake's Redemption (Drama)...
July 26—She Will Never Know (Drama)......

AMBROSIO.

May 17—A Maid of Honor (2 parts—Drama)..
May 24—The Yellow Man (2 parts—Drama)...
May 31—An Unruly Father (2 parts—Drama)
June 7—The Sold Title (2 parts—Drama)....
June 14—The Girl of the Hidden Spring (2 parts—Drama) ....
June 21—Loves Shadow (2 parts—Drama).....

BISON.

July 1—The Battle of Manila (2 parts Drama)
July 5—At Shiloh (2 parts Drama)..........
July 8—The Powder Flash of Death (2 parts—Drama)..............................
July 12—The Head Hunters (2 parts—Drama)..
July 15—The Picket Guard (2 parts—Drama)..
July 19—When Sherman Marched to the Sea (3 parts—Drama) ....
July 22—The Lawbreakers (2 parts—Drama)..

BRONCHO.

June 25—The Transgressor (2 parts—Drama)..
July 2—All Rivers Meet at Sea (Drama......
July 9—Heart Throbs (2 parts—Drama).....
July 16—Old Mammy's Secret Code (3 parts—Drama)..............................

CRYSTAL.

July 13—Pearl's Dilemma (Comedy)............
July 13—Squaring Things With Wifey (Comedy)
July 15—In Death's Shadow (Drama)..........1000
July 20—The Hallroom Girls (Comedy)........
July 20—How Men Propose (Comedy)..........
July 22—The Broken Spell (Drama)...........
July 27—College Chums (Comedy)............
July 27—Belmont Stung (Comedy)............

DRAGON.

June 16—The Ghost of Sea View Manor (Drama) 1000
June 23—A Sister's Devotion (Drama)..........1000
June 30—Our Future Heroes (Topical)..........1000
July 7—The Ticket of Leave Man (2 parts—Drama)..............................
July 14—The Organist (Drama).............
July 21—The Bride of the Sea (Drama).......

ECLAIR.

July 9—The Trail of the Hanging Rock (2 parts—Drama) ....
July 13—It is Hard to Please Him (Comedy)..
July 13—The Catholic Mission (Educational)...
July 16—For the Man She Loved (2 parts—Drama) ....
July 20—Through the Telescope (Comedy).....
July 20—Sacred Gazelles (Educational)........
July 23—The Greater Call (3 parts—Drama)...
July 27—He Poses for His Portrait (Comedy)..
July 27—The Third Thief (Comedy)..........

FRONTIER.

June 26—The Squaw Man's Reword (Drama)..
June 28—An Eastern Cyclone at Bluff Ranch (Comedy)............................
July 3—The Secret of Padre Antonio (Drama)
July 5—A Rose at Sixteen (Drama)..........
July 5—A Cactus at Forty-five (Comedy).....
July 10—The Frontier Twins Start Something (Comedy)............................
July 12—The Line Rider's Sister (Drama).....
July 17—The Small Pox Scare at Gulch Hollow (Comedy) ....
July 19—The Half-Breed Sheriff (Drama)......
July 24—The Frontier Twins' Heroism (Com.)
July 26—The Toll of the Desert (Drama)......

GAUMONT.

July 1—Sauce for the Goose (Comedy)........
July 1—Atom Life in the Deep (Scientific)....
July 2—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 69 (News)...
July 3—Tricks In All Trades (Comedy)......
July 3—Production of Wine in France (Industry) ....
July 8—His Master's Double (Drama)........
July 8—The Making of Tapestry (Industrial).
July 9—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 70 (News)...
July 10—The Trombone Marathon (Comedy)...

GEM.

June 30—Mistaken Intentions (Comedy).......
June 30—Teak Wood (Scenic)..................
July 7—Billy, the Wise Guy (Comedy)........
July 14—Little Ruster (Comedy)..............
July 21—The Life Savers (Comedy-Drama)....

GREAT NORTHERN.

June 14—An Unwelcome Wedding Gift (Comedy-Drama)..........................
June 21—Shanghaied (Drama) ....
June 28—Cupid's Score (Comedy).............
July 5—Winning a Prize (Comedy)..........
July 5—The Trondhjem Railway (Scenic).....
July 12—The Jolly Recruit (Comedy).........
July 19—A Country Cousin (Comedy).........

GREAT NORTHERN (Universal).

June 28—The Flying Circus (3 parts, Drama)..
July 26—The Governor's Daughter (2 parts—Drama)............................

IMP.

July 14—A Possibility (2 parts—Comedy-Drama) ....
July 17—Her Nerve (Drama).................
July 19—Binks Ends the War (Comedy).......
July 19—In Cartoonland With Hy Mayer (Novelty) ....
July 21—The Yogi (Drama)..................
July 24—The Last of the Madisons (Drama)..
July 26—Baron Binks' Bride (Comedy)........
July 26—Summer Caricatures, by Hy Mayer (Novelty)............................

KAY-BEE.

June 27—The Seal of Silence (Drama)........
July 4—The Crimson Stain (3 parts, Drama)..
July 11—The Banshee (2 parts—Drama).......
July 18—The Red Mask (2 parts—Drama).....
July 25—Flotsam (2 parts—Drama)...........

KEYSTONE.

June 23—A Bandit (Comedy)..................
June 23—Peeping Pete (Comedy)..............
June 26—His Crooked Career (Comedy).......
June 26—The Largest Boat Ever Launched Sideways ....
June 30—For Love of Mabel (Comedy).........
July 3—Rastus and the Game-Cock (Comedy)..
July 7—Safe in Jail (Comedy)................
July 10—The Telltale Light (Comedy).........
July 14—Love and Rubbish (Comedy).........
July 17—A Noise from the Deep (Comedy)....
